Mr. LONGWORTH. As the gentleman knows, I have not had an opportunity to examine the article. Perhaps if the gentleman would show it to me I would have no objection.

I will say this to the gentleman: If this editorial is merely a tribute to the memory of the late President Wilson and nothing else, I will not object, but if it brings in any other questions I think I must object for the present. If the gentleman assures me of that I shall not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Does the gentleman assure me of that?

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Personally, I do not think there is anything the gentleman would object to, but I would not state that after reading the editorial he would not object.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Then I will ask the gentleman from Florida not to press me this evening.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. I will not press him, but I will make the point of no quorum.

Mr. KENT. I hope the gentleman from Florida will not press his point of order for the present.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw my point of order and also withdraw my request, and I will assure the gentleman from Ohio that he will not have the pleasure of reading the editorial.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will be very glad to read it.

Mr. KENT. Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago I asked unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and include an editorial. I find—addressing myself to the gentleman from Ohio—that it is an open letter addressed to me as a Member of Congress from one of the newspapers of my district, calling for a congressional investigation as to the deflation of currency, which caused quite a number of industries in my district to go into the hands of receivers. The statement is made in this letter that the same letter has been sent to a large number of other Members of Congress.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Then it is a letter addressed to the gentleman in his official capacity as a Member of Congress?

Mr. KENT. Yes; and I would like to extend my remarks generally in defense of myself and others.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection. There was no objection.

DEFLATION OF CURRENCY.

Mr. KENT. Mr. Speaker, so much has been written and said since January 1, 1920, upon the subject of currency deflation that I deem it not improper to offer a few observations of my own on the subject. I do not propose to deal with the matter in a partisan way, but from this floor many remarks have been made recently by gentlemen on the Republican side tending to cast responsibility for commercial failures upon the Democratic Party. We had just passed through the greatest war in history when the people sent a Republican House and Senate to the Nation's Capital. They began to function in 1919.

Over $36,000,000,000 were raised, spent, or loaned to the Allies by a Democratic administration during the war, and when their rivals came into power in the legislative branch of the Government 69 separate investigations were started in an effort to fasten fraud and corruption upon Democratic officials in the expenditure of this money. After the passing of four years and the expenditure of millions of dollars in investigations not a scintilla of fraud has been laid upon the threshold of a Democrat. In marked contrast are the revelations of the past few months which have shaken our Government to its foundations, depriving this administration of the confidence of the people, and almost forfeiting the confidence of the people in their own Government. The mere drawing of witnesses from any source in civilian life and questions to them concerning the conduct of the Government departments suffice to reveal a sad and corrupt state of affairs in any department affected.

The currency deflation of 1920-1922 is to be laid upon the threshold of the present administration and its forerunner, the Sixty-sixth Congress. A resolution was introduced and adopted in the United States Senate on May 17, 1920, by Senator McCORMICK, to which is traceable the failure of 51,148 industries from March, 1920, to December, 1922, involving liabilities of $1,523,408,649. It is estimated that the actual losses in assets of those industries and the resultant loss in wages through involuntary idleness total the stupendous figures of over $30,000,000,000, more than the cost of the World War.

A very able and exhaustive argument on the part of Hon. J. CHARLES LINTHICUM, of Maryland, is found in his campaign book for the campaign of 1922, showing conclusively that the general policy of currency contraction and deflation was permitted by those who expected to be in control of this administration, and those who had their hopes realized as the result of the elections of 1920. The general purpose, through this contraction of credit and deflation of currency, was to eliminate the reserves of a number of small but honest and thriving industries, to cause depreciation in Liberty bonds and many securities saved by the small wage earner during the war, and to eliminate farm credits and throw the farmer back upon the reserves which he had built up during the war, so that agriculture would be compelled to consume its reserves and throw its product upon the market at prices which could be controlled by those holding the financial reins of the country.

Several industries in my district suffered in this deflation, some failed, and some are now failing because of inability to carry the load imposed in the deflation period. A great many of my people feel that the direct cause of the loss was the action of the Federal Reserve Board in contracting the currency and making credit impossible. They feel that the actual cash losses in labor earned and assets dissipated should be cared for by the Government. I am not prepared to go so far as to say that there is a constitutional warrant for such payment, or that it is good governmental policy, but it will do no harm to comment thus wise upon the general subject. The innocent laborers and mechanics who suffered through the action of governmental agencies in the deflation period should be reimbursed in some way, especially since governmental action has so dissipated the assets upon which they were working as to deprive them altogether of their wages.

Under permission granted, I take pleasure in fortifying my remarks by presenting an open letter, addressed to me by Emerson P. Jennings, Esq., of Lehighton, Pa., editor and proprietor of the Carbon Citizen, a progressive and independent journal of my district. It is an exhaustive and logical presentation of the general subject:

A LETTER TO CONGRESS.

A CONSPIRACY THAT COST US OVER $30,000,000,000—IT RUINED OVER 50,000 MANUFACTURERS AND BUSINESS CONCERNS.

To the Hon. EVERETT KENT, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: This letter to you, which is printed for convenience because it is sent to some other Members of Congress, is to ask for a congressional investigation—

First, of the bankers' conspiracy of 1910-20, which cost the United States and its citizens many billions of dollars in losses—losses, when figured out, amount to more than the German indemnity.

Second, it is to ask for a congressional investigation of the receivership of the Lehigh Machine Co. and the failure of promised banking credits which directly caused it and the resultant losses inflicted upon innocent stockholders, creditors, and wage claimants. It is to ask for a congressional investigation of the political conspiracy in connection with the personnel of this receivership and the deliberate and outrageous wrecking of an absolutely solvent industry and the wanton and malicious dissipation of its assets and the utter disregard for obligations to stockholders, creditors, and wage claimants and even for the payment of labor employed under this receivership.

Third, it is to ask for a congressional investigation of the conduct of the judge of the United States district court in connection with this case and other matters.

For the purpose—

First. Of bringing the conspirators to justice and proper punishment and to provide for legislation to make a repetition of such a stupendous and disastrous conspiracy impossible.

Second. For the purpose of reimbursement or compensation for the losses to the innocent stockholders, creditors, and wage claimants by special appropriation by Congress, if satisfied after investigation that these losses were caused by improper action of the Federal Reserve Board or other agents for which the Government of the United States should be held accountable and if in the judgment of Congress such action is warranted.

Third. For the purpose of impeachment proceedings if the facts disclosed by the investigation warrant such action by Congress.

CHAPTER I.—MY STORY.

When war was declared I was operating a machine shop in the beautiful little town of Lehigh, located in the mountains of Pennsylvania and in the picturesque valley of the Lehigh, in Carbon County. It was the plant of the Lehigh Machine Co.

Our first act immediately upon the receipt of news of the declaration of war was to write to Washington and offer our plant and facilities unconditionally to our Government.

Our offer was not accepted. We were tendered contract work for the Ordnance Department, and for the duration of the war we were employed entirely upon the making of master-inspection gauges for the Bureau of Standards and other work of extreme accuracy, including some of the most exacting and most difficult jobs required by the Government.

We earned and won a reputation for accuracy in high-class machine work and in the accomplishment of difficult and exacting requirements and in the solving of perplexing technical problems in connection with our line of work that placed us in the very front line of the quality machine shops of the country, a reputation that every one of our organization of skilled mechanics proudly shared with us.

We overcame some trying financial problems with the help of our stockholders and some of our local banks.

AFTER THE WAR.

When the war was over we returned to peace-time production and undertook the manufacture of Jennings automatic printing presses, textile machinery, and calculating machines.

We secured contracts for all of these machines, and our contracts for textile machinery totaled $1,630,000.

All these contracts were accepted in good faith and upon terms that were absolutely sound and businesslike, and we were congratulated by our bankers as well as by many others for our success in obtaining them.

The 1st of January, 1920, found us with between two hundred and three hundred thousand dollars cash in the banks and our plant and machinery paid for and in perfectly sound financial condition, with plenty of good profitable work for the year ahead.

General business conditions were good. Prices were high, and we encountered a scarcity of materials, particularly in steel, of standard sizes.

CHAPTER II.—THE CONSPIRACY OF DEFLATION.

PRELIMINARY PROPAGANDA.

There was much talk in the newspapers about high prices, and the general trend of the editorial and newspaper propaganda in 1919 and early 1920 was all in the direction of urging production.

"We have been engaged in war, and our industries have neglected peace-time requirements for war work. The industries of the country must produce the peace-time products. Work! Work! Work! Produce! Produce! Produce! And prices will be brought down by the natural law of supply and demand."

In brief, that was the sentiment that filled our newspapers in the year 1919.

The result was that the thousands of progressive little manufacturing plants throughout the country in a short time loaded up with orders and were not only getting busy to the extent of their cash in bank but were beginning to use the banks in a natural and conservative way for discounts to carry through their work in process. The business outlook seemed good for several years ahead.

They knew nothing of the dastardly conspiracy against them, against labor, against the farmer, that the big bankers were about to put over to accomplish their ruin, to eliminate this new and progressive competition, to force down wages and subjugate labor, to bring down the farmers' prices with a crash.

The manufacturer, the farmer, and the wageworker, each one, took the newspapers seriously. We, some of us, may have remembered the "Pujo money investigation" and the facts it disclosed about the control of the press by big banking interests and its use as their propaganda tool, but we did not think of it at the time in connection with its "work-work-work, produce-produce-produce" propaganda, and probably not one of the victims realized what it meant or its purpose.

CHAPTER II.—MY STORY.

OUR CREDIT ARRANGEMENTS MADE.

Notwithstanding the Lehigh Machine Co.'s substantial cash balance in the banks at the beginning of the year of 1920, which amounted to more than $200,000, we knew that we would need reasonable bank discounts during the year to carry through our contracts.

After making inquiry in New York and finding that we could get a line of credit of two hundred to three hundred thousand dollars by transferring our cash balance there we took the matter up by letter with our largest local bank. This letter addressed to the board of directors stated that we knew that their limited capital and surplus did not permit them to extend the necessary credits, and this situation would make it compulsory for us to transfer the larger part of our balances from local banks to larger city banks, where we could get the required credit accommodations, unless they could arrange a line of credit, up to $200,000, at least, for us through their connections.

OUR BANK ARRANGES A LINE OF CREDIT.

The board of directors sent their president to Philadelphia to see their correspondent, the Girard National Bank. He took our financial statements with him, and he returned, saying that he had made arrangements for a line of credit for us up to $200,000 which we could draw against at any time. This was in February, 1920. He understood that we did not expect to use it for several months, but we were just making our arrangements ahead so as to be absolutely sure that we would not be disappointed when we were ready for it. Having received positive assurances that we could depend on a line of discount up to $200,000 as and when we needed it, we allowed our deposits to remain in local banks.

CHAPTER II.—THE CONSPIRACY OF DEFLATION.

THE CONTRACTION OF CREDITS.—AN "ELASTIC CURRENCY" IS SNAPPED IN.

January and February found business good. The country, so far as employment was concerned, quickly adapted itself from war work to peace work.

Most of the men thrown out of work by the cancellation of Government orders following the armistice were again back at work, and, though prices were high and there was much general complaint by the people against them, nevertheless almost everyone was working and earning good wages.

Suddenly the newspaper propaganda changed. It was no longer "work, work" or "let the law of supply and demand do it."

The papers announced that the speculators were all to blame and the Government was going to get the speculator by curtailing his credits.

This was the camouflage.

The speculator was supposed to be aimed at.

The independent manufacturer was hit.

He was hit too squarely to permit of any doubt as to the accuracy of the aim.

Credits were contracted, notes were called, promised loans were denied, just credits were refused to the manufacturer, though the Wall Street speculator got the money he needed, but at a higher price.

Thousands of manufacturers, though thoroughly solvent, with large assets and small liabilities, were forced into receiverships.

The elastic currency of the Federal reserve was contracted with a snap! It struck the independent manufacturers like a bolt of lightning from a clear sky.

The Federal reserve banking system, organized to take the control of money away from the money trust of Wall Street, had fallen under the money trust's control.

The decision to contract credits was made at a meeting of certain great banking interests in New York, and the Federal reserve just played the part of their efficient tool. McKenna says English financial interests had a hand in the game.

The Federal reserve, organized for the purpose of making it impossible for the scoundrels of Wall Street to ever again play that sort of a dastardly trick on the manufacturers and business interests of the country, was used to accomplish the very purpose it was established to prevent.

An elastic currency was for the purpose of reasonable expansion to meet any crisis or unusual situation. Who ever thought of it being used to produce a crisis and hard times? Who ever thought it would be used to ruin thousands of the most enterprising industries of the country, to wipe out the young, progressive, and enthusiastic constructive life of our industry, so as to eliminate this competition to the old-established Morgan and Wall Street controlled monopolies and manufacturers?

I presume every Congressman knows that such private banking houses as the Morgan concern control a great many great industrial enterprises, either through stock control, directorates, financial loans, or bonds or mortgages.

It would be interesting to know the details as to just how many competitors the big bankers wiped out in the crime and conspiracy of this Federal reserve action in the contraction of credits of the spring of 1920.

It was said labor was too independent and had to be subjugated, and that wages had to be cut.

The farmer was prosperous and getting good prices; his prices, too, they wanted to cut.

Too much competition by live-wire, enterprising, industrious, progressive, hustling manufacturers who had gotten on their feet during the war.

Too much new blood here for the old war-horse industrial monopolists.

The people had too many Liberty bonds, and they had to be taken away from them.

Hence the conspiracy.

It was carried out perfectly; not a spark plug missed once, not a back-fire, not even a sound in the gear shift. The machine worked as smoothly as a Rolls-Royce.

It was done so suddenly, so adroitly, so efficiently that there was not even a yell from the despairing victims as small industry after industry was deliberately choked and strangled to death.

Have you heard a squeal? The farmers of the West were the first to realize what had happened and how it had happened. The strangled industries are too dead to ever know, but the people who have suffered will learn. Labor, to some extent, knows. Instigated by Wall Street, the average business man of the East has been too much interested in helping to deflate wages and subordinate labor to realize that he himself has been made the goat by the great big fellows who have successfully pumped him full of propaganda until he is all swelled up with the emptiness of his own importance. He falsely thinks his interests are identical with those of the big vultures whose prey he is.

The newspaper propaganda got the independent manufacturers busy. The camouflage about hitting the speculator fooled the manufacturers, the farmer, and labor equally. The farmer in the West has awakened to how it was done, but the eastern farmer, the independent business man and manufacturers, and labor for the most part are still absolutely ignorant of the conspiracy of the big bankers that—

Ruined thousands of manufacturers and business men.

That crushed the farmer and ruined his market.

That artificially created 5,000,000 unemployed, which cost the country twenty to thirty billion dollars in lost wealth production, forced wages down, and compelled the people to sell their Liberty bonds at sacrifice prices in order to live.

A congressional investigation of the right kind—not a "white-wash"—will show up the meeting of these bankers in New York when they laid the plot and took action deciding to carry it out.

A congressional investigation of the right kind will again bring out the facts, so plainly exposed by the "Pujo money investigation," of the absolute control of the sources of newspaper propaganda by those who put this conspiracy over.

A congressional investigation of the right kind will by publicity teach the people what a terribly heartless and traitorous enemy is in control of their economic destiny.

A congressional investigation of the right kind may create such a political upheaval in this country that the power of some of these scoundrels may be removed for all time, and they may be landed where they belong, in the Government penitentiary, for the rest of their lives. I don't believe in capital punishment or I might say that they should be lined up against the wall and shot as traitors to their country. I believe that the right kind of a congressional investigation will bring out facts that will absolutely convict them.

The individuals concerned and every step in the carrying out of this conspiracy which has cost the country in losses almost as much as our war debt, has ruined thousands of concerns, has cost labor and the farmer billions of dollars in losses and taken most of their Liberty bonds from them should be shown up in every detail.

CHAPTER III.—BACK TO MY STORY.

BANKERS' PROMISES DEFAULTED.

Our bank credit, up to $200,000, was arranged for in February. With a cash bank balance of over $200,000, we did not need to draw against the credit then, but in the latter part of April we tried to use this promised line of credit only to find that we could not get one cent of it.

In a letter to the Citizens' National Bank of Lehighton, Pa., the Girard National Bank, of Philadelphia, Pa., returned the notes sent for discount and admitted that they remembered the conversation or the arrangement, but they stated that owing to money shortage they could not grant the discount.

We got absolutely not one cent of it and no satisfaction whatever from this promised line of credit.

We have ample proof of the arrangement made with our own bank and the Philadelphia bank in the form of letters and the testimony that must be forthcoming from the president and directors of our local bank.

We had ordered our materials, pushed our production, had our work well along, and expected to use this credit to carry us over the turning point when we could realize on our deliveries and repay it. With this promised credit we should have cleaned up our contracts and have made a profit of over $500,000 for the year of 1920. Without it we were unable to meet our demands for cash for payments for materials and were forced into the hands of receivers.

Suppose you had a contract to build a house for which you were to receive $10,000. Suppose that you knew that you could complete the contract for less than $8,000 and could make a profit of $2,000. Suppose that you had on deposit in the bank $4,000 in cash, and you went to your banker and laid your whole proposition before him and asked for a line of credit of $4,000 to complete your job.

Suppose he promised it to you as you needed it. Suppose that you went ahead, as any business man would, and ordered your materials, put your men to work, and after you had gotten well along with the work and had spent a good part of your $4,000 for labor and materials you went to your banker and said: "Now I am ready to use some of that credit you promised me. I have the work well along and here is my note for $2,000; will you please credit it to my account?"

Suppose your banker said, "Oh, yes; I remember the arrangement, but conditions are different now; I am short of money and can't see my way clear to do it."

What would happen to you?

Suppose the amount of the loss was three-quarters of a million dollars instead of $4,000?

What is confiscation?

I have seen industries that were seized and wrecked by the Bolsheviks in Russia.

This plant of the Lehigh Machine Co. was seized, the owners driven out, and it was deliberately wrecked and the business ruined.

Thousands of other plants were driven into receiverships and ruined.

It was, in my opinion, the intention of the big bankers who started the trouble that they should be wrecked and ruined.

Who are the Bolsheviks of America? Are they not these wreckers?

I was a candidate for Congress in the primary elections of 1920. My friends put me up on both tickets. I came within 149 votes of getting the Republican nomination and within 500 votes of the Democratic nomination. I polled about 95 per cent of all the votes cast in my home city and about 70 per cent of all the votes in my own county on both sides.

Please understand that there are two separate and unrelated complaints in this letter: The one the bankers' conspiracy, which caused the trouble. The other the conspiracy of political enemies which aggravated it.

Owing to the contraction of credits by the Federal Reserve Board in carrying through the conspiracy of the big bankers, we found it impossible to secure the necessary credits elsewhere to meet our needs.

We went into the hands of receivers with over $750,000 of real tangible assets and about $150,000 of liabilities, and all because of this most damnable and outrageous conspiracy of the Money Trust, who used the Federal Reserve Board as a tool to carry out their traitorous purpose of crushing independent industrial competition, for the purpose of subordinating labor, through an enforced period of unemployment, for the purpose of forcing down the farmers' prices, for the purpose of taking away the Liberty bonds from the common people at scandalously low prices, for the double purpose of profit and tightening their grip and securing more absolute control of American industry.

Do you remember that you couldn't borrow more than 50 to 70 per cent on your Liberty bonds? Try it now and you'll find you can borrow almost 100 per cent.

Why should not the Federal reserve have insisted on a loan value close to par for Liberty bonds?

Why the forced depreciation?

When the squeeze had been worked to the limit how did they bring the Liberty bonds to par? Was it not largely by increasing the loan value through the Federal reserve banking system? Cut down the loan value to 50 per cent, and see how quickly Liberty bonds will decline.

Congress has the power and, I think, a duty to protect the people—the common people—the industries and manufacturers, the producers, and the business interests of the country from all enemies, from traitors within or from enemies outside the country.

We have sent people to jail for expressing opinions differing from ours, because they were considered dangerous.

Have any of them proven the traitors by act and deed that these conspirators have proven themselves to be?

Please take your pencil and figure out the cost of 5,000,000 unemployed for two years. Suppose the wages only average $4 a day. Multiply it by 5,000,000 men and you have $20,000,000 a day lost in wages alone. Twenty million a day in wages means a loss of at least $50,000,000 a day in manufactured wealth. Fifty million a day for 600 working days in two years means $30,000,000,000. Now discount these figures as you wish and see what the cost of this "deflation" conspiracy has meant.

Then add to it the tremendous sums lost through receiverships and the wrecking of thousands of manufacturing industries, such as the Lehigh Machine Co., and the wrecking of other thousands of business houses.

I ask you, is it not a crime? Is it not a traitorous crime against the Nation? Should it not be investigated and punished by congressional action? What other authority is there in the land that can bring such predatory and powerful traitors to justice? Is it not the duty of Congress to do it?

I should welcome an opportunity to give my testimony before a congressional investigating committee.

I should welcome an opportunity to suggest some of the individuals to be summoned.

I should welcome an opportunity to draft some of the questions to be asked.

I feel that I have been deliberately robbed of a fortune, produced by years of hard toll, by this atrocious conspiracy, and I ask Congress to act for my protection and to bring the guilty to justice.

The receivership of the Lehigh Machine Co. deserves investigation along with the bankers' conspiracy because it is not an ordinary receivership honestly and fairly conducted. It is deliberate destruction of a business, paralleled only by the methods of confiscation in Russia.

I have been in Russia. I know what happened there. I have seen the wrecks of what were productive, thriving, industrial manufacturing plants.

They have nothing on the confiscation and wrecking of the Lehigh Machine Co. plant for destructiveness and wanton ruin.

It was a political job.

The receivers of the Lehigh Machine Co. are E. N. Sanctuary and William C. McConnell; the latter is under indictment in connection with liquor frauds. He was formerly prohibition director.

This letter is already too long, but it leaves volumes unsaid. I can bring evidence of the wanton dissipation of assets by the receivership—specific cases of thousands upon thousands of dollars thrown into the scrap pile or dissipated by neglect and willful mismanagement.

I can furnish affidavit proof of what I have to say about the judge, but I prefer to take this up directly at the proper time with an authorized committee, if possible.

Will Congress investigate?

Will Congress pass a special appropriation to reimburse those suffering from the results of this confiscation and destruction?

The wage claimants are too poor to take proper legal proceedings to recover the $30,000 now owing to them by this receiver. They have suffered hunger and cold and untold misery.

I, too, have lost everything and have no funds for a long drawn-out legal battle, if such were practical before the court of jurisdiction in this case.

As an American citizen, I appeal to Congress, as the only practical source of relief, for consideration of not only myself but for all others who have suffered as a result of this conspiracy of the big bankers and the results which followed.

Yours respectfully,

EMERSON P. JENNINGS.

Address: LEHIGHTON, PA.

THIS ADDITIONAL POSTSCRIPT IS TO SUBSTANTIATE TO SOME EXTENT SOME STATEMENTS MADE IN THIS LETTER.

WHO STARTED IT?

Prior to the meeting of the Federal Reserve Board at which the deflationary measures were taken, a meeting of certain big banking interests was held at which this action was decided upon and the program planned.

HOW WAS IT CARRIED OUT?

Let the Federal Reserve Bulletin answer that question (p. 345, April, 1920):

"The advance in discount rates previously put into operation, however, is having an effect which is particularly noticeable in a few of the larger financial centers. At these points bankers have actively taken up the work of credit restriction and limitation."

(The emphasis of italics is mine.)

That the deflation was premeditated and deliberate, and that it had a very definite purpose, I need only quote from the Federal Reserve Bulletin of March, 1920, wherein the closing paragraph of a review says:

"As to whether the present 6 per cent rate for rediscount of 90-day paper is sufficiently high, the council holds that experience has thus far been insufficient for conclusive opinion."

Was the real purpose of the deflation camouflaged? Of course it was; in the Federal Reserve Bulletin as well as in the newspapers, in the dispatches, and other propaganda of the money trust. Would you expect the money trust to come out plainly and tell the world that it was carrying out a campaign to ruin their industrial competitors, to subjugate labor and crush the farmer? Hardly. They are too clever for that. But intelligent men can understand and read between the lines much that is not stated in cold type. The results tell the story, and between themselves the big fellows freely discussed the real motives, but not for publication, naturally.

The New York Journal, in an editorial on the recent New York State bankers' dinner, says:

"Mr. McKenna informs American bankers (their own Government never told them, apparently) that in 1920 and 1921 the United States adopted 'deflationary methods in concert with our own English financial authorities.' American business men were not allowed to know that this country was deflating in concert with British financial authorities. There was pretty violent deflation here, and it ruined a good many men suddenly. It helped a few, probably."

That McKenna was not so sure of his ground or so ready and deliberate in purpose as his American associates is shown by the following warnings. In an address by him, which was printed in small type in the Federal Reserve Bulletin, we find this little gem:

"Any attempt to bring it [deflation] about rapidly would cause widespread ruin among manufacturers and traders."

Also, he says:

"I can not help thinking that the advocates of dear money are premature in their policy."

Both these quotations are taken from the Federal Reserve Bulletin of March, 1920, page 252.

PROOF OF THE EFFECTS OF DEFLATION.

The deflation increased the commercial failures from about 500 per month, with liabilities $8,000,000 per month, to a monthly maximum of 2,444 failures with liabilities of $87,502,382 during the deflation period. Here are the figures from Dun's record of commercial failures:

	Number of failures.	Liabilities.
1919.
(Before the deflation began.)
November.....	551	$9,177,321
December.....	581	8,309,942
1920.
January.....	569	7,240,032
February.....	492	9,793,142
(After the deflation started.)
March.....	566	12,699,325
April.....	594	13,224,135
May.....	547	10,826,277
June.....	674	32,990,965
July.....	681	21,906,412
August.....	673	28,372,805
September.....	677	29,554,283
October.....	923	38,914,659
November.....	1,050	30,758,130
December.....	1,525	98,871,543
Total for 1920.....	8,881	295,121,805
1921.
January.....	1,895	52,136,631
February.....	1,641	60,852,449
March.....	1,336	67,408,909
April.....	1,487	38,567,769
May.....	1,356	57,066,471
June.....	1,320	34,639,375
July.....	1,444	42,274,153
August.....	1,562	42,904,409
September.....	1,466	37,020,837
October.....	1,713	53,058,659
November.....	1,988	33,460,859
December.....	2,444	87,502,382
Total for 1921.....	19,652	627,401,883

	Number of failures.	Liabilities.
1922.
January.....	2,723	$73,795,750
February.....	2,331	72,608,393
March.....	2,463	71,608,192
April.....	2,167	73,056,637
(Here the deflationary period ended, but heavy failures continued as an after effect.)
May.....	1,960	44,402,896
June.....	1,740	33,242,450
July.....	1,753	40,010,313
August.....	1,714	40,279,718
September.....	1,696	36,900,000
October.....	1,700	34,647,438
November.....	1,737	40,265,297
December.....	1,814	52,069,021
Total for 1922.....	23,670	$17,885,125

Summary of failures during and after deflation.

	Liabilities.
March to December, 1920, 7,820 failures.....	$278,118,631
January to December, 1921, 19,652 failures.....	327,401,883
January to December, 1922, 9,684 failures.....	291,071,002
April to December, 1922, 13,992 failures.....	326,817,123

Recorded total of 51,148 failures..... 1,523,408,649

Failures, 51,148.

Liabilities, $1,523,408,649.

How is that for a record of Bolshevik executions?

FIFTY-ONE THOUSAND INDUSTRIES ASSASSINATED.

Over 51,000 of the most enterprising, new-blood, young American industries taken out against the wall and shot to pieces—murdered by "deflation," the same old cruel and barbarous weapon that has always been used by this gang of financial Bolsheviks.

And why did these industry wreckers of Wall Street plot and plan and execute and murder young American industry?

Because it didn't want the competition.

Because they were too cowardly to stand up and play a fair game with the young enterprising manhood of American industrial life that had gotten on its feet during the war. Many American industries that had served the country well during the war were prepared to serve it well in times of peace.

Because these scoundrels of Wall Street are not clean sports or fair fighters. They are crooks and bandits by nature.

They are not constructionists. They are destructionists. They thrive on the wealth that others create, because they have the power to steal it. They murder their victims and rob them.

Their pretended patriotism is pure camouflage.

They do many of these things within the law because they often make the laws to suit their purposes.

Have they not overstepped the bounds of all law and reason in the plain murder of 51,000 of the most desirable and enterprising of American industries and business concerns?

On page 8 of the Federal Reserve Bulletin for January, 1923, is a diagram showing the bank credit line of 800 member banks in the leading cities. The line shows a deflation of $2,000,000,000 worth of credits from January to December, 1920.

A reduction of loans and discounts of $2,000,000,000 in one year.

What did this do to industry in America?

Dun's statement of failures tells the story.

And I am confident that an investigation capable of commanding the facts will prove that—terrible as this showing is, and meaning all that every business man knows that it means—that it is but half the story.

It would be interesting to know how much of the credit taken away from the independent manufacturers throughout the country was re-loaned to protect the industries controlled by these Wall Street wreckers.

When this is ascertained it will show, I am sure, a much greater deflation than even $2,000,000,000—stupendous as this figure is—for the rest of the country.

An investigation will show that these Wall Street money kings deflated almost every industry in the country but those controlled by themselves.

After this $2,000,000,000 deflation of credits, in 1920, I am told that about two-thirds of all the credits of the Federal reserve system then outstanding were loaned by the New York district.

Does this not prove that Wall Street was taking care of its own at the expense of the rest of the Nation?

Here are some interesting tables taken from the Federal Reserve Bulletin, pages 901 and 902.

These tables show what happened in past years when the same old money trust played the same old game, as compared with its most recent performance.

Number of commercial failures.

	1893	1894	1907	1908	1920	1921	1922
January.....			1,355	1,949	569	1,895	2,723
February.....	3,202	4,304	924	1,621	492	1,641	2,331
March.....			863	1,339	508	1,336	2,463
April.....			799	1,309	504	1,487	1,167
May.....	3,199	2,734	857	1,379	547	1,356	1,960
June.....			815	1,112	674	1,320	1,740
July.....			777	1,232	681	1,444	1,753
August.....	4,015	2,868	850	1,199	673	1,502	1,714
September.....			856	1,028	677	1,466	1,594
October.....			1,139	1,187	923	1,718	1,708
November.....	4,826	3,979	1,180	1,120	1,059	1,968
December.....			1,316	217	1,525	2,444

Liabilities of commercial failures.

(In thousands of dollars.)

	1893	1894	1907	1908	1920	1921	1922
January.....			13,628	27,100	7,240	52,137	73,796
February.....	47,338	64,137	10,284	27,065	9,763	60,852	72,608
March.....			8,164	21,542	12,699	67,499	71,608
April.....			11,082	20,316	13,224	38,568	73,057
May.....	121,541	37,596	9,965	13,643	10,826	57,066	44,403
June.....			16,466	14,709	32,991	34,639	33,243
July.....			12,335	14,222	21,906	42,774	40,010
August.....	82,469	29,411	15,198	23,782	28,373	42,904	40,279
September.....			18,935	12,298	24,554	37,021	36,900
October.....			27,415	15,899	38,915	53,059	34,647
November.....	93,431	41,848	17,637	12,660	30,788	63,470
December.....			36,297	14,140	68,873	87,502

Though the deflation wrecked over 50,000 concerns, with liabilities of over one and a half billion of dollars, this does not begin to properly picture the losses. The liabilities of the Lehigh Machine Co. were $180,000 and assets over $750,000 when the receivers were placed in control. But the assets have been so thoroughly dissipated and the concern so thoroughly wrecked by these receivers that there is not enough left to pay the receivers' debts. Stockholders, creditors, and even wage claimants are wiped out, meaning a loss of really over a million dollars when all direct and indirect consequences are considered.

Thus the losses shown by the liabilities in this statement would undoubtedly have to be multiplied a great many times to include the losses of stockholders, partners, principals, etc., as the "liabilities" in Dun's probably only cover the unpaid obligations to creditors. It is safe to presume that in many cases these "liabilities" would be less than one-tenth the total losses involved.

Also, this statement does not take into account the concerns driven out of business that did not fail but simply paid their bills in full and quit.

In talking with the export manager of one of the largest farm-machinery concerns in March, 1923, he made this remarkable statement to me:

"In early 1920 there were over 150 manufacturers of farm tractors in the United States. Now there are 3."

To read the bankers' magazines and some of the foolish newspapers that do the propaganda work for the money trust it appears that they are very proud of the job they have done.

Can any sane or sensible, patriotic citizens or citizens be proud of such destructive work?

What outside devastating force could do worse?

Did the invading German armies do more damage in France and Belgium than these industry wreckers have done here in our own country?

The ruins are to be found in almost every town and city throughout the Nation.

The industrial destruction of the Bolsheviks of Russia was small when compared with the ruin and devastation wrought by these Bolsheviks of Wall Street.

The fraud and fake of the propaganda that the contraction of credits was for the purpose of curbing the speculation are obvious to anyone who knows that the speculator and Wall Street gambler can legally pay any rate of interest and the bank can legally lend him money "on call" at any rate of interest. But the manufacturer must borrow from his bank only at the legal rate.

When the rediscount rate was raised to 6 and 7 per cent it was to "get" these independent manufacturers, not the speculator. The Money Trust and the fakers guilty of this propaganda knew it full well.

The propaganda was a camouflage to fool the manufacturers, to fool the people.

The call rate for money went up to 15 per cent, and the stock gamblers got the needed money at the higher rate; but the manufacturers were ruined, because they could not buy the needed credits at any price.

How could your local bank lend a manufacturer money at the legal rate of 6 per cent and then rediscount that paper with its Federal reserve?

Could it afford to lend its money to the Wall Street speculator at 15 per cent and rediscount paper at 7 per cent?

Well, I guess, yes!

Now, can you understand the fake and fraud of all that propaganda that filled the newspapers in early 1920 about bringing down prices by taking the credits away from the speculator?

With the Associated Press and other news-distributing agencies and almost the entire press of the country under the absolute control of these Wall Street highbinders, what chance have the people or the common business interests of the country?

I ask this question in all seriousness.

On March 12, 1920, the call money rate in New York was 15 per cent. The president of a bank in a near-by town, to whom I applied in the spring of 1920 for credit accommodation, told me very frankly that he had some money in New York drawing 12 per cent "on call," and that he would consider it poor business and not to the interest of his stockholders to take that money from New York, where he was then getting 12 per cent, and lend it to me for 6 per cent, which was all that he could under the law or in any legal way charge me.

The speculators were paying high, but they did get the money, and the manufacturers, except the favored ones, could not get it at any price. They were being deliberately ruined.

The money trust's own industries were, of course, protected, but the independents were purposely and heartlessly ruined by the deflation.

The United States Senate, March 8, 1920, passed a resolution wherein the Federal Reserve Board was requested to advise concerning the—"Cause and justification for the usurious rates of interest on collateral loans in the financial centers, under what law authorized, and what steps, if any, were required to abate this condition."

Mr. W. P. G. Harding, then chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, answered the Senate's inquiry with the statement that "broad and fundamental questions of economic policy" were involved. I agree with this part of his statement. The "economic policy" was the policy of the money trust to crush competition and subordinate labor and farmer and make fast its controlling grip on the industry and life of the Nation.

While our bankers have been so "short of money" that they could not take care of the necessary domestic industrial financial needs to save over 50,000 manufacturers and business concerns from under-served ruin, they have lent, according to financial statements in the New York Times and statements of the Guaranty Trust Co., to European countries and manufacturers a total of $869,902,000 in 1922, of which $680,505,000 was loaned to European governments and municipalities and $189,397,000 to European industries; and during the last three years a total of $2,070,000,000 has been borrowed here by foreign governments and foreign industries.

According to international bankers who have made a survey of the situation, the New York Times says that in 1921 $625,820,000 and in 1920 $576,322,000 was lent abroad.

Remember, please, that this was during the height of the deflation here, while the money trust was forcing failures at the rate of about 2,000 a month through a deflation of credits.

The same statement says that the loans to foreign corporations amounted to $189,427,000 in 1922, $118,750,000 in 1921, and $189,400,000 in 1920.

Were American bankers just lying to American manufacturers about the shortage of money?

While they were forcing a condition of ruin on our own country loans were made in 1922 alone in other lands, as follows:

Australia—Government and municipal	$10,758,000
Australia—to corporations	2,500,000
Dutch East Indies—government	100,000,000
Belgian—to corporations	2,500,000
Czechoslovakian—public loans	21,500,000
Denmark—to corporations	5,000,000
France—public communities	31,000,000
France—to corporations	41,975,000
Netherlands—public loans	47,400,000
Netherlands—to corporations	18,220,000
Yugoslavia—public loans	15,250,000
Argentina	21,575,000
Do	28,095,000
Norway	21,575,000
Bolivia	24,000,000
Brazil—public loans	61,380,000
Brazil—to corporations	4,000,000
Chile	19,350,000
Colombia	5,000,000
Peru	2,750,000
Uruguay	6,000,000
Cuba—to corporations	28,500,000
Dominican Republic	6,700,000
Haiti	10,000,000
Canada—provincial and municipal	207,220,000
Canada—to corporations	46,526,000
Newfoundland	6,000,000

In France (to American corporations)	$10,000,000
In Cuba (to American corporations)	23,421,000
In Canada (to American corporations)	2,800,000

The New York Times, March 18, 1923, under the heading, "Billion a year to rebuild the world advanced from American pocket," says:

"Since 1914 we have put up $21,000,000,000, and the tide of loans is rising—nations, provinces, cities, and corporations aided in tasks of reconstruction."

Briefly, this is how we have put up $21,000,000,000 since 1914:

American securities repurchased at the outbreak of the war, 1914	$3,000,000,000
American Government loans to Allies	10,000,000,000
Funded interest on these loans	2,000,000,000
Commercial credits extended abroad	3,000,000,000
Dollar securities purchased from foreign holders	2,631,000,000
Foreign currency securities purchased	620,000,000
Foreign currency bought by Americans	500,000,000

Total 21,751,000,000

The Times adds that "this compilation, made by the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, is believed to be an underestimate."

Thus, while American bankers in 1920, 1921, and 1922 were telling the American manufacturers that they were "short of money" and not only could not accommodate them but were compelling them to undergo ruinous liquidation to pay off the small amount of discounts that had been given them, the bankers were sending billions of dollars of the American people's money abroad.

I am not opposed to helping foreign countries with credits if we can afford it, but I believe that American manufacturers should come first.

I am opposed to being lied to by the big money trust propagandists, who have been deceiving American industry.

I am opposed to being made one of the victims of this most monstrous, traitorous, and villainous conspiracy which has deliberately robbed millions of this country's best and most constructive citizens of the earnings of a lifetime and has deprived the country of over 50,000 of its most enterprising industries.

I am opposed to the control of the billions of dollars of the American people's money and the billions more of the American people's credit by the Wall Street money trust and its traitorous use to crush out the lifeblood of young American business energy that the money trust may monopolize the field exclusively and extend its control to the industries of foreign countries.

Can the deposits of the American people, the savings funds, the great insurance funds, continue to be left in the hands of this powerful money trust for the purpose of ruining all the ambitious, enterprising, constructive new blood that may arise in our industrial life?

Surely we must have some laws in our country under which these traitorous scoundrels can be brought to justice for their crimes.

What can be done to make the guilty traitors pay for the damage they have done in the wrecking of American industry?

They surely should be made to pay, for the destruction was willfully planned and deliberately carried out.

Government agencies were used to help ruin American manufacturing industries at the instigation of these traitorous conspirators.

These Bolshevik industry destroyers of Wall Street must be dealt with or real Americanism will soon cease to exist entirely.

These comparatively few men are now practically ruling 110,000,000 people for the private interest of the few and against the welfare and best interest of the 110,000,000. Their control of the press and their control of legislative, judicial, and executive branches of Government is demonstrated day in and day out.

Thousands of banks, hundreds of thousands of manufacturers and business men, thousands of chambers of commerce, a few independent newspapers have proven to be the simple-minded, propagandized dupes of these few powerful and traitorous conspirators and have, with the innocence of babes, often helped in the destruction of their own industries.

CONCERNING LIBERTY BONDS.

How is this for cold-blooded sarcasm? I quote the following from the Federal Reserve Bulletin, page 555, June, 1920, when Liberty bonds were selling in the seventies:

"The pronounced fall in the quotations of the bonds is attributed by financial authorities to large realizing sales originating with certain classes of bondholders who found the cheapest and easiest way of obtaining funds of which they stood in need."

WERE THE FARMERS LIFT?

During the deflation period, or from January, 1920, to August, 1921, the price of Chicago corn dropped from $1.47 to 55 cents; New Orleans middling cotton, from 40 cents to 12 cents; Chicago red winter wheat, No. 2, from $2.63 to $1.28; and wool from $1.28 to 40 cents; Chicago steers, from $15.93 to $8.77; and Pennsylvania crude oil, from $5.06 to $2.25.

For the first six months of 1921 there were 7,016 suicides, as against 2,996 for the first six months of 1920. It is claimed that this increase is due entirely to the deflation and business failures and resulting despondency.

UNEMPLOYED STATEMENT VERIFIED.

Secretary of Labor Davis in August, 1921, placed the number of unemployed at 5,735,000.

The New York Post, October 4, 1921, says:

"WASHINGTON, October 4.—Losses in earnings of workers throughout the country during the past fiscal year due to involuntary idleness were put at more than $6,500,000,000 in an estimate prepared to-day by economic experts of the National Conference of Unemployment."

The report of the National Industrial Conference Board, issued January 18, 1922, states that one-fourth of all industrial wage earners were out of employment on June 1, 1921.

CONVICTING PROPAGANDA.

We find here and there in the propaganda sent out to the bankers some rare, choice bits which show the heart and purpose of the money trust so clearly that it leaves no room for doubt for even the most gullible if read with reasonable intelligence.

What other interpretation can be placed on the following sentence, which appears in the Federal Reserve Bulletin, page 902, August, 1922?

This came out after the deflation had ceased.

Was it not a warning to the banks that the new extension of credits might go far enough to help some poor soul, some independent manufacturer who had weathered the storm, who had survived the deflation ordeal?

Who else was it aimed at?

Here it is:

"It was at one time felt that this process [the revival of the extension of credits is referred to] might go too far and result in preserving a good many concerns that actually had no claim to existence."

It would be interesting to have a congressional committee compel the Federal Reserve Board to explain in full detail just who these concerns are that they are fearful may be "preserved"—these concerns who "actually had no claim to existence."

From what authority does the Federal Reserve Board assume to dictate to the banks what concerns shall be permitted to live and which ones "actually have no claim to existence"?

At least, have they not criminally exceeded their authority as conferred by Congress in the willful murder of 51,000 manufacturing and business firms?

MORAL DEGENERACY.

If you want to get an idea of the psychology of these big bankers and brokers of Wall Street and an inside view of their business morality and a fair conception of their ruthlessness when it comes to the extremes they will resort to to drive out and eliminate competition, get a copy of the report of the "Pujo committee" and read it through.

I quote from page 87, section 8. The questions and answers, word for word, are here given in the examination of the president of the New York Stock Exchange:

"The president of the New York Stock Exchange admitted that the purpose of the rule is to drive the Consolidated out of business.

"Q. Do you not regard that as a most oppressive and unjust rule?—A. I do not.

"Q. How do you justify it? You are the president of the stock exchange. We would like to know how you justify it.—A. I justify it by the fact that the Consolidated Exchange is an organization that is a rival organization of our own, and this is a business that we should be able to keep. I do not see any reason why we should not strengthen our institution as much as we can.

"Q. But you do not keep all that business when your own listed stocks are sold on your exchange through your brokers?—A. What business?

"Q. The business to which you refer. It does not take any business away from you, does it, for a member of the Consolidated Exchange to sell through your exchange stocks that are not listed on his exchange; but it gives you business, does it not?—A. Yes.

"Q. And your refusal to take it really drives away business. You are willing to drive away business, are you not, in order to prevent a man, who is a member of another exchange from doing business at all and to drive him out of business?—A. Yes.

"The committee can find no justification for the methods adopted by the New York Stock Exchange to exterminate its weaker rival."

Again, in this same report of the "Pujo committee," see how the big controlling bankers ruthlessly ruined other banks to eliminate competition in 1908. Read pages 23, 24, and 27, concerning the cases of the Mechanics & Traders Bank, the Oriental Bank of New York, the Brooklyn Bank, and the Borough Bank.

You should read the testimony by Mr. Cannon, page 24, and then read the findings of the committee on pages 130 and 131, and note particularly the third paragraph on page 132.

Page 133 says:

"Sufficient has, however, been developed to demonstrate that neither potentially competing banking institutions or competing railroad or industrial corporations should be subject to a common source of private control."

Do not overlook the testimony of Mr. Morgan, commencing on page 136. I personally think that if anyone but Mr. Morgan had the audacity to give such testimony which is apparently so illogical and untrue that he would have been called a brazen liar and considered a very suspicious character.

But, after all, is it not all in harmony with the deception and heartless savagery of the money trust's deflation conspiracy?

Did Mr. Morgan compel Mr. Ryan to sell some $3,000 par value of life insurance company stock to him just because Mr. Morgan thought it would be "a good thing" for Mr. Morgan "to hold" or because Mr. Morgan wanted to control the peoples' money that was controlled by that life insurance company? Why would not Mr. Morgan tell the truth and tell it frankly as any other citizen would have been compelled to do?

Could not a man of the character plainly shown exact a policy through powerful control over and with his associates to ruin millions of men?

Mr. Morgan says a lot about lending money on character. What kind of character can you see in his testimony?

On page 159, among the conclusions of the Pujo committee, we find the following statement which is worthy of space to repeat:

"Far more dangerous than all that has happened to us in the past in the way of elimination of competition in industry is the control of credit through the domination of these groups over banks and industries. It means that there can be no hope of revived competition and no new ventures on a scale commensurate with the needs of modern commerce, or that could live against existing combinations without the consent of those who dominate these sources of credit. A banking house that has organized a great industrial or railway combination or that has offered its securities to the public is represented on the board of directors and acts as its fiscal agent thereby assumes a certain guardianship over that corporation. In the ratio in which that corporation succeeds or fails the prestige of the banking house and its capacity for absorbing and distributing future issues is affected. If competition is threatened it is manifestly the duty of the bankers, from their point of view of the protection of the stockholders as distinguished from the standpoint of the public, to prevent it if possible. If they control the sources of credit they can furnish such protection. It is this element in the situation that unless checked is likely to do more to prevent the restoration of competition than all other conditions combined."

The Federal reserve banking system organized after this Pujo money and credits investigation for the purpose of taking the control of credits out of the hands of the money trust in order to prevent just what happened in 1920-21 and 22 was captured by the money trust and used to accomplish the very purpose it was organized to prevent

A SUMMING UP.

To sum up there is ample evidence to prove:

That a small group of men whom I have called the money trust on Wall Street conspired together to wreck and ruin industry and independent manufacturing in the United States for the purpose of eliminating competition.

That they conspired to manipulate and use the powers of certain functions of the Government for their traitorous purposes.

That they deliberately conspired to ruin and impoverish the farmers.

That they conspired to deflate wages and subordinate labor.

That they conspired to rob the common people of millions in Liberty bond values.

That they did use their control of newspapers and news agencies for preliminary propaganda and the Federal reserve banking system which had become their tool to effect their malicious purposes.

That over 51,000 manufacturing and business establishments were wrecked and ruined in the period from March, 1920, to December, 1922, entailing losses to 110,000,000 people totaling a stupendous sum of more than $30,000,000,000.

Does this warrant congressional attention?

Will Congress put these most traitorous, dangerous, and powerful criminals in jail for the rest of their lives and take measures as far as possible to redeem the losses caused by the participation of such Government agencies as were used by these traitors?

EDMONDS INSURANCE BILL (H. R. 3689).

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, there has been favorably reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia the new Edmonds insurance bill, H. R. 3689, and it is now on the calendar ready to be called up for passage, same being a bill of 152 pages and embracing many vicious provisions that should never be passed into law. If our colleague from Pennsylvania [Mr. EDMONDS] had known all the facts connected with this bill, he would never have fathered it and would never have introduced it for Superintendent Miller. And if my colleagues on the Committee on the District of Columbia had known all the facts surrounding this proposed legislation, they would never have favorably reported it so hurriedly. And if I can get these facts before my colleagues, both of the House and the Senate, the Congress will never pass this bill into law.

And I have secured this permission to extend my remarks in order that I may be able to bring to the personal attention of each Member of the House and of the Senate the facts ascertained in an investigation I have made concerning this bill.

It is the practice of the Committee on the District of Columbia to submit to subcommittees the various bills referred to it, so that the subcommittee may report to the full committee its recommendations on each bill. There seems to be some sentiment in the committee to the effect that whenever a subcommittee favorably recommends a measure, the full committee should accept it without debate, and favorably report the bill without further consideration of it. I have consistently fought against such a policy.

During the seven years I have labored in Congress I have diligently served without complaint upon every committee and subcommittee to which I have been appointed. I have never sought appointment on any subcommittee other than the one to which this bill was referred.

In the last Congress, when the Edmonds insurance bill was passed, I then investigated conditions sufficiently to convince me that no greater powers should be conferred upon the superintendent of insurance in the District of Columbia, and I insisted that Acting Chairman Zihlman, when appointing the subcommittee to report on this bill, should give me representation on it, so that I could develop all facts against its passage. He saw fit to leave me off of the subcommittee. While I felt the injustice, I did not complain.

FAVORABLY REPORTED WITHOUT READING.

When the subcommittee reported to the Committee on the District of Columbia that it had investigated the bill, and recommended that it be favorably reported to the House for passage, I then protested and called attention to the fact that this bill contained 152 pages, and that I felt sure that the subcommittee had not had time to give it proper investigation. Yet, without reading a page of it, the committee passed a motion favorably reporting the bill, mine being the sole vote against it. When the committee met the succeeding week I requested permission to question the superintendent of insurance before the committee, with the assurance that if the committee would allow it, not 1 of the 21 Congressmen on the committee thereafter would vote for the bill, but such request was denied by the committee. In thus acting, the committee intended no discourtesy, but, as expressed by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HAMMER], they felt perfectly satisfied with the investigation made by the subcommittee and could not afford to waste further time on it. That is the one great trouble. This committee presumes and takes it for granted that every bill prepared by others and sent us for passage is both meritorious and necessary, when frequently it is neither.

THE EDMONDS INSURANCE BILL PASSED LAST CONGRESS.

Public law No. 162, passed by the Sixty-seventh Congress and approved March 4, 1922, was first introduced by Mr. EDMONDS, of Pennsylvania, as H. R. 175, and, slightly amended to conform to Senate bill 2265, was reintroduced by Mr. EDMONDS as H. R. 6775, which was favorably reported to the House, which, however, substituted and finally passed the Senate bill 2265.

While called "An act to regulate marine insurance," this Edmonds bill was a comprehensive insurance code of numerous pages, for under the head entitled "Kinds of insurance that may be written" was the following:

First. On marine risks as described in section 1 of this act under the definition of "marine insurance."

Second. On property and rents and use and occupancy against loss or damage by fire, lightning, tempest, earthquake, hail, frost, snow, explosion (other than explosion of steam boilers or flywheels), breakage or leakage of sprinklers or other apparatus erected for extinguishing fire, and on such apparatus against accidental injury; and against liability of the insured for such loss or damage; and on automobiles against loss or damage from collision or theft, and against liability of the owner or user for injury to person or property caused by his automobile.

Third. Against bodily injury or death by accident, and against disablement resulting from sickness, and every insurance appertaining thereto, including quarantine and identification.

Fourth. Against liability of the insured for the death or disability of another.

Fifth. Against loss of or damage to property resulting from causes other than fire, marine and inland navigation hazards, and against liability of the insured for such loss or damage, and on motor vehicles against fire, marine and inland navigation hazards, and against personal injury and death, and liability of the insured therefor, from explosions of steam boilers and engines, pipes and machinery connected therewith, and breakage of flywheels or machinery, and to make and certify inspections thereof; and against loss of use and occupancy from any cause; against loss by burglary, theft, and forgery.

Sixth. Against loss or damage from failure of debtors to pay their obligations to the insured.

Seventh. Against loss from encumbrances on or defects in titles.

Eighth. Against loss or damage by theft, injury, sickness, or death of animals, and to furnish veterinary services.

Ninth. Against any loss or liability arising from any other casualty or hazard not contrary to public policy other than that appertaining to or connected with (1) life insurance (including the granting of endowments and annuities) and (2) fidelity and surety bonding.

An insurance company organized for the transaction of one or more of the kinds of insurance permitted under subdivisions 3 to 9, inclusive, of this section, shall also, if complying with this act, be admitted or licensed to write any or all insurance and reinsurance comprised in any one or more of the other subdivisions of this section: Provided, That nothing in this section shall be construed as preventing any insurance company now formed, admitted, or licensed to transact insurance in the District from continuing the writing of those kinds of insurance which it may have been authorized to write on the date when this act goes into effect.

In fact, it was a bill regulating and reorganizing generally the insurance laws and the insurance department of the District of Columbia. It increased the number of employees, granting an additional examiner at $8,000, an additional clerk-stenographer at $1,800 plus the $240 bonus, and gave to the superintendent of insurance an additional $800 for contingent expenses.

In speaking before our committee for his above bill, Mr. EDMONDS said:

We had an expert, Prof. S. S. Huebner, who has made a study of this subject, so I am going to ask you first to hear Professor Huebner, and let Professor Huebner explain to you why this bill was drawn, how it was drawn, and why it is necessary, and so forth.

And I quote from page 4 of the hearings the following:

THE CHAIRMAN. How do you happen to be here; by whose request?

PROFESSOR HUEBNER. At the request of Mr. EDMONDS.

THE CHAIRMAN. The author of the bill; and he is acting in behalf of the interests?

PROFESSOR HUEBNER. Mr. EDMONDS asked me to be here and explain the reasons why this bill was framed and the main ideas in the bill.

And the Congress passed that bill for Mr. EDMONDS, it being Public Law No. 162.

PRESENT EDMONDS NEW INSURANCE BILL.

This present bill now before us, H. R. 3680, was introduced in this Congress by Mr. Edmonds on December 14, 1923. It is an exact copy of a bill which in November, 1923, Supt. Burt A. Miller had printed in Baltimore by Kuehn Bros. & Co. (Inc.), and for which printing they charged him $1,500 for 500 copies.

In view of the fact that Superintendent Miller paid Mr. Louis A. Dent $2,500, which he claims was paid for drafting this bill, I respectfully suggest to my colleagues that they compare this H. R. 3680 with the bill which Senator Pomerene introduced in the Senate on July 11, 1921, being Senate bill 2229, and they will be convinced that it was copied from the Pomerene bill.

MILLER TRIED TO PASS SUCH A BILL IN JANUARY, 1923.

On January 10, 1923, there appeared before our committee in behalf of the House bill, H. R. 13834, embracing 150 pages, which was practically the same as the Pomerene bill, S. 2229, Superintendent Miller; Mr. Edmonds; Prof. S. S. Huebner; Mr. William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Mutual Life Association; David M. Lea; and five others.

When calling the committee to order, Chairman Focht observed that the bill was an extensive one; that it would be needless to submit it to a subcommittee, as it could not be hoped to get a bill of that character and size passed before the session closed in March, and that he figured it would take some years to get it through. Superintendent Miller said it was the last word on insurance.

EXCERPTS FROM MILLER'S TESTIMONY JANUARY 10, 1923.

MR. MILLER. Gentlemen of the committee, let me give you briefly the history of this bill, and in that way I can answer the statement of my good friend, the Congressman across from me [Mr. BLANTZ], in reference to this bill.

In the first place, this bill gathers together everything that has been considered by Congress in what was known first as a bill growing out of the 1915 report a number of years ago, following the investigation of the Armstrong Committee of New York. That bill was introduced by Butler Ames, of Massachusetts. Subsequently, a committee of the American Bar Association introduced a bill in Congress, and hearings were had on it. It was introduced originally, I believe, by Senator Sherman and then, later, and is now before the District Committee of the Senate known as S. 2229, introduced by Senator Pomerene.

Shortly after I was appointed to the office of superintendent of insurance that bill, together with the marine insurance bill, which you passed last March, was sent to me with the idea of reconciling the two bills and making one code, without repealing or interfering with the marine insurance bill in the least, but taking every important thing that was in the marine insurance bill and making it adaptable to general insurance.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Right at this point, Commissioner Miller, might I ask you if GEORGE EDMONDS has gone over this bill and approved it?

Mr. MILLER. GEORGE EDMONDS has gone over this bill from beginning to end; in the language of the old story, he has gone over it from cover to cover.

Mr. FITZGERALD. You mean in the language of the author of The Jockings, instead of the Good Book, don't you?

Mr. MILLER. Yes. After that, I then called in the representatives both of the companies and the agents, and of the people who have insurance to place and were interested in it. I have had hearings at my office all summer and these gentlemen have been here and have been heard. I had with me on this proposition, assisting me, Doctor Huebner, of the University of Pennsylvania, an authority on insurance. I had the Hon. Herman Ekern, former commissioner of the State of Pennsylvania and now attorney general of that State; the Hon. Walter Chorn, superintendent of insurance of the State of Missouri; Hon. A. I. Vooris, former superintendent of insurance of the State of Ohio and also representing, as he did, the American Bar Association; Hon. T. W. Blackburn, of Omaha; representatives from the Life Presidents' Association of New York; representatives from the Casualty Association, representing casualty companies; Mr. R. B. Gilkey, of New York, secretary of the Insurance Association of America, and last, but not least, I have had the representatives of the agents and of the Board of Trade of the city of Washington, as represented by Mr. D. M. Lea, of this city.

Mr. UNDERHILL. They have all agreed on the provisions of the bill?

Mr. MILLER. They have all agreed.

Mr. UNDERHILL. And what opposition has developed?

Mr. MILLER. There is no opposition.

And Superintendent Miller testified that on January 10, 1923, nearly a year before he paid Mr. Dent $2,500 to copy this present bill from that Pomerene bill, S. 2229.

WHY WAS DENT PAID $2,500 IN NOVEMBER, 1923?

When I cross-examined Superintendent Miller on January 10, 1923, notice what he then testified about the bill then pending, and then determine whether it was necessary in November, 1923, for him to pay Louis A. Dent $2,500 to draft a new bill. I quote from the hearings of January 10, 1922, on the former bill, the following:

Mr. BLANTON. Now, with all this eminent talent you had associated with you in passing upon this bill, who drew it?

Mr. MILLER. It was as I said to you, sir, Mr. Congressman; we met there at my office and I worked out the details and submitted it to these various people.

Mr. BLANTON. Then, you drew the bill?

Mr. MILLER. I simply acted as a secretary to the bunch of advisers.

Mr. BLANTON. Well, somebody must be the father of the bill; who is the father?

Mr. UNDERHILL. It is a joint bill?

Mr. MILLER. It is the joint bill of all this talent I could get together, the best talent I could get together on the subject, and using the American Bar Association's bill and the marine insurance bill, which you gentlemen passed, as a guide, and this is an advance step in commercial insurance to-day.

And let me show you further what Miller testified to on January 10, 1923:

Mr. BLANTON. You have been superintendent how long?

Mr. MILLER. Since the 24th of June, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. Just since the 24th of June?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. Less than a year?

Mr. MILLER. Less than a year; yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. And would you mind stating the salary you now draw?

Mr. MILLER. I draw the magnificent salary of $3,500 a year, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. And you start out, in framing this bill, by providing for an increase of $1,000, to start with, to wit, $4,500?

Mr. MILLER. I did not put that provision in there, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. Which one of this eminent talent you had put that in? Mr. MILLER. That was done by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Mr. BLANTON. Somebody did put that in, though?

Mr. MILLER. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia did put that in upon their own motion and upon their own suggestion and recommendation to me, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. May I say that that is the great trouble about all such bills; they all call for an increase of salary.

Pardon me; I do not want to reflect on your services, or the value of your services in the observation I made, but if the gentleman will look it up he will find that the commissioners of insurance in many of the States do not get a bit more than you are getting now, $3,500.

Mr. UNDERHILL. What States?

Mr. BLANTON. A number of them.

Inasmuch as Superintendent Miller thought that his salary of $3,500 was such a very insignificant sum, let me mention what 35 governors are now receiving:

States whose governors receive not over $5,000.

State.	Salary of governor.	Name of governor.	Politics.	Expiration of term of office.
New Hampshire.....	$3,000	Fred H. Brown.....	Democrat.....	January, 1925.
South Dakota.....	3,000	W. H. McMaster.....	Republican.....	Do.
Vermont.....	3,000	Redfield Proctor.....	Do.	Do.
Delaware.....	4,000	Wm. D. Denney.....	Do.	Do.
Tennessee.....	4,000	Austin Peay.....	Democrat.....	Do.
Texas.....	4,000	Pat M. Neff.....	Do.	Do.
Wyoming.....	4,000	Wm. B. Ross.....	Do.	January, 1927.
Maryland.....	4,500	A. C. Ritchie.....	Do.	Do.
Oklahoma.....	4,500	M. E. Trapp.....	Do.	Do.
Alabama.....	5,000	W. W. Brandon.....	Do.	Do.
Arkansas.....	5,000	T. C. McRae.....	Do.	January, 1925.
Colorado.....	5,000	Wm. E. Sweet.....	Progressive Democrat.....	Do.
Connecticut.....	5,000	C. A. Templeton.....	Republican.....	Do.
Georgia.....	5,000	C. Walker.....	Democrat.....	June, 1925.
Idaho.....	5,000	C. C. Moore.....	Republican.....	January, 1925.
Iowa.....	5,000	N. E. Kendall.....	Do.	Do.
Kansas.....	5,000	J. M. Davis.....	Democrat.....	Do.
Maine.....	5,000	P. D. Baxter.....	Republican.....	Do.
Michigan.....	5,000	A. J. Groesbeck.....	Do.	Do.
Mississippi.....	5,000	H. L. Whitfield.....	Democrat.....	January, 1928.
Missouri.....	5,000	A. M. Hyde.....	Republican.....	January, 1925.
New Mexico.....	5,000	Jas. Hinkle.....	Democrat.....	Do.
North Carolina.....	5,000	C. Morrison.....	Do.	Do.
North Dakota.....	5,000	R. A. Nestos.....	Republican.....	Do.
Oregon.....	5,000	W. M. Pierce.....	Democrat.....	January, 1927.
South Carolina.....	5,000	T. G. McLeod.....	Do.	January, 1925.
Virginia.....	5,000	E. L. Trinkle.....	Do.	February, 1925.
Wisconsin.....	5,000	J. J. Blaine.....	Republican.....	January, 1925.

Thus 28 governors of 28 States now receive salaries from $3,000 to $5,000. Do you know why? It is because of the fact that our constituents at home pass on these salaries. And these constituents at home are the people who send you and me here to Congress. And yet hardly a day passes that you do not provide some huge sum of money for somebody to receive.

Now of the remaining 20 States, let me show you the number of governors who receive less than we do:

State.	Salary of governor.	Name of governor.	Politics.	Expiration of term of office.
Florida.....	$6,000	C. A. Hardee.....	Democrat.....	January, 1925.
Utah.....	6,000	C. A. Mabey.....	Republican.....	Do.
Washington.....	6,000	L. F. Hart.....	Do.	Do.
Arizona.....	6,500	G. W. F. Hunt.....	Democrat.....	Do.
Kentucky.....	6,500	W. J. Fields.....	Do.	December, 1927.
Minnesota.....	7,000	J. A. O. Preus.....	Republican.....	January, 1925.
Nevada.....	7,200	J. J. Scrugham.....	Democrat.....	January, 1927.

Hence you will see that the governors of 35 out of the 48 States of this Union now receive less salary than we do, and we ought to take a lesson from that fact when we are daily granting excessive pay to various individuals who do some little service for the Government. For if we do not heed and quit raising these salaries, sooner or later we are going to hear from the people at home in a most decisive way.

IS SUPERINTENDENT MILLER AN INSURANCE EXPERT?

I quote the following from page 8 of the hearings on the old bill in the Sixty-seventh Congress, being Mr. Miller's testimony given on January 10, 1923:

Mr. BLANTON. Now, right there, if you do not mind, I would like to get some information. Prior to June last, when you became commissioner, were you then in business for yourself or working on a salary?

Mr. MILLER. If you want to know, sir, I will tell you that history, and tell you about it quick.

Mr. BLANTON. You can just answer that question.

Mr. MILLER. I can tell you about it quick. I came to Washington in April, 1921, at, I might say, I believe, at the suggestion of the President, to be Director of the War Risk; but I was not a soldier of the last war.

Mr. BLANTON. What business were you in then?

Mr. MILLER. I had been prior to that time and was in the insurance business, as I have said to you already, since 1897.

Mr. BLANTON. In the private insurance business?

Mr. MILLER. Private; I was both an agent and an executive officer of a company and a field man—have gone out and solicited business.

Mr. BLANTON. What company was that?

Mr. MILLER. I was vice president of the Bankers' Surety Co., of Cleveland.

Mr. BLANTON. In 1921?

Mr. MILLER. No. I was in the insurance business prior to coming to Cleveland. The Bankers' Surety Co. sold out—

Mr. BLANTON. Let us get one thing at a time. I want to know this, these facts, as one Member of Congress—

Mr. MILLER. You are entitled to know them.

Mr. BLANTON (continuing). When you came here in 1921 at the instance, you say, of the President, in what business were you then engaged?

Mr. MILLER. I had been in the insurance business, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. I mean then; what business did you have then?

Mr. MILLER. I was with the United States Fidelity & Casualty Co., in the Cleveland office.

Mr. BLANTON. In the Cleveland office—working on a salary?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. Working on a commission?

Mr. MILLER. Working on a commission.

Mr. BLANTON. Working as a field man?

Mr. MILLER. I had a large business of my own that I was placing with that company on a commission basis.

Mr. BLANTON. You were working on a commission, then, in Cleveland?

Mr. MILLER. You might say I was what is commonly called a broker of general insurance.

Mr. BLANTON. You were a broker?

Mr. MILLER. I was a broker.

Mr. BLANTON. Working on commissions?

Mr. MILLER. Working on commissions.

Mr. BLANTON. You received no salary from them at all?

Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. And from 1921 until June, 1922, when you became commissioner of insurance in the District of Columbia, in what business were you engaged?

Mr. MILLER. I told you I was with the War Risk.

Mr. BLANTON. You were working with the War Risk?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. What salary did you receive?

Mr. MILLER. I received $3,000, and I was to have been promoted to a higher salary, when I took the present place.

Mr. BLANTON. During the time you worked for the War Risk Bureau, before you took the present place, from 1921 to June, 1922, you received $3,000?

Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BLANTON. That was $500 less than you are now receiving.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, as I said to you, with all respect to my good friend, whom I like, over here on the right [Mr. BLANTON], if this honorable body will report this bill out, I will take my chances—and I come from Ohio, where we think we know something about the game of politics, although not as well as they do in Pennsylvania, but I will take my chances, with you gentlemen behind me, of getting this bill through before the 4th of March, and I know the President will sign the bill when you get it to him. Is that a fair proposition?

Mr. BLANTON. Well, you make me more suspicious of the bill than ever. [Laughter.]

Mr. MILLER. I did not intend to do that. Now, Mr. BLANTON, hold on there—

The CHAIRMAN. You think they are in a big hurry about it?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. MILLER. Wait a minute, Mr. BLANTON; be fair, and that is what you always are; be fair. I would not press this thing if the conditions in the District of Columbia did not warrant it now.

Mr. BLANTON. Is there as great an urgency for this bill as there is for the President's ship subsidy?

EDMONDS SAID OLD BILL WAS LAST THOUGHT IN INSURANCE.

Let me quote just a few words from the testimony of our colleague, Mr. EDMONDS, at said hearing January 10, 1923:

Mr. EDMONDS. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, in the first place, this bill does not conflict with the marine insurance bill at all. As a matter of fact, there are a great many points it supplements. My interest particularly, of course, lies in the marine insurance bill. * * *

It is only when some commissioner, like Mr. Miller, who is interested in insurance and gathers together the best thought in modern insurance laws and brings it here to you, that you can correct that situation. * * *

Now, this bill is the last thought in insurance legislation. I have talked to Professor Huebner about it. I had no hand in drawing it, but I followed it as it went along.

Mr. BLANTON. How many more 148-page insurance bills is the gentleman going to father this session?

Mr. EDMONDS. I am not fathering this bill, you understand; I did not draw this bill.

Mr. BLANTON. When we passed this marine insurance bill, which embraced many insurance provisions, I understood from the gentleman that was the last word on insurance here in the District of Columbia.

Mr. EDMONDS. It only covers marine insurance.

Mr. BLANTON. Why could not this have been included?

Mr. EDMONDS. It could have been, but I did not care myself personally to father a code for the District of Columbia. * * *

The CHAIRMAN. As far as you know about insurance, you approve of this bill?

Mr. EDMONDS. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You have read it?

Mr. EDMONDS. I have read it.

The CHAIRMAN. And know what is in it?

Mr. EDMONDS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And there is not, as far as you can find, any opposition to it?

Mr. EDMONDS. Any trouble, I believe, will be disposed of shortly. I believe there is nothing in here there is any radical objection to. I think there are little things in here that can be smoothed out by Mr. Miller, as he states. I think there are some little things that can be cleaned up. I believe, on the other hand, that in the body of the bill—the idea of the bill—it is the most advanced word in insurance. I have the New York insurance laws and the insurance laws of three or four different States in my office, and I have been going through them, and I think this contains the most advanced ideas in insurance it is possible to get together to-day; and it is my belief, after smoothing out these little things, that you ought to pass it.

Mr. BLANTON. Have you carefully read over the provisions of the bill?

Mr. EDMONDS. I would say to you I have gone over the bill, and I know in principle what is in it.

Mr. BLANTON. Have you carefully studied every section in it? It has 148 pages.

Mr. EDMONDS. If you ask me if I have read every word in it, no; and I could not tell you the effect of it, because I am not an insurance man. * * *

Mr. BLANTON. If you will pardon me, this bill has a peculiar feature about it. The bill is presumed to be designed to protect the people against insurance companies, and yet you do not find a single insurance company here objecting to it, but their general attorneys from New York are here all favoring it.

Mr. EDMONDS. For the simple reason, Mr. BLANTON, that to-day the insurance companies would a great deal rather come to you and get a piece of legislation that is fair than to go up to a legislature and have to go to work and go through a whole lot of inside committees and do things that maybe they ought not to do. That is the real truth of the matter.

PEOPLE PAYING THE BILLS NOT HEARD FROM.

At the conclusion of the hearings on January 10, 1923, let me quote a few excerpts:

Mr. MILLER. Now, Mr. Chairman, let us talk a little home here.

The CHAIRMAN. A little gossip?

Mr. MILLER. A little gossip; yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Local scandals?

Mr. MILLER. Local scandals. What is this going to do for the District of Columbia? It is going to raise us $269,000 of revenue for the District instead of $269,000 under the old bill. * * *

Mr. LAMPERT. I have heard from just one angle of this proposition, the people who are interested directly or indirectly in the insurance business. We have not heard from the great mass of people who pay the bills in the District for the various kinds of insurance. Before I act on this bill I would like to hear what the representatives of the people have to say about it. I am sorry that the District has not a Delegate at the present time to represent it.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Lea is on the insurance committee of the board of trade.

Mr. LAMPERT. Well, the board of trade is only a very small part of the District.

The CHAIRMAN. I saw in the papers several weeks ago that there was some combination formed of insurance companies here. What was that?

Mr. MILLER. I have not heard of it.

And on January 16, 1923, the bill was favorably reported by Chairman Focht for passage to the House, but the Sixty-seventh Congress expired on March 4, 1923, and it was never passed.

SUPERINTENDENT MILLER'S QUALIFICATIONS BECAME IMPORTANT.

In view of the fact that our distinguished colleague, Mr. EDMONDS, had testified in the last Congress that he was not an insurance man, that he did not care to father an insurance code, and that he believed the former bill to be the most advanced word in insurance, because Superintendent Miller had gathered together the best thought in modern insurance laws in it, when Mr. EDMONDS introduced this bill, H. R. 3689, on December 14, 1924, containing 152 pages, I naturally scrutinized it closely, because I had convinced myself that our colleagues had too exalted an idea of the ability and qualifications of Superintendent Miller.

RESULTS OF MY INVESTIGATIONS.

In the former bill Superintendent Miller was seeking to raise his own salary only $1,000. In this bill he seeks to raise it $1,700. And in this bill he seeks to give himself the following employees in addition to the ones authorized by the act of March 4, 1922;

A deputy superintendent at $4,000 per annum; an actuary at $4,500 per annum; an examiner at $3,500 per annum; a chief statistician at $2,500 per annum; an assistant statistician at $1,800 per annum; a license clerk at $1,800 per annum; a clerk-stenographer at $1,800 per annum; a stenographer at $1,680 per annum; four clerks at $1,500 per annum.

And, in connection with the above, I will state that I have lately had evidence satisfactory to Majority Leader LONGWORTH and Appropriations Chairman MADDEN to testify before them convincing them that no additional employees are needed by said department, but that at least one of those now employed could be dispensed with without injury to the service.

In the former bill Superintendent Miller asked that there be allowed him "a fund for contingent and miscellaneous expenses of not less than $2,000 per annum." Notice the way that it was drawn—"not less than." Thus, so long as he spent more than $2,500 miscellaneously, he would be complying with the law.

And when, in November, 1923, Superintendent Miller had Kuehn Bros. print the 500 copies of his propaganda bill—for $1,500—it provided, and so did Mr. EDMONDS's bill, H. R. 3689, which he introduced on December 14, 1923, provide:

The department shall also be allowed a fund for contingent and miscellaneous expenses of not less than $2,500 per annum.

And to prove that Superintendent Miller considered that under such language he would be authorized to spend any sum so long that it "was not less than $2,500," when the committee reported the bill on February 26, 1924, they limited him to $4,500, for they provided:

The department shall also be allowed a fund for contingent and miscellaneous expenses of not less than $2,000 or more than $4,500 per annum.

In my 51 years I have never before witnessed that language as a limitation on expenditures. It is usually framed, "not more than."

And in his copy sent for his propaganda bill to Kuehn Bros. for printing, and in the first print of same they made for him, where it authorized him to appoint actuaries and examiners, without limitation as to number, except that whenever he deemed it necessary, it provided:

That the amount charged for such compensation shall not exceed $75 per day for an actuary and $25 per day for an examiner.

But before the printing job was completed he had this language changed so that in his propaganda bill (for which Kuehn Bros. charged him $1,500 for 500) and also in the copy he had Mr. EDMONDS introduce for him, it appears as follows:

That the amount charged for such compensation shall be in accordance with the rules of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners.

Which means identically the same thing, because the present rules of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, in force when this bill was introduced, provided pay of $75 per day for an actuary and $25 per day for an examiner. But Superintendent Miller thought it wiser to veil the provision in language that would not apprise Congress of the fact that he was being given authority to appoint an unlimited number of actuaries at $75 per day for an unlimited number of days, and to appoint an unlimited number of examiners at $25 per day for an unlimited number of days.

And in various paragraphs of this 152-page bill Superintendent Miller had had the old Pomerene bill changed just far enough to give him authority, powers, privileges, and patronage that could be abused in a thousand particulars, if the superintendent happened to be the kind of a man who would abuse same.

INVESTIGATED HIM AND HIS DEPARTMENT.

I therefore took it upon myself to investigate Superintendent Miller and his department of insurance, and when he brought his deputy superintendent, Mr. Baldwin, who had never met me before, to my office in an endeavor to get me to withdraw my opposition to his bill, I was prepared with my file of indisputable evidence to make him admit things that had happened.

HAD GIVEN BAD CHECKS TO BANKS.

In the presence of his deputy, Mr. Baldwin, Superintendent Miller admitted that just before he was appointed superintendent he gave as many as four checks to the Riggs National Bank which were turned down, and that the vice president of said bank informed him that he did not want his account or business. Superintendent Miller further admitted that after becoming superintendent, on a trip to New York on his own business, in order to pay a hotel bill there he gave a check for $100 on Brosnan's Bank in Washington, and it was turned down, and that he had also had a smaller check of about $50 turned down by the Brosnan Bank. He further admitted that he was agency superintendent of the Metropolitan Surety Co., of New York, from 1906 until it went broke and failed in 1908. He also admitted that he was general agent for the New England Equitable Insurance Co., of Boston, from about 1911 until it went broke and failed in 1916; also that he was an insurance broker from 1917 to 1920. He also admitted that he had borrowed money from his employees in his insurance department here—Mr. Joseph J. McDermott and Mrs. Helen McKinney.

CERTIFIED COPIES OF COURT RECORDS IN OHIO.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF OHIO, CLERK'S OFFICE,
Cleveland, Ohio, March 5, 1924.

HON. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

Representative of the Seventeenth District, Texas,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your inquiry of recent date, in re Burt A. Miller, Canton, Ohio, bankruptcy case No. 2161.

On September 30, 1905, a voluntary petition was filed by the above-named bankrupt and on the same day, in the absence of the judge from the district, the matter was referred to the Hon. A. M. McCarthy, referee in bankruptcy at Canton, Ohio, for further proceedings, and I find by the record of said referee, that an order of adjudication was entered on October 2, 1905. A petition for discharge was filed on the 28th of November, 1905, and on December 30, 1905, no opposition appearing, a discharge in bankruptcy was granted.

The schedules filed with the petition show liabilities as follows: Secured claims, $8,800; unsecured claims, $573.75; making a total of $9,373.75. No assets were scheduled except household furniture in value of about $200, which was claimed as exemption, and in view of these circumstances no trustee in bankruptcy was appointed. The estate was closed by the referee on January 19, 1906.

Trusting this answers your inquiry to your full satisfaction, I remain,

Very sincerely yours,

B. C. MILLER, Clerk.

By F. J. DENSLER, Deputy Clerk.

STATE OF OHIO,

Stark County, ss:

In the court of common pleas: Jane R. Miller, plaintiff, v. Burt A. Miller, defendant. Petition for divorce, alimony, and custody of children.

Plaintiff has been a resident of the State of Ohio for one year last past and has a bona fide residence in the county of Stark, Ohio. That on or about the 27th day of December, 1899, at Canton, Ohio, she was married to the defendant.

The following children were born of such marriage: _____

Plaintiff says she was obliged to leave defendant in the early part of June, 1918, and that ever since said date they have been living separate and apart, and defendant declares that he has refused to contribute anything to her support, although he is earning sufficient money so to do.

That defendant spent large sums of money in extravagant living and became financially involved so that plaintiff and defendant were obliged to abandon their home in East Cleveland, Ohio, store their household goods, and this plaintiff was compelled to move to Canton, Ohio, and take up her abode with her father and to bring with her their daughter, and that she has been living with her father at Canton, Ohio, ever since said date.

Plaintiff further says the defendant has been guilty of extreme cruelty toward her in that on or about the early part of 1918, on account of his own extravagance and reckless expenditure of money and without any fault on the part of plaintiff he became dissatisfied, morose, and discontented, and resorted to excessive use of intoxicating liquors and would come home and abuse plaintiff and charged her with being extravagant and with being responsible for his physical and financial condition and acted so cruelly toward her that she was obliged to separate from him.

That on or about the 15th day of February, 1918, she visited him at his office in Cleveland, Ohio, and his conduct was so cruel and abusive that she suffered a nervous breakdown from which she suffered for several days, and plaintiff says that his conduct was so cruel and abusive that plaintiff can not possibly live with him again as man and wife.

Plaintiff says that she has always conducted herself as a true and faithful wife toward the defendant.

Wherefore, plaintiff prays that she may be divorced from the defendant; that she may be decreed to have reasonable alimony, the custody of said children, and such other and further relief as is proper in the premises.

McCARTY, ARMSTRONG & RAINSBERGER,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

STATE OF OHIO,

Stark County, ss:

Court of common pleas.

I, Ross H. Hurford, clerk of the court of common pleas within and for said county, having the custody of the files, journals, and records of said court, hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the original pleading filed in the above-entitled case as the same appears from the files and records of said court.

In testimony whereof I subscribe my name and affix the official seal of said court, Canton, Ohio, this 5th day of March, A. D. 1924.

[SEAL.]

ROSS H. HURFORD, Clerk.

CERTIFIED COPY OF JOURNAL ENTRY.

STATE OF OHIO,

Stark County, ss:

In the court of common pleas. Jane R. Miller, plaintiff, v. Burt A. Miller, defendant. Journal volume u/4; page 298.

This cause came on this day to be heard on the petition of the plaintiff and the evidence, the defendant failing to appear, and on consideration thereof the court find that at the time of the filing of her petition herein had been a resident of the State of Ohio for one year next preceding the filing of the petition, and was at that time a bona fide resident of Stark County, Ohio; that the defendant was duly served with summons and a copy of the petition and that he failed to appear and defend in this action, and that the parties hereto were married, as in the petition set forth.

The court further find, upon the evidence adduced, that the defendant has been guilty of extreme cruelty and gross neglect of duty toward the plaintiff, as set forth in the petition, and that by reason thereof the plaintiff is entitled to a divorce as prayed for.

It is therefore ordered and adjudged by the court that the marriage contract heretofore existing between the said Jane R. Miller and Burt A. Miller be, and the same is hereby, dissolved, and both parties are released from the obligations thereof.

It is further ordered that the custody, care, education, and control of the said children of the parties hereto be and is conferred to said plaintiff, Jane R. Miller, exclusively, and the said Burt A. Miller is hereby enjoined from interfering with either of said children or Jane R. Miller in the custody of them. But it is hereby ordered that the defendant, Burt A. Miller, have the privilege of visiting said children as may be reasonable and proper.

It is further ordered and adjudged that the defendant be divested of any interest, either by dower or otherwise, in any real estate of which the plaintiff is now possessed or has any equitable interest in and from any future acquired property, be the same real or personal, and that he be absolutely divested of any interest in any property of whatever character now owned or hereafter acquired to the same extent as though said parties had never been married.

It is further considered by the court that said plaintiff recover from said defendant her costs herein expended.

STATE OF OHIO,

Stark County, ss:

I, the undersigned, clerk of the court of common pleas, within and for said county, and in whose custody the files, journals, and records of said court are required by the laws of the State of Ohio to be kept, do hereby certify that the foregoing is taken and copied from the journal of the proceedings of said court within and for said county, and that said foregoing copy has been compared by me with the original entry on said journal, and that the same is a correct transcript thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto subscribed my name officially and affixed the seal of said court at the courthouse in Canton, in said county, this 5th day of March, A. D. 1924.

[SEAL.]

ROSS H. HURFORD, Clerk.
By ORA M. BOWMAN, Deputy.

WENT INTO VOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY TO ESCAPE ONLY $573.

You will note that the clerk from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio certified that when Supt. Burt A. Miller sought a bankrupt's discharge from his debts in 1905, his total liabilities amounted to only $8,873.75, of which $8,300 was secured, and that the unsecured claims against him from which he sought relief amounted to only $573.75.

Also note that Superintendent Miller well said that he was an "insurance broker," for he was general agent for a company that broke in 1908, and he was general agent for another company that broke in 1916.

STATEMENT FROM HIS RETIRING DEPUTY AND EXAMINER.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,

14 Eye Street NW., March 3, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON, M. C.,

Room 300, House Office, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Answering your questions, I will state:

(1) Until February 15, 1924, when I resigned, I was deputy superintendent and examiner in the department of insurance for the District of Columbia, drawing a salary of $2,240. I resigned voluntarily, and I attach hereto a copy of my resignation, and also a letter I received from Superintendent Miller, requesting me to come back, and also a letter Superintendent Miller had Mrs. McKinney send me, begging me to come back.

(2) Prior to the time I became deputy and examiner I formerly held the position of statistician, and prior to that time the position of clerk; hence I am thoroughly familiar with every feature of the business of said department. There is only one employee there who has been with the department longer than I was with it.

(3) I quit said department because it had become so rotten in its methods of business that I could not afford to be with it any longer.

(4) In my judgment there is no necessity whatever for the new code Superintendent Miller is seeking to pass. The present laws are sufficient. He collected money from numerous insurance companies by assessing them so much and used it to pay a $1,500 propaganda printing account used in trying to pass the bill and in paying a big attorney fee to a lawyer to help pass it.

(5) I attach hereto a galley proof showing that Superintendent Miller has in mind to pay the examiners this new bill would authorize him to appoint remuneration of from $25 to $75 per day, but he veiled this language in the bill so that one unfamiliar with such matters would not know of the amount.

(6) Within six months after Superintendent Miller came in office he borrowed $20 from me, and after waiting three months for him to pay it back I finally had to insist on his paying it before I got my money.

(7) Mrs. Helen McKinney told me that on one occasion she loaned Superintendent Miller some money.

(8) Within the past 30 years there have not been over five insurance companies of all kinds which have failed that were licensed by the District of Columbia.

(9) In my best judgment there is no necessity for the extra additional employees provided for in the new code.

(10) In my best judgment it would be dangerous to grant the enlarged powers to Superintendent Miller which the new code provides.

In conclusion, permit me to state that I would have had nothing to say about the above if you had not asked me the direct questions, as I am not a tale bearer.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH J. McDERMOTT.

FEBRUARY 15, 1924.

Hon. BURT A. MILLER,

Superintendent of Insurance, District of Columbia.

I, J. J. McDermott, do hereby tender my resignation, said resignation to take effect on and after February 16, 1924.

Very respectfully,

J. J. McDERMOTT, Statistician.

[Burt A. Miller, superintendent. Rooms 221-227 District Building.]

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE,
Washington, February 15, 1924.

Mr. J. J. McDERMOTT,
District Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: I have your communication handed to me by Mrs. McKinney, and I am lost to understand the action you have taken in this letter.

I desire to see you. I feel that some explanation is due me for your action.

I will be glad to see you to-morrow morning before I go to the Capitol.

Reassuring you of my appreciation for the valuable service you have rendered, I am,

Very truly yours,

BURT A. MILLER, Superintendent.

MY DEAR MR. McDERMOTT: Mr. Miller seems very sorry that you left and says he has very kind feelings toward you and intends that you are to get more money.

Come back and have a talk with him. I know he would like to have you reconsider.

Please do this.

Respectfully,

HELEN C. MCKINNEY.

[Board of Commissioners: Cuno H. Rudolph, president; James F. Oyster; J. Franklin Bell, major Corps of Engineers, United States Army; Daniel B. Gargen, secretary.]

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, July 19, 1923.

Ordered, That by reason of ability and qualifications personal to Joseph J. McDermott, appointed deputy and examiner at $2,000 per annum in the department of insurance, to take effect on and after April 16, 1923, which justify the allowance of increased compensation, as provided by law, such increase is hereby granted, to be effective on and after July 1, 1923.

Official copy furnished Joseph J. McDermott.

By order:

EMILE BUEHLER, Acting Secretary.

PROPAGANDA FUND COLLECTED FROM INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Superintendent Miller admitted that he had collected from insurance companies quite a large fund which he had spent since last August trying to get this bill passed. When I insisted on his giving me the names of all such companies making such contributions and how he had spent same, he gave me the following:

SPECIAL CONTRIBUTIONS AND DISBURSEMENTS.

Statement of special contributions and disbursements in connection with the legislation now pending for the purpose of bettering and stabilizing the insurance conditions in the District of Columbia by means of a modern and adequate code.

CASH RECEIVED.

Equitable Life Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	$300
Continental Life Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	800
Peoples Mutual Benefit Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	600
Provident Relief Association, of Washington, D. C.	600
Acacia Mutual Life Association, of Washington, D. C.	500
Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	150
Mutual Protection Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	75
Mutual Investment Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	75
National Union Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	150
Firemen's Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	150
Potomac Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	150
National Capital Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	150
American Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	150
Corcoran Fire Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.	150
Mr. Burt A. Miller, superintendent of insurance, District of Columbia	500
Mr. H. P. Janisch, for various mutual fire insurance companies	500
Mr. Charles M. Howell, for various reciprocal insurance companies	500
Total	4,000

SUPERINTENDENT MILLER STATED HE CONTRIBUTED $500 HIMSELF.

Note in the foregoing statement that Superintendent Miller gave me of the contributions made, that he claimed that he himself contributed $500. I will show you a little later on that I secured evidence to the contrary, and made Superintendent Miller admit that this claim was error. Also note later on what Superintendent Miller says regarding Mr. H. P. Janisch and Mr. Charles M. Howell, each of whom contributed $500.

DISBURSEMENTS.

L. A. Dent, seven months' professional services (legal codifying, revising, and redrafting proposed insurance code for the District of Columbia and passing upon the various amendments submitted)	$2,560.00
Anne B. Hull, clerical	350.00
Minneapolis, traveling expenses in connection with submission of proposed code to the insurance commissioners of the various States, assembled in convention at Minneapolis, meeting of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners of the United States	225.00
Kuehn Bros. (Inc.), printing	1,430.00
Watts Printery, printing	11.00
Postage	28.00
Telegrams	21.55
Telephone (long distance)	33.85
Total	4,000.00

ASSESSED CERTAIN COMPANIES FOR INFORMATION BUREAU.

Superintendent Miller admitted to me that to all companies engaged in the industrial life, health, and accident business in the District of Columbia he had sent a letter from his department that he was establishing a bureau of information, in which letter he used this language:

Due to lack of funds, it was thought a small assessment should be made against each company doing business in the District of Columbia, not to exceed $125.

And when I insisted on his giving me a list of all companies who had made him contributions in response to such letter, he gave me the following list:

Southern Aid Society of Virginia	$125
Equitable Life Insurance Co.	125
Eureka Life Insurance Co.	125
Life Insurance Co. of Virginia	125
Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.	125
National Benefit Life Insurance Co.	125
National Life Insurance Co. of America	125
Prudential Insurance Co. of America	125
Baltimore Life Insurance Co.	125
Continental Life Insurance Co.	125
Home Beneficial Association	125
Home Friendly Insurance Co.	125
Life and Casualty Insurance Co.	125
Peoples Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co.	125
Provident Relief Association	125
Richmond Beneficial Insurance Co.	125
Reliance Life Insurance Co.	40
Supreme Life & Casualty Co.	40
Shenandoah Life & Casualty Co.	40
North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Co.	40
Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.	40
Total	2,000

HOW SUPERINTENDENT MILLER HANDLES COLORED COMPANIES.

The Federal Life Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C., is a colored company, for colored people. Its president, J. H. Foster, and its secretary and manager, C. T. Taylor, are colored men.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 18, 1924.

HON. THOMAS L. BLANTON, M. C.,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your questions, will state:

(1) I am secretary and general manager of the Federal Life Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C.

(2) I attach hereto a letter received from F. H. Smith Co., wherein it was indicated that the superintendent of insurance, Mr. Burt Miller, had agreed to approve our taking $25,000 of stock in said company in lieu of our cash deposit for that sum.

(3) Yes; he borrowed $400 from Jesse A. Foster, our first vice president of our company.

(4) Yes; Superintendent Miller tried to borrow $300 from me, but I did not make the loan.

(5) Yes; I attach the letter he sent our company, of September 17, 1923.

(6) Mr. A. B. Dawson and Superintendent Miller called at our office and wanted us to take over the CHIEF ROBE Association and spent about 30 minutes with us, but we refused to do it. Later we received a bill for $154.20 for Mr. Dawson's services, which we refused to pay. I attach the bill hereto. I attach hereto a copy of my letter to Mr. Dawson and his reply. When I went to see Superintendent Miller about the matter, he advised me that Mr. Dawson was going to be actuary for his department of insurance. But we refused to pay the bill.

I will state further that Superintendent Miller has in his possession $25,000 of our securities, and in instances he has collected the interest due on same. I have made no complaint to you or to anyone else and have given you this information only in response to your inquiry.

Very truly yours,

C. T. TAYLOR,

Secretary-Manager the Federal Life Insurance Co.

[Founded 1878. First mortgage investments. Temporarily located at 1414-1416 Eye Street NW., pending completion of the new Smith Building.]

THE F. H. SMITH CO.,

Washington, D. C., December 11, 1923.

Mr. J. H. FOSTER,

Chairman Executive Committee,

The Federal Life Insurance Co. (Inc.),

1937 Eleventh Street, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Pursuant to our recent conversations with regard to the placing of $25,000 of your funds in our first mortgage coupon bonds secured on the Insurance Building (maturing 1932) at the southeast corner of Fifteenth and Eye Streets NW., we beg to advise that the matter has been taken up with the superintendent of insurance for the District of Columbia and that he has indicated his approval of these securities as a deposit by you in compliance with the laws and regulations incident to your conducting an insurance business in the District of Columbia.

The superintendent of insurance has expressed his approval of, and has designated the Merchants Bank & Trust Co. (Fifteenth and H Streets NW.) as a depository with which these securities shall be left under such rules and regulations as apply in cases of this kind. As soon, therefore, as you are ready we shall be pleased to make delivery of the bonds, at which time, of course, interest on the bonds will begin immediately to accrue in your favor.

Awaiting your further advice in the matter, we beg to remain,
Very truly yours, D. M. EARLE, Sales Manager.

[Information furnished for industrial, life, health, and accident agents and solicitors for the District of Columbia.]

BUREAU OF INFORMATION,

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT, 223 DISTRICT BUILDING,

September 17, 1923.

FEDERAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

1937 Eleventh Street NW., Washington, D. C.

(Attention of Mr. Foster.)

DEAR SIR: We beg to advise that all industrial companies operating in the District of Columbia are expected to join the bureau of information, and we ask that you kindly let us hear from you before September 24, as this is the time limit set for the companies to join voluntarily.

We are awaiting your list of solicitors connected with your office here and ask that you let us have same immediately, as we are anxious to complete the files of the bureau.

Awaiting your check for $125, we are,

Yours very truly,

BURT A. MILLER, Superintendent.

[Consulting actuaries, auditors, and accountants, 36 West Forty-fourth Street. Telephone, Murray Hill 8626. Established 1894. Cable: Menander, New York. Miles Menander Dawson, Fellow Institute of Actuaries of Great Britain, Fellow Actuarial Society of America, etc. Alfred Burnett Dawson, Fellow Casualty Actuarial and Statistical Society, Fellow Fraternal Actuarial Association.]

MILES M. DAWSON & SON,

New York, February 1, 1924.

FEDERAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

1937 Eleventh Street NW., Washington, D. C.:

In account with Miles M. Dawson & Son, Dr.

To bill rendered May 24, 1923. $154.20

DECEMBER 5, 1923.

Messrs. MILES M. DAWSON & SON,

36 West Forty-fourth Street, New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: After receiving your statement of December 1, 1923, we carefully searched our records and files and failed to find any contract or an agreement entered into between the Federal Life Insurance Co. and Miles M. Dawson & Son for any services rendered whatsoever. In view of this, we fail to see where we owe Miles M. Dawson & Son the sum of $154.20.

Very truly yours,

THE FEDERAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,
Secretary and Manager.

[Consulting actuaries, auditors, and accountants, 36 West Forty-fourth Street. Telephone, Murray Hill 8626. Established 1894. Cable: Menander, New York. Miles Menander Dawson, Fellow Institute of Actuaries of Great Britain, Fellow Actuarial Society of America, etc.; Alfred Burnett Dawson, Fellow Casualty Actuarial and Statistical Society, Fellow Fraternal Actuarial Association.]

MILES M. DAWSON & SON,

New York, December 17, 1923.

Mr. C. T. TAYLOR,

Secretary Federal Life Insurance Co.,

1937 Eleventh Street NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR Mr. TAYLOR: In reply to yours of December 5 regarding our bill for $154.20, covering my personal attendance in Washington under date of May 18, 19, and 20, no, I do not presume that you will find any contract in your files regarding that attendance. We were simply informed by the superintendent of insurance that you wished to see me at the time specified, and the fact that you, Mr. Foster, and myself put in the time we did on the matter, as well as my attendance at your special board meeting on May 19, meeting and conferring with your president and others, would seem to me to be all sufficient for all records required by your office.

I am mighty sorry that the proposed Men's Cliff Rock Association reinsurance deal did not go through, but I can not see where that has anything to do with the services rendered. Furthermore, if you will but recall, I have not as yet billed the company for the special actuarial computations which were furnished you under date of May 4 and which involved considerable office work here, nor for the time devoted to the preparation of the proposed reinsurance agreement.

I held off billing you for that because the Cliff Rock deal did not go through and in the hope that it would go through, when we could bill you at one time for the services rendered in connection with the tables and the final reinsurance agreement. If you are definitely certain that there are no further computations required on this matter, kindly let me know and I will send you in a bill to date covering all services.

For the time being I certainly do expect you to take care of the office disbursements and my special attendance in Washington for your company. We dealt with you in good faith and expect to be accorded the same treatment.

Yours very truly,

ALFRED B. DAWSON.

PRINTING 500 COPIES FOR PROPAGANDA.

The following is the first statement Kuehn Bros., of Baltimore, sent Superintendent Miller for the galley proofs of bill mailed to New York to companies there:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 3, 1923.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT,

223 District Building.

55 galley proofs "A bill" (55 of these proofs mailed to New York Sunday, December 2) $75.05

The above proofs were corrected and printed on Sunday, which required double time. We did not receive O. K'd proof from Mr. Dent until 3 p. m. Sunday, and we rushed this through in order to catch mail train to New York. Proofs to New York were sent by first-class mail.

INVOICE FOR THE JOB.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 13, 1923.

Mr. MILLER,

Superintendent Department of Insurance,

223 District Building.

500 copies, "A bill," 100 pages and index $290.00
55 galley proofs (55 sent to New York Dec. 2, 1923) 75.05
Corrections, changes of various galley proofs, including night and Sunday work, index and extra composition over 100 pages on first set of galley proofs 1,155.00

Less 3 per cent for cash as per our original estimate. 1,500.05

LETTER RELATIVE TO COMPLETED JOB.

DECEMBER 12, 1923.

Mr. MILLER,

Insurance Department, District Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We are inclosing herewith our invoice covering 500 copies, "A bill," complete, in the amount of $1,500.05.

This invoice included corrections of various galley proofs; index, which we are to receive copy to-day; night and Sunday work, and extra pages on the first set of galley proofs over the 100 pages figured on.

We wish to advise that on all galley proofs where three or four words have been taken out or where three or four words have been added it required the resetting of the balance of those paragraphs. Our figures show that, due to the corrections on the various galley proofs, we have destroyed 7 galleys of type. In order to get this job finished on time, we started five linotype machines last night on the corrections of the galley proofs given us yesterday evening. The proof given us yesterday has been changed again on each galley and on two of the galleys there are additional paragraphs and changing of sections, which require considerable time to straighten out before copy is ready for the linotype operators. We have figured this work as close as possible and have kept an accurate check on all corrections and changes since order was given, September 15, 1923. This invoice includes the original price of $290, also the $75.05 for the 55 galley proofs which we have already invoiced to you.

If we can straighten out the galleys given us yesterday without submitting proof on the two galleys that have additional paragraphs, we will deliver complete job Thursday afternoon, December 13, 1923.

We are sure you will find this job O. K. in every respect and thank you for the business.

Yours very truly,

KUEHN BROS. & Co. (Inc.),
D. O., Manager.

MONEY FOR PRINTING WAS WASTE AND EXTRAVAGANCE.

You will note from the foregoing letter that Kuehn Bros. delivered the 500 copies of this printed bill to Superintendent Miller on Thursday afternoon, December 13, 1923. And Superintendent Miller had Mr. EDMONDS introduce a copy of it in the House of Representatives the next day, Friday, December 14, 1923, when 600 more copies were printed by the Government Printing Office as H. R. 3689. And if Superintendent Miller had given his bill in typewritten form to Mr. EDMONDS for introduction, it would have saved the $1,500 printing bill at Baltimore.

BUT DID MILLER PAY $1,480 TO KUEHN BROS.?

Remember that in showing his disbursements in the statement Superintendent Miller gave me he specified $1,430 he paid to Kuehn Bros. Note my questions in the following letter I wrote Kuehn Bros., and then note their answers:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1924.

MR. F. OSTENDORF,

Manager Kuehn Bros. & Co. (Inc.),
411-14 East Pratt Street, Baltimore, Md.

MY DEAR MR. OSTENDORF: I am writing to have you confirm what you told me when I questioned you about a contract which Mr. Burt A. Miller, superintendent of insurance, gave you in October, 1923, to print for him 500 sample copies of his new insurance bill, which you printed into a 76-page document. If I correctly understood the statement you made me, you said:

- (1) That you agreed to print these 500 copies, so that Mr. Miller could use same for propaganda purposes, for the sum of $290, but Mr. Miller was to pay extra for all corrections made in copy, and for extra galley proofs, and rental of type, during delay of completion caused by him. State whether this is correct.
- (2) That on October 10, 1923, Mr. Miller himself paid you a check for $57.50, signed by him as superintendent, covering 66 galley proofs of the bill furnished him. Is this correct?
- (3) That on October 16, 1923, Mr. Miller himself paid you a check for $23, signed by himself as superintendent, covering 23 galley proofs extra of the bill that you furnished him. Is that correct?
- (4) That on November 10, 1923, Mr. Miller himself paid you a check for $100, signed by himself as superintendent, covering rental of type that you were holding in the forms for him. Is this correct?
- (5) That Mr. Miller had you to work a force overtime on Sunday in order to have ready for mailing to a certain group of insurance companies in New York the night of December 2, 1923, 35 galley proofs, and that such 35 galley proofs were so sent to New York on the night of December 2, 1923, and 20 extra copies of such galley proofs were furnished Mr. Miller, for which you charged the sum of $75.65. Is this correct? In this connection please state the names of the insurance companies in New York to which said 35 galley proofs were sent, and how long was it thereafter before Miller had you make final corrections and print the 500 documents.
- (6) That on account of Mr. Miller making repeated changes in his copy from time to time, causing you to destroy 67 galleys of type which was set up and not used, and in making the final changes which caused you to destroy 19½ additional galleys of type that were set up and not used, and the overtime and Sunday, causing you to pay time and a half and double time, these extra charges amounted to $1,176.88, which, with the $75.65 for the 55 extra galley proofs mentioned in the preceding paragraph and the main charge of $290 for the bills printed, aggregated a total due you of $1,542.03, in addition to the three items for which Mr. Miller had already paid you, but that because of an error of $41.38 you had made against your own interest in stating the original invoice you agreed to deduct it, and rendered your bill for $1,500.65. Is this correct?
- (7) That had Mr. Miller stood by his original copy and had made no changes after same was set in type, the job would have cost him only $290 for printing the 500 bills. Is this correct?
- (8) That while Mr. Miller wanted these bills to be printed, ready for distribution when Congress met, because of his delaying the matter and making so many changes from time to time, that you were not able to deliver the job until December 13, 1923. Is this correct?
- (9) That not receiving pay for the said $1,500.65, your firm had to write Mr. Miller a very pointed letter on December 19, 1923, requesting him to have payment made at once. Is this correct?
- (10) That about December 22, 1923, Mr. David Lea sent you checks from various insurance companies aggregating $500, and that on January 7, 1924, Mr. David Lea gave you numerous additional checks from insurance companies aggregating $1,250 more, and at the same time told you that if you didn't accept it in full you wouldn't get anything, as Mr. Miller had no money. Is this correct? If Mr. Lea said anything additional, state it.

(11) That neither Mr. Miller nor Mr. Lea have paid you the remaining $250.65 due, and that you advised me that such deficit is still on your books due to the unfairness of Mr. Burt A. Miller. Is this correct?

Very truly yours,

THOMAS L. BLANTON.

REPLY FROM KUEHN BROS.

[Printers and publishers, 66 Home Life Building, Fifteenth and G Streets NW. Phone Main 2073. Baltimore office, 418-424 East Pratt Street. Proudfit binders, paper ruling. Loose leaf sheets. Blank books.]

KUEHN BROS. & Co. (INC.),
Washington, D. C., March 18, 1924.

HON. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Since speaking to you last week the writer again has been ill and unable to attend his office in Washington, but on my return I am answering your letter of March 3.

(1) We agreed to print 500 copies "new insurance bill" for Mr. Burt Miller, superintendent of insurance, for the sum of $290, and from what I understood these copies were to be distributed to different insurance companies throughout the United States. Mr. Miller was to pay for all corrections, galley proofs, rental of type. The charge of rental of type was due to the fact that completion of this job was delayed, due to the different conferences held in Washington and New York City.

(2) Your question in this paragraph regarding check for $57.50, covering 66 galley proofs, on October 10, 1923, is correct.

(3) Your question in this paragraph regarding check for $23, covering 23 galley proofs, on October 16, 1923, is correct.

(4) Your question in this paragraph regarding check for $100, covering rental of type, on November 10, 1923, is correct.

(5) Your questions in this paragraph are correct. We do not know the names of the insurance companies in New York to whom these galley proofs were sent, as part of them were mailed to Mr. Miller personally, with the understanding that Mr. Robertson Jones, secretary and treasurer of the Workmen's Compensation Publicity Bureau of New York City, was to receive 15 of these galley proofs. We did not get final corrections and copy of this bill until December 13, 1923, and delivered same the following morning by working the entire night on corrections and presswork.

(6) Your questions in this paragraph are absolutely correct.

(7) Your question in this paragraph is correct.

(8) Regarding this paragraph, beg to advise that the delay was caused by the different conferences at different times, and at each conference the galley proofs were cut to pieces and rearranged by Mr. Dent in the new insurance building, who gave us revised copy to be sent to Baltimore for new proofs. This copy was handed us every couple of days in small portions, which not only inconvenienced us at our Baltimore factory but delayed the completion of the bill itself. We delivered the bill on the morning of December 14, 1923, at about 11 a. m., at Mr. Burt Miller's office, 223 District Building.

(9) Your question in this paragraph is correct. Also might add that Mr. Miller told our Mr. Kuehn over the long-distance phone that unless he did not cease asking him for money he (Mr. Miller) would sue our company for blackmail. Mr. Miller also told the writer personally the same thing, and said that if Mr. Kuehn could not wait until a committee investigated our invoice as to the amount, before paying, that he (Mr. Kuehn) could go to "hell." This was said after Mr. Kuehn and myself were promised money by Mr. Miller on different days and at his home one evening, but not once had he kept his promise, with the result that he finally advised me that he had nothing more to do with the payment of bills and that this was turned over to a Mr. Lea, 1410 G Street NW.

(10) On December 22, 1923, Mr. Lea gave me two checks amounting to $500 after a heated discussion in Major Donovan's office, auditor of the District Building. It was through Major Donovan speaking to Mr. Lea in behalf of the writer, as being the middleman in this deal, that Mr. Lea consented to give me $500 with the understanding that we would not worry Mr. Miller any more regarding money, although the invoice was past due. On January 7, 1924, Mr. Lea visited my office in the Home Life Building and said that our invoice of $1,500.65, less $500 paid on December 22, 1923, was too high, and that after going over the invoice we have decided to pay you $750 instead of a balance of $1,000.65, and that we had better close the account at this amount, as otherwise if we entered suit we would not get one cent, as Miller had no money to pay. Believing this as more of a threat than anything else, I agreed to take the $750 and gave Mr. Lea a receipt in full. (You state in this paragraph $1,250. This should be $750.) Mr. Lea told me that this was a badly mixed-up affair and that we had better accept this amount. The writer had explained to both Mr. Miller and Mr. Lea on a previous day that we were in a pinch for money at our Baltimore plant. Mr. Lea also said that Mr. Dent, who had written this bill, had not been paid all of his money and that he understood that $1,000 was still due him. I told him I understood that Mr. Dent had been paid $1,500 and that there still was due him $1,000.

(11) Your question in this paragraph is correct.

The writer also wishes to advise that on December 23, 1923, in Major Donovan's office in the District Building that Mr. Lea was very strong in his assertions that if we did not wait for our money and decided to enter suit that he would use his fortune to keep us from collecting one cent. Mr. Lea, the writer is of the opinion, seems to have been the committee of one to investigate our invoice, although not knowing anything about printing, and as a last resort claimed our bill was too high. On the same day in the corridor of the insurance department office Mr. Lea met the writer and asked whether I was trying to blackmail Mr. Miller. Mr. Lea said, "I have some checks in my hand here, but I will not give you a cent." I told him that I was only asking Mr. Miller to keep his promise and that I came to Mr. Miller's office at the appointed time to collect the money when I was advised that this matter was turned over to Mr. Lea. It was then that we went to Major Donovan's office, where I finally received the two checks amounting to $500. Major Donovan said that as this was not printing done under the District contract he could not give any opinion as to the amount of the invoice, but after speaking to Mr. Lea I was given the $500.

The writer believed that this was all done in order to reduce the amount of our invoice as much as possible, and we are sure and know that we are still due $250.65, which shows a deficit on our books.

Very truly yours,

KUEHN BROS. & Co. (INC.),
F. OSTENDORF, Manager.

LETTER FROM KUEHN BROS. TO SUPERINTENDENT MILLER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 19, 1923.

Mr. MILLER,
Superintendent of Insurance,
223 District Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: As per your request to our Baltimore factory, we are inclosing herewith itemized statement covering your order for 500 copies "A bill," including changes and corrections, and extra composition on the first galley proof, over 100 pages.

We wish to advise that on the first, second, and third sets of proofs that were given you we had to destroy 67 galleys of type, which was set up and not used, and in the balance of the last four lots of proofs there were 19½ galleys that were set up and not used that had to also be destroyed.

You will also notice that in itemizing this job our price is greater than the original $1,500.65 by $41.38, but we are fair enough to deduct this amount.

At the time we made this estimate we figured on type the size of which was larger than the type we used. We were advised to use the smaller type so as to condense this job as much as possible, as you did not want the job, when completed, ready for Congress, to run over 100 pages, including the index.

We did our part on this job and delivered same one day ahead of time, as you advised the writer that it was very important that this job be delivered not later than Friday morning, and requested me to let you have bill a day or two before so you could make necessary collections. When invoice was presented you told me you would let me have part of the money the following day (Friday, December 14, 1923), and on Sunday, December 16, 1923, you told our Mr. Gibson that you would let him have some money on Tuesday, besides the other promises you gave me in between those dates. Up to the present writing we have not received a penny on this job.

To-day you informed the writer that this job is entirely out of your hands and is now in the hands of Mr. David Lea, chairman of the committee. We certainly do not understand why this bill has not been paid, as it was clearly understood at the time order was awarded that we were to be paid at time of delivery of books. Furthermore, the invoice of $75.65 for galley proofs sent to you in New York was to be paid at the time proofs were delivered, but we were advised to add this amount to our final invoice, which we have done. Our original price was lower than any other bidder on this job, and Mr. Dent told us that the Washington printers were high on all their work. You yourself roughly estimate this job around $1,250, not including the $75.65 for proofs, notwithstanding the fact that we gave Mr. Dent proofs that you did not see.

We trust the above information, together with our itemized statement, is clear and that we may receive settlement in full by to-morrow afternoon, December 20, 1923.

Yours truly,

KUEHN BROS. & Co. (INC.),

INVOICE SENT WITH LETTER OF DECEMBER 19, 1923.

DECEMBER 19, 1923.

Mr. MILLER,
Insurance Department, 223 District Building,
Washington, D. C.

500 copies "A bill," including index.....	$290.00
65 galley proofs (35 sent to New York City 12/2/23).....	75.65
81½ hours, machine time, daywork at $3.....	244.50
64½ hours floor time, daywork at $2.50.....	161.25
42½ hours machine time (double time) at $6.....	255.00
29 hours floor time (time and one-half) at $3.75.....	108.75
51½ machine time (time and one-half) at $4.60.....	238.03
27½ hours floor time (double time) at $5.....	138.75
	<hr/> 1,542.03
Error in our original invoice which we allow you.....	41.38
	<hr/> 1,500.65

TELEGRAM AND TRIP TO CHICAGO.

In August, 1922, the Acacia Mutual Life Association, of Washington, D. C., was then operating here and in various States as a fraternal beneficiary society, and known as the Masonic Mutual Life Association. Its charter was forfeited by the Illinois Insurance commissioner. At the instance of its president, Mr. William Montgomery (the one who later appeared at our hearing and testified for the new bill), Superintendent Miller sent the following telegram:

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 21, 1922.

HON. THOMAS J. HOUSTON,
Commissioner of Insurance, Chicago, Ill.:

Your action in revoking license of Masonic Mutual Life Association just brought to my attention. Will you not, as a courtesy to this department, rescind such order and accept the proposition made to you by Mr. Sees, the general counsel, and this department will guarantee the fulfillment of that obligation. I know personally that every step is being taken to rapidly pass this bill and can vouch for the character of the men composing the board of directors and officers of this association. Action such as you contemplate at this time would do a great wrong to thousands of members of this organization. If you will grant this personal request at this time and await action of Congress this department will be glad to return the courtesy to you at a future date.

BURT A. MILLER,
Superintendent of Insurance of the District of Columbia.

And following the above, Superintendent Miller left his office and business here and went with Mr. William Montgomery, president of said company, to Chicago in an effort to help him get reinstated. This is definitely shown by the following excerpts from the letter of said company's general attorney, which I quote:

[Chartered by special act of Congress March 3, 1869. Home office, Homer Building, 601 Thirteenth Street NW. Wm. Montgomery, president; J. Harry Cunningham, vice president; J. P. Fort, secretary and actuary; Charles E. Baldwin, treasurer; George W. Evans, assistant treasurer; John V. Sees, general counsel; John B. Nichols, M. D., medical director.]

ACACIA MUTUAL LIFE ASSOCIATION,
Washington, D. C., March 12, 1924.

HON. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

DEAR MR. BLANTON: Your letter of March 8 was received while President Montgomery was temporarily absent from the city. As he had certain of the information necessary to answer your letter, I awaited his return.

Answering your letter, I wish to say that in August, 1922, this association was operating in the various States as a fraternal beneficiary society, and was licensed as such in the State of Illinois. On August 8, 1922, the superintendent of Insurance of the State of Illinois notified this association that its license was canceled in that State.

I went to Chicago to take the matter up with the superintendent of Insurance, who maintains an office in Chicago as well as in Springfield. While there it was suggested to one of our representatives that the firm of Schuyler & Weinfeld was very successful in handling matters before the insurance department. Acting on the hint, I called on that firm and interviewed Mr. Weinfeld. He said the firm would take the case and that he could get our license restored. He further said that the fee would be $10,000. We declined to pay any such fee and did not employ the firm.

We then took the matter up directly with the attorney general and the director of trade and commerce, the latter official having jurisdiction over the insurance department.

We also sought the intervention of the insurance department of the District of Columbia, which department has direct supervision over this association. Mr. Burt A. Miller, the superintendent of insurance, sent a telegram to Mr. Houston asking him to reconsider his action with reference to revoking our license.

¹ This includes in and after 6 o'clock on Saturdays and Sundays, which is double time, also after 10 o'clock at night.

We again sought the intervention of the insurance department of the District of Columbia to induce the insurance department of Illinois to grant us the same privilege that had been extended by every other insurance department in the country. At our solicitation Mr. Miller, the superintendent, in company with Mr. Montgomery, the president of the association, made a trip to Chicago to see Mr. Houston. This was some time during October, 1922.

There was no fund at the disposal of the insurance department for the purpose of paying the attorney, and the insurance interests of the District contributed to that purpose. Our contribution was $500. After the bill was redrafted it was necessary to reprint it. Again there was no fund at the disposal of the insurance department for the purpose, and the insurance interests of the District of Columbia contributed sufficient to pay the bill. Our contribution for this purpose was $250.

I have tried to give you the full information with reference to these transactions, but if there is any further information that you desire, either Mr. Montgomery or myself will supply it, if within our power.

Trusting this will be satisfactory, I am,
Very truly yours,

JOHN V. SEES, General Counsel.

Now, in my letter of March 8 I requested the following:

Your company has made contributions to two funds raised by Supt. Burt A. Miller, one of such funds to pay the expense in getting the new insurance code passed, and the other fund known as the information bureau. Please advise me when and in what amounts you made contributions to such fund, stating fully all of such contributions your company made to such funds.

Yet, in his reply dated March 12, he stated that all the contributions that this company had made were $500 toward paying Attorney Louis Dent for drafting the bill and $250 toward the expense of printing the bill by Kuehn Bros., and he said nothing whatever about the information bureau, which I had underscored in my interrogatory to him. But later I received the following letter from him, dated March 14, to wit:

[Chartered by special act of Congress March 3, 1869.]

ACACIA MUTUAL LIFE ASSOCIATION,
OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
Washington, D. C., March 14, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In accordance with my promise over the telephone, I wish to inform you that the amount contributed to the bureau of information maintained by Mr. Miller at the insurance department by this association was $40. Trusting that this will be satisfactory, I am,

Very truly yours,

JOHN V. SEES, General Counsel.

CORKSCREWING THE FACTS FROM HIM.

On March 3, 1924, I sent to Superintendent Miller the following:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3, 1924.

Hon. BURT A. MILLER,
Superintendent of Insurance, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SUPERINTENDENT: This morning you gave a list to me of 21 companies with their subscriptions to the bureau of information listed, aggregating the sum of $2,200.

Concerning the above, will you please advise me—

(1) Did the said companies ever make any other subscriptions? If so, when and how much each?

(2) Did any companies other than these 21 ever contribute anything to this bureau of information? If so, which ones, how much, and when?

(3) Did all of said $2,200 go to your credit in the bank as superintendent?

(4) Please give me an itemized list of disbursements from this $2,200 showing names of parties and amount paid each.

This morning you also gave me a list of 14 insurance companies and three individuals who contributed $4,600 to a fund to help pass the new code bill.

Will you please advise me concerning this $4,600—

(1) Did this entire $4,600 go in the bank to the credit of your account as superintendent? If not, what part went in the bank, and what part of same did not get through your said superintendent account in said bank?

(2) Were all the disbursements specified on the list you gave me concerning this $4,600 disbursed by your giving your check as superintendent against such account in the bank? If not, what part of same was disbursed in another way, and how?

(3) What is the business of Mr. H. P. Janish?

(4) What is the business of Mr. Charles P. Howell?

Thanking you for the above, I am, very truly,

THOMAS L. BLANTON.

Superintendent Miller immediately replied that he had already given me all the facts. I saw him in person on March 5 and told him that I insisted on his giving me a specific answer to the questions I had propounded in my letter of March 3, and he promised to do so. I repeated my request numerous times, both by telephoning and by seeing him personally, and failing to get a reply I told Superintendent Miller that I had positive evidence of sums contributed to him by insurance companies which he had not listed in the statements he gave me, and I finally wrote his deputy, Mr. Baldwin, demanding that I be furnished with the information.

I received from the Southern Aid Society of Virginia a letter dated March 20, 1924, in reply to one I had written to them on March 13, 1924, requesting specific information; the parts of same pertinent to my inquiry I now quote:

SOUTHERN AID SOCIETY OF VIRGINIA (INC.),
Richmond, Va., March 20, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Reference is made to your letter of the 13th instant * * *

We take pleasure in furnishing you from our records the information called for in your letter, as follows:

1923.
Feb. 12.	Paid 1 per cent on gross premium income in District for 1922	$214.93
Apr. 20.	Paid general agency license for 1923	50.00
Aug. 20.	Paid maintenance bureau of information	125.00
Dec. 22.	Paid in connection with preparation and printing of new insurance code, same included as part of the sum of $500 paid by Mr. Miller	300.00
1924.
Feb. 14.	Paid 1 per cent on gross premium income in District for 1923	315.32
Mar. 1.	Paid general agency license for 1924	50.00
Mar. 15.	Paid license fees for individual agents operating in District	54.00
Total		1,109.25

Trusting that the above data will reach you in time to be of service, and regretting the delay in answering your very important letter, we are, with great respect,

Very truly yours,

SOUTHERN AID SOCIETY OF VIRGINIA (INC.),
W. A. JORDAN, Assistant Secretary.

STRANGE COINCIDENCE.

And by a rather strange coincidence I received in that same mail a letter from Superintendent Miller, dated March 20, 1924 (the same identical date of the above letter from the Southern Aid Society). This strongly indicated that Superintendent Miller was conferring with insurance companies in regard to the information to be sent me, especially because of the fact that C. T. Taylor, secretary and manager of the Federal Life Insurance Co., when I first asked him for information, told me that Superintendent Miller had advised him that I would likely call on him for information, and if I did, "to tell me nothing."

Let me call your attention to some pertinent excerpts from this letter from Superintendent Miller, which I quote:

[Burt A. Miller, superintendent. Rooms 221-227, District Building.]

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE,
Washington, March 20, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: In reply to your communication of recent date, which I have been unable to answer on account of illness, absence from the office, and the pressure of other matters, I beg to advise as follows:

In the account rendered to you, I accounted for the money that was disbursed through my office in connection with this bill, and in the list of contributors there is a contribution of $500 which was put in my name; $200 is my own personal contribution and $300 was contributed to me by the Southern Aid Society, of Richmond, Va. This company is an outside organization which learned of this work, and to show their appreciation of services rendered by this department contributed $300.

In answer to question 2:

The $4,600 was deposited in a separate bank account from any other account that I had in that bank at that time. A record was kept of all disbursements that I made; a copy of same was sent to you some time ago.

In answer to question 3:

Mr. Janisch is an insurance man of a great many years' standing and a lawyer of Chicago, Ill.

In answer to question 4:

Mr. Howell is a lawyer in Kansas City, Mo., whom I have known for a long time, and a former partner of _____, of Kansas City, Mo.

These men knew of the work that was going on here and they made voluntary contributions to help out.

Trusting this is the information you desire, I am,

Very truly yours,

BURT A. MILLER, Superintendent.

You will therefore note that until I forced it out of him with a corkscrew Superintendent Miller never admitted that he received the $300 contribution from the Southern Aid Society of Virginia, an outside company entirely. And up to this good hour he has never admitted that the Acacia Mutual Life Association has contributed more than $540, when, in fact, it contributed $790, or $250 that he has never in any way listed. And quite a number of companies I wrote to for specific information have refused to answer my letters. I am wondering whether he closed their mouths, as he attempted to do the mouth of Secretary C. T. Taylor, manager of the Federal Life Insurance Co. In the statement he had given me, note that he claimed that he had contributed himself $500 toward the expense of printing, attorney's fee, and so forth, in the propaganda work he had done in trying to get the bill passed, but in the same mail I forced the information from the Southern Aid Society of Virginia that they had paid him $300 for such purpose; he claims that he listed same in the said $500 he had claimed to have contributed, and he had this Southern Aid Society of Virginia to so explain that their $300 contribution was listed as coming from Superintendent Miller.

But many insurance companies did answer my requests for information, and I want to quote just a few of the letters which acknowledged that they had made contributions:

FROM THE PEOPLES MUTUAL BENEFIT LIFE INSURANCE CO.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your inquiries, will state I am the president of the Peoples Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of Washington, D. C. I have contributed for my company to Mr. Burt A. Miller, superintendent of insurance, the sum of $725 for purposes as follows: $125 toward the expenses of his conducting an information bureau and $600 toward the expense of printing and legal expenses in drafting the new insurance code for presentation before Congress. Mr. Miller suggested that the above contributions be made.

Very truly yours,

N. N. CHISWELL,

President Peoples Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co.

FOR "ENTERTAINMENT OF OUT-OF-TOWN INSURANCE MEN."

[Chartered by Congress. Telephone Franklin 0600. 820 Washington Loan and Trust Building. Trustees: Bernard Leonard, real estate; Franklin P. Nash, builder; Horace L. Beall, patent attorney; G. D. Duncan; M. Frank Ruppert, merchant; Wilbur F. Nash, retired merchant; Vincent L. Toomey, attorney at law. Officers: Bernard Leonard, president; M. Frank Ruppert, vice president; Horace L. Beall, secretary; Franklin P. Nash, treasurer.]

MUTUAL INVESTMENT FIRE INSURANCE CO.

OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,

Washington, D. C., March 13, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

Room 300, House Office Building.

DEAR SIR: In compliance with your phone request that I submit a statement in regard to the contribution of $75 by this company to Mr. Burt Miller, superintendent of insurance for the District of Columbia, I beg to say as follows:

During the early part of last year I attended several conferences in the office of the superintendent of insurance with reference to the insurance bill then before Congress, and at which there were present the superintendent and the secretaries of the three mutual fire insurance companies of the District of Columbia. The superintendent explained that he contemplated revising the bill and wished to have our views in regard to those portions thereof relating to mutual insurance. As a result of these conferences several suggestions or amendments affecting mutual insurance were to be incorporated in the new bill. During one of the later conferences the superintendent remarked that the preparation of the original bill had necessitated expenses, some portion of which had to be met from his personal funds, and inasmuch as the revising of the bill would incur considerable additional expenses—printing, traveling expenses on his part, entertainment of out-of-town insurance men, and other incidental expenses—he was embarrassed at the prospect of a further drain on his personal funds, and it was suggested that the insurance companies of the District might contribute to establish a fund to be used in meeting these contingencies. I explained to the superintendent that the company I represented conducted a comparatively small business, but I thought the trustees would contribute, and I agreed to ask for an appropriation of $75 at the next regular meeting. Subsequently the board of trustees of this company voted the amount ($75), which was remitted by the treasurer's check to the superintendent of insurance and its receipt duly acknowledged by letter.

I have been secretary of this company for the past 15 years, and will say that the $75 hereinabove mentioned is the only money that has ever been paid to the superintendent of insurance, Mr. Burt Miller, or anyone connected with the insurance department.

Very truly yours,

HORACE L. BEALL, Secretary.

THE CONTINENTAL LIFE WAS $425 GENEROUS.

[Incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia. Home office, eighth floor, District National Bank Building. I. S. D. Sauls, president and general manager; Emory L. Coblenz, vice president and chairman executive committee; R. E. Ankers, actuary; H. A. Bartholomew, secretary and treasurer; W. W. Doub, assistant secretary and treasurer; Charles O. Hall, auditor.]

CONTINENTAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,

Washington, D. C., March 14, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to yours of the 13th.

This company contributed to superintendent of insurance on August 7, 1923, $125 for maintaining bureau of information, and $300 on October 11 in connection with preparation of the new insurance code for the District of Columbia.

I was not president of the company at the time these contributions were made, but it is my understanding the latter one was for the purpose of defraying expenses already incurred in the preparation of the bill, such as printing, attorney's fees, traveling expenses of committees, etc.

Yours truly,

H. A. BARTHOLOMEW, President.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS MORE FOR PREPARATION AND PRESENTATION TO CONGRESS.

[Chartered by special act of Congress in 1865. Office, No. 918 F Street NW. Albert F. Fox, president; Charles B. Bailey, B. F. Saul, vice presidents; Philip F. Larnier, secretary; Wm. H. Somervell, assistant secretary.]

THE NATIONAL UNION INSURANCE CO. OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington, D. C., March 13, 1924.

Hon. T. L. BLANTON,

Room No. 300, House Office Building.

DEAR SIR: As requested by you, I have examined our records and find that on August 17, 1923, this company sent to Mr. Burt A. Miller, superintendent of insurance of the District of Columbia, at his request, a check for $150 as a contribution toward the expenses in connection with the preparation of the new insurance code and the presentation of the same to Congress.

Very respectfully,

PHILIP F. LARNIER, Secretary.

AT THE SOLICITATION OF SUPERINTENDENT BURT A. MILLER $150 MORE.

[Chartered by Congress, 1837. Seventh Street and Louisiana Avenue NW. William M. Hoffman, president; Albert W. Howard, secretary.]

FIREMEN'S INSURANCE CO. OF

WASHINGTON AND GEORGETOWN,

Washington, D. C., March 13, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

No. 300 House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your interrogatories made over the phone at 11.30 a. m. to-day regarding the amount this company contributed toward the preparation of the insurance bill, etc., beg to state as follows:

At the solicitation of Mr. Burt A. Miller, superintendent of insurance for the District of Columbia, this company contributed $150 toward a fund to be used in defraying the expense incident to the preparation of an insurance bill for said District of Columbia. This contribution was paid by the company's check No. 12486, dated August 17, 1923, to the order of Burt A. Miller for the above-stated purpose.

This is the only amount this company has ever paid to Mr. Miller for any purpose whatsoever.

Very truly yours,

FIREMEN'S INSURANCE CO.,
WILLIAM M. HOFFMAN, President.

GENEROUSLY GIVES UP $25 MORE TO SUPERINTENDENT MILLER.

[William A. Bennett, second vice president, Equitable Building.]

EQUITABLE LIFE INSURANCE CO.
OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, D. C., March 14, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

MR. DEAR SIR: We have your favor of the 13th requesting certain information relative to contributions made by this company to insurance department, etc. On August 16 we contributed $125 toward the maintenance of a bureau of information attached to said insurance department.

On October 16 we further contributed the sum of $300 to defray expense of preparing a new insurance bill and the printing thereof.

This constitutes our entire contributions.

Yours very truly,

WM. A. BENNETT.

$100 FOR EXAMINATION OF COMPANY.

[700 North Second Street. Sick benefits, $1.25 to $10 per week. Death benefits, $15 to $250. Officers and directors: S. J. Gilpin, president; M. H. Payne, vice president; J. J. Carter, cashier and treasurer; John T. Taylor, secretary and general manager; Anderson Knox, Quinn Shelton, H. E. Harris, P. A. Marth, C. Bernard Gilpin, E. M. Canaday, Percy Wilson.]

THE RICHMOND BENEFICIAL INSURANCE CO.,
Richmond, Va., March 19, 1924.

MR. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In response to your request under date of March 13, 1924, respecting contributions made to Mr. Burt A. Miller, superintendent of insurance, will say that on August 13, 1923, check was made to Mr. Burt A. Miller for $100 on account of examination of the company, and the balance, $89.31, was paid to Mr. H. S. Nickols on August 27, 1923.

On August 16, 1923, check was made to Mr. Burt A. Miller for $125 for expenses of the bureau of information.

Other licenses and taxes, of course, were paid to the collector of taxes for the District.

Very truly yours,

THE RICHMOND BENEFICIAL INSURANCE CO.,
By JNO. T. TAYLOR, Secretary and General Manager.

SEEMS THAT SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE TO BE ANNUAL.

[Organized 1871. John G. Walker, president; W. L. T. Rogerson, vice president; L. R. Walker, vice president; A. E. Hurt, vice president; A. C. McKenney, secretary; I. T. Townsend, assistant secretary.]

LIFE INSURANCE CO. OF VIRGINIA,
Richmond, Va., March 15, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We are in receipt of a letter from our district manager, Mr. L. L. Chandler, Washington, D. C., under date of March 14, inclosing your letter of March 13, asking the dates on which contributions were made by this company to Mr. Burt A. Miller, superintendent of insurance, either for maintaining his bureau of information or for any other expenses connected therewith.

In reply we will state that under date of October 9, 1923, we forwarded to Mr. Miller our check for $125 for our first year's subscription to said bureau. This is the only payment which we have made.

Trusting that this information is satisfactory, we remain,

Very truly yours,

E. D. HARRIS,
Assistant Vice President.

ASSESSED SOME COMPANIES ONLY $40.

On January 11, 1924, Superintendent Miller wrote a letter to the Reliance Life Insurance Co., at Pittsburgh, Pa., in which he requested a contribution for his bureau of information, and from this letter I quote the following:

If all the life companies would join with us, it is estimated that an assessment of $40 per year would be sufficient to cover all expenses. The superintendent makes this personal appeal to you.

AND SUPERINTENDENT MILLER GOT HIS $40.

[Office of H. G. Scott, vice president and secretary. James H. Reed, president.]

MARCH 19, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of March 13, 1924, addressed to this company at Washington, D. C., has been forwarded to us by our general agent, Mr. W. W. Britt.

The only contribution this company has made is $40, which we subscribed on January 15, 1924, to the bureau of information. This was subscribed in compliance with a request from the insurance commissioner in a letter dated January 11, 1924. Our company has not paid attorney's fees, printing bills, or any other expense in connection with the proposed new insurance code or for any other purpose. For your further information, I am inclosing you photographic copy of the letter of the commissioner dated January 11, 1924.

Yours very truly,

H. G. SCOTT,
Vice President and Secretary.

SUPERINTENDENT MILLER SUGGESTED THAT THE INSURANCE COMPANIES DONATE.

[George W. White, president; Thos. C. Moore, vice president and manager; Alex. K. Phillips, secretary.]

THE POTOMAC INSURANCE CO.,
OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, D. C., March 13, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
Room 300, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In keeping with our conversation of this a. m., beg to make the following statement: During the fall of 1923 Superintendent Burt A. Miller requested that an executive officer of each local company call at his office on a certain date. The writer was present, and Superintendent Miller briefly outlined the purpose of the gathering, stating that the new insurance bill would be taken up and that it necessitated quite a good deal of work and expense of printing, and as there was no fund available for such, he suggested that the insurance companies donate a sufficient amount to care for the particular items. After some little discussion the sum of $150 each was agreed upon by the representatives present. The writer sent a check for the amount, and this is the only donation that has been made.

Trusting that the above is the information you desire, I beg to remain, Yours very respectfully,

ALEX. K. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

FOLLOWING LETTER IS SELF-EXPLANATORY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2, 1924.

Hon. W. GWYN GARDINER,
Attorney at Law, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. GARDINER: As you have been one of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and while holding such office had under your supervision the insurance department, and also because I am reliably informed that in your practice you have had a wide experience in insurance business, I am writing you for information.

I am sending you under another cover a copy of H. R. 3689, a bill to amend the insurance laws of the District of Columbia, which has already been favorably reported for passage by the District Committee, of which I am a member.

You will note that this bill contains 152 pages and raises the salary of the superintendent $1,700 above what it is now, and provides for a number of new officials ranging in salaries of from $4,500 down, and grants powers to the superintendent that could be very much abused.

This bill wasn't even read before our committee, but was favorably reported upon the recommendation of a subcommittee.

If it is not imposing too much upon your loyalty to the District, will you kindly advise me—

(1) Whether the present insurance code is adequate to protect the interests of the insuring public?

(2) If not, in what particulars does it need amending?

(3) Is such a bill as this H. R. 3689 needed now?

(4) What criticisms, if any, have you to offer to H. R. 3689?

(5) Do you know anything about the birth of this bill, and why Superintendent Burt A. Miller has been so anxious to pass it for the past year or more?

(6) What do you know about the qualifications and fitness of the said Burt A. Miller to act as superintendent under such a law as he is proposing to pass?

Kindly let me have this information at your very earliest convenience. Thanking you, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

THOMAS L. BLANTON.

INFORMATION FROM FORMER COMMISSIONER GARDINER.

[Woodward Building. Leroy Pumphrey, J. D. Eason, jr. Phone Main 5637-S.]

W. GWYNN GARDINER,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
Washington, D. C., March 6, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,
House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. BLANTON: I have found the following facts with reference to the insurance bill of the District of Columbia:

Burt A. Miller, the present superintendent of insurance, was indebted in some manner to Louis A. Dent, a lawyer in the Southern Building, and this resulted in Louis A. Dent being employed by Burt A. Miller to draft an insurance law, which he did, and which bill presented to Congress was so drafted. Mr. Miller called upon the insurance companies to contribute to Mr. Dent for his services, and I am reliably informed that Mr. Dent received from the insurance companies $2,500 for his services in drafting this bill. I am also reliably informed that the various classes of insurance as set forth in the bill and in the language appearing in the bill were in conference through their representatives with the result that a group of men representing the old-line companies drafted that portion of the bill covering old-line insurance, while a group of fraternal men drafted the portion of the bill covering fraternal insurance, and so on throughout the list of the several kinds and classes of insurance enumerated in said bill.

After the bill was drafted these several groups of men were called together by Mr. Dent and the bill was redrafted in order to meet the several objections made by the various classes of insurance represented.

I am reliably informed that the companies were, and are, opposed to the increases of salaries in the bill as reported as well as the new positions created under the bill as reported, and that they have expressed themselves to the said Burt Miller as being opposed to these provisions.

I am also reliably informed that all bills contracted by said Miller for printing incident to the work in connection with this bill were paid for by the insurance companies.

I hope that what I have given you will be useful to you.

Very respectfully,

W. GWYNN GARDINER.

REMEMBERING MR. LOUIS A. DENT.

In placing this Mr. Louis A. Dent, to whom Superintendent Miller paid $2,500 for adding a few amendments to the old Pomerehne bill, it will be remembered that when the Government took over the Center Market here not long ago for use as a market center by the public, Mr. Louis A. Dent was one of the three appraisers to fix the value, and he forced the Government to pay over $500,000 more for the property than the other two appraisers thought it was worth.

SPLENDID MAN PUT OUT TO LET SUPERINTENDENT MILLER IN.

I am reliably advised that when Superintendent Miller was placed in charge of this department there was then a splendid, capable, efficient, expert insurance executive at its head, to wit, Dr. Lewis A. Griffith, against whose record I have been able to find not a shadow. He now has a suit pending against the District of Columbia Commissioners, claiming that by reason of the fact that he had been paying 5 per cent out of his salary each month to the civil-service employees' retirement fund, that his removal was wrongful, when there was no charge against him, as such removal caused him to lose all he had paid to the retirement fund, and in his pleadings he swears that when he asked Commissioner Rudolph why he was to be removed Commissioner Rudolph replied, "Your services are all right, but those d— fellows on the 'hill' won't let me alone," meaning that some man in Congress was insisting that he be supplanted by Mr. Miller.

DEPARTMENT TOOK IN $263,000 LAST YEAR.

The superintendent of insurance took in $263,000 last year in fees from various insurance companies, that went to the tax collector of the District of Columbia. Besides, said superintendent handles hundreds of thousands of dollars in securities of various companies, or designates where they shall deposit same. For these reasons, no man should be given the powers, privileges, and unlimited discretion that by this new 152-page bill is lodged in the superintendent of insurance, especially when the evidence adduced in this report shows that such powers are abused.

AFFECTS ENTIRE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

This is not a bill that affects merely the people living in the District of Columbia. It affects all of the people in the whole United States, for the whole people of the Nation pay 40 per cent of all the salaries of the officers and employees of this insurance department and of all of the other expenses of the District of Columbia. And the people of Washington pay a total tax rate of only $1.20 on the $100, assessed at about half valuation, while, counting the State, county, school, and other civic taxes, all of the other cities of the United States, both small and large, pay taxes running from $2.75 to $6 and $7 per $100.

THE OLD SLOGAN HAS WORN THREADBARE.

Whenever a Member of Congress seeks to change the unjust system of allowing the people of Washington to pay the ridiculous tax rate of only $1.20 on the $100, the newspapers and citizens' associations immediately resort to their old battle cry—

That Washington is the Nation's Capital and must be made the most beautiful city in the world; that the Government should pay a big part of the local city expenses because it owns so much property here.

Washington is the Nation's Capital and should be made the most beautiful city in the world, and I will go just as far as any other man through all legitimate and proper means to make it the most beautiful city in the world. Before the Government built all of its fine institutions here Washington was a mere village. Property here was of little value. It is because of the fact that the United States has spent its millions here that has caused some lots to jump in value from $100 to $100,000. Every piece of property owned by the Government in Washington is daily enjoyed by the people of Washington.

The local pay roll of the Government is a bonanza to the merchants and business enterprises of Washington. The Government pays its nearly 100,000 employees in Washington their wages promptly every two weeks in new money that has never been spent before. Chicago, or any other big city in the United States, would gladly exempt the Government from paying all taxes on its property to get it to move its capital to such city.

Because we want to make it the most beautiful city in the world is no reason why the Government should pay for building million-dollar school buildings and employing 2,500 teachers and buying the schoolbooks for the 70,000 school children of the thousands of families living in Washington who have no connection whatever with the Government except to bleed it on all occasions and to grow rich on the Government pay rolls expended here. Because we want to make Washington the most beautiful city in the world is no reason why the Government should pay for the army of garbage gatherers, the army of ash gatherers, the army of trash gatherers, the army of street cleaners and sprinklers, the army of tree pruners and sprayers, and the street-lighting system for the several hundred miles of private residences owned by rich tax dodgers who have no connection whatever with the Government; nor is it any reason why the Government should pay for their water system, their sewer system, their police protection, their fire protection, for playgrounds for their children, for parks for their enjoyment, for their municipal golf grounds, for their numerous public tennis courts, for their bathing beaches, for their skating ponds, for their cricket grounds, for their baseball and football grounds, for their horseback riding paths, for paving the streets in front of their residences and maintaining and keeping them in repair, for building their million-dollar bridges, furnishing million-and-a-half-dollar market houses, their municipal trial and appellate courts, their jails and houses of correction, their municipal hospitals, asylums for their insane, special asylum schools for their deaf and dumb, asylums for their orphans, a university for their 110,000 colored people, their municipal libraries, their municipal community-center facilities, salaries of all their municipal officers, employees, buildings, furnishings, equipments, sanitary and health departments, and the hundreds of other things that all other cities of the United States must furnish and pay for themselves, but a very substantial part of which the people of Washington have been getting out of the Federal Treasury for years.

The magnificent Capitol and its beautiful grounds are daily enjoyed by Washington people. The Congressional Library, which cost $6,032,124, in addition to the sum of $535,000 paid for its grounds, and for the upkeep of which Congress annually spends a large sum of money, is daily enjoyed by the people of Washington. The Government furnished and maintains the magnificent Botanic Garden here for the pleasure and enjoyment of Washington people. The Government furnished and maintains the wonderful Zoo Park, with all of its interesting animals, for the instruction and amusement of Washington children. The Government furnished and maintains the extensive and most beautiful Rock Creek Park, with its picturesque picnic grounds, its miles of wonderful boulevards, its incomparable scenery, all for the pleasure of Washington people. Congress has spent millions of dollars reclaiming and purchasing the lands now embraced in the Potomac Parks and Speedway, daily used and enjoyed by Washington people. The Government has spent several million dollars building the various bridges spanning the Potomac River, and huge sums for the bridges spanning the Anacostia River, and spent $1,000,000 building the beautiful "Million Dollar Bridge" on Connecticut Avenue. The Government has spent millions of dollars on the Lincoln Memorial, grounds, and reflecting pools, the Washington Monument Grounds, Lincoln Park, on East Capitol Street, and the numerous beautiful little parks scattered all over the city, all for the pleasure and benefit of Washington people.

During the recess of Congress I wrote to the mayor of every city of any size in the United States and asked them to advise us of their local tax rate, of the charges for water, sewer, paving, and so forth, and what rate, in their judgment, they thought Washington people should pay as a minimum. I want to insert just a few in this report. The consensus of opinion was that the rate here should be at least $2.50 per $100, and there was a large per cent who were in favor of it being much higher, and the rates for taxation ranged from $2.75 to over $6.50, and in all these cities the people were charged more for water, sewer, and paving.

Let me again quote a few excerpts from the letter sent me by the mayor of the city of Peoria, Ill.:

[City of Peoria, Ill. Mayor's office. Edward N. Woodruff, mayor.]

NOVEMBER 1, 1923.

Hon. THOMAS L. BLANTON,

Representative, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Answering your questionnaire of October 15 concerning relative tax rates of the cities of Washington and Peoria:

The tax rates on each $100 taxable valuation levied against the real and personal property of the citizens of Peoria for the year 1922 are itemized as follows:

City corporate tax, including library, tuberculosis, garbage, and police and fire pension fund.....	$1.94
Street and bridge.....	.24
School district.....	2.70
Park district.....	.41
State.....	$5.20
County.....	.45
County highway.....	.59
	25
	1.20

Total, all purposes.....

6.58

Unless there is a tremendous revenue derived from sources other than from taxes, the rate of $1.20 for Washington is ridiculous. While I have never had my attention called to this disparity, I am amazed that the light has not been let into financial affairs of the Capital City long before this time.

You should be supported by every colleague in your effort to compel the citizens of Washington to do theirs, even as every citizen outside the District is doing his.

Wishing you success, I am,

Very truly yours,

E. N. WOODRUFF, Mayor.

The foregoing statement from the mayor of Peoria, Ill., fairly indicates the sentiment of the people over the United States. It might be enlightening to quote from a few of the letters received the tax rates of some of the cities over the United States as certified to me by the mayors of such cities.

When I speak of the tax rate of these cities, I, of course, mean their total tax—State, county, school, and municipal—which is the total tax citizens of those respective cities have to pay on their property, as compared with the $1.20 on the $100 rate Washington people have to pay in the District of Columbia.

The tax rate paid by the people in Baltimore, Md., $3.27 on the $100; in New Orleans, La., $3.16 on the $100; in Portland, Oreg., $4.52 on the $100; in my birthplace, Houston, Tex., $4.29 on the $100; in Ogden, Utah, $3.33 on the $100; in Cheyenne, Wyo., $3.75 on the $100; in Fort Smith, Ark., $3.32 on the $100; in New Bedford, Mass., $3.13; in Burlington, Vt., $3.10 on the $100; in Pittsburgh, Pa., $3.22 on the $100; in St. Louis, Mo., which is a distinct political subdivision of the State, the city tax is $2.43 on the $100; in Boston, Mass., $2.47 on the $100; in Rochester, N. Y., $3.33 on the $100; in Portland, Me., $3.40 on the $100; in Boise City, Idaho, $4.29 on the $100; in Mobile, Ala., $3.40 on the $100; in Detroit, Mich., $2.75 per $100; in Duluth, Minn., $5.79 on the $100; in Atlanta, Ga., $3.15 on the $100; in Kansas City, Mo., $2.93 on the $100; in Minneapolis, Minn., $6.52 on the $100; in Salt Lake City, Utah, $3.18 on the $100; in Oakland, Calif., $4.02 on the $100; in Austin, the capital of Texas, $3.54 on the $100; in Denver, Colo., $2.76 on the $100; in Trenton, N. J., $3.22 on the $100; in Racine, Wis., $2.87 on the $100; in Nashville, Tenn., $2.80 on the $100; in Charlottesville, Va., $2.85. And let me illustrate as the tax rate runs generally over Texas: In Paris, Tex., $4.10 on the $100; in Port Arthur, Tex., $3.54 on the $100; in Tyler, Tex., $4.61 on the $100; in Denison, Tex., $3.32 on the $100; in Waco, Tex., $3.03 on the $100; in Amarillo, Tex., $3.55 on the $100; in Temple, Tex., $3.15; in Wichita Falls, Tex., $3.05 on the $100; in Beaumont, Tex., $4.04.

Mr. Edward F. Bryant, tax collector for San Francisco, Calif., has sent me a statement certifying that the following is the tax rate paid by the citizens in the following cities: In Seattle, Wash., $8.80 on the $100; Chicago, Ill., $8 on the $100; in Reno, Nev., $7.38 on the $100; in New York, N. Y., $5.48 on the $100; in Philadelphia, Pa., $6 on the $100; in Detroit, Mich., $4.48 on the $100; in San Francisco, Calif., $3.47 on the $100; in Los Angeles, Calif., $3.89 on the $100.

What excuse have we to offer to our constituents back at home who are paying the above tax rates for permitting by our votes here the 437,000 people in Washington, D. C., to continue paying the measly little pittance of only $1.20 on the $100, based on a half to two-thirds valuation, when our constituents have to pay all the balance of the expenses of this great city?

MUST NOT WASTE OUR CONSTITUENTS' MONEY.

Our constituents pay 40 per cent of the expenses of this insurance department, and we must not waste their money on such a propaganda 152-page bill as the one before us. But if the District needs any new insurance laws, let us properly frame same when we have time to give the matter careful attention.

WOODROW WILSON, LEADER.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. Speaker, Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, was of Scotch-Irish ancestry, a fighting stock. From this he inherited his persistence and courage. His spirit never broke under any strain. He had a trained mind, the gift of expression, the ability to plan, and the capacity to execute.

He had rigidity of purpose and inflexibility of will. He taught a new international morality. His vision was of a world freed from war and hate.

Men will divide upon the practicability of his plan of world agreement, but all will admit its lofty ideal and not dispute the fact that he planted a new thought in Europe that may come into growth with the years.

His democracy was not a political faith, it was a conviction that the people were capable of self-government; they could be trusted with self-government; and, when warned and advised, their average judgment, expressed in an orderly, constitutional way, gave the best government.

For many years he studied, and for 17 years he taught government and political history to women and men in two of our greatest universities, and then made practical application of his training as the chief magistrate of a State, and then brought his theory of democracy, supplemented by practical experience as governor, to the high office of Chief Executive of our Nation.

He, like Cleveland, brought to this office a fine public conscience. Cleveland struck special privilege and the tariff its first staggering blow.

These two were leaders. If they believed a thing was right they contended for it, and their fights were real. They asked for new laws to change and improve conditions. Their demands for reform and change were not mere assertions of opinions. They forced opinions into statutes and change in personal administration by discharge and removal of officials.

When there was not that cooperation of powers necessary for action, they demanded cooperation and secured it.

They had personality that impressed itself upon the Nation and the Nation, responding, brought the necessary legislation which secured reform.

Mr. Wilson was not only a President; he was, in addition, a leader. He led in college, he led as President, and for a period was a world leader.

He was not content with a perfunctory performance of constitutional duties. He not only advocated change; he first explained to the Nation, then demanded, and finally secured, the essential things he deemed beneficial.

That same leadership is demanded now—not mere motion, not words, not gestures, but acts and performances.

We should repeal all war legislation, reduce taxes to the minimum, discharge useless employees, let business alone, help agriculture, change the tariff which destroys the markets for agriculture, settle the railroad problem, and, above all things, have done with uncertainty, bureau-made law and clerk legislation.

Wilson did things. He established the Federal reserve banking system, rural credits system, the Tariff Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, Employees' Compensation Commission, the 8-hour day.

He settled the question of whether human labor was a commodity to be sold like coal, iron, or steel. He fixed the thought that labor was blood and brain, with a conscience and a soul.

He put property rights and human liberty, protected by our Bill of Rights, into their constitutional place.

He believed in temperance and vetoed the Volstead Act because it was intemperate.

He lived up to the first amendment of our Constitution providing for religious liberty, and would be the first to denounce organized intolerance and religious bigotry which would divide our Nation into creeds or classes.

He knew each cold word of the Constitution, but he put warmth and blood into each line he interpreted.

He knew the limitations of government, but found the way for necessary change without violating fundamentals or attacking constitutional provisions.

He was sturdy in partisanship in times of peace, because he believed our Government could not function without the clash of opinion which could only be expressed by party action.

But when the great war began he forgot men's politics and selected for war leaders the best, without considering creed, political affiliation, social or financial standing.

He had but one rule for political measurement; it was that of capacity, experience, and fitness.

He consulted the great labor leaders, heard the big captains of industry, but he fawned upon none. He bent the knee to none but God and the Constitution.

He asked for brains in public service, but demanded and secured honesty.

He early announced to our Latin-American neighbors that just government rested upon the consent of the governed and could not rest upon force.

Later, when the World War came, he remained steadfast in this contention in treating with the affairs of Europe.

He withstood the tremendous pressure for three years before entering the war, although in his last campaign his opponent made quick entrance a popular issue, hard to combat.

But he waited, and in the end made war not only with an Army but with a Nation—he caused the whole Nation to fight.

He knew the temper of the people and he struck not too soon, but only when he knew the united spirit was ready.

The Nation was amazed when he asked that the war should be fought not by volunteers but by those chosen in a draft, upon the principle of universal service.

The Nation responded, and then Congress acted. He was sustained.

Wilson, the pacifist, determined that all the wealth, resources, power, and brains of the Nation should be utilized for war.

Again the Nation approved and again Congress responded.

He secured national approval first and then legislation followed. But he was not content with public explanation and appeal; he added political persuasion.

He aroused a high and lofty spirit in America and united all classes for victory.

He made it clear that we were not warring upon the German people, upon its civil population, but upon the German war lords who brought on the war.

He did not fight for glory, for conquest, for territory.

The war as he saw it was to preserve international law and world democracy.

He believed that with victory democracy would be made safe; with defeat, monarchy would rule.

It was in his mind a great world battle for rule by the few or government by the many.

Wherever articulated sound makes words his name is known.

Armies suspended their deadly work that he might be heard. It was his pleading that stopped the war. It was his appeal to the civil population of Germany which, working its way to the German Army, broke its military morale and quickened the end.

Many laws were put upon our national statute books because of the necessities of war. Many acts were done, many changes made, because we believed it would take three years to win, and preparation was made for that purpose.

Liberty was curtailed, property was taken, enterprise begun, and things done which only a world war could justify.

But the armistice was signed in 1918. Five years have passed, and the war laws and war wreckage have not yet been cleared away.

The high courage that took us through the war seems now to be lacking in our efforts to return to the normal.

Our foreign policy is uncertain; our domestic course is undefined; union labor is guessing, and business is ruled by regulations made by department clerks in Washington.

One portion of our population is trying to put the full burden of all taxation upon another portion, and millions of our money are being spent so that a small minority group may be held in line for political purposes.

We lack the vigorous and courageous Executive who, well grounded in the fundamentals of our Government, will fight for the things he believes to be right regardless of the political consequences.

Timid leadership makes for a timid nation, and a timid nation, like a timid man who avoids settlements and lacks decision, is productive of national paralysis.

Small minority groups are writing our laws.

The fundamentals of our Government are assailed again and again by these minorities, and an uncertain Executive permits them to have their way.

During the war we proclaimed to the world that we would make the world safe for democracy. Since the war we have been making democracy unsafe even in our own country by centralizing all political power in Washington.

The Nation falters in alarm because of uncertainty as to what Washington will do next.

Uncertainty, like fear, is more to be dreaded than actual danger.

We pay a high price for uncertainty, and this price usually comes out of the pockets of purchasers of supplies and materials—out of the pockets of the men and housewives who need them.

What the American people require is leadership, a leadership that will bravely take us back to normal conditions; a leadership that will not always count the cost and not always measure everything by votes.

Wilson commenced his term in office with a progressive peace program designed for domestic victories. His work was interrupted by war, and after the war control of the Senate and House was lost.

We need another leader of his kind, who will settle quickly the big outstanding things that beg for solution.

One of the great losses of the war was the lost opportunity for him to play the same rôle in peace as he did in the greatest war of history.

We need new laws but they should square with American fundamentals.

We require a leader who will remove war measures and give the Nation a long legislative rest; a man who will oppose intemperance with moderation; a leader who will seek disinterested advice, but will not accept dictation from any organized group; one who loves America and has no prejudice against any part of the Nation or any portion of its population.

We need a short, concrete national program that will do a few things well and quickly.

The Nation needs the trained constitutional mind, the courage of a Wilson, the understanding and the ability to decide.

He is not here to lead, but his example and his thought may guide the way to settlement and stability.

We need the same Wilson courage that took us through the war to bring us back quickly and safely to economic, industrial, and business peace.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 7 o'clock and 11 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, March 25, 1924, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

400. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on preliminary examination and survey of Norfolk Harbor, Va., with a view to securing increased depth and width in the channel in the South Branch of Elizabeth River above the inner end of the 40-foot channel; also with a view to securing increased depth and width in the channel in the Eastern branch of Elizabeth River from Norfolk and Western Railroad Bridge to the Virginian Railroad Bridge (H. Doc. No. 226); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

410. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on preliminary examination and survey of Fernandina Harbor, Fla. (H. Doc. No. 227); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

411. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on preliminary examination and survey of Delaware River, Pa., and N. J., with a view to securing increased depth and width in the channels between Philadelphia and the upper railroad bridge at Trenton (H. Doc. No. 228); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII.

Mr. BLANTON: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 3689. A bill to amend the insurance laws of the District of Columbia (minority views of Rept. No. 231, pt. 2). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BEERS: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 6296. A bill to change the name of Thirty-seventh Street between Chevy Chase Circle and Reno Road; without amendment (Rept. No. 351). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7270. A bill to amend section 1025 of the Revised Statutes; with amendment (Rept. No. 352). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 7995. A bill to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States and for other purposes; with amendments (Rept. No. 350). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WHITE of Maine: Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 8143. A bill for the protection of the fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 357). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII.

Mr. SIMMONS: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 2126. A bill for the relief of C. C. Carson; with an amendment (Rept. No. 353). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. UNDERHILL: Committee on Claims. H. R. 905. A bill for the relief of Gerard E. Bess; with an amendment (Rept. No. 354). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BULWINKLE: Committee on Claims. S. 793. A bill for the relief of William H. Lee; without amendment (Rept. No. 355). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BULWINKLE: Committee on Claims. S. 1021. A bill for the relief of the Alaska Commercial Co.; without amendment (Rept. No. 356). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Military Affairs was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3630) for the relief of Bertha Witt, and the same was referred to the Committee on Claims.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DALLINGER: A bill (H. R. 8177) to amend the act entitled "An act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright," approved March 4, 1909; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. ROUSE: A bill (H. R. 8178) authorizing and empowering the Interstate Commerce Commission to inquire into and determine the rate of toll on interstate highway bridges, prescribing the maximum rate for such bridges, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BOX: A bill (H. R. 8179) to amend an act entitled "An act relating to the liability of common carriers by railroad to their employees in certain cases," approved April 22, 1908; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina: A bill (H. R. 8180) to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing the counties of Aiken, S. C., and Richmond, Ga., to construct a bridge across the Savannah River at or near Augusta, Ga.," approved August 7, 1919; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KINCHELOE: A bill (H. R. 8181) authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River approximately midway between the city of Owensboro, Ky., and Rockport, Ind.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. DALLINGER: A bill (H. R. 8182) to amend an act entitled "An act to reclassify postmasters and employees of the Postal Service and readjust their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis," approved June 5, 1920; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. BRAND of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 8183) to amend section 300 of the war risk insurance act as amended by the acts approved August 19, 1921, and March 4, 1923, providing compensation for enlisted men suffering from effects of venereal disease; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. SHALLENBERGER: A bill (H. R. 8184) for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Beaver City, Nebr.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: Resolution (H. Res. 234) for the immediate consideration of H. R. 7995, the immigration bill; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts favoring the passage by Congress of legislation increasing the compensation of postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, requesting Congress of the United States to appropriate funds to carry out certain recommendations of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army made in furtherance of the national defense act of 1920; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ANDREW: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, requesting Congress to appropriate funds to carry out certain recommendations of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army made in furtherance of the national defense act of 1920; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, favoring the passage of legislation by Congress increasing the compensation of postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDREW: A bill (H. R. 8185) granting a pension to Sarah K. Marshall; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 8186) to provide for examination and survey of Cockrells Creek, Northumberland County, Va., and of the channel connecting said creek with Great Wicomico River, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. BURTNES: A bill (H. R. 8187) for the relief of Emmett Edward O'Hara; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 8188) granting an increase of pension to Rachael J. Smith; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DEAL: A bill (H. R. 8189) to provide for an examination and survey of the Western Branch of Elizabeth River, Va.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. FRENCH: A bill (H. R. 8190) granting a pension to Kathryn Hatley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GARBER: A bill (H. R. 8191) granting an increase of pension to Susanna E. Shannon; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8192) for the relief of Frank Rector; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HILL of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 8193) granting an increase of pension to Edward P. Aler; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MACGREGOR: A bill (H. R. 8194) granting an increase of pension to Mary H. Templeton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MILLIGAN: A bill (H. R. 8195) granting a pension to Mary Carroll; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OLDFIELD: A bill (H. R. 8196) to authorize the Federal Power Commission to amend permit No. 1, project No. 1, issued to the Dixie Power Co.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. TABER: A bill (H. R. 8197) granting a pension to Margaret S. Palmer; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 8198) granting an increase of pension to Nancy Adams; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMPSON: A bill (H. R. 8199) granting an increase of pension to Eliza Ewing; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WINGO: A bill (H. R. 8200) to make a preliminary survey of Red River in Arkansas, south of the southeast corner of the State of Oklahoma, with a view to control of its floods; to the Committee on Flood Control.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

1990. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of owners of Kaakaukukui Beach lands and members of the Kaakaukukui Improvement Club, Mrs. Mary Hanheo Atcherley, president, for an amendment to the Hawaiian commission act of 1920, under which they will be authorized to occupy certain lands; to the Committee on the Territories.

1991. By Mr. ARNOLD: Petition of certain citizens of Eflingham, Ill., favoring the passage of the Fish bill, providing for relief to the people of Germany; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

1992. By Mr. COOK: Petition of 402 members of Central Christian Church, of Huntington, Ind., in support of the eighteenth amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

1993. By Mr. CRAMTON: Petition of the Rotary Club of Mount Clemens, Mich., urging favorable action in regard to increased compensation for postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

1994. Also, petition of the Home Circle, Lapeer, Mich., urging passage of a stringent immigration law; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

1995. Also, petition of the Charles J. Fulton Post, American Legion, St. Clair, Mich., recommending extending to five years the period within which tuberculosis might be presumed to be of service origin; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

1996. By Mr. CULLEN: Petition of Lieutenants Association, Fire Department, New York City, N. Y., indorsing the proposed increase in salaries for postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

1997. By Mr. FULLER: Petition of the Macon County (Ill.) Farm Bureau, favoring the McNary-Haugen bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

1998. By Mr. HULL of Iowa: Petition of citizens of Davenport, Iowa, opposing two antifirearm bills introduced by Senator COWLEY, of New York, and by Congressman MILLER of Washington; also favoring a bill for 2.75 per cent beer; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1999. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of General Motors Export Co., 224 West Fifty-seventh Street, New York, G. D. Mooney, president, favoring the passing by Congress of laws which regularize three foreign services of the United States Government; that acting on Secretary Hughes's suggestion it would seem that the Rogers and Winslow bills should be considered together and so amended as to insure complete coordination between the three services before the bills were turned over to Congress for action; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2000. Also, petition of persons requesting that preventive measures be taken so far as the putting into effect by the Naturalization Bureau of a rule or regulation affecting the naturalization of foreign-born aliens; it is desired that this measure be barred, because if it goes into effect it will greatly retard and interfere with the naturalization of foreign-born persons in Greater New York; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2001. Also, petition of American Exporters' & Importers' Association, E. C. Hines, secretary to the board of directors, that increased revenue already produced by second-class matter be at once applied to giving a reduced rate of 1 cent on "drop" letters, and that legislation be enacted requiring each class of mail to pay cost of service in order that no class need pay over cost; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2002. By Mr. O'SULLIVAN: Petition of Bridgeport, Conn., section of Council of Jewish women, protesting against the Johnson Immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2003. Also, petition of citizens of New Milford, Conn., in favor of legislation increasing the wages of postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2004. By Mr. OLIVER of New York: Petition of the county committee of the American Legion, Bronx County, N. Y., asking the President of the United States to review the sentences of all war veterans now in prison under sentence of military courts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2005. Also, petition of a mass meeting at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, N. Y., Sunday night, March 23, 1924, calling upon the President of the United States to take steps through diplomatic channels to secure the release from prison of Hon. Eamon De Valera; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2006. By Mr. SITES: Papers accompanying House bill 8168, granting a pension to Elizabeth Yeom; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

2007. By Mr. SMITH: Petition of Women's Christian Temperance Union, Payette, Idaho, protesting against enactment of legislation for 2.75 per cent beer; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2008. By Mr. TEMPLE: Petition of Lodge LI, Gorica No. 287, S. N. P. J., Burgettstown, Pa., protesting against certain proposals before the Congress of the United States regulating immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2009. By Mr. WILSON of Indiana: Petition of 29 members of the Missionary Society of Grace Methodist Church and Loyalty Club of Grace Methodist Church, Evansville, Ind., urging the passage of the child welfare amendment which provides that labor of persons under 18 years of age should be prohibited or limited; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2010. Also, petition of 180 members of the Service Star Legion, Gresham Chapter Vanderburg County, Evansville, Ind., urging the passage of the child welfare amendment which provides that labor of persons under 18 years of age should be prohibited or limited; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2011. Also, petition of 22 members of the Emma Roach Parent Teachers' Association, urging favorable consideration of the child labor amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, March 25, 1924.

(Legislative day of Monday, March 24, 1924.)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MOSES in the chair). The Secretary will call the roll.

The principal clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Edge	Kendrick	Reed, Pa.
Ashurst	Edwards	Keyser	Robinson
Ball	Ferris	Klog	Sheppard
Bayard	Fess	Ladd	Shortridge
Borah	Fletcher	Lodge	Simmons
Brandegee	Frazier	McKellar	Smith
Brookhart	George	McKinley	Smoot
Broussard	Gerry	McLean	Spencer
Burns	Glass	McNary	Stanfield
Cameron	Gooding	Mayfield	Stephens
Capper	Hale	Moses	Swanson
Caraway	Harrell	Neely	Tierney
Copeland	Harris	Norris	Wadsworth
Couzens	Harrison	Oddie	Walsh, Mass.
Curtis	Heflin	Overman	Walsh, Mont.
Dale	Howell	Pepper	Warren
Dial	Johnson, Minn.	Pittman	Watson
Dill	Jones, N. Mex.	Ralston	Weller
	Jones, Wash.	Randall	Willis

Mr. FLETCHER. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. TRAMMELL] is necessarily absent. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 4) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the adoption of amendments thereto is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and the pending question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART] to the amendment reported from the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BORAH obtained the floor.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 190) for the relief of the distressed and starving women and children of Germany, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and they were thereupon signed by the Presiding Officer [Mr. MOSES] as Acting President pro tempore:

S. 75. An act for the relief of the Cleveland State Bank, of Cleveland, Miss.

S. 1982. An act granting the consent of Congress to the construction, maintenance, and operation by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., its successors and assigns, of a line of railroad across the northeasterly portion of the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the State of Minnesota; and

S. 2113. An act authorizing the Director of the Census to collect and publish statistics of cotton.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. ROBINSON presented a telegram in the nature of a memorial from W. G. Bean, president of Local No. 266, Musicians' Protective Union, of Little Rock, Ark., remonstrating against the passage of House Joint Resolution 211, conferring authority upon the President of the United States to order and direct the United States Marine Band to visit and play at certain annual expositions or fairs to be held in Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas, which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented petitions, numerous signed, of sundry citizens of Hartford, Ark., and vicinity, praying for the passage of the so-called Johnson immigration bill, with quotas based on the 1890 census, which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. JONES of Washington presented petitions, numerous signed, of sundry citizens of South Bend, Lebam, Seattle, and Raymond, in the State of Washington, praying for the passage of legislation granting adjusted compensation to veterans of the World War, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. KEYES presented a resolution adopted by the congregation of the Congregational Church of Temple, N. H., favoring an amendment to the Constitution regulating child labor, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CAPPER presented a telegram in the nature of a petition from Earl E. Stock, commander of the Moore Post, the American Legion, of Wakeeney, Kans., praying for the passage of legislation granting a cash bonus to veterans of the World War, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, of Neodesha, Kans., praying for the passage of legislation abolishing the Railroad Labor Board, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Somerset and St. John, Kans., praying for the passage of more restrictive immigration legislation, with quotas based on the census of 1890, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a resolution of the Chamber of Commerce of Hiawatha, Kans., favoring the passage of legislation restricting immigration, with quotas based on the census of 1890, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. WILLIS presented a resolution of the Canton (Ohio) Central Labor Union, favoring the passage of legislation restricting the production of narcotics to the medical and scientific needs of the world, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Somerset, New Lexington, Thoraville, and Crooksville, in the State of Ohio, praying an amendment to the Constitution granting equal rights to women, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Philip R. Colebank Post, No. 13, the American Legion, Department of Ohio, of Cincinnati, Ohio, favoring the passage of legislation changing the name of Mount Rainier and Rainier National Park to Mount Lincoln and Lincoln National Park, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

He also presented petitions signed by 1,161 citizens of Massillon, Ohio, praying for the passage of legislation granting adjusted compensation to veterans of the World War, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. McLEAN presented the petition of M. I. Bates, of New Haven, Conn., praying for the passage of the so-called Johnson restrictive immigration bill, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Fidelity Council, No. 47, Daughters of Liberty, of Waterbury, Conn., favoring the passage of the so-called Johnson restrictive immigration bill, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the directors of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of New Haven and the Societa' di M. S. Umberto Primo, of Hartford, Conn., protesting against the passage of the so-called Johnson restrictive immigration bill, which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the directors of the Putnam Chamber of Commerce, of Putnam, Conn., protesting against the passage of the so-called McNary-Haugen bill, providing aid to agriculture, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of G. Merle Jones Post, No. 95, the American Legion, of Hebron, Conn., praying for the passage of legislation granting adjusted compensation to veterans of the World War, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of members of the Republican Town Committee of Shelton; of H. W. Voight, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Emanuels Church, of New Haven; and of sundry citizens of Shelton, all in the State of Connecticut, praying for the passage of House Joint Resolution 180, for the relief of the distressed and starving women and children of Germany, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented memorials of the Thompson Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Putnam, and the Woman's Baptist Mission Society of New Haven, in the State of Connecticut, remonstrating against the passage of legislation raising the percentage of alcohol allowable in wine and beer, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of the National Society United States Daughters of 1812, of Manchester, Conn., praying for the passage of legislation confirming the "Star-Spangled Banner" as the national anthem, and also making adequate appropriation for the repair of the ship Constitution, which was referred to the Committee on the Library.

He also presented petition of Mulvoy-Tarlov Post, No. 603, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of South Norwalk; of officers and members of A. C. Tyler Auxillary, No. 14, United Spanish War Veterans, of Willimantic; of Frederick A. Hill Camp, No. 15, United Spanish War Veterans, of Stamford; and of Adjutant Ward Cheney Camp, No. 13, Spanish War Veterans, of South Manchester, all in the State of Connecticut, praying for the passage of the so-called Bursum bill, granting increased pensions to certain soldiers and sailors, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also presented petitions of the Merchants' Credit Association of Bridgeport; of Local No. 25, International Metal Polishers' Union, of New Haven; and of William H. Gordon Post, No. 50, the American Legion, of Ansonia, all in the State of Connecticut, praying for the passage of legislation granting increased compensation to postal employees, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GOODING, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2327) to amend section 4 of the interstate commerce act, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 302) thereon.

Mr. LADD, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6724) granting the consent of Congress to the counties of Sibley and Scott, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Minnesota River, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 303) thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED.

Mr. WATSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on the 24th instant they presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 2420. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Potter County and Dewey County, S. Dak.; and

S. 2446. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Clarks Ferry Bridge Co., and its successors, to construct a bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near the railroad station of Clarks Ferry, Pa.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. PITTMAN:

A bill (S. 2917) directing the Secretary of the Treasury to complete purchases of silver under the act of April 25, 1918, commonly known as the Pittman Act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. McLEAN:

A bill (S. 2918) granting a pension to Mary E. Starr (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 2919) to extend the provisions of the national bank act to the Virgin Islands of the United States; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. BRUCE:

A bill (S. 2920) to authorize the registration of trade-marks used in commerce with foreign nations or among the several States or with Indian tribes, and to provide remedies for infringement of the same; to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. McKINLEY:

A bill (S. 2921) granting a pension to Newton Ernest McElvain; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WADSWORTH:

A bill (S. 2922) to authorize the President to reconsider the case of Frederic K. Long and to reappoint him a captain in the Regular Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ELKINS:

A bill (S. 2923) granting an increase of pension to Hannah Wiles; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 2924) for the relief of Aktieselskabet Marie di Giorgio, a Norwegian corporation of Christiania, Norway; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JONES of Washington:

A bill (S. 2925) granting a pension to Harmon Everett Meacham; to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 2926) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to patent certain lands to school district No. 58 of Clallam County, State of Washington, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 2927) to limit the liability of the United States in cases of breached, terminated, or suspended World War contracts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 2928) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept certain lands in the vicinity of Pensacola, Fla., to assure a suitable water supply for the United States naval air station at Pensacola; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

A bill (S. 2929) granting the consent of Congress to the States of Georgia and Florida, through their respective highway departments, to construct a bridge across the St. Marys River at or near Wilds Landing, Fla.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. HOWELL:

A bill (S. 2930) reaffirming the use of the ether for radio communication or otherwise to be the inalienable possession of the people of the United States and their Government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 2931) to promote the safety of employees on railroads; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. BURSUM:

A bill (S. 2932) to quiet the title to lands within Pueblo Indian land grants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

BUILDINGS AT CAMP LEWIS, WASH.

Mr. JONES of Washington submitted an amendment providing an appropriation of $1,000,000 for beginning the construction of permanent buildings at Camp Lewis, Wash., etc., intended to be proposed by him to House bill 7877, the War Department appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 180) for the relief of the distressed and starving women and children of Germany was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

CLARENCE C. CHASE.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I ask leave to submit a resolution of privilege. I ask that it may be read, and then I should like to ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana asks unanimous consent, out of order, to submit a resolution. The resolution will be read for the information of the Senate.

The reading clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 195) as follows:

Whereas one Clarence C. Chase is and, for more than a year last past, has been a civil officer of the United States, to wit, the collector of customs at the port of El Paso, Tex.; and

Whereas in the prosecution of an inquiry by the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys of the Senate under Senate Resolution 147, it became necessary to inquire into the source from which one A. B. Fall, late Secretary of the Interior, secured large sums of money at or about the time or shortly after he entered upon negotiations resulting in the execution of leases or contracts relating to the naval oil reserves; and

Whereas it appears from the testimony taken and proceedings had before the said committee that the said Clarence C. Chase entered into a conspiracy with the said A. B. Fall to mislead and deceive the said committee concerning the source of such moneys, and that pursuant to such conspiracy the said Clarence C. Chase, on or about the 29th of November, 1923, endeavored to induce one Price McKinley to represent to and testify before the said committee that he had loaned to the said Fall at or about the time heretofore mentioned the sum of $100,000; and

Whereas the said Clarence C. Chase well knew that the said Price McKinley had made no such loan to the said Fall; and

Whereas the said Clarence C. Chase being, on the 24th day of March, 1924, called before the said committee and interrogated concerning the matters herein referred to by the said committee, declined and refused to answer any questions in relation to the same upon the ground that his answers might tend to incriminate him: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a copy of the testimony adduced and the proceedings had before the said Committee on Public Lands and Surveys under Senate Resolution 147 be, with a copy of this resolution, transmitted to the House of Representatives for such proceeding against the said Clarence C. Chase as may be appropriate.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, there is so much confusion in the Chamber I could not hear the resolution read. I heard the whereases. May I ask to have just the resolving part read again?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be again read.

The reading clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That a copy of the testimony adduced and the proceedings had before the said Committee on Public Lands and Surveys under Senate Resolution 147 be, with a copy of this resolution, transmitted to the House of Representatives for such proceedings against the said Clarence C. Chase as may be appropriate.

Mr. BORAH. I think that is eminently proper.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. BURSUM. I call the attention of the Senator from Montana to the fact that it is my information that Mr. Chase has resigned or is ready now to resign. I obtained that information yesterday.

Mr. ROBINSON. What difference would that make?

Mr. BURSUM. Why would there be any necessity for the resolution then?

Mr. ROBINSON. Why should the Senate fail to inform the House of the course which the matter has taken and give the House an opportunity to proceed?

Mr. BURSUM. The purpose of the resolution, I presume, is to institute impeachment proceedings.

Mr. ROBINSON. Does the Senator say that Mr. Chase has resigned?

Mr. BURSUM. I think so.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator said a moment ago that he had resigned or has indicated that he will resign?

Mr. BURSUM. That he is ready to resign.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator ought to be willing to say which is true if he has information with respect to it. But I call the attention of the Senator from New Mexico to the fact that a public officer can not escape responsibility, that he can not escape the process of impeachment by resigning when impeachment proceedings are about to be instituted.

Mr. BURSUM. I take it impeachment proceedings are not proposed to be instituted because of any misconduct in office. The proceeding arises out of the fact that Mr. Chase, who is the son-in-law of Mr. Fall, attempted to secure testimony which was not true in the case of Fall, and in that way, indirectly, Mr. Mr. Chase was guilty of misconduct. There is no question about that.

Mr. ROBINSON. Clearly, if the statement which the Senator has just made is correct, the officer would be guilty of subornation of perjury; at least, he would be chargeable with it.

Mr. BURSUM. It is not subornation of perjury, because the perjury was never committed.

Mr. BORAH. I see no objection to passing the resolution. Even if the officer has resigned, the House could consider the question if it desired to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the Senator from Montana to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. SPENCER. Mr. President, I happen to be a member of the committee—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has the floor. Does he yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. SPENCER. I happen to be a member of the committee. I knew nothing of this until this minute, and I should like to look into it. I suggest that the resolution ought to be referred to the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the Senator from Missouri to object; objection is made.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. With the permission of the Senator from Idaho, I desire to advise the Senate briefly of the facts in relation to the matter referred to in the resolution.

The testimony was first adduced before the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys about the 1st of December last that Senator Fall had come into possession of some considerable sums of money, having been theretofore in somewhat straitened financial circumstances. About the close of the year 1921 a telegram was sent by him to the then chairman of the committee, the Senator from Utah, to the effect that his son-in-law, Mr. C. C. Chase, was coming on, that he was entirely familiar with all of the business affairs of Senator Fall, and would advise the committee fully in relation to the matters testified to by the New Mexico witnesses who had told of the expenditures of very considerable sums of money in the purchase of additional land and in improvements made upon the ranch of Senator Fall.

Mr. Chase did not come before the committee, but when we got an opportunity to examine the telegrams some three weeks ago it was disclosed that Mr. Chase did actually start for the East and came to the city of Washington; that he stopped en route at the city of Cleveland, came on to Washington, and from Washington telegraphed to Senator Fall that the interview which he had had in the city of Cleveland was unsatisfactory; that he would meet him on the train at Kansas City and come back to Chicago with him. Thereafter, on the 27th day of December, Senator Fall sent his letter to the committee, in which he stated that he borrowed $100,000 with which to make the purchase of the so-called Harris ranch from Mr. Edward B. McLean, of Washington, and that he had had business transactions in a foreign country with an old associate, and he had made arrangements to get the money from that old associate.

At the same time there was found in the files of the committee a memorandum, the origin of which no one has been able to ascertain, which recited also, in effect, that Mr. Fall had had business transactions in a foreign country with a gentleman; that out of those transactions there was an account standing under which this gentleman was obligated to Senator Fall to the extent of somewhere between $75,000 and $125,000, and that that gentleman had traveled with him on the train from Chicago to Los Angeles and had loaned him $100,000.

In one way or another it became apparent to the committee that the gentleman thus referred to in those two letters was Mr. Price McKinney, of the city of Cleveland. It was discovered that Mr. Price McKinney had, indeed, traveled with Mr. Fall from the city of Chicago to Los Angeles some time toward the close of the year 1921. It was also learned that Mr. Chase had visited Mr. Price McKinney in the city of Cleveland. Mr. McKinney was called to the stand and interrogated concerning the conversation and the transaction between him and Mr. Chase in Cleveland. He told the committee that a short time before Thanksgiving Day last he had received a letter from Senator Fall in which Senator Fall recalled to him the fact that they had traveled together on the train from Chicago to Los Angeles, and in that letter Mr. McKinney was asked if he would say that upon that trip he had loaned to Senator Fall the sum of $100,000.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. BURSUM. That letter, however, was written by Senator Fall, as I recall.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Of course it was written by Senator Fall, and I have so stated.

Mr. BURSUM. It was not written by Chase.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I know it was written by Senator Fall, asking Mr. McKinney if he would so state. Mr. McKinney advised us that he did not answer that letter, but that shortly thereafter he was visited by Mr. Chase, who asked him if he was prepared to make that statement to the committee, and he said that he was not, that he would not make any such statement, because he had not loaned any such sum of money or any money to Senator Fall.

When Mr. Chase was then called before the committee on yesterday morning, as recited in the resolution, he declined to answer any questions concerning the transaction upon the ground that the testimony might incriminate him.

Accordingly, Mr. President, it appears by the most indubitable evidence that Mr. Chase, an officer of the United States, whose effort at subornation of perjury was disclosed by the testimony of Mr. McKinney more than a week ago, is still holding the office of collector of customs at the port of El Paso.

Mr. SPENCER. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, I withdraw the objection which I made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which he has presented and which has been read for the information of the Senate. Is there objection?

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, I should like to have the resolution go over until to-morrow, and if to-morrow the Senator from Montana desires to press it I will then have no objection.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I will say to the Senator that I will press it at any time, no matter for how long it goes over, because it is a perfectly well-established rule, as stated by the Senator, that the resignation of an offending officer does not in any manner whatever affect impeachment proceedings. The impeachment proceedings should go on whether he resigns or not.

Mr. BURSUM. That may be true, but as I look at this matter, Mr. Chase was merely a messenger for Mr. Fall and he was unfortunate in being Mr. Fall's son-in-law. I do not regard Mr. Chase as a principal in any of the matters relating to the naval oil reserves or the many complications in which Mr. Fall has involved himself, but, being his son-in-law, it was a natural thing that on request of Mr. Fall he should carry this message, and that, as I recall, was the testimony of Mr. Price McKinney, that Mr. Chase was merely a messenger. It seems to me that, of course, he should resign, that he should not continue to hold that office, but by resort to impeachment proceedings under the peculiar circumstances it seems to me that there is nothing to be gained.

Mr. BORAH. The resolution does not subject him to impeachment?

Mr. BURSUM. That is my understanding.

Mr. BORAH. It merely refers the question to the body which has the power to bring impeachment charges. They may do so if they see fit, or they may not do so if they see fit, or they may take the question up without this resolution at all.

Mr. BURSUM. Of course.

Mr. BORAH. The resolution simply refers the matter to the proper tribunal.

Mr. BURSUM. I do not regard this as a question for impeachment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. BURSUM. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator from New Mexico ought to realize that the impeaching power under the Constitution of the United States is the House of Representatives. There has come to a committee of the Senate in its official capacity certain evidence tending to show that an officer of the United States Government was trying to induce a citizen to commit perjury.

Mr. BURSUM. No; not quite that. The inducement—

Mr. NORRIS. Even if it is not quite that—

Mr. BURSUM. The inducement was by Mr. Fall. That was the testimony.

Mr. NORRIS. No.

Mr. BURSUM. This man was merely a messenger.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not care as to that; call him a messenger, if you please, but he was an officer of the United States, and the testimony of Mr. McKinney, as I understand, is that he, Chase, this officer of the United States, not Fall, came to him—

Mr. BURSUM. As a messenger.

Mr. NORRIS. Very well; consider him as a messenger.

Mr. BURSUM. That is what Mr. McKinney said about him.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not care what he may be called. He did not go to Mr. McKinney as an official of the United States, of course, nobody claims that; but at the same time he was an officer of the United States, and he went to Mr. McKinney and asked him if he would say that Senator Fall had borrowed $100,000 from him at a certain time. That standing alone may be insufficient in the judgment of the House of Representatives to justify an impeachment proceeding, but the Committee on Public Lands, as I understand, has gone no further with it.

It is a fact that ought to be laid before the House of Representatives; and when we lay it before the House of Representatives we make no recommendation but simply say that "one of our committees in an official capacity investigating another subject has been confronted with this evidence, and we give it to you for your investigation and for such action as you may deem best."

Mr. President, unless we do that, it seems to me that we are officially standing in the way of an investigation by the proper body that has jurisdiction and sole jurisdiction of impeachment proceedings. We are violating our duty if when that evidence is presented to us in our official capacity we remain silent and do nothing. We have no jurisdiction, but the House of Representatives have. It may be that after investigation in some way they will find an excuse for it all, but it is now contradicted evidence tending, and tending very strongly, to show that an officer of the United States, holding an official position in the name of the United States, has been guilty, if you want to put in that way, of acting as a messenger boy to induce somebody to tell a lie.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BURSUM. I yield.

Mr. DILL. I merely wanted to make a suggestion, namely, that when this same officer came before the committee he refused to testify on the ground that it might incriminate him.

Mr. BURSUM. Very well; if he is guilty of subornation of perjury, of course that is a matter which we can not decide here; that is a matter of evidence.

Mr. NORRIS. Does not the Senator think that it should go before the proper body?

Mr. BURSUM. He may be prosecuted.

Mr. NORRIS. Let him be prosecuted by the proper tribunal, the House of Representatives, which has jurisdiction of impeachment proceedings. Are we going to shield a Government official when something has happened before one of our committees tending to show that he has been instrumental in trying to induce somebody else to tell a falsehood in order to shield a former official of the Government who was trying to dispose of some of the property of the Government?

Mr. BURSUM. I would not quite justify the conclusion that he had been instrumental. My view is that he was simply a messenger; that he was made use of; that in view of his peculiar relationship with Mr. Fall he did the natural thing that almost anyone under the circumstances might have done, which was merely to carry a message. The request was made by Mr. Fall. That is in the evidence. That was testified to by Mr. Price McKinney. I think this boy should have a chance to resign if he has not already resigned. I will object to the consideration of the resolution at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. BURSUM. To-morrow, if he has not resigned, I will vote for it.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator from Alabama desire to address the Senate or simply to ask a question?

Mr. HEFLIN. I am going to address the Senate. I will wait, however.

Mr. BORAH. If the Senator desires to address the Senate upon the matter which the Senator from Montana had up I will yield, because I should like to take up another matter after we have gotten away from that.

Mr. HEFLIN. That is what I propose to speak about briefly.

Mr. BORAH. Very well, Mr. President, I will yield the floor.

Mr. HEFLIN obtained the floor.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I take it that the resolution which I submitted a little while ago is a resolution of the very highest privilege. I inquire whether the rule applicable to resolutions generally applies to a privileged resolution?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that the rule would not apply to a privileged resolution.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I should think so. I ask the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], whose views upon the matter are usually sound—

Mr. LODGE. Whether this is a privileged resolution?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I presume there is no doubt about its being a privileged resolution; but the question is—of course, it involves that as well—is it a privileged resolution, and if it is a privileged resolution, will an objection by one Senator carry it over the day?

Mr. LODGE. If it is a privileged resolution, I should suppose not.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I should think so.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President. I do not think there is any doubt but that it is a privileged resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution, and the Chair was proceeding upon the request preferred by the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Chair was quite right. If I am in order, then, Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution just offered by myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That the Chair holds to be a privileged motion.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New York? The Senator from Alabama has the floor.

Mr. HEFLIN. For a question.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I notice that the Senator from Montana has made a motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution offered by him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama yielded to the Senator from Montana, as the Chair understood, and, having yielded, the Senator from Montana made a motion which the Chair deemed to be privileged.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Just so. I am not addressing myself to that side of it, but I am wondering if there is any objection in the Senate to giving unanimous consent to have the unfinished business temporarily laid aside in order that this resolution may be acted upon. The motion of the Senator from Montana would displace the unfinished business.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I shall be very glad to change it in that way. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside for the purpose of considering the resolution tendered by me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BURSUM. I object.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Then I renew my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Montana.

DEMAND TO PUNISH WITNESSES WHO REFUSE TO TESTIFY IN SENATE INVESTIGATION.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, this is a very important resolution. Action ought to be taken on it now. As one Senator, I want to enter my protest against any dilly-dallying method that may be employed now or hereafter concerning witnesses summoned here to testify and who refuse to give testimony. I want quick and rigid action taken regarding them. They invite it. Let us respond in a way that will be felt and heeded.

I am in favor of bringing Mr. Sinclair, the oil king, before the Senate now, in addition to what we have done in turning him over to the investigation of the grand jury of the District of Columbia. The Senate itself ought to punish him for contempt. I am in favor of turning him over to the Sergeant at Arms and imprison him until he is willing to testify. No man in this country, I do not care whether he is worth a million or a hundred million dollars, has a right when called by the Government to testify to strut around this Capitol and ignore or defy the constituted authorities of the Nation. Are we going to have two standards of conduct in the United States—one for the pompous rich and another for the struggling poor? Are some men going to be permitted to employ learned lawyers who will advise them to refuse to testify and hide them away in a maze of technicalities, and thus dodge, evade, and trample upon the lawful processes of the United States Government?

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BURSUM. I see that this matter is going to result in considerable discussion, and I do not regard it as sufficiently important—

Mr. HEFLIN. I can not yield to the Senator for a speech. I thought the Senator wanted to ask me a question.

Mr. BURSUM. Just a minute. I want to save time. I am going to save some time.

Mr. HEFLIN. The Senator is not going to save me any time, because I am going to discuss this resolution now.

Mr. BURSUM. I desire to withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico having objected to the unanimous-consent request preferred by the Senator from Montana, and the question being privileged, the Senator from Montana then made a motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution, and that motion is now under discussion. The withdrawal of the Senator's objection to the unanimous-consent request does not go to the question now before the Senate.

Mr. HEFLIN. Now, I want to proceed. The Senator can speak later in his own time.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield further to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. HEFLIN. Not now.

Mr. BURSUM. I simply desire to ask unanimous consent that the matter be taken up and disposed of.

Mr. HEFLIN. Not just now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. HEFLIN. The Senator is too late. Judgment time has come.

Mr. BURSUM. All right; go ahead.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, there ought not to be a single objection in this whole Senate to a matter of this kind. No Senator ought to be found within the confines of this Chamber who will object to a proceeding of this character. Desire for immediate action ought to be unanimous. We ought to be of one mind when a proposition like this comes up.

What are we doing here in the Senate? Are we here for the purpose of protecting crooks and criminals in Federal office and aiding them in dodging and evading punishment and helping them to prevent the Government from obtaining pertinent and valuable testimony, or are we here to represent the Government and to try to preserve in all their integrity the civic institutions of our country?

Mr. President, I am astounded at some of the things I have witnessed here recently. On yesterday the Senator from Missouri [Mr. SPENCER] made a lengthy speech in a way defending Sinclair's effort to evade testifying before the committee of which he is now a member. He had just a moment before voted for the resolution which in effect requested the grand jury of the District of Columbia and the district attorney here to indict Sinclair. The RECORD would show that the Senator from Missouri favored having the district attorney and the grand jury take him over, and his speech would show that he was not in favor of doing anything until the highest court in the country should pass on it finally. This Government is nearly 150 years old. Certainly it has the power to protect itself. Certainly Congress has the right to create a court and empower that court to sit in witnesses, and if they refuse to come in and testify, that court can fine or put the witnesses in prison for contempt of court. Then can it be said that the creator, authorized to establish courts and empower them to do these things, has not itself authority to compel witnesses to come and testify? Such a contention is simply ridiculous.

If Congress can set up a body and give that body power to bring in a witness and compel him to testify or punish him, certainly the Congress itself conducting an investigation can compel witnesses to come and testify.

The Senate ought to take a decisive stand on this matter. The Senate ought to make an example of Mr. Sinclair. Now, what have you done? He has set an example and a precedent; and here comes a Government official, Mr. Chase, the son-in-law of Mr. Fall, and he declines to testify, upon what ground? Upon the ground that it might incriminate him. What does he admit by that? He admits that he has done something or he knows something of a criminal nature, still holding office under this administration, and refusing to aid the Government itself in ferreting out crime and punish the criminal. The Senator from New Mexico rises and objects to the consideration of the proposition when it is brought up in the Senate. He says Chase may resign. I repeat, have we two standards of conduct for people in this country? You take the poor wretch who would refuse to testify and put him in prison, but you let the big fellows resign. Is that the situation with this Government? Mr. President, the people are entitled to know and they are going to know the truth about these things.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I would like to call the attention of the Senator from Alabama, and particularly the attention of the Senator from New Mexico, to the fact that even if Chase does resign, that is no reason why he should not be impeached. A resignation, as a matter of constitutional law, will not defeat an impeachment and the trial of the offender by the Senate, even though he may have resigned before the impeachment was commenced.

Mr. ROBINSON. That is particularly applicable where the resignation comes after the facts upon which proceedings against the officer had been developed.

Mr. NORRIS. I did not understand the remark of the Senator.

Mr. ROBINSON. The suggestion is particularly forceful where the facts have already developed which would justify charges against the officer. He can not escape by resigning after the charges have been developed.

Mr. NORRIS. No; the House of Representatives can proceed just the same if he resigns to-day as though he did not resign at all, and the action is not at all dependent upon the man being an officer at the time of the impeachment or the trial. That is clearly established.

Mr. ROBINSON. That was decided a half century ago.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; that is true.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, the Senator from Nebraska and the Senator from Arkansas are absolutely correct in that. Why should we permit one of these men to treat the committee in this fashion, treat the Senate in this fashion, and treat this important arm of the Government in this fashion, and then say, "I will resign, step down and out, and then I am beyond your reach and control"? Of course, we should not permit such a thing to be done.

These things are enough to arouse the righteous indignation of every man in both branches of Congress and of every official in the Federal Government. Yet a week ago Mr. McKimney testified that this Government official came to him and asked him if he would not say that he had loaned this money, $100,000, to Mr. Fall, asking an American citizen to tell a lie to help protect a man bribed in office while in the President's Cabinet. A week has passed and no official of the Government has acted, and Chase has remained in office and he has not been disturbed.

Mr. President, these things should not continue. Why does not the President remove Chase and men like him when things of this kind come out? We have a right to ask these questions. Some of us are fighting an important battle here. God knows there is much to be done, and how we are hampered in what we are trying to do. We can not get unanimous consent to consider a proposition of this character. A man comes up and says, "I will not testify, because I have done something, or I know something that will affect me injuriously and might cause me to be prosecuted." "Who are you?" "I am holding a Federal office under the President."

Then the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURSUM] says, "He has resigned, or he is ready to resign." Do you want to walk up to him and fan him gently and say, "Will you not resign? If you will not testify, will you not please resign"? And just let him say, "Well, I do not believe I will resign, because the way you are acting I do not think you will make me resign, and I believe I will just hold on to my job." And in effect say: "I have been in here a week or more since this damaging testimony came out, since this testimony has developed that I have been instrumental in defeating justice and trying to get somebody tell a falsehood in order to protect a former Government official in doing wrong to the hurt and injury of the Government."

Oh, Mr. President, it is high time that we were waking up here in this Capital. I want to say this—and I do not intend to speak longer this morning—the district attorney in this city stated yesterday, so the newspapers say, that he is going right after the prosecution of Mr. Sinclair vigorously. I hope he will.

If something is not done within a week, I want Mr. Sinclair brought in here for immediate consideration. I see no reason why we should not bring him here. But if those in charge want the grand jury to have an opportunity to act, if they will act speedily, all well and good, but action must be had. This man can not come here to the Capital of the Nation and brazenly defy the constituted authority of the Government of the United States and get away with it.

Mr. President, if that situation prevails, the time will come when the crooks that now infest the Government will not only become more impudent and arrogant, but they will escape punishment for their crimes. They will laugh at the constituted authorities of the country and say, "Oh, well, they can not make you testify unless you want to. You can just say, 'It might incriminate me, and therefore I decline to testify,' and walk out of the committee and still remain in office or go back to your place of business."

I can not understand the disposition and the spirit that I see manifested in some people. I can not understand it at all.

There should not be any secrets kept from the Government where the wholesome, healthful life of the Nation is at stake. There should not be any confidential notes or reports in departments that vitally affect the welfare of the Nation where corruption and crooked conduct on the part of officials are involved. Is it right and proper to protect the unfaithful officials who commit these crimes to the hurt and injury of the Government that we as guardians have sworn to protect and defend? Whom do we represent here? If this situation continues here for many more weeks, I am going to ask some very pertinent questions. If we must wait until we can have a judicial decision on Mr. Sinclair's conduct, I am in favor of bringing him before the Senate and having him turned over to the Sergeant at Arms. Let him stay in prison while the court is passing on the issue raised by his refusal to testify at the request of the Senate of the United States.

I want to emphasize this point before I close: That we have reached a time in the life of this Nation when we should unmistakably declare what are the paramount and supreme things in this Government, fidelity to duty, honesty, and integrity in public service, or corruption in office, crime in high places, and utter betrayal of public trust. That is the battle that is on today in this Nation, as sure as you live, Mr. President, and I live, and God reigns. Crookedness, corruption, crime are gnawing at the very vitals of the Nation, and crooks in high places are going upwhipped of justice, and nothing is being done by those who have the power to put the crooks and criminals out.

That is all I have to say this morning.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, I can not agree with the Senator from Alabama in the suggestion he makes regarding what should be done with Mr. Sinclair. I believe that we have taken the only course which we can legally take in the face of Mr. Sinclair's refusal to testify, for the reason that Congress many years ago provided by statute the method whereby a witness should be punished when he refused to answer questions of a committee of the House or Senate. When the Congress has specifically provided by statute that a certain procedure shall be followed, then I believe it has lost its right to proceed by another method, and for that reason I think we have taken the only course which can properly be taken in dealing with Mr. Sinclair.

I want to suggest why I think Mr. Sinclair refused to testify. As I said a few days ago, the agitation in this country for stopping these investigations began when we got too close to some of the big men and some of the big deals. If Mr. Sinclair had submitted himself to answer questions and brought in the books of the Hyva Corporation, which was his personal corporation, we would have found out what happened to all the 500,000 shares of Sinclair stock which he took over and delivered to that organization, and that would have produced some very damaging evidence, probably, as to who was benefited by this lease in addition to Mr. Sinclair and those immediately associated with him.

I think it is pertinent at this time to call attention to some of the facts which have developed in the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys since the efforts to stop this investigation were started. Since that agitation was started we have shown that the story that was concocted by Mr. Fall to deceive the committee as to where he got the $100,000 was concocted in Atlantic City by Mr. McLean and Mr. Fall. Mr. McLean testified that he went there at the request of Mr. Fall and that the story was then and there agreed upon for the purpose of telling it to the committee.

We have developed the fact, further, that Mr. Price McKinney, of Cleveland, had been asked to tell the same story before Mr. McLean was asked.

We have developed the further fact that an officer of the Government, Mr. Chase, collector of customs in El Paso, has attempted to suborn perjury by going to Mr. Price McKinney in compliance with the request of Mr. Fall.

We have developed further that Mr. Sinclair, the man who secured one of these leases, contributed at least $75,000 to pay up the campaign deficit of the party whose officials gave him the lease. Only yesterday we had presented before the committee what I think is one of the most effective analyses of these leases that has yet been made. Mr. W. W. Tarbell, an old man, analyzed these leases and made clear their weaknesses in such a complete manner that I want to present just a small part of his testimony to show some of the weak points he brought out.

He said, first, that this Teapot Dome lease was not granted with open bidding; that it was under cover, without the payment of a bonus; and he called attention to the fact that even wildcat leases, made for farm lands where there is no oil known of at all, pay a bonus of at least $1 an acre, and that it runs from that up to as high as $10,000 an acre sometimes.

He said, in the second place, that this lease carries an attractive but deceptive royalty. He developed the fact that under this lease it is to the advantage of those holding it to keep down the production of these wells in order to keep down the royalty. Then he showed how, with almost mechanical regularity, the production of the wells has been kept down.

He called attention, in the third place, to the exclusive concession for pipe-line transportation of these royalty oils, so that there is no bidding on the carrying of the oil.

Fourth, he showed that it put into the hands of Mr. Sinclair a noncompetitive sale or exchange privilege of the oil to the value of the royalty for supplying the Navy.

Most of all, he showed that the securing of the leases on the Teapot Dome gave to the Standard of Indiana, and its associated organizations that were developed since, the power to control the price of crude oil in the country in their respective districts, and that its greatest value was that connecting link that gave the oil monopoly a chance to control the price of crude oil. He showed that since the lease was completed, or shortly afterwards, they were able to lower the price of crude oil 70 per cent while they lowered the price of gasoline only 22 per cent.

It seems to me that any one of these matters almost would justify our having gone ahead with the investigation. It is true that sometimes we have investigated rumors. It is true that some of the testimony is not pertinent and is not important. But when we consider the fact that we have had no assistance from that branch of the Government that ought to assist, namely, the Attorney General's Department; when we consider the fact that we have had no trained investigators in connection with the committee, the remarkable thing is that there has not been more inconsequential testimony than we have had. By the tedious and persistent processes carried on particularly by the Senator from Montana we have gradually but surely unearthed this great conspiracy. I believe if we continue we may be able to get all the facts that can humanly be gotten by the methods we are now using.

I think Mr. Sinclair's attitude in this case is the most contemptible that has been shown in many years. Refusing to give any testimony to the committee, he then gave interviews to the newspapers and said he was willing to tell the people these facts but would not tell the committee. I believe that he will be found guilty, and I hope that he will be put in the common jail and kept there for the maximum period provided by law, and thus the people of the country may know that the big millionaire, who has already gotten forty or fifty million dollars out of the one-fourth interest he transferred to the Hyva Corporation, must suffer the penalty that would come to any common, ordinary citizen who should commit a much smaller offense.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I did not intend to say anything on this question, but I do not want my silence to be misunderstood on the question that has been discussed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. DILL] and also by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEWERS]. I intend in this matter to follow the lead of the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, particularly the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]. I think when a person employs an attorney he ought to follow his advice, even though he does not always agree that just the proper method has been taken. If the committee or the Senator from Montana does not want to proceed any further with Mr. Sinclair than has been done, I shall accept that decision, because the burden is going to be on the committee and has been on the committee in the investigation, and I want them, as long as they are acting fairly and judiciously, as they have been, in my judgment, in the past, to have their leadership unquestioned.

But, Mr. President, I do not agree with the Senator from Washington [Mr. DILL], much as I admire him, in the proposition that when we certify to the prosecuting attorney the failure of Mr. Sinclair to answer questions asked him by the committee our duty is complete or that we have by that action made it impossible for us to bring him before the Senate and turn him over to the Sergeant at Arms to be held in jail until he does answer the questions. I think we can, and I think we ought to, follow both methods. The statute which was read here Saturday provides that when a witness appearing before a committee of the Senate refuses to answer he has thereby committed a crime, and when that is certified to the prosecuting attorney it shall be the duty of the prosecuting attorney to take it before the grand jury with the view of getting an indictment, and after that a trial and then a conviction and then punishment. But that crime was completed, absolutely completed, in every sense when he refused to testify. He would not clear himself from that crime except as a matter of punishment which might be taken into consideration, but he would not clear himself of the crime if the next day he came back and offered to answer the questions.

I want to call attention to the fact that in my judgment when he refused the commission of the crime was complete. Of course, it must be a question that the committee had a right to ask. That would be determined in due time in court procedure. But then we have not succeeded in getting the testimony. He has still frustrated the will of the committee and of the Senate in making the investigation. We have first the right to declare him in contempt and turn him over to the custody of the Sergeant at Arms to be confined in jail until he answers the question. That is not a criminal procedure. That is something of which he can relieve himself in a minute by answering the questions. When he does signify a willingness to answer the questions, or answers them here in the Senate, he has relieved himself of that contempt procedure absolutely.

There is then nothing left of that, but he has not relieved himself of the crime which he committed, which is made a crime by statute and for which he can be punished. It seems to me it is in the nature of a replevin suit where a man, for instance, has stolen a horse. The crime of stealing the horse is complete just as soon as he feloniously takes it. He can bring it back to the owner the next day and say he is sorry for stealing it, but he has not purged himself of the crime. The court, it is true, in administering sentence in that kind of a case, would be lenient, but the crime in all its qualities still exists. After the horse is stolen the owner can proceed to replevin the horse. That is a civil suit. The man can end the civil suit in a moment by turning the horse over to the owner and saying "I quit on this replevin suit," but it does not affect the criminal suit in any degree.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARAWAY in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. DILL. Does the Senator know of any instance, in either the House or the Senate, where they have proceeded by that method since the enactment of the statute of 1857?

Mr. NORRIS. No; I do not. I will say to the Senator that in my judgment we could proceed in that way if we had no statute.

Mr. DILL. I agree with the Senator that we could do so if there were no statute.

Mr. NORRIS. I understood the Senator to infer by his question that there was no statute authorizing the procedure I have advocated.

Mr. DILL. I agree with the Senator if there were no statute, but my contention is that when the House and Senate and President have made a statute they have thereby settled the procedure as to that particular action.

Mr. NORRIS. No; they have settled the procedure as far as the commission of the crime is concerned. Here are two things. First is a crime made out by statute. It would not be a crime if it were not for the statute. The other is a proceeding to get the evidence entirely independent of the crime. That is inherent in the Senate. Unless it is, then we can not compel anybody to answer any question on earth. It is inherent in a court. We can compel a man to testify or go to jail and stay confined in jail until he is willing to testify.

That is the procedure to get evidence. That is not a procedure to punish for crime. The other thing is a crime, a statutory crime, completed the moment he refuses to testify. This is a civil procedure, the object of which is to compel him to testify to get evidence. It goes with every investigating body. Every organization, judge, court, committee, or legislative assembly that has any authority to investigate must have authority to compel witnesses to answer questions; otherwise such an investigation would be a farce. The procedure which, it seems to me, we ought to follow is to get that evidence, and that would bring results quicker than the other method. I favor the other.

I am not opposing the sending of the matter under the resolution to the district attorney. I voted for it. I think that is all right. Let them go on. But if we brought Mr. Sinclair before the bar of the Senate and he refused to answer, and we ordered that he should be confined in jail until he did answer, he would commence habeas corpus proceedings the same day, and we would immediately have determined whether or not the Senate has any authority to investigate or to ask questions of witnesses, and if so, whether the questions were properly propounded and were within the jurisdiction of the committee under the resolution that gave them authority to make the investigation.

I only wanted to say this much, so that in the future it would not be said that by my silence I have indicated that I thought we could not have both remedies. I am going to follow whichever course the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] wants to take. If he thinks it better to take only one instead of two, I am going to submit my judgment to his.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH], that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the resolution (S. Res. 195).

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is now upon agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. NORRIS. I think we ought to have the yeas and nays.

Mr. HEFLIN. I think so, too.

Mr. NORRIS. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SMITH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. NORRIS. I have been requested to announce that the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is detained from the Senate on account of illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. OVERMAN. I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD]. I understand, however, that if he were present, he would vote as I intend to vote. I therefore vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. DIAL. I have a general pair with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS], which I transfer to the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] and vote "yea."

Mr. FLETCHER. I desire to announce that my colleague, the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL], is unavoidably absent. He has a general pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT]. If present, my colleague would vote "yea."

Mr. CURTIS. I wish to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL];

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCCORMICK] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]; and

The junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. ERNST] with the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

I am not advised as to how these Senators would vote on the pending matter if they were present.

I desire also to announce the absence of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK]. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. GERRY. I wish to announce that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] is necessarily absent. He is paired on this vote with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING]. If present, the Senator from Mississippi would vote "yea."

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY], and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] are all necessarily absent. If present, they would all vote "yea."

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. WHEELER] is detained from the Senate on account of illness. If present, he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 71, nays 0, as follows:

YEAS—71.

Adams	Edge	Keyes	Reed, Pa.
Ashurst	Edwards	King	Robinson
Bail	Ferris	Ladd	Sheppard
Bayard	Fess	Lodge	Shortridge
Borah	Fletcher	McKellar	Simmons
Braudegee	Frazier	McKinley	Smith
Brookhart	George	McLean	Smoot
Broussard	Gerry	McNary	Spencer
Bruce	Glass	Mayfield	Stanfield
Cameron	Gooding	Moans	Stephens
Capper	Hale	Neely	Swanson
Caraway	Harrell	Norris	Underwood
Copeland	Harris	Oddie	Wadsworth
Couzens	Healin	Overman	Walsh, Mont.
Curtis	Howell	Pepper	Watson
Dale	Jones, N. Mex.	Pittman	Weller
Dial	Jones, Wash.	Ralston	Willis
Dill	Kendrick	Randell

NOT VOTING—25.

Hursum
Cott
Cummings Elkins
Ernst
Fernald
Greene

Harrison
Johnson, Calif.
Johnson, Minn.
La Follette
Leuroot
McCormick
Norbeck

Owen
Phipps
Reed, Mo.
Shields
Shipstead
Stanley
Sterling

Trammell
Walsh, Mass.
Warren
Wheeler

So the resolution submitted by Mr. WALSH of Montana was agreed to.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I move that the Senate resume the consideration of the unfinished business, which was temporarily laid aside when it was under consideration last evening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LONG in the chair). The Senator from Connecticut moves that the unfinished business, which was temporarily laid aside on yesterday, be now taken up.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 4) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the adoption of amendments thereto.

Mr. SMITH and Mr. SMOOT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from South Carolina.

STATISTICS OF COTTON.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, attention was called by me some days ago to an overestimate of 579,000 bales in the report of the Census Bureau as to the amount of available cotton for spinning purposes for the year 1923-24. That discrepancy has been brought about by the action of the Census Bureau. This is a matter which I think will interest every Senator here, because it shows a condition in one of our bureaus which has worked tremendous disaster to the producers of one crop and calling attention to the matter may lead to a correction. I hope, in the other departments, if like abuses shall be there discovered.

There was an overestimate of 579,000 bales in the census report in the amount of cotton for distribution. From the figures ascertained from the consuming establishments, over and against the figures obtained from the ginners, from imports, and what was known as the "city crop," was subtracted domestic consumption, exports, and destruction by fire, then the accurate enumerated checkable figures as to supply were added, and from these were subtracted the checkable figures as to exports, consumption, burning. The consuming establishments and warehouses were then asked what stock of cotton they had on hand. The reply was that the amount was 579,000 bales in excess of what the bureau found by subtracting their known figures of distribution from their known figures of supply.

We called a meeting of Senators representing the cotton-growing States and protested against the Census Bureau putting in an item under the heading "to balance distribution" of 579,000 bales.

After numerous meetings with the chief statistician and with Mr. Stewart, the chief of the bureau, we found it impossible to reach any agreement. Finally Mr. Hoover came before us and suggested that in place of a Senate investigation of the whole matter, if he were allowed to do so with our concurrence, he would appoint a committee of five expert statisticians to consider the matter in all of its phases and bring in a report. That committee was composed of statisticians of national reputation, one of them at least being connected with the department of economics in one of our leading universities—Cornell University. They went over the situation and as a result they reported that they deducted 355,860 bales from the supply as being beyond the possibility of accounting for at all, but they leave in the body of their report a doubt as to the accuracy of the remaining amount making up the 579,000 bales.

Mr. President, I am very much gratified at the result of the investigation by this committee. They doubtless would have found, had they had the technical knowledge of the method of ascertaining these statistics, a larger amount, but they have done remarkably well and their statement is very clear. The fact remains, however, that on account of more than a half million bales being arbitrarily lugged into this account since August, 1923, up to date, the cotton market has suffered a decline that has meant millions of dollars to the producers.

This is but one item. I want the committee of southern Senators to join me and ascertain to what extent the report from the Commerce Department is accurate as to the world supply of cotton. There is a question with reference to that involving in the neighborhood of 2,000,000 bales.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, to what does the Senator attribute the decline in the market to-day?

Mr. SMITH. I think one of the reasons why the market has declined is because, by virtue of these excess amounts added to the supply, they have been led to believe that there will be enough cotton to run the spindles until the new crop comes in; and then they will begin, or they have already begun, speculating as to the size of the incoming crop. I think these two elements have entered in largely, and I think there is another element, perhaps. This is a mere matter of opinion on my part, but I think there are certain influences that are determined to destroy the possibility of cooperative marketing. Our cooperative organizations in the South have on hand a certain amount of cotton. Not being able to name the price, by virtue of not having control of a sufficient percent of the cotton to fix the price themselves, they must be dependent upon the price current, and can only hope to affect the market by holding from the market for a reasonable time this cotton that may be needed; and now that practically the amount of cotton still on hand is held by these cooperative marketing associations, if the price can be forced down now so that the members of the cooperative associations will have to take less than those who are not members, the result necessarily will be disaster upon the morale of the cooperative marketing associations.

I believe that is one feature of this decline; but the fact remains that neither the wheat growers nor the cotton growers may hope for any better condition than that that has been occurring and reoccurring from the time these markets have been established until they have organized themselves sufficiently strong to manage and market and finance their own output. I think this Government ought to devote itself and its energies to aiding the agricultural interests of this country so to finance and distribute their produce as to compete with the organizations and trusts that control the price of the things the farmer has to buy.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I have listened heretofore with great profit to the remarks of the Senator touching this particular product. I have understood the Senator to express the opinion that the price of American cotton has been fixed by foreign manipulation; that for some reason we seem to be unable to fix the price of this great American product. How can the Government meet that difficulty, assuming the fact to be as indicated?

Mr. SMITH. I do not think the Government can fix the price. I do not think the Government ought to fix the price. I think the Government should aid and encourage the producer so to organize himself that ultimately he can control his price within the same bounds that other organizations control their price. I think it ought to lend every aid that it can, and even strain a point so to finance the farmer's product and so to aid him in his organizing effort as ultimately to bring him to a point where, through cooperation and the pooling of his product—be it wheat, be it cattle, or be it cotton—he can at least have a say-so in the price of the article that he gives to the world.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I do not mean to interrupt the Senator; but, in the Senator's opinion, would it be necessary to modify the Sherman law—to liberalize, if you will, the provisions of the Sherman so-called antitrust law—to achieve the object in view?

Mr. SMITH. We have already done that. We now have laws exempting these farm organizations from the operation of the Sherman antitrust law, and I think that was a very worthy act on the part of Congress, recognizing the fact that these cooperative organizations were for the purpose of protecting their members against the encroachments of other organizations who were operating in violation of the spirit, at least, if not of the text, of the Sherman antitrust law.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Then in its final analysis it is up to the people to organize, and in that way seek to control?

Mr. SMITH. Yes; and I think it is up to us to recognize the fact that the financing of agriculture does not fall in the same class as providing banking facilities for commerce. They are not in the same class.

Let me use an illustration. Suppose any woolen manufacturer or any cotton manufacturer took nine months to so manipulate his raw material and adjust his machinery that when it was so manipulated and adjusted he would be forced within 30 days to turn out a 12 months' supply of woolen or cotton goods—9 months or 10 months taken in the processes of developing, and 30 to 60 days taken in turning out the completed product—whereas now he has a commercial asset every day to meet the commercial liabilities incurred in its production. In other words, he produces a part of his year's crop every day. The farmer only produces it once in 12 months. The statement has been made, here on the floor of the Senate and elsewhere, that it takes 12 months for the farmer to have a turnover in his business. It takes 24 months—12 months to produce, and the subsequent 12 months to distribute. We ought to have some banking arrangement by which, within legitimate, conservative bounds, his business could be financed for his benefit as the 30, 60, and 90 day paper now meets the needs of commercial paper. We ought to address ourselves to that, because in the last analysis the farmer's independence is going to depend upon his control of the thing that he produces in the market place.

It is monstrous for us in America to wait every morning for Liverpool to determine the price of a great American monopoly; to have every buyer and every millman in America wait for the cablegram to bring a statement of what a foreign country, dependent upon American cotton, is willing to give to America in return for her incomparable gift to the world—what she will give us for the result of our labor and our work.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina further yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. The Senator will bear in mind that I am not questioning him for any other purpose than to show that I am deeply interested in this subject, because we are raising a great deal of cotton in California and increasing the acreage every year. Hence I am very deeply interested in the remarks of the Senator.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rose to call attention to the report of this unprejudiced and unbiased committee. As I said, they have reported that there are, in round numbers, 400,000 bales as to which no legitimate reason or account can be given for their having been inserted in the published statement as to the amount of cotton to be available for the world's use.

Mr. President, in conclusion I want to make one statement. I have been more or less impressed that our great market places, properly controlled, have been a great factor in creating a broad market for the different products of the country. I still believe that. I believe that there should be a place where buyer and seller may reflect their different desires; but I am opposed to the prostitution of that market place for gambling purposes. I do not want to destroy a market place. I want to drive out of it those who would prostitute the market place; and I am persuaded that the unlimited short selling of either wheat or cotton is absolutely unwarranted in morals, and should not be allowed under the law. The idea of a man having the power to go on the market and sell any amount of a given commodity when he does not own a pound of the commodity itself, and never intends to own it, but simply intends to reap a reward, if any there be, in the way of the difference between the price at which he sells it and the price at which he ultimately settles is monstrous. I think we should enact legislation forbidding men with tremendous capital at their disposal going upon the market places for grain and for wool and for cotton and selling, without let or hindrance, any amount that they see fit, with its inevitable effect upon the market; and I think that if no other Senator does it I shall introduce an amendment to the present cotton futures act looking toward some restraint on this unlimited onslaught on the market by those who do not intend to handle a pound of the article, but simply to manipulate the market at their own will.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I desire to say that I served on the committee with the Senator from South Carolina, and I want to concur in all that he says. He failed, however, to give the name of the committee that has done such splendid work, and I want to know if he will not put that in.

Mr. SMITH. I ask the privilege of inserting this report in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to insert in the Record a certain statement. Is there objection? There being none, the statement will be inserted in the Record.

The matter referred to is as follows:

The result of the efforts of the investigation of Mr. Hoover's cotton committee is to make several important changes in the figures of the report in dispute, namely, that of August 18, 1923. The leading item of contention was 579,504 bales which appeared in that report under the head of "To balance distribution." In the revised report of the committee this item shows as 355,868 bales, with the following explanation:

"It is impossible to determine just how much of this may be due to further duplication in mill and warehouse stocks or to the understatement of stocks and carry over at the beginning of the year. The committee recommends that in future statements of the Census Bureau no attempts be made to balance the figures of supply and distribution. The Census Bureau should issue figures which are the result of enumerations, avoiding estimates."

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25, 1924.

HON. HERBERT HOOVER,

Secretary of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Sir: In calling into existence the committee which signs this report you outlined its purposes, as follows:

"A contention has arisen over the methods of the Census Bureau in cotton statistics and also over the accuracy of a cotton statement issued last August. There is also a question as to whether the bureau has sufficient authority to secure adequate information on the subject. With a view to having independent advice on the entire matter I have arranged with the Senators from the cotton States that a committee should be appointed of leading statisticians on commerce to examine into the whole matter."

The work of the committee therefore falls under these heads:

- (1) To study "the methods of the Census Bureau in cotton statistics."
- (2) To determine "the accuracy of a cotton statement issued last August." The figures of this report are as follows:

SUPPLY.		Bales.
Aggregate		13,610,218
Stocks Aug. 1, 1922, total		2,831,553
In consuming establishments, total	1,218,388
In cotton-growing States	531,312
In all other States	687,076
In public storage and at compresses, total	1,488,165
In cotton-growing States	1,123,101
In all other States	365,064
Elsewhere (estimated)	125,000
Ginnings		9,720,308
Imported Aug. 1 to July 31, 1923		469,954
To balance distribution		579,504
DISTRIBUTION.
Aggregate		13,610,218
Consumed Aug. 1, 1922, to July 31, 1923, total		6,664,710
In cotton-growing States	4,248,525
In all other States	2,416,185
Exported Aug. 1, 1922, to July 31, 1923		4,822,589
Burned		35,000
Stocks July 31, 1923, total		2,087,919
In consuming establishments, total	1,089,230
In cotton-growing States	532,203
In all other States	557,027
In public storage and at compresses, total	938,689
In cotton-growing States	752,888
In all other States	185,801
Elsewhere (estimated)	60,000

- (3) To determine "whether the bureau has sufficient authority to secure adequate information on the subject."

- (4) To make recommendations for improving the methods of collecting and presenting cotton statistics by the Bureau of the Census.

Your committee has given consideration to these matters in the order thus indicated.

I. METHOD.

The Bureau of the Census under authority of an act of Congress approved July 22, 1912, obtains from ginneries, manufacturers, and warehousemen information on the supply and distribution of cotton. It also obtains through the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce records of imports and exports. From these sources the statement of the supply and distribution is prepared. The various items under the heading of "Supply" are obtained in part through the agency of employees of the bureau and statements by the ginneries and warehousemen. On the other hand, the figures under "Distribution" are obtained through correspondence without the authority either to verify statistics furnished to employees of the bureau or to make actual counts of the cotton in storage places. As a result, the opportunities for duplication and other errors in the statistics of distribution are greater than in the statistics of supply.

It has been the custom of the Bureau of the Census at the close of each cotton year to present in a single statement the figures of supply and of distribution. In view of the different methods employed in obtaining the two sets of figures it is not at all surprising that there should be marked discrepancies between them. Each year a difference has appeared and on a few occasions it has been significant. In these discrepancies we have found no evidence of any willful misstatement of figures by any of the informants or by the employees of the bureau. It has been the custom of the Bureau of the Census in making its annual statement to attempt, unfortunately, as we think, to balance the figures for supply and those for distribution by adding the requisite number of bales to the supply. The committee has found no instructions to this effect in any act of Congress and doubts the wisdom of continuing the practice. It is in this way that the disputed figure, 579,405 bales, in the report of August 18, 1923, had its origin.

II. ACCURACY.

Representatives of the committee have made an exhaustive study of the data at the bureau and in the field as the time available would permit and have sought to verify these data through conferences with representative cotton statisticians, holders of cotton stocks, manufacturers, and warehousemen. From these investigations it is impossible for the committee to state to what extent duplications entered into the report of last August, but after analyzing it the committee has agreed upon the following corrections which later it has entered in this report.

(1) Cotton taken from the original bales as samples by buyers; cotton picked from bales damaged by weather or fire; and cotton from press sweepings, grouped together in the trade as "city crops," are estimated by the committee as at least 125,000 bales. While this would not increase the number of pounds it does increase the number of bales, and should therefore appear on that side of the statement.

(2) According to the annual report of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, supported by other data, Mexican cotton to the amount of approximately 45,000 bales entered the country without appearing as imports. These bales should also be added to the supply.

(3) According to a statement from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, supported by other data, American cotton to the amount of 33,708 bales exported during the year was brought back into the country. This was reported in the exports but not in the imports, and should therefore be deducted from the figures of distribution.

(4) The report of the census was not supposed to include statistics of linter cotton; that is, the short fiber secured from reginning cottonseed. Evidence has been discovered, however, that 15,000 bales of such linters which had been bleached were exported as lint cotton. These 15,000 bales should likewise be deducted from the figures of distribution.

(5) Investigation of certain storages showed duplications of mill and warehouse stocks to a degree which, if applied to other storages, would amount to not less than 25,000 bales. These should be deducted from the figures of distribution.

(6) Foreign cotton to the amount of 20,171 bales which had appeared in the figures of imports was reexported without appearing in the figures of exports. This cotton should be subtracted from the supply.

There is one other item of adjustment of which the committee was cognizant, namely, the ginnings in southern Texas prior to August 1, 1922 and 1923, but for various reasons thought it best not to include it. The committee has been convinced that the ginnings up to August 1, 1923, were in excess of those to the corresponding date in 1922, but because of the lack of data for 1922 it is impossible to definitely determine this adjustment. For this reason the committee has preferred not to deal with this feature, especially as Congress has provided for an additional report of ginnings in the future prior to August 1, thus enabling the treatment of a statistical composite year in the future that will include ginnings for the 12-month period ending with July 31.

The effect of these additions to and subtractions from supply and subtractions from distribution is shown in the following revision of the figures of August, 1923:

Revised statement of supply and distribution of cotton, exclusive of linters, in the United States for the 12 months ending July 31, 1923.

SUPPLY.		Bales.
Stocks, Aug. 1, 1922, total.....		2,831,553
Ginnings, crop of 1922.....		9,729,396
City crop, rebaled samples, pickings, press sweepings, etc. (estimated).....		125,000
Mexican cotton, not included in imports.....		45,000
Imports, Aug. 1, 1922, to July 31, 1923.....		469,954
Total.....		13,200,813
LESS.
Reexports of foreign cotton.....		20,171
Aggregate supply.....		13,180,642
DISTRIBUTION.
Consumption, Aug. 1, 1922, to July 31, 1923.....		6,664,710
Exported.....		4,822,589
Burned.....		35,000
Stocks at end of year, total.....		2,087,919
Total.....		13,610,218
LESS.
Reimports of domestic cotton.....	33,708
Correction for bleached linters exported.....	15,000
Duplication in reports of mills and warehouses.....	25,000
Total reduction.....		73,708
Total distribution less reduction.....		13,536,510
Excess of reported distribution over reported supply.....		355,868

The foregoing revised statement shows that the committee has been able to make material corrections in the August figures, but that a difference of 355,868 bales, about three-fifths of the original difference of 579,504 bales, remains unexplained. It is impossible to determine just how much of this may be due to the underestimate of stocks and carry over at the beginning of the year or to further duplication in mill and warehouse stocks. The important point is not to bring this discrepancy between the figures of supply and distribution into relief. The committee, therefore, recommends that in future statements of the Census Bureau no attempts be made to balance the figures of supply and distribution. The Census Bureau should issue figures which are the result of enumerations, avoiding estimates.

III. AUTHORITY.

The committee agrees that regarding supply the Bureau of the Census now has sufficient authority to secure adequate information. The committee does not believe that the bureau has sufficient authority for the collection of information on distribution. The present law does not give employees of the Bureau of the Census the right to examine books or other papers or to make an actual count of the cotton in storage places. The committee is of the opinion that such authority should be given.

IV. RECOMMENDATIONS.

In addition to the above, the committee submits the following recommendations:

(1) That an additional report to show the quantity of cotton ginned prior to August 1 be introduced as provided in a bill now pending.

(2) That in sections of the country where the entire crop has not been ginned by March 1 another ginning report be made for April 1 to ascertain the total amount of the crop.

(3) That plans be developed to enumerate the cotton baled from samples and in pickeries, the so-called "city crops."

(4) That the department be urged to take action to secure an enumeration of the cotton now brought in from Mexico, but not appearing in the imports statistics.

(5) That the bureau plan to collect statistics of cotton consumption and of cotton held in storage at various points in such manner as to diminish the danger of overstatement or understatement of the supply. The committee believes that this end can be secured only by substituting collection through paid agents in place of the present method of collection by correspondence.

(6) Reports on cotton statistics are now issued by two bureaus in the Department of Commerce, and by one in the Department of Agriculture. They are based in part on estimates and in part on enumerations, and the difference between them sometimes leads to serious confusion. These reports should, if possible, be coordinated under a committee or other harmonizing agency.

Respectfully submitted,

B. W. KILGORE,
L. I. DUBLIN,
W. S. ROSSITER,
W. F. WILCOX,
Committee.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I only want to say further that Doctor Rossiter and Doctor Wilcox, who served on this committee, had many years' experience in the Census Bureau, and their report will have more weight than would reports from people who did not understand the matter. I want to say also that Secretary Hoover was sympathetic with our committee, as the Senator from South Carolina has said, and has cooperated with us in a spirit that we appreciated very much.

EXCLUSION OF ALIENS INELIGIBLE TO CITIZENSHIP.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, there is pending in the House bill 7995, for the purpose of controlling or restricting immigration into our country. There is also pending in the Senate an immigration bill. We of the West, particularly of California and the other Pacific Coast States, have fixed and unalterable convictions as to certain features of this proposed legislation. We are unalterably opposed to the further immigration of aliens ineligible to citizenship. I have been furnished with a statement prepared by Mr. V. S. McClatchy, of California, setting forth the views of the California delegation, which, I think I may say, are the views of many of the delegations of the West—a statement which states that it embodies the deliberate views of the American Federation of Labor, the American Legion, the National Grange, and other State and national organizations. I ask to have this statement printed in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). Is there objection to the inclusion in the Record of the matter referred to by the Senator from California? The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 19, 1924.

THE EXCLUSION OF ALIENS INELIGIBLE TO CITIZENSHIP.

The exclusion as permanent residents in future of all aliens ineligible to citizenship, as provided in the House immigration bill, was the subject of a conference held by the California congressional delegation with ex-United States Senator J. D. Phelan of that State and V. S. McClatchy, of Sacramento, who presented the matter last week to the Senate Immigration Committee on behalf of four California organizations, the American Legion, State Federation of Labor, State Grange, and Native Sons of the Golden West, State Attorney General Webb appearing at the same time for the State.

It was decided unanimously that the passage of the measure should be pressed as representing, not only the overwhelming sentiment of the Pacific and Western States but also the judgment of those throughout the Union who had given consideration to the matter, as evidenced by the resolutions unanimously passed last year in national convention by such widely different organizations as the American Legion, American Federation of Labor, and National Grange.

The following statement was ordered issued:

"Exclusion of all aliens ineligible to citizenship offers a logical, simple, practical, and effective solution of the entire Asiatic immigration problem. It follows the Federal law, which, for 134 years, has made all the yellow and brown races ineligible to citizenship because of unassimilability and the menace they would offer if established here. Certainly, if immigration is to be restricted, we should commence with that element which is barred from citizenship.

"That the demand for such legislation is general is shown by the resolutions in favor thereof, unanimously passed last year in national convention after lengthy committee investigation by such widely different organizations as the American Legion, the American Federation of Labor, and the National Grange.

"Japan has protested against such legislation on the grounds of discrimination, and she is the only nation which has protested. The measure is not discriminatory against Japan, for it applies to half the population of the globe, and the Japanese constitute not more than 7 or 8 per cent of those affected. It should be remembered, too, that Japan, in protection of her own people, wisely excludes Chinese and Koreans, thus discriminating against people of her own color.

"A demand has been made on Japan's behalf that her immigration to this country be regulated by a continuance of the present gentlemen's agreement, or by a treaty.

"Our immigration from Japan should be regulated, as is our immigration from all other countries, by act of Congress and enforced by our own department officials. Immigration is a domestic question. Treaties and international agreements may properly care for matters of commerce and navigation.

"In any case the gentlemen's agreement should be canceled, since it surrenders to Japan the sovereign right of determining how many and what particular immigrants shall come into this country from Japan. Under the present agreement the immigration officials at ports of entry, under instructions from Washington, must admit any Japanese who presents a passport from Japan unless he have contagious disease.

"The gentlemen's agreement should be canceled for the further reason that it has signally failed to accomplish the specific purpose for which President Roosevelt explains it was made, to wit: To prevent an increase in continental United States of unassimilable Japanese population with its menace in economic competition and attendant provocation of racial strife.

"Therefore, under no consideration should Japanese immigration continue under the gentlemen's agreement, or a modification thereof, or under another similar agreement, or even under the treaty of 1911, of which the gentlemen's agreement is made a part in effect by the note attached thereto and signed by the Japanese ambassador.

"Since future immigration from Japan should not be regulated by agreement or treaty, it becomes unnecessary to treat with Japan as to terms of agreement or treaty in the matter. It should be sufficient to give courteous notice under the six-months' clause of cancellation of the treaty of 1911, so far as it may affect immigration, and provide that the measure for exclusion of aliens ineligible to citizenship shall become operative at the end of such six months.

"There would be no discourtesy to Japan in enacting a measure excluding aliens ineligible to citizenship under the plan suggested, because it was specifically agreed by Japan that the United States should enact an exclusion law directed against Japanese solely if she failed under operation of her passport system under the agreement to accomplish the purpose sought.

"We are unalterably opposed to placing Japan under the quota, or to any compromise which would permit the settlement in this country of aliens ineligible to citizenship, for the following reasons:

"(a) It would be an abandonment of the principle that aliens unfitted for citizenship should not be permitted to enter this country and establish independent and unassimilable communities.

"(b) To place Japan under the quota would concede at once her demand for racial equality and treatment of her nationals on the same basis as Europeans, a demand already refused in the World Peace Conference. It would give her foundation for further pressing her other demand for naturalization of her nationals in opposition to our law, now in force 134 years.

"(c) To place Japanese under the quota would be to discriminate in their favor as compared with all other races ineligible to citizenship, all of which, and particularly the Chinese, would have just cause for complaint. If we aim to please Japan without unfair discrimination to others, we must open our gates under the quota plan to all aliens ineligible to citizenship. Such a policy would constitute an unthinkable abandonment of a great principle, the enforcement of which is necessary for protection of the Nation and of the white race on this continent.

"(d) The quota plan as applied to Asiatics would be a temporary makeshift, not only dangerous in principle but subject at any time to change that might prove disastrous in results.

"For instance, if provision be made for wives outside the quota, this country could be flooded with picture brides, or kankodan brides, for the 40,000 or more adult bachelor Japanese in continental United States.

"If the census of 1910 be adopted as basis, instead of 1890, 8,000 Japanese could come in annually, while under the 1920 census the admissions would increase to 4,400, and every one of the number could be, and most of them probably would be, brides destined to raise an average family of five each.

"Japan, notwithstanding the plain intent of the gentlemen's agreement, has been able to secure a measure of peaceful penetration for her nationals under the Stars and Stripes not permitted her in any other English-speaking country. When Great Britain, the ally of Japan, made a treaty with her giving her nationals free access to and citizenship in all her dominions, all the dominions except Canada took exception thereto and passed exclusion laws which have been rigidly enforced since. The Canadian Parliament, by an overwhelming majority, has requested the Government to secure for Canada also exclusion of all oriental immigration. Japan has never protested this action on the part of any of the dominions of her ally."

These facts and deductions seem to furnish ample justification for the demand that Congress should provide now for exclusion hereafter, as permanent residents, of all aliens ineligible to citizenship, making the usual exception for tourists, students, merchants, etc.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Also, Mr. President, I hold in my hand a letter addressed to me by the Chamber of Commerce of Long Beach, Calif., accompanied by a report which that chamber of commerce furnished the Las Vegas and San Miguel Chambers of Commerce upon this general subject of immigration, with special reference to the exclusion of aliens ineligible to citizenship. I similarly ask that the letter and the report be incorporated in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from California? There being none, the matter referred to will be inserted in the Record.

The matter referred to is as follows:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
LONG BEACH, CALIF., March 8, 1924.

Senator SAMUEL M. SHORTRIDGE,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR SHORTRIDGE: Herewith is copy of report of special committee appointed by the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce regarding the Japanese situation as requested by the Las Vegas-San Miguel Chamber of Commerce.

The directors of our chamber of commerce, believing that our committee had given thorough study to this situation and had rendered such an excellent report, same should be submitted to you for your information.

From correspondence received by our organization from Eastern States, particularly Florida, New Mexico, and some of the Southern States where they have been having trouble with scarcity of labor, it is apparent that these States are giving some consideration to either inviting Japanese to come to their communities, or may tolerate Japanese colonizations in their neighborhoods, and we are somewhat fearful that this menace may spread throughout our country.

For the reasons stated above and because we believe you will be pleased to have the result of our committee's study of this situation, we are pleased to furnish you with a copy of their report.

Very truly yours,

LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
HARBERT R. FAY, Executive Secretary.

LONG BEACH, CALIF., March 5, 1924.

The BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE
LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
Long Beach, Calif.

GENTLEMEN: Your committee, consisting of Oscar P. Bell, Clyde Doyle, B. B. Stakeholder, and R. W. Robinson, appointed to make investigation re the communication from the Las Vegas-San Miguel Chamber of Commerce, begs to report as follows:

We have studied the Japanese situation in a fair and impartial manner, entirely free from any prejudice or animus. Our review of collateral literature on the subject leads us to enumerate the following facts which yield themselves to the conclusions which we herewith present to you:

First. The Japanese people are a frugal, industrious, and thorough class of people; in the main they are ambitious and keen—as a rule well trained in the lines of activity they seek to enter. They always are persistent and thus generally successful in their endeavors.

Second. They are not eligible to citizenship.

Third. They are practicing price manipulation.

Fourth. They maintain language schools (Japanese).

Fifth. They boycott their neighbors.

Sixth. They are not permitted to own or lease land in California.

Seventh. They live on a scale that is under the margin for self-respecting Americans to live.

Eighth. They undercut wage scales in agricultural and horticultural lines.

Ninth. They compel their women to work at heavy manual labor, together with their men.

Tenth. They register their American-born children in Tokyo as Japanese subjects.

Eleventh. "Picture brides" that are imported to this country are returned to Japan and others sent to take their places in case they prove to be barren.

Twelfth. Until the passage of the California "alien land law" they practiced agricultural sabotage on such ranches as they desired to purchase at a price below its real value, and when the desired land was "junked" would buy it in the name of an American-born child and then restore it to its former fertility.

Our conclusions from the above facts are:

They are a menace to our country socially, because—

First. They can not become citizens.

Second. Intermarriage with them is undesirable.

Third. Their women do not establish and maintain American homes.

Fourth. They maintain an oriental social system in their colonies.

They are a problem to our country economically, because—

First. They practice the boycott.

Second. They practice price manipulation.

Third. They destroy the economic balance.

Fourth. They practice sabotage.

Fifth. They maintain "close corporation" Japanese commercial organizations.

They are a hazard to our country politically, because—

First. They maintain a Japanese military standing.

Second. They can not function as citizens.

Third. They can not own or lease land (in California).

Fourth. They register American-born children as Japanese subjects.

Fifth. They maintain an oriental civic life within their colonies.

These things we believe indicate clearly the fact that the presence of these people in considerable numbers in any one place constitutes a positive un-American liability and not an asset.

Thanking you for the confidence you have shown in us in intrusting this investigation to us, and trusting the above report will be of assistance to you in responding to the inquiry, we are,

Very truly yours,

O. P. BELL.

B. B. STAKEHOLDER.

R. W. ROBINSON.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I submit a conference report on the Interior Department appropriation bill.

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The principal clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Cameron	Elkins	Harrell
Ashurst	Copper	Ferris	Harris
Bayard	Caraway	Foss	Heflin
Borah	Copeland	Fletcher	Howell
Brandageo	Cousens	Frazier	Jones, Wash.
Brookhart	Curtis	George	Kendrick
Broussard	Dale	Glass	King
Bruce	Dial	Goulding	Ladd
Bursum	Edwards	Hale	Lodge

McKellar
McKinley
McNary
Mayfield
Moses
Neely
Oddie

Overman
Pepper
Pittman
Ralston
Ransdell
Reed, Pa.
Robinson

Sheppard
Shields
Shortridge
Smith
Smoot
Spencer
Stanfield

Stephens
Underwood
Wadsworth
Walsh, Mass.
Walsh, Mont.
Weller
Willis

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside that I may submit the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. SMOOT submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5078) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17 and 19.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 15, 18, and 39, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$150,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following: "$400,000, of which amount $245,000 shall be used for drainage purposes, but only after execution by the Truckee-Carson Irrigation district of an appropriate reimbursement contract satisfactory in form to the Secretary of the Interior, and after confirmation of such contract by decree of a court of competent jurisdiction and final decision on all appeals from such decree"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree on the amendment of the Senate numbered 47.

REED SMOOT,
CHARLES CURTIS,
WM. J. HARRIS,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

LOUIS C. CHAMTON,
FRANK MURPHY,
C. D. CARTER,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senate that this is a partial report. The conferees have agreed upon every item with the exception of the amendment of the Senate to the amendment of the House to Senate amendment No. 47, known as the Bright Angel Trail amendment. I move that the conference report be accepted as to the items on which the conferees have agreed.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President—

Mr. ROBINSON. When may we expect a complete agreement on this appropriation bill and the elimination of the age-long controversy respecting the Bright Angel Trail?

Mr. SMOOT. Just as soon as this report has been agreed to I shall move that the Senate insist further upon its action on the amendment of the House to Senate amendment No. 47, known as the Bright Angel Trail amendment.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the explanation of the Senator from Utah is quite satisfactory and covers the point I was about to raise.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT. I move that the Senate further insist upon its amendment to the amendment of the House to Senate amendment No. 47, that we ask a further conference with the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference.

The motion was agreed to, and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. SMOOT, Mr. CURTIS, and Mr. HARRIS conferees on the part of the Senate.

POLICY OF WILSON ADMINISTRATION AS TO LEASING OIL LANDS.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask to have inserted in the Record the statement which I hold in my hand, dated March 22, 1924, with reference to the policy of the Wilson administration as to the leasing of oil lands. It has been approved by the Hon. John Barton Payne, and throws very considerable light upon that subject, which has been discussed and considered here to a very considerable extent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be published in the Record, as follows:

MARCH 22, 1924.

(The following authoritative statement, by the Democratic National Committee, which has been read and approved by John Barton Payne, Secretary of the Interior during the second administration of President Wilson, is an answer to the contention of Republicans that Secretaries Denby and Fall were following the Democratic policy and practice when they leased the naval oil reserves in Wyoming and California to private individuals and interests. This statement gives also in summary the history of the disposition of certain claims in these reserves and the action taken by Secretary Payne with regard to application for leases during his administration of the Interior Department.)

The attempt to justify the secret leasing of all the naval reserves, the entire Teapot Dome and Elk Hills to Sinclair and Doheny by the specious and confusing statement that 150 leases were made by Secretary Payne outside the naval reserves, and that certain lands or wells were leased in a naval reserve during the Wilson administration, is like comparing the making of a back fire to prevent the spread of a prairie fire with the deliberate starting of an incendiary fire such as caused the destruction of Smyrna. What the Wilson administration did was to follow the national policy established by Presidents Taft and Wilson, and by the Congress when it passed the leasing law to protect and conserve the naval reserves—to keep the oil for the use of the Navy for some great emergency; while Secretaries Fall and Denby deliberately defied this national policy and secretly leased the reserves, thus destroying the reserves.

A simple statement of fact will make this plain.

Before the passage by Congress February 25, 1920, of the leasing act authorizing the leasing of Government-owned oil lands on a royalty basis the only law by which the public could take out oil was the old placer mining law, which allowed a person to make a mining location on 20 acres, or eight persons to club together and locate 160 acres, the same law which applied to gold or silver. If the claimant followed up his claim with diligence and brought in a producing well, he became the owner and entitled to a patent, and the Government received nothing.

The leasing act changed this policy, authorized the Secretary of the Interior to issue rules and regulations, to fix the royalty to be paid at not less than 12½ per cent of the oil taken out, and pursuant to such regulations to lease the public lands. Thus the Government received substantial royalty and retained ownership of the lands.

Before the passage of this leasing law two things had happened—

First. Many locations had been filed under the placer mining law by people who thus claimed title to the lands. To the extent that these claims were valid the claimants had to be recognized. This was true even inside the naval reserves where locations were made in good faith before the reserves were created.

Second. The Government established the national policy of setting aside oil lands for the use of the Navy for a future emergency, it being well known that our supply of commercial oil would in a few years be exhausted, thus—

Naval reserve No. 1, in California: The Elk Hills, containing some 32,000 acres, was created by President Taft September 2, 1912.

Naval reserve No. 2, also in California, was created by President Taft December 13, 1912, containing, roughly, 30,000 acres, but more than 20,000 acres of this was at the time privately owned and much of the remainder covered by mining locations.

Naval reserve No. 3: Teapot Dome, in Wyoming, was created by President Wilson April 30, 1915; this contained 9,481 acres; was all Government land.

Some claims under the old placer law had been filed on lands in these naval reserves before the reserves were created.

WHEN PAYNE BECAME SECRETARY.

This was the situation when John Barton Payne was appointed Secretary of the Interior February 23, 1920 (qualified March 15, 1920). The leasing law (in force February 25, 1920) made it the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to administer the law, i. e., to issue rules and regulations for prospecting and leasing, and to fix the royalty to be paid on lands outside the naval reserves, and to decide not only as to the validity of claims pending under the old law but where two or more persons had conflicting claims to decide between them. It was the policy of the Congress that lands outside the naval reserves should be leased, but that the naval reserves should not be leased unless a claimant under the old law came strictly under the terms of the leasing law.

REPUBLICAN SMOKE SCREEN.

The Republicans try to defend Secretaries Fall and Denby and attempt to make a smoke screen of the fact that Secretary Payne leased certain oil lands. They do not state what everyone should know, now fully brought out by the Senate committee, that Secretary Payne made no secret leases, that his door was wide open, everything was public, and the leasing law strictly followed and the policy of the Government upheld and maintained; that with the approval and support of President Wilson and Secretary of the Navy Daniels the naval reserves were fully protected, and, but for Secretaries Fall and Denby, would now be safe and intact.

A brief reference to the leasing law and the undisputed facts make this clear.

1. THE LAW AS TO LANDS NOT KNOWN TO CONTAIN OIL OUTSIDE NAVAL RESERVES.

Following the policy of Congress to develop and lease oil lands, the leasing act provided (sec. 13) that persons who desired to prospect for oil on lands not known to contain oil might obtain permits as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, under such necessary and proper rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to grant to any applicant qualified under this act a prospecting permit, which shall give the exclusive right, for a period not exceeding two years, to prospect for oil or gas upon not to exceed 2,500 acres of land wherein such deposits belong to the United States and are not within any known geological structure of producing oil or gas field upon condition that the permittee shall begin drilling operations within six months."

If the prospector found oil or gas, section 14 provided in terms that he should be entitled to a lease, as follows:

"That upon establishing to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that valuable deposits of oil or gas have been discovered within the limits of the land embraced in any permit, the permittee shall be entitled to a lease for one-fourth of the land embraced in the prospecting permit * * * for a term of 20 years upon a royalty of 5 per cent * * * and shall be entitled to a preference right to a lease for the remainder of the land in his prospecting permit at a royalty of not less than 12½ per cent * * * the amount of the royalty to be determined by competitive bidding or fixed by regulations prescribed by the Secretary."

And in section 16 it is provided—

"That no wells shall be drilled within 200 feet of any of the outer boundaries of the lands within the permit, unless adjoining lands belonging to private persons."

2. AS TO PUBLIC LANDS KNOWN TO CONTAIN OIL.

Section 17 of the leasing act provides:

"That all unappropriated deposits of oil or gas situated within the known geological structure of a producing oil or gas field and the unentered lands—lands not entered under the old law—containing the same, not subject to preferential lease, may be leased by the Secretary of the Interior to the highest responsible bidder by competitive bidding under general regulations to qualified applicants in areas not exceeding 640 acres * * * such leases to be conditioned upon the payment by the lessee of such bonus as may be accepted and of such royalty as may be fixed in the lease, which shall not be less than 12½ per cent in amount or value of the production and the payment of $1 per acre per annum.

"As to lands where locations had been made under the old placer law and the claimant was willing to compromise by accepting a lease under the leasing act, section 18 provided:

"That upon relinquishment to the United States * * * of all right, title, and interest claimed and possessed prior to July 2, 1910, and continuously since * * * under the preexisting placer mining law to any oil or gas bearing land upon which there has been drilled one or more oil or gas wells to discovery embraced in the Executive order of withdrawal issued (by President Taft) September 27, 1909, and not within any naval petroleum reserve, and upon payment as royalty * * * if in possession of such land, undisputed by any other claimant prior to July 1, 1919, shall be entitled to a lease thereon from the United States for a period of 20 years at a royalty of not less than 12½ per cent."

(Note.—From the foregoing section it is clear that as to lands not known to contain oil Congress desired to encourage prospecting and gave the successful prospector the absolute right to a lease, and as to lands known to contain oil, but outside the naval reserves, provided in terms for their leasing by the Secretary of the Interior by competitive bidding; and required that the rights of persons who in good faith had made locations under the old law should be protected, and gave them the right to come in and surrender their claims acquired under the old law and accept leases under the leasing act. For the Secretary of the Interior to have refused to carry out these provisions would have been an arbitrary violation of the law and would have made him subject to action by mandamus.)

B. AS TO LANDS WITHIN THE NAVAL RESERVES.

Section 18 provides also—

"That as to all like claims (under old placer law) situate within a naval petroleum reserve the producing wells thereon only shall be leased, together with an area of land sufficient for the operation thereof, upon the terms and payment of royalties for past and future production as herein provided for in the leasing of claims. No wells shall be drilled in the land subject to this provision within 600 feet of any such leased well without the consent of the lessee."

Then this provision as to the President—

"The authority of the President—must use his discretion."

The act continues:

"Provided, however, That the President may, in his discretion, lease the remainder of any part of any such claim upon which such wells have been drilled and in the event of such leasing said claimant or his successor shall have a preference right to such lease: And provided further, That he may permit the drilling of additional wells by the claimant or his successor within the limited area of 600 feet theretofore provided for upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe."

No claimant guilty of fraud shall have a lease.

NOTE.—From the above it is clear that where a claimant under the old placer law had located on lands within the naval reserve before the reserve was created, and had brought in a producing well, he was entitled as of right to a lease on his producing well. The Secretary of the Interior had no authority to refuse such a lease and had no authority to grant a lease for anything beyond the producing well with land adjacent only sufficient for its operation. The President, however, in his discretion had the right to lease to the claimant the remainder of his claim, or to permit the drilling of additional wells by the claimant within the 600 feet; this authority was vested in the President and denied to the Secretary.

Under section 18a, the President was also authorized to direct the compromise and settlement of any controversy as to lands withdrawn under the order of September 27, 1909, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon, to be carried out by an exchange or division of land or division of the proceeds.

Section 19 of the leasing act provides for the protection of persons who had made a bona fide claim and expended money, but not brought in a well. This, however, did not apply to lands within the naval reserves.

This sufficiently shows the provisions of the law and policy of the Government as embodied in the leasing act.

WHAT WAS DONE UNDER THE WILSON ADMINISTRATION.

The leasing act became effective on February 25, 1920. Prior to this time there had been filed and were pending an enormous volume of claims for locations under the old placer law on lands both within and without the naval reserves, and many suits were pending. Rules and regulations, with a fixed scale of royalties providing for the carrying out of the law, were promptly issued under section 13, and leases were issued under sections 14, 17, and 18. The legal rights of claimants were recognized, and such was the care under which the law was executed that not a single public criticism resulted, notwithstanding the tremendous volume of work imposed upon the Secretary.

NOW AS TO THE NAVAL RESERVES.

As to naval reserve No. 1 not a single claim was allowed, nor a single lease made. It was left intact.

The contrast between the two administrations, aside from the general policy, is shown by the record as to section 33 in this reserve. The title to this 640 acres passed to the State of California with the distinct provision that it contained no minerals. When it was found to contain mineral—oil is mineral—and became part of the naval reserve the question was whether the title still belonged to the United States. Meantime the Standard Oil Co. had acquired the right of the State of California to the major portion of the section, and the Doheny interests the remainder, and were in possession. In February, 1921, Secretary Payne gave all parties in interest a public hearing, and decided that the title had not passed to the State of California, but remained in the United States; that the Standard Oil Co. and the Doheny interests acquired no title and were wrongly in possession; and Secretary Payne directed the Land Office to make entry accordingly, and made formal written request to the Department of Justice that proceedings be instituted in the courts, and to recover for the United States the land and oil taken out.

After Secretary Fall came in he reversed this action, withdrew the request made by Secretary Payne to the Department of Justice to proceed against the oil companies, and permitted them to remain in possession.

Due to the Senate investigation, counsel has recently been appointed to sue the oil companies to recover this land, and to do now what Secretary Payne directed be done in February, 1921.

This naval reserve No. 1 was therefore left intact.

As to naval reserve No. 2: In this reserve it was found that claimants had brought in about 50 producing wells. These, under the mandatory provisions of the leasing act, were leased to the claimants. With the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy and the President, five offset wells were leased, i. e., where it was manifest that private wells had been drilled so near the line of the reserve as to drain the Government oil from the reserve, a well was drilled just within the reserve on a 25 per cent royalty basis, so that the Government would receive the royalty and not permit the private interest to take the oil out without payment of royalty. Another claimant for 540 acres in section 23 was compromised with and given lease on 120 acres.

With these exceptions, naval reserve No. 2 was left intact.

In this reserve the Honolulu Oil Co. claimed title to 17 quarter sections—some 2,000 acres—and applied for a patent. Secretary Payne after a public hearing decided the claim invalid and the company not entitled to a patent and denied the same. The only criticism directed against the Wilson administration in the oil matter grew out of this Honolulu decision, and that, of course, came from the oil company and its friends.

As to naval reserve No. 3, the Teapot Dome, Wyo.: All of the claims on this reserve were rejected and no leases made. Among other claimants who filed against this reserve was John C. Shaffer, who testified before the Senate committee; he said his claim was later recognized by Secretary Fall, and he was paid some $92,000 by Sinclair.

The Wilson administration left reserve No. 3 intact.

ACTION OF REPUBLICAN ADMINISTRATION—STRIKING CONTRAST.

Within less than three months after the close of the Wilson administration upon the recommendation of Secretaries Fall and Denby, President Harding issued an Executive order purporting to transfer all of the powers and discretion the law imposed upon the President under the leasing act and the powers and discretion conferred upon the Secretary of the Navy by the act passed June 4, 1920, to Secretary Fall. How Secretary Fall used this power in disposing of the naval reserves is well known. Whether this Executive order has any validity will be decided by the courts.

As to naval reserve No. 1: Secretary Fall reversed the decision of Secretary Payne as to section 33, and secretly gave that to the Standard Oil Co. and to Doheny, and secretly leased all of the remainder of reserve No. 1 to Mr. Doheny's companies.

In naval reserve No. 2, where Secretary Payne had leased only the producing wells, Secretary Fall leased claimants their entire claims, and then leased the remainder of the reserve; and as to the 17 quarter sections claimed by the Honolulu Oil Co., which Secretary Payne had held invalid, Secretary Fall reversed to the extent of making the company a lease for the entire 2,000 acres.

As to naval reserve No. 3, which the Wilson administration had left intact, Secretary Fall secretly leased the entire reserve to the Sinclair interests.

REPUBLICAN DEFENSE.

Secretaries Fall and Denby protest that their action was in the public interest. The fallacy of this claim is conclusively shown:

(a) The national policy established by the Taft and Wilson administrations and approved by the Congress was reversed secretly by them without opportunity for public discussion or consideration.

(b) While the negotiations for naval reserve No. 1 were pending with Mr. Doheny, he sent Mr. Fall $100,000 in currency in a satchel delivered to Fall by Doheny's son. Sinclair sent to Mr. Fall $25,000 in Government bonds. What other secret considerations passed have not yet been disclosed.

(c) By action of a unanimous Senate (except Senator ELKINS) the United States Government has recently employed Messrs. Pomerehne, Roberts, and Knight as special counsel to undo the work of Messrs. Fall and Denby. Suits by the United States against the oil companies in possession of reserves Nos. 1 and 3 have been brought in the courts of the United States, charging fraud and unlawful acts, and preliminary injunctions restraining the operation of the wells have been granted, and receivers have been appointed.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 4) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the adoption of amendments thereto.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART] to the amendment of the committee.

RELIEF OF SETTLERS ON IRRIGATION PROJECTS.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if the Senator from New York will indulge me for a few moments, I want to call attention to a matter which is of particular concern to the West and the western Senators. It relates to the question of relief for the settlers upon irrigation projects.

When we came here last fall it seemed to be understood upon all sides that some relief was absolutely necessary for the settlers upon these projects. The economic conditions which have overtaken agriculture have been more accentuated with the settlers upon irrigation projects than with other farmers, for the simple reason that while they have had to carry what farmers generally have to carry and to meet the economic situation which they have generally had to meet, in addition, they have had to meet their construction and maintenance charges. The result has been that a large number of them are unable to meet the situation, and the question arose as to how their condition could be relieved.

A number of measures were introduced for relief, I introducing some myself; but they have been retained in the committees, as I understand, waiting upon the report of what is known as the fact-finding commission. I do not criticize the committee for waiting for that report up to the present time, but I do think that if we are going to have relief for these settlers we will have to proceed without waiting longer upon this fact-finding commission. That is what I now desire to urge.

I have a number of letters from different projects of late, and I read a single paragraph from one received this morning which states the whole situation in a very brief way:

Unless relief is granted soon it will be too late for a great many farmers on these projects. They are hanging on in the hope that such relief will be granted that they can go ahead, or will feel justified in going ahead, in the hope of pulling through and saving their property. Delay in this matter to a great many means a denial of relief. I can not tell you how very serious, how very bad, the conditions are. We are hoping that something will be done within the near future to give us an assurance of what we can depend upon for the coming season.

Now, Mr. President, I have not complained, as I said, of the fact-finding commission failing to report. I presume they are at work. I presume, of course, that they are making progress as rapidly as they can. But I understand that their task, as it has either been imposed upon them or as they have assumed it, involves not only the question now of immediate relief upon these projects but the entire subject matter of reclamation and the redrafting and reconstructing of the whole reclamation law and the reclamation program. Necessarily we can not wait upon any such program as that being enacted at this session if the immediate relief which is necessary is to be had.

I have been informed that the fact-finding commission might report some time about the 10th of April, but further information comes to me now that it may be the middle of April or the first of May. Certainly there will be no opportunity to legislate upon the subject after the report comes in, if it is not due until the middle of April or first of May. I want to suggest, therefore, to those who are deeply interested in the subject that we proceed through the committees to the consideration of the bills which are now before the committees and secure a report upon some measures which will give relief. The measure which I introduced at the first of the session may or may not be the proper measure for relief. I think it is. At any rate, it is perfectly apparent that we ought to proceed to the consideration of it or some better measure without waiting longer upon the fact-finding commission. I do not feel disposed at this time to present the facts and figures showing the condition of settlers upon the projects. Perhaps that would be more relevant and more effectual when the bill is reported out; but they are serious enough, as everyone knows who is connected with the Western States.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I would like to ask the able Senator from Idaho to which bill he refers?

Mr. BORAH. The bill providing for an extension of 20 years, making the total time 40 years. There has been a bill passed by the Senate which is now in the House and seems to have very hard sledding there, and I doubt very much if it passes the House, although I am only drawing that inference from general information and not from any specific knowledge as to what the situation is. But that bill relates only to the power of the Secretary of the Interior to review the conditions of particular individuals or particular projects and, in my opinion, is not sufficient in and of itself. The bill to which I refer is one extending the time, which, of course, in my opinion, will have to be accompanied by a bill suspending payment for the next three or four years. We must either do this or the Government is going to have back on its hands a large proportion of the land. On any number of projects under present conditions many of the settlers will not be able to hold their lands.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President—

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. I desire to inform the Senator from Idaho that a bill was passed similar to the one he introduced, which was known as the Phipps bill.

Mr. BORAH. No. The one I introduced is entirely different from the Phipps bill. The Phipps bill simply gives the Secretary authority to extend time of payments in particular cases, possibly as to particular projects. The bill I am now urging extends the payments, spreads the payments over 40 years. The Phipps bill and the bill I introduced are both necessary, absolutely necessary.

Mr. McNARY. I want to observe again that while it is true that the construction charges will have to be written off on many of the projects that are the subject of inquiry now by the fact-finding commission, and this body could not act, nor could the Secretary of the Interior, with the information now in our possession.

Mr. BORAH. The bill to which I have referred is one extending the payments over 40 years instead of 20 years, and is a bill which in my opinion depends upon nothing that the fact-finding commission is purporting to do. It is a bill which would be essential under any conditions. I am quite well satisfied that if we wait upon the fact-finding commission we will not get any relief upon the projects this year.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. I am in entire accord with the Senator from Idaho. I do not disapprove of the work being done by the fact-finding commission. I think it is a work that should be done. But it is perfectly evident that unless we can start legislation in this body within the next week or two we shall not be able to get it through both branches of the Congress before we adjourn. I am in accord with the bill which the Senator from Idaho has introduced. I would like to have it placed upon the calendar so the Senate might act upon it one way or the other. I also agree that nothing the fact finding commission could report would change my view of the situation.

There has been a great deal of indiscriminate and thoughtless criticism of the results of the reclamation work. Those criticisms fail to announce that in the great majority of cases the result was due to the mistakes of the Government agents and that the homesteaders and settlers had suffered severely by the unintentional misrepresentation of agents of the Reclamation Service. They have brought about a condition that is deplorable. They have brought about a condition that makes impossible the carrying out of the original policy under the Newlands Act. It is no fault of the homesteaders. It was on account of no defect in the land nor the farming conditions. In nearly all the instances it was on account of the mistakes and inefficiency of the department, and when a wrong has occurred in that way which necessitates a delay in payment, the Government should stand the consequences. That is about all I can see in it.

Mr. BORAH. I find myself in accord with the views of the Senator.

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Moses in the chair). Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the junior Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. ODDIE. As I understand it, there is an item of something like $7,000,000 available now for the completion of existing projects. I should like to have the opinion of the Senator from Idaho as to whether we should not get this money in action right now and do something to have the department bring about a completion of the reclamation projects. Failure to complete the projects is causing a great deal of suffering and misery and loss to people in the Western States. I know of a number of projects that could be completed and can see no reason why they should not be promptly completed. Should we not take action now before the fact-finding commission has completed its report? In my opinion we should get busy right now.

Mr. BORAH. Then we are in accord. The Senator's suggestion, however, relates to a feature of the matter which I am not discussing, but I am not inimical to it at all nor unfriendly to the suggestion which he has made. If a measure is to be presented to the Senate covering the particular feature of the matter to which the Senator has referred, I shall be glad to consider it in a friendly attitude. But the matter with which I am now dealing is one of extending the time or alleviating the situation with reference to present payments to the people who are now upon the farms, people who have been there for years and suffered and sacrificed to a marked extent and are now facing an economic situation from which they will have to be relieved if they are to retain their farms. That situation can be relieved without the building up of bureaus, without the building up of any machinery, without going to the expense of creating any commission. It is a very simple proposition so far as the action of the Government is concerned. It involves no new departure upon the part of the Government and no new principle. It is simply the position of a creditor relieving a situation by voluntary act until the debtor is in a position where he can respond.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I am not conversant with the provisions of the Senator's bill, otherwise I perhaps would not propound this inquiry. I assume from what the Senator from Idaho said that he wants to defer payment until the water users can accumulate sufficient profit to meet the demands of the Government. The theory upon which the fact-finding commission is working is that there shall be a cancellation, a charging off, of excessive charges laid against the water users up to the point of their ability to pay. That is a different proposition from the one advocated by the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Exactly.

Mr. McNARY. In either case it would require legislation. We can not ascertain those facts until we have some commission constituted, such as the one now known as the advisory committee, which shall report to the Congress or to the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. BORAH. I am not interested in the question now of how much they are going to charge off. That is immaterial to me as I view it. I am interested in the proposition of having the time extended for the payments regardless of the fact that they are charging off in certain specific instances, because I think the situation is such that we will have to have that relief anyway. Besides, as the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] said, I know the conditions with reference to these projects. I think I know them quite as well as I will know them after I read the report of the fact-finding commission. I say that with utmost respect for the commission. But being possessed of ordinary intelligence and a fair capacity to observe, and having been upon the projects myself and thoroughly examined them, I am perfectly informed now as to what I want. I do not need to wait on the fact-finding commission.

Here is the situation as stated by the senior Senator from Nevada: Men went on those projects in some instances where, for instance, the estimated cost was $25 to $30 per acre. They were supposed to pay out in 20 years. As it turned out, the cost increased to as high as $75 or $80 an acre. It is a matter of common equity, of common justice, to extend the time of payment in correspondence with the increased indebtedness which they have to meet. They simply can not meet the expenses and expenditures upon the basis upon which they were supposed to meet them in the first place, due to the fact very largely that the cost has doubled and trebled in many instances above that which was anticipated. When we get the bill before the Senate, which I trust will be very shortly, I will go more fully into the facts. My object at this time is to urge that we wait no longer in the consideration of these matters.

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President, in the case of the Newlands project in Nevada, the cost is over six times the original estimate, which shows a greater need than ever for the Government to carry out its obligations in completing the project.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 4) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the adoption of amendments thereto.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MOORE in the chair). The question is upon agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART] to the amendment of the committee. The Chair suggests the absence of a quorum and directs the Secretary to call the roll.

The principal clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Bronaard	Curtis	Ferris
Ashurst	Brace	Dale	Fess
Ball	Burns	Dial	Fletcher
Bayard	Cameron	Dill	Fraser
Borah	Capper	Edge	George
Brandeggee	Caraway	Edwards	Gooding
Brookhart	Copeland	Elkins	Harrold

Harris	McKinley	Ralston	Stephens
Heflin	McNary	Ransdell	Underwood
Howell	Mayfield	Reed, Pa.	Wadsworth
Johnson, Minn.	Moss	Robinson	Walsh, Mass.
Jones, Wash.	Neely	Sheppard	Walsh, Mont.
Kendrick	Norris	Shields	Watson
Keyes	Oddie	Shortridge	Walter
King	Overman	Smith	Wills
Ladd	Pepper	Smoot
Lodge	Pittman	Spencer

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART] to the committee amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Let the amendment to the amendment be stated, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The READING CLERK. The junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART] proposes in the committee amendment on page 2, line 22, of the original print of the joint resolution, to strike out the words "two-thirds of both Houses" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "a majority of the Members elected to each House."

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is upon the amendment proposed by the committee. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That is the substitute, as I understand?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes; it is the committee substitute.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is merely the Walsh amendment as reported by the committee.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I desire to offer an amendment to the substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the committee amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. After the words "in either case," in line 1, page 3, of the original print of the joint resolution it is proposed to insert the words "shall be submitted to the legislatures of the several States and," and after the word "States," in line 4, page 3, to insert the words "after affirmative or negative action by the respective legislatures."

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I desire to say just a word or two on the amendment.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I do.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the Secretary now has the amendment in form so that he can read it to the Senate, I should like to have him do so, in order to show how the amendment of the committee would read if the two amendments suggested by the Senator from Washington be incorporated in it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Will the Senator from Connecticut permit the Secretary again to read the last amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the last amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington.

The READING CLERK. The second amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] is, after the word "States," in line 4, page 3, to insert the words "after affirmative or negative action by the respective legislatures."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will now, in response to the request of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE], report the substitute as it would read if the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington should be adopted.

The READING CLERK. As proposed to be amended by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] the committee substitute would read as follows:

ARTICLE —

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, upon the application of two-thirds of the legislatures of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be submitted to the legislatures of the several States and shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as a part of this Constitution when ratified by a vote of the qualified electors in three-fourths of the several States, after affirmative or negative action by the respective legislatures, said election to be held under such rules and regulations as each State shall prescribe and that until three-fourths of the States shall have ratified, or more than one-fourth of the States shall have rejected a proposed amendment any State may in like manner change its vote: Provided, That if at any time more than one-fourth of the States have rejected the proposed amendment, said rejection shall be final and further consideration thereof by the States shall cease: Provided further, That any amendment proposed hereunder shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution as provided in the Constitution within six years from the date of submission hereof to the States by the Congress: Provided further, That no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I desire to say merely a few words. The substitute reported to the Senate provides for the ratification by direct vote of the people. The amendment which I have offered does not interfere with that; it still preserves that feature of the substitute. There are many Senators who think it would be wise to have a proposed constitutional amendment after submission by Congress passed upon by the State legislature, feeling that is a body which would bring out better the merits or demerits of the proposal, and that much would be gained by having a discussion in the legislature of the proposed amendment. My amendment intends to preserve that feature also, and requires the amendment to go to the legislature for action. Whether that action is affirmative or negative, after it is taken, the amendment goes to the people for a direct vote. The only advantage, of course, that I see—

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I will yield in a moment. The only advantage that I see in reference to that is that the people in passing upon it will have the advantage of the discussion in the legislature. They may agree with the decision of the legislature or they may disagree with it. In either event, their decision is the one that is effective and controls. I now yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. GEORGE. Does the Senator really believe that there would be any serious discussion in the legislature if its action had no force or effect one way or the other on the final ratification or rejection of a proposed amendment?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I think there would be. If it were a matter of such importance that we deemed it necessary to submit an amendment to the Constitution, I believe that the members of the legislature would be very anxious to have their views with reference to the matter known by the people. If they thought that the sentiment of the people was different from their own, they would be glad to have their reasons and their position known and considered by the people. At any rate—

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield to a question?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I will yield in just a moment. At any rate, I can see no harm to come from it, no injury to come from it, and it does seem to me that it is likely to bring out discussion and valuable information and points in connection with it that the people otherwise might not get. I now yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. As to the effect of the amendment which the Senator proposes, it would seem to make the action of the legislature merely advisory and not controlling or conclusive.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That is really what is intended.

Mr. ROBINSON. If the legislature rejects the proposed amendment of the Federal Constitution, notwithstanding its rejection, the amendment might be ratified by the qualified electors of the States.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That is the intention.

Mr. ROBINSON. On the other hand, if the legislature ratified or approved an amendment, its ratification would not be effective until the qualified electors of the State had passed upon the matter under the rules and regulations prescribed by the State itself.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That is the intention of the amendment, and that is the way I tried to word it.

Mr. ROBINSON. The amendment, then, does not require ratification by both the State legislature and by the qualified electors?

Mr. JONES of Washington. It does not.

Mr. ROBINSON. The only effect of the legislature's action is advisory.

Mr. JONES of Washington. It is really advisory, and to give the people the benefit of whatever may come from the discussion in the legislature.

Mr. President, that is all that I care to say. It appeals to me that it would be of considerable benefit to the people in making up their minds.

Mr. FESS and Mr. EDGE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I yield first to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. Is it to be understood that when one-fourth of the States reject a proposed amendment to the Constitution that action forecloses any effort thereafter to amend the Constitution along the same line?

Mr. JONES of Washington. My amendment does not deal with that question at all.

Mr. FESS. I thought I heard such a provision read in the amendment.

Mr. JONES of Washington. No; that is not in my amendment; that is in the text of the proposal. I do not interfere with that at all.

Mr. FESS. Would the Senator allow me to ask that question of the Senator from New York?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Certainly.

Mr. FESS. In listening to the reading the last time I thought that the reading suggested that when one-fourth of the States rejected an amendment, that foreclosed ever after any effort to amend along that same line.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I have before me what the Senator has in mind. I read from the text of the substitute:

Provided, That if at any time more than one-fourth of the States have rejected the proposed amendment, said rejection shall be final and further consideration thereof by the States shall cease.

I do not affect that provision at all by my amendment.

Mr. FESS. I should like to ask the Senator from New York whether that provision forecloses consideration of a similar proposal after this one has been rejected?

Mr. OVERMAN. It does not, as we understand it. It forecloses it for the amendment then submitted. Congress could, after that, submit another amendment of the same kind. It only forecloses it as to the amendment then submitted.

Mr. FESS. It does not prevent, then, any progress in amending the Constitution to reach a certain conclusion later on?

Mr. OVERMAN. That same conclusion can be reached if Congress desires to do it.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Washington a question. Do I understand the result of his amendment to be that if a legislature voted against a proposed constitutional amendment referred to the various States—in other words, voted “no”—under the terms of his amendment it would necessarily go to the people for a popular vote, and if the people, through the popular vote, voted “yes”—in other words, reversed the action of the legislature—that would be the result of the State's position in the matter?

Mr. JONES of Washington. That would be the decision.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, I desire to ask a question of the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I yield; yes.

Mr. WILLIS. I desire to direct the attention of the Senator to the language beginning in line 14. I understand that his amendment does not cover that, but since he is offering an amendment to this section I want to call his attention to this language. It says:

Provided further, That any amendment proposed hereunder shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution, as provided in the Constitution, within six years from the date of submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

In other words, we never could amend the Constitution after six years from the time this amendment should be submitted to the States.

Mr. FLETCHER. I think that is a misprint.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. WILLIS. It says “the date of submission hereof.”

Mr. FLETCHER. That is a misprint.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That, I understand, is a misprint. It should be “thereof.”

Mr. WILLIS. Oh, very well. If it were “thereof” it would be all right. That answers that question.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I do not know that I understood the suggestion to the effect that if one-fourth of the States defeated an amendment, the proceedings would stop so far as elections are concerned on that amendment. Is that correct?

Mr. OVERMAN. That is the end of that.

Mr. HEFLIN. That is the end of the amendment?

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. HEFLIN. If that is true, when an amendment is submitted those who oppose the adoption of it can hurry up elections in the States that they think they can control, and forestall action by the other States that are favorable to it, but that could not, perhaps because their legislature did not meet in time, get their machinery ready to hold elections on the subject.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It is true that that might happen; but the one-quarter of the States that act promptly upon it, as the Senator has said, are enough to defeat it in the end anyway, even if they should delay, because it is necessary to get three-quarters of the States in favor of it.

Mr. HEFLIN. That may be true; but if the other States were permitted to vote, then the action of the other States and the reasons for their action might influence some of the States that were encouraged to take early action, before a thorough campaign could be made.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Connecticut will pardon me—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. HEFLIN. Certainly.

Mr. GEORGE. There may be a change in this vote.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Yes.

Mr. GEORGE. It never has been considered that a negative vote is any action at all. It is the equivalent of no action; and although you must have three-fourths of the States voting finally affirmatively, yet if one of several States should vote in the negative two or three or four times they might yet, until the amendment has been determined, if this six-year provision should become operative, change their vote.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That is true. The object of the committee, however, and the suggestion in the committee, was that after it became manifest by more than a quarter of the States voting against it that the amendment would not be adopted it was rather a useless proceeding to make three-quarters of the States go through the motions of voting for something that they could not get; but I admit that there is a possibility that some of the States that voted against it might change. If the Senator thinks that is a sufficient objection to it the proviso could be stricken out, but there was a very strong demand for that proviso to be put in.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, there is another point, if the Senator will permit me, right there. I understand, too, that if an amendment is to be passed on by the legislature it has been urged that the legislature should have been elected after the amendment was submitted or was pending.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That does not amount to anything if we provide that the legislatures are simply to be the advisers of the people, and that the thing is ultimately to be controlled by the people themselves.

Mr. HEFLIN. I know; that is in the original plan.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Yes.

Mr. HEFLIN. In some States the governor and the legislature are elected for two years. In my State the governor is elected for four years and the legislature is elected for four years. Those where they are elected for two years might bring in their new members and take action such as they wanted to take, providing the machinery, and so forth, and those who had the four-year term would have old legislatures holding on.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But the Senator's objection does not apply now, as he understands, if this amendment of mine shall be adopted.

Mr. HEFLIN. I understand that.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, the substance of the amendment now offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] was communicated to me yesterday, and I gave the matter some very serious consideration; but I have not been able to give my approval to it, and I trust that it will not be adopted.

Of course, the action of the legislature is simply academic. The consideration of the amendment is purely so, because it does not make any difference what the legislature does, either one thing or the other; the action is the same. It goes to the people for their vote.

Mr. President, I do not think that when the action of the legislature is academic, anyway, it is to be expected that the proposition is going to be debated in the legislature with any degree of interest or concern. The fight will be made, of course, before the people; but it does, as a matter of fact, give the opponents of the amendment another opportunity.

This is the way the thing will work; this is the way it has worked in the past.

No amendment to the Constitution has ever been adopted except in response to an agitation for the reform that has been carried on through a series of years. Just think back about the history of the last amendments to the Constitution. The income-tax amendment was agitated before the people for 20 years; the amendment for the election of Senators by direct vote the same way. Time and again they came before the Congress of the United States, and time and again the Congress of the United States, or one House of Congress, refused to submit the matter. Finally, it went through; but it became a matter of controversy in the election of practically every Member of Congress from practically every State. The question as to whether the candidate for Member of Congress was in favor of the election of Senators by direct vote of the people or was not in favor of it was an issue in his election. So that in the first instance, when a movement is made for the purpose of amending the Constitution of the United States, it goes before the people of each congressional district in the United States, and they pass upon it; and after a time sentiment grows so powerful and so strong, the mandate of the people is so imperative, as declared in the election of Members of Congress, that they finally elect a Congress two-thirds of the Members of which in each House agree to submit the matter.

That is the first time the issue is submitted to the people. Then it goes to the States for ratification; and if it is a stoutly contested thing, such as I have indicated, or such as the prohibition amendment, the question as to whether or not it shall be ratified is an issue in the election of every member of the legislature, and the people of the country for the second time are called upon to express their opinion as to whether or not the amendment ought to become a part of the Federal Constitution; and in due course of time they do express their opinion to the extent of three-fourths of the States.

Now, twice, you will observe, at least, if not twenty times, the issue has gone before the people, and at least twice they have expressed themselves, to the extent of two-thirds in the one instance and three-fourths in the other.

It seems to me we have gotten the opinion of the people pretty well, but now it is proposed that there be a further discussion of this matter. Meanwhile the press of the country, during all of this agitation, and particularly in the election of Members of Congress by whom the matter is to be submitted, and in the election of the members of the legislature by which the thing is to be ratified, is agitating and discussing this subject, and speakers upon the stump are discussing it before the people. Now it is proposed to give the opponents of the measure another whack at it, and go before the legislatures of the States; to go before the people in the election of the legislators and fight the thing out there, then to go before the legislature of the State and fight the thing out there and endeavor to get an adverse recommendation from the legislature if possible, and then finally, the fourth time, to go before the people for an expression from them upon the subject.

Mr. President, the Senator from Iowa offered an amendment the object of which was to make it easier to amend the Constitution than is now the case. I believe that any movement ought to be in that direction than in the direction of making it a little more difficult to amend the Constitution of the United States. Besides, is it not boy's play, is it not just making the legislatures of the several States debating societies, debating the subject without any conclusion upon the matter either one way or the other? It seems to me it is not consistent with the dignity which ought to attach to these bodies.

There is a further objection to this; that is, that the proposal now made must inevitably defer the ratification of an amendment to the Constitution by at least two years. That is the way it would operate. Here is the situation: To-day we pass a resolution, by the requisite vote of both Houses of Congress, submitting an amendment to the people of the various States. Under the amendment as reported by the committee in all reasonable possibility the various States would provide that the matter should be submitted to the people at the next ensuing general election. Assuming that the resolution were passed at this time, it would be submitted to the people at the election next November, when they would act upon it either one way or the other. But under the amendment it could not be voted on next November, because it would first have to go before the legislatures of the States. The legislatures will not meet until January, 1925, and then it would be submitted at the next general election, which would be in November, 1926. No matter how you fix this, this amendment now proposed would operate to delay the ratification of a proposed amendment to the Constitution by just two years, and I am opposed to that.

As I said the other day, I do not believe there is any occasion at all to amend the Constitution of the United States in this particular. I do not believe the people of this country have expressed themselves upon this subject in any such way or with any such unanimity as calls for the submission of the amendment. As I said, if we were going to draft the amendment as an original proposition, I would, of course, be in favor of submitting the matter to the people directly, as is proposed in the amendment; but I do not believe there is any occasion for this. I submit that up to the present time, Mr. President, the voice of the people of the country has been sufficiently expressed and sufficiently accurately expressed through the action of the legislatures, and there is no occasion for amending the Constitution in this particular at all. But if it is amended, I trust it will be amended, in general at least, after the plan of the amendment submitted by the committee.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, it so happens that I have heard very little of the debate on this most important matter. That I regret, since, I think, this proposed amendment to Article V of the Constitution is a very important matter.

I would like to say, in addition to what the Senator from Montana has said, just a word further in reference to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES]. It is undoubtedly true, as he points out, that to require the submission of an amendment both to the legislatures of the States and finally to a vote of the people of the States is but an added step, and but delays the amendment of the Constitution in respect to a matter concerning which the people may be assumed to desire a change of the Constitution.

Of course, the amendment would provide for some discussion before the legislative bodies of the several States, but that discussion would be purely perfunctory. It would be had with the conscious view before the legislature that it made no difference how they voted upon the proposed amendment, the people themselves would finally decide whether there should be an amendment to the Federal Constitution or not. It might induce debate, but it would induce debate, it seems to me, having very little worth.

It certainly would delay the ratification of an amendment, because the vote of the legislature could be used with powerful effect before the people of the States, and those who really wished to defeat an amendment to the Constitution could go before the legislative bodies of the several States and there indulge in a prolonged and hard fight for the purpose of getting an expression of opinion from the legislature of the State to carry before the people, so as to say to the people of the State, "Your legislative body has rejected this amendment, and we therefore ask you to give consideration to that fact when you cast your vote on the question of ratifying the amendment."

I can not believe that the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] could be productive of any possible good. I appreciate the fact that he desires to obtain both an expression by the legislative body of the State, and by the electorate of the State, and I can see a strong reason why the legislatures of the several States should be called upon to express themselves on the adoption or the rejection of an amendment to the Federal Constitution. That I wish to notice briefly in just a moment.

I further agree with the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] in his contention that if the Federal Constitution were now submitted to the people for adoption, and if we were first dealing with the question of perfecting that instrument by amendments, unquestionably most of us, I take it, would be in favor of submitting the ratification or rejection of amendments to the Federal Constitution to the electorate of the States. I am quite sure of that, for this reason: If there is any place under the American system where the genius for self-government has expressed itself forcibly and clearly it is within the State itself, and not within the National Government. Therefore, if it were proposed to solve this question anew, I would have no hesitancy in concluding that amendments to the Federal Constitution should be accepted or rejected by a vote of the electorate in three-fourths of the States, because I know that the students of constitutional history and of the perfected American system of government will have to turn finally and at last to a study of the degree of perfection attained by our system within the several States.

Mr. Bryce long ago observed, and most European critics of our Constitution have observed, that the emphasis has been placed too much upon the Federal Constitution and not enough upon the development of the American people along the lines of self-government within the States respectively. So if it were a new proposition I would have not the slightest hesitancy in voting to leave to a vote of the people of three-fourths of the States the question of the acceptance or of the rejection of an amendment to the Constitution.

At first I thought that the proposed constitutional amendment offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] was a most meritorious amendment, and I expressed myself as favoring that amendment; but on reflection I believe that it would be a mistake to amend the Constitution in the manner proposed by the distinguished Senator from New York. Therefore I shall vote, first, for the substitute, but not as proposed to be amended by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], and then I shall vote against the proposed constitutional amendment of the Senator from New York, for this reason, Mr. President, which seems to me to be fundamental:

Every amendment to the Federal Constitution is likewise an amendment to every State constitution in the United States. Whenever assent is given by the States to a proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution assent is also given by those States to an amendment to their respective constitutions, and I think that the decision of the question by the legislatures of the States is a matter of fundamental importance, because I believe that in determining the all-important question of whether the power should reside in the States or should be transferred to the General Government, the legislatures of the States are much more apt to have in mind the interest and the rights and the powers of the States even than the electorate of the States, because the voter, when he is called upon to pass upon a proposal to amend the Constitution, is likely to weigh it upon its intrinsic merits, and is not likely to consider the question of whether the power ought to be exercised by the General Government, or whether the power ought to be left with the governments of the several States.

For that reason, which I have but briefly indicated, it is my purpose and my conviction to vote for the Constitution as it now is and against the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York. As an original proposition, I should say that it should be submitted to the electorate of each State. Undoubtedly that is true, for the reason that I have but briefly tried to indicate; but considering the question as it actually is, and as a practical one, conceding fully that the electorate of the several States unquestionably will consider the merits of every proposed amendment to the Constitution, and that they will not be entirely unmindful of the effect upon the States themselves of an amendment, which I do not assert, I nevertheless believe that it is proper and that it is wise to leave to the legislatures of the States the question of the adoption or the rejection of an amendment to the Constitution, for the reason that the legislatures, because they are the law-making bodies of the States, will keep steadily in mind the line between the State power and the Federal power, and that they will consider that question as of importance, and not merely the question of the merits or demerits of the amendment itself.

I do not want to be misunderstood. I do not mean to intimate that the electorate themselves will not have regard for State powers. I am not speaking of State rights and State sovereignty in the sense that might be objectionable to men who do not hold that view. I am speaking of the rights and powers of the States in the broad sense in which we are all agreed. I do not mean, I repeat, to say that the electorate will not have regard to the rights of the States, the powers that should rightly be retained by the States, but I do mean to say that in the heat of a political campaign, when some great good is about to be accomplished by an amendment to the Federal Constitution, some great good for which the people of the country have fought for years and years and years, the individual voter within the State is likely to accept the amendment without much thought of how far it cuts into the clear rights and prerogatives of the State itself.

For these reasons, Mr. President, I shall vote for the substitute as originally reported by the committee and then I shall vote against the proposition in any form.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, the constitution of every State in the Union is amended by recommendation of its legislature and the submission of that recommendation to the people. The constitution of no State can be amended except the people of that State approve it. Now, the Constitution of the United States can be amended without any reference to the people whatever. An amendment to the Constitution of the United States is proposed, and if it gets a two-thirds vote in both Houses of Congress it is referred to the legislatures of the States. If the legislatures of three-fourths of those States approve of it, it becomes a valid part of the Constitution of the United States. In other words, while each State requires that the electors of that State shall vote affirmatively before its State constitution can be amended, we can amend the Constitution of the United States by the vote of purely legislative bodies. It has never seemed right to me since I have thought about it at all that the fundamental law of the United States of America should be amended without the people of the country or the electors of a single State having anything whatever to say about it. It is for that reason that when we come to amend the Federal Constitution I think it would be wiser to follow the plan by which each State amends its own constitution, and the amendment which was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary provided for that and nothing else.

If we are going to amend the Constitution of the United States, if we would have the Congress, which is the national legislative body, recommend the amendment to the people of the several States, which is the national electorate, we would do exactly the analogous thing to what the State does. Each State legislature recommends the amendment of the State constitution to the electors of that State. They both have to agree before the constitution is amended. But it seems to me, as I think of it, to be a deplorable thing—I will not say that it is an anachronism, but we hear much about the rights of the individual in America and his sovereignty—and it seems to me to be out of date to say that he shall be prohibited from having anything to say about the amendment to the Constitution of the United States except what he can say indirectly when he elects a member of the State legislature. Why not pursue the exact course that is pursued by the State?

The resolution which amends the Constitution of the United States which is to be passed by Congress does not even have to have the signature of the President. Now, to say that we can amend the Constitution of the United States by the act of a purely legislative body, it seems to me, shows a great lack of faith in the capacity of the people to express their wants.

There are a great many constitutional amendments pending before the Judiciary Committee now. I think that the tendency is to make them more numerous as the years go by. I myself think that the people will be more conservative about tinkering with the Constitution of the United States than the legislatures would be.

As to the suggestion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] that if the amendment proposed to the committee amendment by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] should be adopted the legislature of the State would simply advise the electors whether to vote for it or not, that is exactly the function that the legislature performs now in the matter of an amendment to a State constitution. An amendment to a State constitution is submitted by the legislature, and that means that they approve of it, and they therefore submit it to the people for their approval.

A good many Senators, including the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], objected to the amendment of the committee, which was the amendment of the Senator from Montana, the Walsh amendment so called, because they said it did not give the opportunity for any quiet judicial consideration; that it was submitted directly by the Congress of the United States, where the debate on the question had not been published in the newspapers generally of the country and the people of the several States might be more or less ill informed about how to act. The amendment submitted by the Senator from Washington is intended to remedy that defect. The legislature will not be able to stand in the way of the people if they want the amendment, and at the same time will afford a forum in which the amendment can be adequately debated, first by the judiciary committees of both branches of the legislature and then on the floor of both of those branches; and the State press would of course discuss the matter. That seems to me to be a perfectly proper amendment and a perfectly proper method. I agree that it may defer final action upon the amendment for a year or possibly two years in some cases; but if that should prove to be an objection, of course we could extend the time provided in the amendment from six years to eight years in which the amendment might be adopted.

I would be willing to submit it directly to the people, as the amendment of the Senator from Montana provides, but we have to get a two-thirds vote in this body for this amendment, and when it is apparent that the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] and other Republican Senators—I think mostly Republicans, though I am not sure about that—think that the legislatures of the States would be of value in discussing the question and informing the people of their several States, if it makes it easier for them to vote for what I think on the whole is a good amendment, I can see no objection to adopting the amendment of the Senator from Washington. I certainly would rather have the Constitution amended as proposed by the amendment of the Senator from Washington than to have the people of the whole country deprived entirely of taking any part in the constitutional amendment process, and I therefore see no objection to it. For that reason I shall support the amendment of the Senator from Washington to the Walsh substitute.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KENDRICK in the chair). Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield.

Mr. WILLIS. I desire to submit an inquiry to the Senator from Connecticut. I should like to ask whether he does not think that the inevitable result of the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington would be to make out of the proceedings by the State legislatures a purely perfunctory matter? If the Senator will permit me a moment, my experience with the referendum proposition has been that whatever sense of obligation there is in a State legislative body when it is understood that the matter is to be subjected to referendum anyhow, the argument is always made, "Well, we do not have the final say upon this matter. Let us just pass it and let the people vote upon it." It seems to me that the effect of the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington would be to make it merely perfunctory. I would like the opinion of the Senator on that suggestion.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I will give it very freely. I had intended to indicate what my view of that was. I do not think so at all. The Senator says because a body like the legislature does not have the final say, therefore they will say, "Let us pass it on," and we thus do not get their real conviction about it and do not have a real debate on it. The Senator from Montana said the debate would be a mere academic debate. I do not think so at all. Legislatures do not have their final say about it now. They have to pass it on to the people to amend the constitutions of their own States as their constitutional provisions stand now; but it is not an academic matter with them, and it is not a matter without any interest. It can not be said to be an academic question when the legislature is advising the constituents who elect it as to what course they ought to take on amending the Constitution of the United States. The fact that the advice of the legislature may not be taken will not diminish the interest in the debate, and the advice may be either way. The people will hear it, whether they heed it or not. It will not be an academic question at all, any more than it is academic here. We are not going to have the final say on the disposition of this question. It is to be submitted to the State legislatures because it is a constitutional amendment, and is to be approved by the old method and not the new.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President—

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Let me submit to the Senator, however, that they do have a say as to whether it shall be submitted or not, and the legislatures would have no say.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Oh, they would have no say as to whether it should go to the people or not. They would have a say as to whether they approved it or not.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But we do.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Oh, yes, we do; but our vote to submit it is no more binding or weighty than a vote of the legislature which would recommend it to the people or advise the people against it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I was simply endeavoring to present the difference in the two situations as affecting the character of debate. Of course, the matter would be as strenuously debated in this body, because this body is called upon to act, either to submit or not to submit. The character of debate in the State legislature would be essentially different, in my judgment, because they have no discretion about the matter at all.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. They have a discretion as to whether to recommend it or to advise its rejection. Of course, what the Senator means, I assume, and what is true is that the action of Congress in submitting an amendment to the legislatures is necessary to the taking effect of the amendment, while the action of the legislature would only be advisory.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I would put it this way: We can block the amendment. They can not do so.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Yes; that is true. We can block the amendment and the legislatures could not under the amendment of the Senator from Washington. But I say the reason for proposing the amendment is to meet the objection entertained by certain Senators that it would be done without consideration and too hastily if submitted to the people without some intermediary. That they wish a process of having the legislature discuss the matter and having it discussed in the press for their benefit. I think when we are amending the Constitution, the more discussion of it by everybody the better it will be. So I think there is virtue in the amendment. It certainly provides a forum of debate. The calm consideration by a judiciary committee—

Mr. EDGE. And, Mr. President, in that connection, after having lived under the Constitution for nearly 140 years, possibly a year's delay will not be a great detriment to the public.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. No; it would not be a great detriment. So far as the merits of this particular measure are concerned, the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] says he does not believe there is any demand for it anyway and that we have lived for 135 years under the present system. As the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] says, the matter of one year or more or less in the adoption of future amendments will not be a very serious thing.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, when first I read the joint resolution, and began to give it study, I was inclined not to favor it. I at first thought that a portion of the joint resolution would make it very difficult to amend the Constitution in response to some great demand on the part of the people, but after reading the resolution more carefully and considering the changes proposed, I am now rather inclined to believe that the amendment suggested to the Constitution would be beneficial rather than detrimental. The proposal to require one of the branches of the legislature to be elected after the authorization has been given by Congress seems to be in accordance with modern democratic progress, and it seems to me to be entirely logical. While I do not appreciate all of the criticisms and the comments which have been made as to the great number of legislatures that have ratified recent amendments although elected before such amendments were proposed, yet I can understand that some benefit might accrue from the course proposed. Consequently, I see no detriment in requiring at least one branch of the ratifying legislature to be elected after the authorization by Congress has been given, and I have no objection to voting for that phase of the resolution.

I did at first think that the permission to withdraw a ratification when once the legislature had given it would be rather a dangerous authority. I recalled the history of my own State when it undertook to revise its political decision in the ratification of one of the war amendments, when there was great claim in the legislature by the lawyers of the State that such permission should be granted. As has been stated on the floor of the Senate, it was decided, and I think correctly, that the right to withdraw should not be exercised.

It seems to me that if, after three-fourths of the legislatures had ratified, the legislature of one State could withdraw its ratification, it would be very serious; but the joint resolution does not involve that proposition. It involves the proposition of withdrawing the ratification before the necessary three-fourths of the legislatures have ratified the amendment; and if a subsequent legislature should decide that a former legislative ratification was wrong, I do not see any injury to come if the subsequent legislature should withdraw the former ratification, provided, of course, it shall be done before the three-fourths which would be necessary to make the amendment a part of the organic law had been secured. That is as far as this proposition goes. It seems to me that also is logical and can not involve any injury to anybody.

The suggestion of ratification of constitutional amendments by a vote of the people rather than by the legislatures is also in accordance with the modern democratic movement, though I have some doubt about the wisdom of the drift toward the primary system and toward the general movement in the law-making process away from the legislatures to the people of the States, and though I sometimes question the wisdom even of the change effected by the seventeenth amendment. Whether or not we have elevated the standard of this body by the change in the manner of the election of Senators is still an open question; and yet that is the modern movement; that seems to be the order of the day. It is not only so in this country, but it is so all over the world where the drift is away from the decision of the representatives back to the decision of the original voters.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. FESS. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I should like to ask whether the doubt which the Senator has expressed of the wisdom of the adoption of the seventeenth amendment has risen since the adoption or whether the Senator entertained the doubt before the amendment was adopted?

Mr. FESS. The Senator from Ohio was in favor of the change which was worked by the amendment, but a doubt has come in his mind as to whether or not we have bettered the situation by the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senator's answer is not very direct. The Senator has stated he was in favor of the amendment. That was not the question I asked. The Senator has not even yet stated that he is not in favor of the amendment but has stated that he is now in doubt of its wisdom. I wish to know, merely as a matter of information, what the sober judgment is of those who believed in the wisdom of the seventeenth amendment, whether or not any of them have changed their views about the matter; and I thought possibly the Senator from Ohio had changed his mind about it.

Mr. FESS. I am of the opinion that the Senator from Ohio has, in a measure, changed his mind. Originally, in the midst of the general drift throughout the country to give more power to the people, and even to extend that power to the election of Senators, I was a believer that the change proposed by the seventeenth amendment would be a benefit to the country. That was when the amendment was adopted. Since then I have come to have, as I have intimated, serious doubt as to whether or not the change was beneficial.

Mr. DALE. Mr. President—

Mr. FESS. I yield to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. DALE. Aside from the question as to whether the seventeenth amendment is a benefit to the country, the Senator will not question that the present arrangement affords an opportunity to ascertain more nearly the expression of the will of the average voter?

Mr. FESS. No; the Senator from Ohio would not deny that the direct vote of the people is a closer and more accurate expression of the momentary judgment of the people than when that judgment is voiced through some intermediary body. The only question is whether the direct judgment of the people this year is not entirely different from what the direct judgment of the people was last year, and whether it will not be entirely different next year from what it is now. In other words, when we talk about following the popular pulse we find that the popular pulse changes very rapidly, so that any man who would attempt to respond entirely to what he thinks the public wants him to do would find himself much confused, for he would find himself going in one direction one year and in an opposite direction another year.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FESS. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Does not the Senator think that one reason why the seventeenth amendment is not a success is that so small a proportion of the electorate takes advantage of the opportunities that it gives, so that Senators actually are elected by a very small fraction of the popular vote and not by a general outpouring of sentiment?

Mr. FESS. The observation of the Senator from Pennsylvania is accurate, as everyone will recognize who has studied the operations of the primary law. As an officer of the Ohio Constitutional Convention, when it had the question of the primary before it, I supported the direct primary as being the inherently proper method to adopt, because the people themselves ought to have the authority to say who shall be the men to represent them in various capacities.

Mr. DALE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FESS. I will yield in a moment. Every close observer of the operation of the primary law in my State must have noticed the very small fraction of the citizenry that goes to the polls to determine who the candidates shall be. So, while the principle is inherently right, the practice of it is woefully inefficient. I now yield to my friend from Vermont.

Mr. DALE. Mr. President, I do not quite like the way in which both the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Pennsylvania leave this matter. They have been talking about "the reasons why the seventeenth amendment is not a success." Do I understand that the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Pennsylvania take the position that the seventeenth amendment in its results is not a success?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. FESS. I yield.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I think the seventeenth amendment, which calls for the popular election of Senators, would be a conspicuous success if people would take advantage of it; but the fraction of the electorate that votes in such elections is discouragingly small, and we do not get the best thought of our people in most of the elections. While I criticize the results of the seventeenth amendment, I do it with a full consciousness that I should not be here myself if the old system still prevailed, because I do not think any Pennsylvania legislature ever would have elected me to the Senate. Nevertheless, I think that on the whole, and with my own case perhaps as an illustration, the amendment has not worked anything like as well as we had hoped.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. FESS. In just a moment.

The observation made by the Senator from Pennsylvania is a fine concrete example of the exception to the rule that I had in mind. Pennsylvania, in its last vote for election of Senators by a popular vote, certainly did great credit to itself and to the Nation and to this body. The question is whether or not the same thing was done in my own State and in other States.

I yield to my friend from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I was going to remark that it would not be at all to the credit of the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania if they should refuse to elect the junior Senator from that State a Member of this body. His election is an argument, and a strong one, in favor of the existing system, because I am sure that in the estimation of all of his colleagues he suffers not at all by comparison with his predecessors in this body who were sent here by the Legislatures of the State of Pennsylvania.

Mr. FESS. I certainly concur in the statement of the Senator.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I beg that the unfortunate illustration which I picked will not be followed any further.

Mr. FESS. I would have picked it if the Senator had not.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I am moved to say a word, however, in this connection, by what was said by the Senator from Pennsylvania. Of course it is a deplorable fact that there is so much absenteeism at the time of our elections. It is a matter of general animadversion and universal regret that so small a percentage of the qualified electors vote at the election, but if you should institute a comparison between the number of electors who vote directly for United States Senators now and the number of electors who voted indirectly under the old system, I think probably you would not find much difference. In other words, bad as it is now, it is no worse than it was under the old system, and so it is with the primary election system.

It is too bad that so small a proportion of the electorate vote at the primary elections, but I am perfectly certain that if you figured up the number who attended the caucuses under the old system—I mean away down; the precinct caucuses—and summed up those, as compared with the number who vote at the primaries, you would find that at least 100 per cent more votes are cast in the primaries now than there ever were at the caucuses when they were conducted honestly. Of course, we all know that under the old caucus system there were more votes cast in the caucus sometimes than there were voters in the precincts; but I am speaking now about the honest expression. Everybody knows—if I may use that expression—that more people vote in the primaries now than voted under the old system, and yet from every platform from which the opponents of the primary election system talk you will hear the welkin ring about "the failure of the system" because so few people attend the primaries.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to say a word in reply to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. FESS. I yield.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I do not believe that the Senator from Montana is any greater believer in popular government than we are, but the Senator surely must realize that it is a great problem that we have before us in the limited participation in elections by our people.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I recognize that fully.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That being so, is not any check on hasty judgment by that small minority advisable? I believe that if the whole population, or substantially all of it, would take part in these elections, we might safely leave to a referendum of those people the decision on such questions as this; but when we remember that only a small fraction, sometimes as low as 10 per cent, will attend those elections, is it not wise to have that intermediate check of action by the legislature?

I will grant you that probably that legislature is not exceptionally capable, not as capable as it would be if all people voted in its election, but its presence there acts as a check on rash and ill-considered measures; and it seems to me that there is some value, particularly where our people will not vote, in interposing that check against the impulsive action of the minority.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Of course, the difference between the Senator from Pennsylvania and myself is that he is apprehensive of hasty and ill-considered action. I am not. Like Patrick Henry, I have no way of judging of the future but by the past. I know of no time in the past when there has been hasty, ill-considered, and precipitate action with reference to a constitutional amendment, and therefore I am not apprehensive of anything of the kind in the future. I think the checks that we now have are checks enough. Of course, I agree that there ought to be some checks as against hasty or ill-considered action. No one can dispute that. We have those checks, as I think, now.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, reverting to the observation of the Senator from Montana on the old caucus system, I would not want to be regarded as believing that we should go back to that system. It had its very serious drawbacks, and the abuses that grew out of it were such that it will never be resumed. There may be some intermediary plan by which we might help the primary system. I do not know whether that is possible or not. Some States have attempted it, like New York, and other States are discussing other intermediary plans. But, to revert to the joint resolution that is before us—

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, before the Senator leaves that subject will he permit me to interrupt him?

Mr. FESS. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. DILL. I want to make just one observation about the seventeenth amendment in answer to the suggestion of the Senator from Pennsylvania, namely, the small number of voters taking part in the election. It is my belief, and I think the statistics of elections will bear me out, that as many people vote in the elections for Senators as vote for governors or Congressmen, and that if it is an argument against the direct election of Senators that not enough people vote, the same argument can be made in regard to nearly all of our State officials.

Mr. FESS. It has been alleged in some quarters that the Wadsworth joint resolution will make it quite difficult to amend the Constitution. I do not see that objection as valid. In fact, it is not easy to amend the Constitution under Article V. I go further to state that it ought not to be made easy to amend it. In other words, the Constitution is the organic law that ought not to be changed, in the language of Jefferson, for light and transient causes, and should never be regarded as a mere code of law.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. FESS. I yield.

Mr. GERRY. As I understand the Senator from Ohio, he was talking about the question of the lack of interest on the part of the voters and the small number of voters who often voted on important questions, such as the election of Senators. I should like to call the Senator's attention to certain States—for example, my own State, Rhode Island—where, under the old system of Senators being elected by the legislatures, a very small percentage of the people of the State were represented in a majority of their legislatures. As a concrete example of what I mean, the city of Providence, with its large population of over 200,000, has only one Senator. The town of West Greenwich, with three or four hundred population, has one Senator, with the result that we have a minority in the State controlling the legislature, and thus under the old system a minority of the voters of the State were able to choose the representative of the State in the United States Senate.

Mr. FESS. I will say to my friend from Rhode Island that I only repeat what I said a moment ago. I am not defending the old method, and that is not an issue, for the simple reason that the seventeenth amendment is a part of the organic law of the land. Without doubt, it will always remain in the Constitution. It is a question that is settled. I am glad to have the statements of the various Senators that demonstrate the wisdom of the proposed change in this amendment to give the right to ratify to the people instead of to the legislatures, if they so choose to do; so that there is no point of difference. I presume that my suggestion earlier in the day of a doubt of the wisdom of the change has provoked all of these comments, which I appreciate very much.

Mr. GERRY. I will say to the Senator that I just made that comment as showing the necessity of a change in the amendment suggested by the Senator from New York; that we should have the question submitted directly to the people, so as really to get the true views of the different States. Minority approval could happen again on any other question that might come up in the States where we did not have a majority of the people of the States properly represented.

Mr. FESS. I am glad to have the Senator's approval of the matter.

Mr. DALE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. FESS. I yield.

Mr. DALE. I am sorry to break in on the Senator's time so much, but this is a matter of great consequence.

Mr. FESS. I yield gladly to the Senator. There is no breaking in.

Mr. DALE. I should like to ask the Senator's opinion on this element of the matter; To my mind it is not so much a question of the number of voters; it is the question of the powers that control the caucus, and that can not control under the present system, which, to my mind, is the vital question.

Mr. FESS. That consideration will without doubt prevent the caucus method ever being resumed in the country, because just the matter suggested by the Senator from Vermont is the one outstanding objection to that method of nomination. The only thing that I am concerned about is with our present method. Can we improve it so as to make it of general interest, so that the general citizen will be interested in naming the candidates for office?

Now, Mr. President, to resume, I am one of the Senators who do not believe there is any great danger in the difficulty of amending the Constitution. In other words, I should think that the greater danger would be in the ease with which a constitution might be amended. There ought to be a sharp distinction between constitutional sanction which is found in the organic law and legislative enactment which is the product of this body and the other body. One of the greatest comments that can be made upon the stability of our system is the few amendments that have been made to the organic law in the nearly 150 years of our national existence.

That matter was gone over by the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] in the opening of the discussion of this joint resolution. Originally there were 12 amendments proposed and submitted to the people. Those amendments were all discussed at the Constitutional Convention that ran through from May until September, but they were not discussed as amendments. They were discussed as a bill of rights. There were two schools of thought in that convention. One was led by James Madison, who believed in a bill of rights. The other was led by Alexander Hamilton, who insisted that there was no such thing as a bill of rights in a democratic government; that a bill of rights presupposed the existence of a power above, sending down authority to those below. He said there was no place for a bill of rights in a constitution of the people, where the people themselves wrote or drafted the constitution, and while there was a desire to inculcate somewhere the principle of the Bill of Rights for the protection of the people against despotic government, the question was, Shall it be a part of the organic law or shall it be added as an addendum to the organic law? It was decided that it should be added, and it was added in the form of amendments. We usually refer to them as the first 10 amendments, but the first 11 amendments are our Bill of Rights. The eleventh ought to be included, for that is an amendment which forbids a State being dragged into court as a defendant upon the complaint of a citizen. No one in the convention thought that the Constitution would permit that. It was even discussed in the Constitutional Convention, but later on a citizen of South Carolina, one Chisholm, actually sued the State of Georgia and made it a defendant in court, and when that incident occurred the only remedy, the only way to make the Constitution as the fathers thought they originally had it was the submission of an amendment, and that is the eleventh amendment, adopted in 1798, which ought to have been a part of the original Bill of Rights. So, Mr. President, the first 11 amendments are not amendments in the sense that they are changes of the organic law from what the fathers themselves intended originally the organic law should be.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FESS. Yes.

Mr. GERRY. I do not want to break into the Senator's argument, but I want to ask him a question. I have not heard all his argument, as I came into the Chamber just a few moments ago. Is he in favor of the proposed amendment to the Constitution submitted by the Senator from New York, which provides that a State may provide for the affirming or reversing of the action of its legislature; in other words, have the legislature pass on a constitutional amendment first, and then have it submitted to the electors, or submit it directly to the electors?

Mr. FESS. I see no objection to that.

Mr. GERRY. Of course, in a State like my own, where a majority of the legislature does not represent a majority of the State, with the word "may" included it is possible that the amendment would not be submitted to the voters of the State. Is it not?

Mr. FESS. I should prefer to leave it permissive, rather than make it mandatory.

Mr. GERRY. In my State it is practically impossible to amend the constitution. We have tried to amend it for years, but we have a minority controlling the legislature, preventing progressive legislation, and preventing amendments to the constitution. We even go so far that we have a property qualification for voters, and voters have to register before the 30th of June in each year.

Mr. FESS. They need a campaign of education over there.

Mr. GERRY. We have been conducting one, but so far we have not been successful. So that really the Senator's amendment, so far as my State is concerned, would not go half far enough, if we are to have a popular expression of opinion.

Mr. FESS. I should prefer to leave it permissive than to make it mandatory. In my own State the legislature would probably refer ratification to the people. Under our trend over in Ohio we might require that it be done by a vote of the people. There was much said about our experience with the nineteenth amendment. We thought the Constitution was perfectly clear on that, that it was the legislature's function, and when an effort was made to prevent that action being taken by having it referred to the vote of the people, a great many people, including myself, stated that that would not do a bit of good, because the Constitution specified how it should be done, that it was already done, and we made no effort whatever to stir up the people on the matter, thinking it was already done. But my opinion is that if this proposed amendment is ratified the act of ratification of an amendment in Ohio will be by the people rather than by the legislature. That would be my judgment.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, if the amendment remains as proposed by the Senator from New York and such a situation should exist as has been presented by the Senator from Rhode Island—in other words, if a legislature refused to submit an amendment to a vote of the people—the result would be that in such State they would be following just exactly the law we have to-day.

Mr. FESS. Precisely.

Mr. EDGE. There would be absolutely nothing gained by the ratification of this constitutional amendment, so far as those States were concerned.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator will note that one house of the legislature would have to be elected subsequent to the submission of an amendment.

Mr. EDGE. Yes; but the actual machinery would be exactly the same as exists now in any State where the legislature refused to submit it to the people. Is not that correct?

Mr. GERRY. Exactly.

Mr. FESS. That is correct now, but let me state to the Senator from New Jersey that if this amendment is not ratified, then the present method must always be followed, no matter what campaign of education might be carried on in the States; but if the amendment is put into the Constitution, then whenever the State, through its majority, decides in favor of the popular ratification, it has the authority; otherwise it would not have.

Mr. EDGE. But if we go a step further, in view of the fact that we are now considering this as an improvement of the present system—as we are, or we would not be considering it at all—if the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington is adopted we will assure ourselves of a change in the system, will we not?

Mr. FESS. Yes; then the change must be made whether the legislature wants it or not.

Mr. GERRY. That, Mr. President, is really what those of us who are in States where we have the rotten borough system are heartily in favor of, so as to get popular government, because we really now have to go out and conduct a campaign for registration every year, in the spring, so as to inform the people that they must register before the 1st of July if they wish to be heard on election day, which is six months off.

Mr. FESS. I prefer to leave it permissive. In nearly 150 years of national development, during which time the most wonderful changes which have taken place in the history of the world took place, we have virtually had only half a dozen amendments to the Federal Constitution, which to me is the suggestion of the great genius of the framers of that instrument. While it is true that we ordinarily refer to them as 19 amendments, the first 11 really were not amendments. The first real amendment to the Constitution was the twelfth, and the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth are all war amendments, growing out of the slavery question, one designed to give freedom, the second citizenship, and the other suffrage. Therefore, from the standpoint of the framers of the Constitution, they would stand as only one change, applying to the liberated citizens of the country. That makes but two amendments. Then the sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth make the six.

In fact, the sixteenth amendment was regarded by very many people as unnecessary, and only by a vote of 4 to 5 in the Supreme Court was it made necessary. In other words, many of our best legal minds thought that we could lay an income tax without changing the Constitution. If that had not been necessary there would have been only five changes in this fundamental instrument in 150 years.

Mr. OVERMAN. It was generally believed also that if that question had been brought before the Supreme Court again they would have decided in favor of the income tax. One judge changed his mind overnight, the Senator will remember.

Mr. FESS. I really have no doubt of the accuracy of the statement of the Senator.

Mr. OVERMAN. When we adopted the joint resolution proposing the income tax amendment, it was understood that if another case were brought before the Supreme Court they would hold the law constitutional.

Mr. FESS. May I say that here is an instrument of only 7 short articles, only 39 sections, only 84 paragraphs, couched in less than 4,000 words, which has stood the test for 150 years, with only half a dozen amendments, covering a period marking the greatest development the world has ever seen, written for 3,000,000 people, now serving 110,000,000, during the most marvelous transitions of our whole social, industrial, and political system. I regard it as the greatest concrete example of governmental genius, unlike anything in the history of the world.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. FESS. I yield.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator is a historian and knows all about this matter, and is very interesting in what he says. I ask the Senator if he has ever known of so many resolutions being introduced in Congress with the object of changing the Constitution in all the history of this country?

Mr. FESS. No; I have not, and I deplore it.

Mr. OVERMAN. I know the Senator deplores it. It seems to me there is an agitation to change the Constitution; and that is why this amendment is urged. The people feel there is a menace, a warning, and that we ought to take some action and let the people say whether an amendment should be adopted or not.

Mr. FESS. For the reason offered by the Senator, and the reason I stated a moment ago, I am not afraid of the allegation that this is going to make it impossible to amend the Constitution when an amendment ought to be effected. I have no fear of that. I am averse to the ease with which we attack the fundamental law of the land, and I am not an adherent of those who think that the Constitution should be put on the basis of a statute. On the other hand, it ought to be maintained as the body of constitutional sanction instructing Congress, within its limits, what to do.

I shall therefore support the joint resolution offered by the Senator from New York. I do not see my way clear to support the substitute, and I do not believe the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] would effectively strengthen the joint resolution.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I have been aided in reaching a decision on this question by asking myself and keeping in mind this query, Why is this proposal here? Why should anybody ask us to change the method of amending our Constitution? It is because, is it not, that there have been certain abuses under the present system. Is this true? Unquestionably that contention has been proven by the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] and by other Senators, who have recited what has occurred in certain legislatures when amendments have been ratified in the past. Those irregularities, it is claimed, are of such a character that at times the popular judgment has been thwarted. I would like to know if there is any more serious indictment of a system of democratic government than the claim that it is possible to change the organic law against the will of the people? I repeat, Is there anything more serious than that? Has it been done? In my own State it has been done. The legislature of my State voted to ratify one of those amendments which a majority of the people were, are, and always have been opposed to.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I remind the Senator that the legislature of his State ratified an amendment to the Federal Constitution, the subject matter of which had been voted upon in the State of Massachusetts and the people not only in the State at large but in every county, every city, every town, and every ward but two in the State rejected it.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The legislature thereafter ratified it in spite of that vote.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I thank the Senator for elaborating upon my statement. Massachusetts, however, is not the only State that could be cited.

Mr. President, I restate the proposition. There has been such an operation of the provisions in our law for amending the Constitution that abuses have grown up so that it is possible in the future, as it has actually happened in the past, that there may be incorporated in the fundamental law of this country amendments to the people's Constitution that they themselves would not approve if they should be submitted to them? What additional reasons are needed to necessitate a change? Is such a system tending to make democracy secure and inviolate in America?

How can this be prevented? What remedy is proposed? Place, some say, another check upon State legislatures where, in some, irregularities or abuses have been practiced; change the constitution in order to make it a little more difficult for the State legislature to act arbitrarily and defeat the popular will.

Even if there have been evils, if there have been irregularities, but the public will has not been nullified, then the importance of a change is of little consequence. The real complaint, let us not forget, is that it is possible for State legislatures to fasten upon the American people amendments to their Constitution which they themselves do not want; that minority groups, political or sinister influences, can control a sufficient number of the legislators of the several States to change the organic law that the people do not desire changed, and the people must remain helpless, must accept the verdict of their legislatures despite their own desires and regardless of the unworthy motives or improper influences exerted upon their legislatures.

Mr. President, there is only one remedy that is honest, that is straightforward and direct—it is to give to the people themselves the power to determine their organic law. When Congress proposes a change in the Constitution we should submit the proposal, not to State legislatures that may be manipulated politically, corruptly, or otherwise, as such bodies have been occasionally manipulated, but to the people themselves. This argument can not be refuted effectively. There is no answer except an evasive one. The antithesis to this proposition is that the agencies or representatives of the people have a right to misrepresent the judgment of the people and the people must remain helpless and powerless if they do so. If the people have any inherent rights at all, it is the right to change their Constitution, to determine their form of government. Yes, Mr. President, they have the right to make mistakes, but no legislature has a right to make mistakes, inadvertent as they might be.

Therefore I shall support the only direct way of correcting methods that have been and may again be employed to thwart the people from expressing themselves about the basic law of the country under which they shall live, under which they shall serve, under which they shall, if necessary, fight and die. They can not have abiding respect for a constitutional amendment in which they do not believe and which is fastened upon them against their judgment—in the manner in which it was done in my State—by legislative action contrary to the clearly expressed sentiment of the people. Such possibilities make for indifference and distrust of it not eventually utter disrespect and disregard for the laws of the country.

Mr. President, if we are really in earnest and sincerely trying to find an improved method by which to change and correct these irregularities, abuses, evils, whatever you want to call them, it is to go directly to the people and submit any proposed constitutional amendment to them. After the people act there can be no further questioning of the popular will and authority.

As to the amendment of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], I do not see any special danger in it. So strongly do I favor the submission of constitutional amendments to the people that I would accept his amendment even if it makes for indirect action and delay. I do not think it contributes greatly to obtaining a more direct and intelligent expression from the people. I would prefer not to have it inserted, but if it will help get the two-thirds votes in the Senate necessary to give the people the final word on their Constitution, I will accept it, but on that ground only. If we can not obtain a direct road to the people, I would take an indirect one as long as it is possible to get their final verdict before they are bound.

Mr. President, the desideratum to insist upon is that the people themselves shall finally, at some stage in the proceedings to change their Constitution, say what they want their organic law to be.

I am not alarmed about the agitations to amend the Constitution. Those who talk about the people not being trusted in the amending of their own Constitution are really at heart distrustful of popular government. Only a very few amendments have been made to our Constitution that are not now practically unanimously approved by our people.

When you assert that the election of Senators by direct vote instead of by legislatures was a mistake, I ask you to say which Senator here elected by a constituency in one of the States should not be here? Are you charging that a mistake was made because in the opinion of some the caliber of the Senate has deteriorated, because there are not as many millionaires, because there are not as many social celebrities or highly educated men here as there used to be?

The test of whether the Senate has deteriorated or not is whether we are turning out legislation that is truly more popular, more inclined to the promotion of the general welfare, that is more and better expressive of the will of all the people and not the test that some, I fear, apply, to wit, that the Senate is not so easily controlled by reactionary forces or special interests. Is not the real reason of you who complain about the Senate since popular elections came the fact that your political theories have been scorned, your political powers have been lessened since the people began to elect? I agree with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] that the people are conservative, more conservative than some legislatures, and, indeed, I believe not so likely to be influenced by minorities or selfish political interests as the legislatures might be. The people of the several States can be relied upon as well as the legislatures to protect State rights, even more so than the legislatures themselves. There is a deeper and more sincere appreciation manifested and inherent in the body politic for their constitution, especially its fundamental principles, than with which we credit them.

Mr. President, there is one and only one way to remedy this condition, and it is to leave the decision to the people. Trust them. They have a right to make mistakes, but their legislators have no right to make mistakes for them. The agent has no business to be mistaken if he can get an honest expression of judgment of his principal. The people should and must, if democracy is to grow and be a reality, have this right, and we should at once rid ourselves of the possibility of further abuses of legislatures when passing upon constitutional amendments.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, it appeals to me to be particularly important that we should adopt the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES]. As I interpret the resolution before us, without the adoption of that amendment we are really accomplishing very little. The results at least might be doubtful. The resolution as it has been modified or perfected, without the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington, as has been brought out by questions on the floor, does not finally refer a proposed constitutional amendment to the people unless the legislature desires to have that action taken; in other words, unless the legislature by an act of the legislature, or amendment of the State constitution providing for it, refers it to the public for a referendum vote of all the people. There can not be any other interpretation of the proposed amendment without the acceptance of the amendment of the Senator from Washington. To me, and, I am sure, to every Senator, its meaning is perfectly clear:

That any State may provide for a popular vote to affirm or reverse the action of its legislature, such vote to stand in lieu of prior action of the legislature.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator is not reading the amendment of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. EDGE. I am reading now from the resolution as modified by its introducer, the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], with the anticipation that we will finally reach that resolution. The effect of it, as I have said, is perfectly clear. If the legislature, acting arbitrarily, as suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], decides to ratify or not to ratify a proposed constitutional amendment referred to the country by the Congress and declines to refer the resolution to the people for a popular vote, of course, the people would have no opportunity to vote upon it.

I entirely agree with the Senator from Massachusetts that there have been occasions where the vote of the people of the States would undoubtedly have changed the action taken by the legislature. Therefore, there is reason for the passage of some constitutional amendment to correct that evil, and I fail to see where we are really accomplishing the apparent undeniable purpose by making it permissive with the legislature. It is just the type of legislature that arbitrarily refuses to permit the people to vote that the Congress wants to reach. We can not reach them if we leave it entirely within their jurisdiction as to whether they are going to refer it to the people or otherwise.

Therefore, if we are adopting an amendment to the Federal Constitution which will later cause constitutional amendments to be referred to the people of every State in the Union, let us at least give the States the opportunity, when their legislatures meet to consider it, to ratify the constitutional amendment that will not only permit the people, possibly, to vote, but will make it positive that the people of every State in the Union will have the opportunity to vote on any change in the organic law of the Nation.

It appeals to me that in these days particularly, where the State of the public mind seems to be of a higher tension than it was, generally speaking, before we engaged in the war, where extreme viewpoints seem to take hold of certain sections of the country or the population of certain sections of the country, and those viewpoints are so far different and—I have been hesitating to use the word, but I will use it, because, perhaps, it is the only word I can use to express my viewpoint—so radical in comparison with the general trend of the public mind of eight or ten years ago, when these thoughts seemed to develop with great rapidity and, as has been said by several Senators in the course of the debate, we are now receiving and considering more suggestions to amend the organic law of the land, then it makes it all the more important, in my judgment, that an amendment should be adopted to the Constitution making it even more difficult to change the organic law.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President—

Mr. EDGE. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. WILLIS. I wish to call the attention of the Senator to the fact that the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] does not apply to the Wadsworth amendment, so called, but is intended to apply to the substitute therefor; so that if the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington shall be adopted, it will have no effect at all upon the original proposition.

Mr. EDGE. I thoroughly appreciate the parliamentary situation, and I stated, in answer to a question of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN], that I was directing my remarks to the amendment which had been proposed by the Senator from Washington, recognizing that as it now appears before the Senate it is an amendment to the so-called Walsh substitute, as stated by the Senator from Ohio. My main purpose, however, was to discuss briefly what I consider the necessity for mandatory action upon the part of the people. If this amendment to the Walsh substitute be adopted, then, of course, the Walsh substitute, as amended, will come before the Senate for adoption or rejection as an amendment to the original proposal of the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH]. It seems, by an analysis of the debate, that the Senate believes that some amendment along this line is proper, judicious, and wise, but there seems to be a difference of opinion as to just the form the amendment should take. That seems to be the only difference that is expressed on the floor.

I suggest that we should at least get the amendment into such form as to make sure that we will accomplish the fundamental desire and not leave to the legislatures of some States, or all the States, so far as that is concerned, unless their State constitutions provide otherwise the same power that they have to-day. By the adoption of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington we shall at least have met and solved that problem, so far as the Walsh substitute is concerned.

Speaking personally, I should like to embody the same suggestion in the Wadsworth proposal in order that the legislatures may be an intermediary. That is where I differ with the Walsh proposal. I believe that the legislature should be an intermediary and that the opportunity on their part to discuss a suggested amendment to the organic law would be helpful and might postpone action upon the part of the people. If it should, in my judgment, in most cases such postponement would be justified and warranted and would probably be for the best interest of the people of all the country. So I shall be very glad to see provided that additional check, if it may be called that, in order to make it just that much more difficult to amend the organic law, by the legislatures first considering, and disposing if they see fit, of a proposed amendment submitted by Congress, and then denying them the power to take it out of the hands of the public to make a final decision.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, I am in favor of the Jones amendment. I voted in the committee for the Walsh amendment because it proposed always to refer the matter to the people for settlement. We may always trust the people. The difference between the Wadsworth amendment and the Walsh amendment is that the Wadsworth amendment proposes to submit the question of ratification first to the legislatures, with the power given to the legislatures to refer the matter to the people, but provides that one house of the legislature must be elected after the submission by Congress of the amendment for ratification. It provides that the question of ratification may not be voted upon unless one branch of the legislature shall have been elected since the submission of the amendment. It is provided, however, that the State may do so and so, so that there may be an entire lack of uniformity, as has been argued by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS]. In the State of North Carolina the legislature might refer the question to the people; the Legislature of New York might refuse to do so. Therefore, we would have one method followed in one section of the country and another method followed in another section. The Walsh amendment, however, requires that the question shall be submitted directly to the people. In order to compose these differences and that we may, if possible, all get together, as all seem, with a few exceptions, to be working to the same end, let the question of the ratification of constitutional amendments be first submitted to the legislatures, as the Jones amendment provides. Let the question be submitted to the legislatures and let the legislatures discuss it. I think it is wise that the legislatures should discuss it. In order that the people may better understand the question on which they are called upon to vote; but, no matter what the action of the legislature may be, either affirmative or negative, let the question of the ratification of amendments be submitted to the people. With a few exceptions, that seems to be what we all desire.

Mr. President, shall the condition longer continue that less than 4,000 men out of 110,000,000 people shall have power to amend our organic law? That is what has been happening; that is what has been done. In this day of lobbying and of propaganda the people can not say whether they are in favor of a constitutional amendment or against it. Four thousand men, or ever less than 4,000 men, under our present system can say whether or not an amendment shall be added to this charter, this organic law of ours.

Such a condition ought not to be permitted longer to exist. We should permit the people to decide the question of the ratification of amendments. The people always act wisely. Have not the people always acted wisely in the States? They settle their own constitutional questions in every State of the Union. Then let them settle the question of the ratification of amendments to the National Constitution in the same manner as they have settled those questions wisely in the States.

Therefore I am in favor of the Jones amendment, because, I say, it will compose the differences which exist amongst Senators on this question. I think if the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington shall be adopted, the Senator from New York will vote for the substitute for the joint resolution as reported by the committee, and I think that every Senator who believes that the legislature ought to have some share in deciding the question of the ratification of amendments will vote for the Walsh amendment, so called, as reported by the committee. Mr. President, I hope that the so-called Jones amendment may be adopted.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, it is unnecessary, I think, to review this subject at any length at all. I confess to some hesitation about tinkering with the Constitution. I think the Constitution is a remarkable instrument. Some of the Senators who have discussed it have undertaken to quote Viscount Bryce on it, I believe, and perhaps complimented him on his great work, The American Commonwealth; but it was Gladstone who said that it was "the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man." In the face of the proposals to amend the Constitution which have been submitted in both branches of Congress, and about which we hear so much, I feel that we ought to see to it that this great instrument is protected against any hasty, ill-conceived proposal of amendment. Whenever I hear the rumbling of a resolution proposing to amend the Constitution I almost feel like raising the sign we see at railroad crossings, "Stop! Look! Listen!"

I am not opposed to the thought that is suggested in the Walsh or committee amendment that the people of the various States ought to pass upon any proposed amendment submitted to them by Congress. I think that is an advisable thing to do. The Senator from Washington proposes to add to that a requirement for action by the legislatures. I really see no objection to that. It seems to me that perhaps it would be worth while to secure the judgment and the opinion and the recommendation of the legislature in each State.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. FLETCHER. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. If it has to go to the legislature first, will not that make it very much more cumbersome and make it very much harder for an amendment finally to get to the people? As it is now, we have in a way a comparatively simple method of amending our Constitution, namely, both bodies of Congress have to pass on a proposed amendment by a two-thirds majority, and then it has to be ratified by three-fourths of the legislatures of the States; but if we add to that another ratification, so as to make one by Congress, another by the legislatures, and another by the people, will not that take a long time, and will it not make the method very cumbersome?

Mr. FLETCHER. I think, perhaps, it will cause some delay—perhaps, as the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] has said, two years' delay—but we now have to submit proposed amendments to the legislatures, and they have to act. In this instance we are simply not limiting ratification to the action of the legislature, but the proposal which seems to meet with great favor here is that a proposed amendment shall be submitted as well to the electors of the various States, and that is the essential thing. Providing that it shall go to the legislatures first does not do away with the necessity of submitting it to the electors of the States, nor does the action of the legislatures conclude the matter. The action of the legislatures, if this amendment shall be adopted as proposed by the Senator from Washington, simply means that we will get the best thought and judgment of the legislature in each State upon the subject, and we will get the recommendation of the legislative body. That recommendation may be accepted or may not be accepted by the electors of the State. It will have weight one way or the other, no doubt, and if the legislature has seriously considered the subject—and the legislature probably will do that—its action should have weight with the electors; but it will not bind the electors in any way and will not be conclusive. The action of the State will be the action of the electors, without regard to what the legislature may or may not do.

I see no objection to that amendment. I propose to vote for the amendment of the Senator from Washington, and also for the so-called Walsh substitute, as amended, for the original joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Dale	Jones, Wash.	Robinson
Ball	Dial	Lodge	Sheppard
Bayard	Dill	McKellar	Shields
Borah	Edge	McNary	Smith
Brandeggee	Ferris	Mayfield	Stephens
Brookhart	Foss	Moses	Swanson
Broussard	Fletcher	Neely	Wadsworth
Bruce	George	Norris	Walsh, Mass.
Bursum	Gerry	Oddie	Walsh, Mont.
Cameron	Hale	Overman	Weller
Capper	Harris	Pepper	Willis
Caraway	Heflin	Ralston
Cummins	Howell	Randall
Curtis	Johnson, Minn.	Reed, Pa.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to repeat the announcement I made earlier in the day, that the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is detained from the Senate on account of illness. I wish that announcement to stand for the day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-three Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, before the amendment is voted upon, may I ask that the Secretary state for the information of the Senate the proposition as it would read if the amendment of the Senator from Washington were adopted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment which the Senate has adopted to the original joint resolution.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish the Secretary would first read the amendment itself, so that we will know how it would read if it were not adopted.

The READING CLERK. The original joint resolution reads as follows:

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of each House shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by three-fourths of the several States through their legislatures or conventions, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress or the convention.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I interrupt the reading merely to say that the Senator from Nebraska meant, when he made the request, that the original Walsh resolution be read, and then that it be read as it would read if the amendment were adopted.

Mr. NORRIS. I want read the particular amendment to which the amendment of the Senator from Washington is applied, first as it is now, and then as it would be if it were amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that but one amendment has been adopted to the original Wadsworth joint resolution; and the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] is an amendment to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. NORRIS. That is my understanding; yes. Now let us have the substitute read without the amendment, and then read with it.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, the matter before the Senate is the report of the committee. It is called the Walsh amendment, but it is the report of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the amendment proposed by the committee, but it is the amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] in the committee.

The READING CLERK. The substitute proposed by the committee reads as follows:

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or upon the application of two-thirds of the legislatures of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid, to all intents and purposes, as a part of this Constitution when ratified by a vote of the qualified electors in three-fourths of the several States, said election to be held under such rules and regulations as each State shall prescribe, and that until three-fourths of the States shall have ratified, or more than one-fourth of the States shall have rejected, a proposed amendment, any State may in like manner change its vote: Provided, That if at any time more than one-fourth of the States have rejected the proposed amendment, said rejection shall be final, and further consideration thereof by the States shall cease: Provided further, That any amendment proposed hereunder shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution, as provided in the Constitution, within six years from the date of submission thereof to the States by the Congress: Provided further, That no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

If the amendments offered by the Senator from Washington are agreed to, it will read as follows:

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution or, upon the application of two-thirds of the legislatures of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be submitted to the legislatures of the several States, and shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as a part of this Constitution, when ratified by a vote of the qualified electors in three-fourths of the several States after affirmative or negative action by the respective legislatures, said election to be held under such rules and regulations as each State shall prescribe, and that until three-fourths of the States shall have ratified, or more than one-fourth of the States shall have rejected, a proposed amendment, any State may in like manner change its vote—

And so forth.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is upon agreeing to the amendments proposed by the Senator from Washington to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I shall vote against the amendments offered by the Senator from Washington on the ground that they will but make the matter more cumbersome. I see no possible use in submitting the matter to the legislature without the legislature having any power or authority over it. As I understand the amendments, whether the legislature passes or rejects a proposed constitutional amendment, it does not prevent its submission to the people, and the people are to pass on it. Surely, if that is a correct interpretation of the amendments they ought not to be adopted by the Senate.

In my judgment, the amendment that has been reported by the committee is an improvement upon the present method of ratifying constitutional amendments. I do not see why anyone should be unwilling to submit an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to the people of the several States instead of to the legislatures. I think it would be a better way. I think it would bring about a better situation. It would make people more satisfied with the result of the action of the Congress and of the States in adopting amendments. It would probably lead us to pay more respect to the amendments after they are adopted.

For that reason I am going to vote for the amendment as reported by the committee. Unless that amendment is adopted, as it appears to me now, there will not be an improvement upon the present situation.

I have read the proposals offered as substitutes. They seem to me to be very cumbersome and not any better than the plan that we have now. I do not see that they are any improvement at all, and unless I change my mind I shall vote against all the amendments except the one reported by the committee, which I think ought to be adopted.

I merely wanted to state my position upon the matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DIAL (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] and vote "yea."

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GREENE] and vote "yea."

Mr. NORRIS (when Mr. SHIPSTEAD's name was called). I desire to announce that if the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STELLING], and in his absence I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I transfer my general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD] to the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], and vote "nay."

Mr. OVERMAN. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN], but I understand that if present he would vote as I shall vote, and I vote "yea."

Mr. SIMMONS (after having voted in the affirmative). May I inquire whether the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. HARREL] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. SIMMONS. I transfer my pair with that Senator to the junior Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. GLASS. May I inquire whether the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McLEAN] has voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not voted.

Mr. GLASS. I have a general pair with that Senator, and in his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLL] with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL];

The senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCOMBICK] with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]; and

The junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FURST] with the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 29, as follows:

YEAS—34
Ball	Bursum	Dale	Gooding
Bayard	Cameron	Dial	Hale
Brandegge	Capper	Edge	Jones, Wash.
Broussard	Caraway	Edwards	Keyes
Brace	Curtis	Fletcher	King

Lodge	Overman	Simmons	Watson
McNary	Pepper	Stephens	Weller
Moses	Reed, Pa.	Wadsworth
Oddie	Shields	Walsh, Mass.
NAYS—29.
Adams	Frazier	Kendrick	Robinson
Ashurst	George	McKellar	Sheppard
Borah	Gerry	Mayfield	Swanson
Brookhart	Harris	Neely	Walsh, Mont.
Cummins	Heflin	Norris	Willis
Dill	Howell	Pittman
Ferris	Johnson, Minn.	Ralston
Fess	Jones, N. Mex.	Ransdell
NOT VOTING—33.
Colt	Harrison	Owen	Stanley
Copeland	Johnson, Calif.	Philips	Sterling
Couzens	Ladd	Reed, Mo.	Trammell
Elkins	La Follette	Shipstead	Underwood
Ernst	Lenroot	Shortridge	Warren
Fernald	McCormack	Smith	Wheeler
Glass	McKinley	Smoot
Greene	McLenn	Spencer
Harrell	Norbeck	Stanfield

So the amendment of Mr. JONES of Washington to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee as amended.

Mr. HOWELL. I wish to offer an amendment to the committee amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment to the amendment.

The READING CLERK. In line 17, on page 3, strike out the word "six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight," so as to read:

Provided further, That any amendment proposed hereunder shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution as provided in the Constitution within eight years from the date of submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, this proposed amendment to the Constitution would limit the time within which an amendment to that instrument could be acted upon by a State. It may be that such a limitation would be wise, but certainly under the circumstances, in view of the adoption of the amendment we have just agreed to, the time, 6 years, should be extended to at least 8 years, if not 10. However I have submitted an amendment extending the limitation to 8 years.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. HOWELL. I yield.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator, and I do not speak for the committee, but in my opinion there is a reason for the Senator's suggestion, and in view of the fact that we have provided by the amendment just agreed to that the matter should go to the legislatures first, which would take a little more time, I think it is quite reasonable that we make the period eight years instead of six. I favor the Senator's amendment to the amendment.

Mr. HOWELL. Under the present circumstances, in view of the amendment just agreed to, and even irrespective of that amendment, only two legislatures would have the opportunity of acting upon any proposed amendment to the Constitution. I think at least three legislatures should be allowed the opportunity of acting upon a proposed amendment to the Constitution, and therefore I have offered this amendment, and I trust it will prevail.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, whatever merit or lack of merit there may have been in this amendment as it addressed itself to the proposed constitutional amendment as it originally stood it seems to me imperative that the amendment now tendered by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Howell] should be adopted, because the inevitable result of the amendment we have just agreed to would be to defer the adoption of any amendment to the Constitution for two years.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I have been absent from the Senate a good share of the day and have not heard much of the debate that took place. Perhaps if I had heard it I would have felt differently about the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones], which has just been agreed to. To my mind that is a very serious handicap to the working of the substitute proposed by the committee, and I hope the Senate will not vote on this to-night, although I am not in a position to ask that it be delayed just on my account; but I would like to look into it, and possibly look over the Record and read the arguments which have been made.

To my mind the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington would go a good way toward destroying what I believe would be the effectiveness of the substitute. To provide that a proposed amendment must first be submitted to the legislatures to make that imperative, and then provide imperatively that after the legislatures have passed on the amendment, no matter which way they pass on it, it must then be submitted to a vote of the people is providing for an unnecessary waste of time and energy.

I presume the answer to that would be that there would be debate in the legislature enlightening to the people. I doubt that very much. I doubt very much whether there would be any debate in the legislature when the legislature knew it did not make a particle of difference what they did; that it would not count for anything. There would be no interest in a debate here on a legislative proposition coming before us if we knew that no matter which way we decided it would have no effect whatever; that somebody else had to pass finally on the question.

I would be glad to see every State having the referendum apply it and let the people vote on any proposed amendment, but to provide positively that a legislature must first pass on it, and then positively that their judgment would not count for anything, no matter what it was, that the amendment would have to go before the people would only mean delay, as I look at it. I think, therefore, that my colleague's amendment is extremely important now.

A State might provide through its legislature for a method of submitting constitutional amendments to the people and getting a vote perhaps at the next general election. Suppose an amendment should be submitted just at the time a legislature had adjourned? In most States they only have a legislature once in two years and some of them not that often. It would lie there dormant before any other step could be taken until the legislature convened again for the purpose of having the legislature pass on it, when we positively provide by law that no matter which way it passes on it it shall have no effect whatever. I feel doubtful, with that amendment added on to the so-called Walsh substitute or committee substitute, whether I would be justified in voting for the matter itself when it comes to the final vote.

Some people want to make it difficult to amend the Constitution. Others want to simplify it. There is argument on both sides. I concede absolutely that there is good argument each way, but I can not conceive of any argument that simply calls for delay, and that is what I think we have done with this amendment. We have made it so there is bound to be delay. An amendment ought to be debated and ought to be discussed, but to arbitrarily put it over almost an unlimited length of time is very injudicious, it seems to me.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. WADSWORTH. In so far as submission to the legislatures is concerned, in the first instance, the Senator would not contend that there would be no more delay under the Jones amendment than there is to-day under the present situation?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Why?

Mr. NORRIS. Because the legislature must act on it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I mean so far as submission to the legislature is concerned.

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, yes; but when the legislature gets through with it we have not accomplished anything. We have to go to the people after that.

Mr. WADSWORTH. There is a very decided difference of opinion there.

Mr. NORRIS. There is no need for the action of the legislature. It has to be voted on by the people.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator from New York misunderstood the phrase "when the legislature gets through with it we have not accomplished anything." A lot of us think it will accomplish a very worthy purpose.

Mr. NORRIS. I have not heard the debate, but I suppose the Senator's idea is that in the legislature there would be instructive debate—

Mr. WADSWORTH. Most decidedly.

Mr. NORRIS. And constructive criticism. I doubt very much whether many of the members of the legislature would waste their time when they know they will have no effect on it no matter what they do.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. NORRIS. Certainly.

Mr. PEPPER. Is not the process under the amendment similar to that which takes place when a court of first instance passes on a question within its jurisdiction, knowing that its negative or affirmative decision will be subject to review on ultimate appeal?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; but when the appeal comes—

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, Mr. President, does the Senator mean just exactly that? The judgment of the lower court is quite efficacious because the losing litigant may or may not appeal. If he does not appeal the decree or judgment of the lower court is final and binding on everybody, but it makes no difference what the legislature does under the amendment, it is binding on nobody.

Mr. PEPPER. But when the lower court is exercising its functions it does not know whether there is to be an appeal or not, and it gives the same consideration to the matter as if it did know.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes, of course. If there was a law which provided that the decision of the court in this kind of a case would not have any effect no matter how it decided any question, I do not believe the court would give much attention to the cases.

Let me call the attention of the able lawyer from Pennsylvania to the practice that I think prevails in most States in ejectment cases. Most State laws provide—and they do it because it has come down to them from ancient days and they have not got away from that old fiction—that in an ejectment either party can have a new trial by making a written request. I think that is the law in a great many States. I have tried a good many ejectment cases and have been in them a good many times. Everybody knew when we were trying the case the first time that it did not make any difference what the verdict was. It would be a jury trial, and there would be a jury in the box, and the case would be submitted to the jury; but they knew that when the case was over the losing party was going to make a written request for a new trial, and that as a matter of law the judge had to give it to them. What happened? I never yet saw an ejectment case in the first trial that was ever fought. It was a matter of form only. Nobody cared what the judgment was. Nobody would make any effort to win the case the first time. The jury was impaneled and sworn, but nobody offered any evidence and the jury would return a verdict in favor of the defendant, and then a new trial would be granted, and when the next trial came on there would be a real contest. As a matter of fact it was just the same in the end as though there had been but one trial, only they had taken twice as long to do it and extended the time at least over one term of court.

Mr. PEPPER. With the Senator's permission, I would observe that there is this fundamental distinction between the case he suggests and the one before us: In the familiar instance of the two verdicts in ejectment the jury that considers the second case is not permitted to be made aware of the result of the first one. Therefore the analogy breaks down. In the present case the electors are advised of what has occurred in the legislature and, unless all experience counts for nothing, would be materially affected by the decision, affirmative or negative, reached by the legislature. But surely the Senator does not mean to suggest that merely because the body that has jurisdiction of a matter in the first instance is subject to review upon its decision, therefore it is to be anticipated that it will give no consideration to the matter?

Mr. NORRIS. No, I do not claim that. The Senator must not put me in that attitude. If there is a real contest for blood it will give some information to the people, but there will be none, as I believe the facts will demonstrate. There will be no contest there because it is idle, it is foolish to waste time for nothing. In other words, it would be just the same as an ejectment case. I do not know of any reason, at least if it were tried to the court, why the court would not know who won the case the first time. Perhaps six months would elapse and nobody would care. They would not turn over a page to see who won the case the first time, because it means nothing. It is an absolute fiction of law, a relic of ancient days.

Mr. McKELLAR. May I suggest to the Senator that there is an analogy, speaking of the court—

Mr. NORRIS. Let me first reply just a little further to the Senator from Pennsylvania. The able Senator from Pennsylvania said that they would have the benefit of the contest that went on in the legislature, and that they would know what the result was there, and that we ought not to deny an appeal to the people. I would not want to deny an appeal to the people. If I had my way, if I could draft this amendment to suit myself, I would provide for submission to the legislature just as it is now, and then provide that in any State having the referendum, that provision of their constitution should apply to this matter, and an appeal should be taken from the legislature to the people under the referendum provision of the constitution and the people should vote on it.

But that would still leave the real contest in the legislature. It is like a trial in the district court, a real contest for blood, but the right of appeal still exists and either party, if they can furnish the necessary bond or show the right kind of error or possible error in the court, can carry it on to the higher court. I think that is entirely different from where we provide by law that after the first trial we will have a new trial if anybody asks for it. Just as soon as we do that, it seems to me, we make a mockery of the first trial. The result is only delay. If we have a worthy amendment to the Constitution that the people want, there ought to be an expeditious way of getting it into the law.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. NORRIS. I promised to yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I just want to make this suggestion: The Senator from Pennsylvania suggested the analogy of a court. Let us assume this state of facts. In some of the States they have what are known as intermediate courts—first a trial court, then the court of appeals, and finally the supreme court. Suppose somebody should propose that the court of appeals, for instance, should decide the case; but it would not have any effect, because it might be appealed to the supreme court. Could anybody bring themselves to vote for such a proposition as that in our judicial procedure? I think not. But that is virtually what is being done here. We are submitting it to a tribunal and taking away from that tribunal any power over it.

Mr. NORRIS. And if we had that provision which the Senator from Tennessee suggests—that they could take it away from the intermediate court by simply asking it—then who would care who were the judges of the intermediate court?

Mr. McKELLAR. They would pay no attention to it, of course.

Mr. NORRIS. I yield now to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. As I understand the amendment which is before the Senate, it proposes to extend the time to eight years. I would suggest that if we dispose of that amendment this evening, then if the Senator wants to reconsider the Jones amendment I would vote to reconsider it in the morning.

Mr. NORRIS. Did the Senator vote for it?

Mr. BORAH. I voted against it.

Mr. NORRIS. Then the Senator could not make that motion. I voted the same way, and I can not make the motion, either. I have no objection to a vote on the amendment of my colleague. I think it is apparent to everybody, if we are going to have the Jones amendment that we ought to have my colleague's amendment.

Mr. SHIELDS. Mr. President—

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. SHIELDS. The Senator from Nebraska will, of course, concede that there will be an opportunity to debate it in the general assemblies.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I will concede that.

Mr. SHIELDS. Will he also concede that the same character of men will compose the State general assemblies that compose the United States Senate? If so, it would certainly be debated.

There is one other point I want to make. I think perhaps beyond question there is nothing but Divine Providence that could keep it from being debated by the same class of men who, like Members of the Senate, are inclined to talk. There is some effect in having it so discussed, because it goes to the people with the prestige of having been approved or rejected by the general assembly, and though in many cases it ought to have very little effect, yet upon a great many people it will have some effect. It is a prima facie case either for or against.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not believe there will be a prima facie case made either way. If it is a prima facie case, it will be made of evidence that can be very easily rebutted and overthrown. It is the same as an ejectment case. There the plaintiff makes out a prima facie case in the first trial or fails to make any case at all by not offering any evidence, which is usually the situation, and thereupon the defendant wins because the burden of proof is on the plaintiff and he offers no evidence. That does not have any effect on the next trial.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I agree very thoroughly with the Senator from Nebraska that we should extend the period to eight years.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr.

Howell] to the amendment reported by the committee as amended.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is upon agreeing to the committee amendment, by way of a substitute for the original joint resolution, as amended.

Mr. NORRIS. I would like to inquire of the Senator from New York if he expects to dispose of this measure to-night?

Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator from New York is not chairman of the committee, and it is a committee report. The Senator from Connecticut has charge of it.

Mr. NORRIS. Does the Senator from Connecticut expect to dispose of the matter to-night?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I have no information about it whatever.

Mr. NORRIS. It is now a quarter past 5, and unless the Senator does want to dispose of it to-night I suggest that we stop for the day.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I was going to say that the subject mentioned by the Senator from Nebraska, who says he has not been on the floor very much to-day, has been virtually the subject of debate all day long here, and has been discussed by many Senators and they have voted in view of that discussion. Now, I do not—

Mr. NORRIS. I am not putting my personal wishes against those of the Senate, of course. In view of what the Senator from Connecticut has stated I am not in any position to ask that the joint resolution go over for the day if Senators desire to conclude the discussion to-night.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It is immaterial to me; I wish to accommodate the Senator; but I know if we let the joint resolution go over to-night some other Senator, perhaps, will want it to go over further.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I had thought that the subject had been pretty well exhausted and that we might get a vote.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I ask for the yeas and nays. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ASHURST. Let the amendment be reported, Mr. President.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, just before the vote is taken, may I have an opportunity to speak a sentence or two setting forth my attitude?

I think the Jones amendment, which has now been adopted to the Walsh amendment, so called, makes it very much better than it was before. In fact, I think the actual practical workings of the amendment, if it becomes a part of the Constitution, will be very much like those under the original joint resolution which was introduced by myself. There are two or three little differences, however. For example, the State conventions will be abolished under the Walsh amendment. I rather regret that, although I do not think it is controlling. On a roll call, I think I should vote in favor of the original joint resolution; but I am bound to say that the committee amendment, as perfected by the Jones amendment, is pretty satisfactory.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I think the question ought to be stated. I do not know what we are to vote on.

Mr. BURSUM. The vote is to be taken on the Howell amendment.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Oh, no.

Mr. OVERMAN. The vote is to be upon the Walsh amendment as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state what the Senate is voting upon whenever the Senate shall be in order. [Applause.] The Senate is voting upon the question of substituting for the original Wadsworth joint resolution, as amended, the amendment reported by the committee as amended.

The reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DIAL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REES] and vote "yea."

Mr. McNARY (when the name of Mr. JOHNSON of California was called). The senior Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] is of necessity absent from the Senate. I am advised, however, that if he were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. JONES of New Mexico (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD] to the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] and vote "yea."

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before in reference to my pair and its transfer, I vote "yea."

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN], but knowing that if present he would vote as I intend to vote, I shall vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. NORRIS (when Mr. SHIPSTEAD's name was called). I have been requested to announce that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is absent, as I have previously stated, on account of illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. SMITH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] and vote "yea."

Mr. FLETCHER (when Mr. TRAMMELL's name was called). My colleague, the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL], is unavoidably absent. He is paired with the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GLASS. I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McLEAN] to the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] and vote "yea."

Mr. JONES of Washington. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS] is necessarily absent, having been called from the Chamber. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL];

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCORMICK] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWENS]; and

The junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. ERNST] with the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

The result was announced—yeas 51, nays 12, as follows:

YEAS—51.

Bayard	Ferris	Jones, Wash.	Ralston
Borah	Fletcher	Kendrick	Robinson
Brandegee	Frazier	Keyes	Sheppard
Broussard	George	Lodge	Shields
Bruce	Gerry	McKellar	Simmons
Bursum	Glass	McKinley	Smith
Cameron	Gooding	McNary	Stephens
Capper	Hale	Mayfield	Swanson
Caraway	Harrell	Moses	Walsh, Mass.
Cummins	Harris	Oddie	Walsh, Mont.
Dial	Heflin	Overman	Watson
Edge	Johnson, Minn.	Pepper	Weller
Edwards	Jones, N. Mex.	Pittman

NAYS—12.

Adams	Dill	King	Reed, Pa.
Brookhart	Foss	Neely	Wadsworth
Dale	Howell	Norris	Willis

NOT VOTING—33.

Ashurst	Greene	Owen	Stanley
Ball	Harrison	Phipps	Sterling
Colt	Johnson, Calif.	Randall	Trammell
Copeland	Ladd	Reed, Mo.	Underwood
Cowan	La Follette	Shipstead	Warren
Curtis	Lenroot	Shortridge	Wheeler
Edkins	McCormick	Smoot
Ernst	McLean	Spencer
Fernald	Norbeck	Stanfield

So the committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I did not vote on the last roll call. I saw no practical way to give expression to my true view of the question. I may be in error, but I fear that by adding the Jones amendment we have, with due respect to the author of the amendment, made it more difficult to amend the Federal Constitution. We have certainly made it, in the point of time, more difficult to do so.

When we started out on this proposal to amend the Constitution there were two differing views, and there was plenty of room for correct thought on each side. It was thought by some that the State legislatures should be the eligible authority to ratify amendments to the Federal Constitution. I have nothing but respect for those who so believe, but I do not agree with that view. The other opinion was that the people themselves, the qualified electors of the several States, should be the eligible authority to ratify amendments proposed to the Federal Constitution.

Now, forsooth, we are confronted with an amendment which proposes that the eligible authority to ratify amendments shall be the legislatures, whose judgment, we declare in advance, is a brutum fulmen—a harmless thunderbolt. I make no charge of bad faith—that would be most offensive—but it seems to me, after all this time and effort, we at least reach the conclusion that we shall double the difficulties in amending the Federal Constitution. For that school of thought which looks with distrust and disfavor upon amendments to the Constitution I have respect; for that school of thought which desires to make it not particularly easier to amend the Constitution but desires to obtain the vote of the people before it shall be amended I have equal respect; but I confess I can not comprehend the mental strabismus that could at this juncture of affairs cause Senators to say, "We will double the difficulty now existing in the way of amending the Federal Constitution." If the Jones amendment shall be kept in this joint resolution, then the joint resolution richly deserves defeat.

When people ask for bread, I do not believe in giving them a stone; when they ask for fish, I do not believe in giving them a serpent; and that is what I fear may happen if we begin by announcing that we are going to give the people some chance to amend the Federal Constitution and, forsooth, conclude our efforts by making it practically impossible for them to do so. However, I shall reflect upon the subject during the evening and it may be that I ought to vote for the same. It may be that I am called upon to do that doubtful thing of choosing the lesser of two evils now presented to me; but I assure Senators if I vote for it, there may be a smile upon my legislative face but there will be many pains in my legislative stomach.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, unlike my distinguished friend the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHUEST], I shall vote without the slightest hesitation against the amendment.

Mr. President, we are now confronted with a straight choice between the committee amendment as amended with the Jones amendment and the existing Constitution. It is a question of which of these two systems we ought to give our adherence to. As I have indicated, my choice is easily made; but it is quite late now, and I have no doubt that the Senators who are desirous of great deliberation in the matter of making amendments to the Constitution probably would be quite willing to let this matter stand over until to-morrow for further debate.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

Mr. LODGE. Of course this is the final vote that is coming now.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. If we could have an agreement to vote at a certain hour to-morrow, that would be satisfactory. Otherwise, I think we had better go on.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I think the suggestion is a good one. What is the suggestion of the Senator?

SEVERAL SENATORS. Let us vote now.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Shall we take a recess?

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President—

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I had hoped that we could get a vote on this matter to-night. It has been the unfinished business for several days. The Senator knows how difficult it is to keep all the Senators on the floor with the various committee meetings that are going on. I think almost everything that can be said pro and con about the merits of this matter has been said. I had assumed that a vote was about to be taken. I hope the Senator will let us vote on the matter to-night and proceed with something else to-morrow.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I assure the Senator that I shall not indulge in any dilatory tactics.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator knows that the members of the Judiciary Committee have had to stay on the floor pretty continuously during this debate, and it has been going on now for several days. It does seem to me that we ought not to take the chance of a lot of new Senators coming in to-morrow and the old ones going away, and having no advantage from the delay.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That is why I suggested going over until to-morrow and fixing a limit on debate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But why go over until to-morrow?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I suggest a limit on debate of 5 or 10 minutes. I have observed that when an agreement of that kind is entered into, and a vote is impending, we have Members here. The unfortunate thing about it is that this tremendously important subject has been before the Senate when the chief discussion has not been listened to by more than a handful of Senators.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I know; but, Mr. President, we rarely have more Senators attending than on the last roll call, which disclosed the presence of over 70 Senators, if I remember correctly; and we shall have difficulty in getting that number to-morrow.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I make a suggestion to the Senator?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to suggest that we agree on a 10-minute limitation, or I am willing to agree on a 5-minute limitation. We have only one question left now, and that is the passage of the joint resolution. Let us agree by unanimous consent that no Senator shall speak more than once nor longer than 10 minutes, and that will run itself out to-morrow.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Five minutes.

Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection to five minutes.

Mr. LODGE. The matter is still open to amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. All right. It is still open to debate.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, of course it is open to debate.

Mr. NORRIS. If Senators want to be technical, there are lots of Senators who will not agree to limiting themselves to five minutes at all and can keep the Senate here for some time.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, undoubtedly. I have witnessed that so often that I know the power of Senators.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; and the Senator has witnessed it so often that he ought to realize that a reasonable request like that is not a filibuster.

Mr. LODGE. I did not suggest that it was a filibuster.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana has the floor.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. I am satisfied that there will be quite a prolonged debate, and that it is not practicable to take a vote this evening. I suggest that the Senator from Massachusetts—

Mr. LODGE. I started to make a suggestion that we agree on an hour to vote; that is all.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have not any objection to that. I think the time has come when an agreement should be reached and a vote taken.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Will the Senator from Massachusetts make some suggestion about it?

Mr. LODGE. I think it would be well to name a reasonable hour to-morrow.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President—

Mr. HEFLIN. Say 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. LODGE. Very well.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I was going to ask the Senate, when we conclude to-day's proceedings, to take a recess; and if we recess until 12 o'clock I ask the Senator from Montana whether he will agree to take a vote not later than 2 o'clock?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Debate to be limited to 10 minutes?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Debate to be limited to 10 minutes.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Not later than 2 o'clock to-morrow?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The joint resolution to be still open to amendment and no Senator to speak on the joint resolution itself or any amendment more than 10 minutes.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I do not anticipate that any further amendment is going to be offered. As far as I know, all amendments have been disposed of, and no Senator is desirous of offering a further amendment. I dislike to object, but it does not seem to me quite fair that we should fix a definite hour for a vote. If we will limit the speeches, we will get the most intelligent discussion, rather than to have some one Senator take up all the time and have others compelled to go without an opportunity to say a word.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not know that the Senator understood the request. It is that no Senator shall speak more than 10 minutes—

Mr. NORRIS. Well, let us stop at that. I have no objection to making it five minutes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. And not have any definite hour fixed?

Mr. NORRIS. And not have any definite hour fixed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I have no objection to that, Mr. President.

I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its session to-day it take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow, and that no Senator be allowed to speak more than 10 minutes upon the joint resolution—

SEVERAL SENATORS. Five minutes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I would say 5 minutes, but the Senator from Montana suggested 10.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me suggest to the Senator that if he will say "not more than 10 minutes, in the aggregate, on the joint resolution and amendments," that will prevent any Senator from offering amendments for the purpose of making speeches.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That is agreeable to me—no Senator to speak more than 10 minutes on the joint resolution and any amendment thereto.

Mr. McKELLAR. Not more than once or more than 10 minutes.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the proposed agreement be stated. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the unanimous-consent agreement as proposed. The reading clerk read as follows:

It is agreed by unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its session to-day it take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow, and no Senator shall be allowed to speak more than once nor longer than 10 minutes on the resolution (S. J. Res. 4) and any amendment thereto.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That states my understanding of it.

Mr. LODGE. That is right.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senate understand that the word "and" is used, so that—

Mr. BRANDEGEE. So that no Senator can speak more than 10 minutes on the joint resolution and any amendment thereto—both together.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the agreement as proposed? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The question is upon the joint resolution as amended. Will the Senate propose to the various States the joint resolution as it has been amended? That is the question before the Senate at this moment, and the Chair is of the opinion that the roll must be called.

RECESS.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 44 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Wednesday, March 26, 1924, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Tuesday, March 25, 1924.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. Our Father in heaven, verify this merciful promise unto us. Our duties await us, and let Thy wisdom be applied unto each. May all our hearts be vitally touched by the love of the Master and an unceasing desire to help men and homes and make our Nation wiser and better. Teach us that faith in God and a life of Christian fraternity can redeem us from a life of fear and the dread of fate. Give us the will to yield ourselves to Thee both now and ever, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

S. 243. An act for the relief of Frank Vumbaca;

S. 334. An act for the relief of Kate Canniff;

S. 970. An act for the relief of the De Kimpke Construction Co., of West Hoboken, N. J.;

S. 85. An act to carry into effect the finding of the Court of Claims in the claim of Elizabeth B. Eddy;

S. 107. An act for the relief of John H. McAtee;

S. 114. An act to vacate certain streets and alleys within the area known as the Walter Reed General Hospital, District of Columbia, and to authorize the extension and widening of Fourteenth Street from Montague Street to its southern terminus south of Dahila Street, Nicholson Street from Thirteenth Street to Sixteenth Street, Colorado Avenue from Montague Street to Thirteenth Street, Concord Avenue from Sixteenth Street to its western terminus west of Eighth Street west, Thirteenth Street from Nicholson Street to Piney Branch Road, and Piney Branch Road from Thirteenth Street to Butternut Street, and for other purposes;

S. 1867. An act for the relief of the estate of John Stewart, deceased;

S. 2025. An act to detach Jim Hogg County from the Corpus Christi division of the southern judicial district of the State of Texas and attach the same to the Laredo division of the southern judicial district of said State;

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 655) to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had concurred in the amendment of the House of Representatives to bill (S. 214) for the relief of the Old National Bank of Martinsburg, Martinsburg, W. Va.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 85. An act to carry into effect the finding of the Court of Claims in the claim of Elizabeth B. Eddy; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 107. An act for the relief of John H. McAtee; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 114. An act to vacate certain streets and alleys within the area known as the Walter Reed General Hospital, District of Columbia, and to authorize the extension and widening of Fourteenth Street from Montague Street to its southern terminus south of Dahila Street, Nicholson Street from Thirteenth Street to Sixteenth Street, Colorado Avenue from Montague Street to Thirteenth Street, Concord Avenue from Sixteenth Street to its western terminus west of Eighth Street west, Thirteenth Street from Nicholson Street to Piney Branch Road, and Piney Branch Road from Thirteenth Street to Butternut Street, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 243. An act for the relief of Frank Vumbaca; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 334. An act for the relief of Kate Canniff; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 970. An act for the relief of the De Kimpke Construction Co., of West Hoboken, N. J.; to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 1867. An act for the relief of the estate of John Stewart, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the rereference of two bills (H. R. 4104 and H. R. 754) which have been referred to the Ways and Means Committee. They relate to the fur-seal industry and the interest which the Government has in the matter, which now belongs to the Department of Commerce. While these matters were probably within the jurisdiction of the Ways and Means Committee at one time, in my judgment they should now go to some other committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the transfer of these bills from the Ways and Means Committee to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Can the gentleman state whether the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries feels it has jurisdiction over them?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. That is my understanding.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Has there been any conference about it?

The SPEAKER. The matter has been brought to the attention of the Chair, and it was the intention of the Chair to confer with the chairman of the other committee, so that there might be an agreement between the two chairmen.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, perhaps I should let the matter be laid over until the Speaker has a chance to confer about the matter.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Mr. Speaker, I ask that H. R. 7356, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, the jurisdiction of which has been disclaimed by that committee, be referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which it was obviously intended to go.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the rereference will be made.

There was no objection.

IS CONGRESS TO BLAME?

Mr. EVANS of Montana. Mr. Speaker, when the World War terminated the Government found itself in possession of many hundreds of millions of surplus goods and supplies for which it had no use, and Congress authorized the sale and disposition of these war supplies with a view to salvaging as much as possible from same. A few days ago the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] in a speech on the floor of this House said he had heard a side remark that an auctioneer had been paid $1,000 a day, or, rather, for a few minutes of the day, for crying the sale of some of these Army goods. He therefore started an investigation and secured from the War Department a report as to how much money had been paid to auctioneers and the names of the men and the place where these sales had been conducted, and that report was laid before this House.

The contents of that report should challenge the attention of Congress and the people of the Nation.

The atmosphere of Washington is so laden with scandals and sensations that the revelations made in that report seem to have made but little impression on the Congress or the people of the country.

It develops that the plan of compensating the auctioneers was on the percentage basis, instead of by the day, week, month, or year. Just what the motive may have been for adopting the percentage plan is one of conjecture only. However, it can be safely stated that no more effective way of paying large fees could possibly have been devised.

The report which was furnished by the War Department discloses that M. Fox & Sons, of Baltimore, Md., were employed on 113 different days for merely crying auction sales. The testimony showed that the auctioneer did not pay for the advertising nor for any other expense incident to the sale. The compensation allowed the auctioneer in every instance was merely for saying, "How much am I offered for this piece of property?" then stating the offer or offers, and then saying, "Look out! All in! Once, twice, three times, and sold!" For those 113 days the auctioneer was paid the enormous sum of $230,370.72. For less than one-third of a year he was paid more than the President's salary for three years. To go more into detail, he was paid $2,038.67 for only a part of each of those 113 days. This auctioneer was paid at the rate of approximately three-quarters of a million dollars a year.

Gerth's Realty Experts, of New York, were employed as auctioneer for 18 days. Their compensation was $11,450.56 a day, making a total for the 18 days of $206,110.08. For each of those 18 days the auctioneer received only a little less than the annual salary of a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and for the 18 days he received nearly enough to pay the annual salaries of the nine members of the Supreme Court for nearly two years. And for each and every one of those days he received nearly as much as is paid to a Cabinet officer for a whole year.

Gordon & Williams, of Chicago, Ill., were employed as auctioneer for 16 days. For those 16 days they were paid $42,289.79, an average of $2,643.11 for each day. Congress will discuss for hours the propriety of adding $143 to the salary of a Government clerk who already is receiving $2,500 per year, but we find that in this case the auctioneer was paid more than such a salary for a comparatively short portion of one day's work without a word of protest.

The Louisville Real Estate & Development Co., of Louisville, Ky., was employed one day as auctioneer. For that one day that concern was paid $24,194.80, which amount would almost pay the salary of the collector of internal revenue at Louisville for four years. If the collector had been paid on the same basis, his compensation while the whisky tax was being collected would have amounted to $200,000 a day, or $7,300,000 a year. If one is paid on the percentage plan, why not the other? The amount received by this auctioneer for one day's services would not fall far short of paying the salary of the governor of my State for four years.

J. Hall Miller, an auctioneer, of Atlanta, Ga., was employed for 30 days, for which he was paid $37,209.44, a daily average of $1,240.31. At that rate his compensation for a year would have been $439,593.15. His compensation for one month was more than sufficient to pay the salaries of three Cabinet officers for 12 months.

Arthur C. Sheridan, an auctioneer, of New York City, was employed for one day, for which he received $4,603.20. At that rate his compensation for a year would have been $1,680,168.

Smith & Jaffe, auctioneers, of New York City, were employed for 39 days, for which they were paid $73,719.28, a daily average of $1,890.24. The amount paid that firm for 39 days would very nearly pay the annual salaries of 10 United States Senators. At the rate of $1,890.24 per day the annual compensation would amount to $689,987.60.

A. T. Swepston, of Chillicothe, Ohio, was employed for 10 days, for which he was paid $24,883.56, a daily average of $2,488.35. At that rate his annual compensation would be $908,247.75.

Michael Tauber, of Chicago, Ill., was employed for 26 days, for which he was paid $60,600.56, a daily average of $2,230.78, at which rate his annual compensation would be $850,734.70.

Wilmerding, Morris & Mitchell, of New York City, were employed for nine days as auctioneers, for which service they were paid $18,789.96, a daily average of $2,087.77; at which rate the annual compensation would be $762,039.05.

Samuel Wintermiltz, an auctioneer, of Chicago, Ill., was paid $59,995.48 for 13 days. His compensation averaged $4,615.03 a day. At that rate his annual compensation would amount to $1,684,485.95. The amount paid this man for 13 days would lack only $5 of paying six members of the Interstate Commerce Commission their annual salaries.

Samuel T. Freeman, of Philadelphia, Pa., was employed for 64 days, for which he was paid $167,163.43, a daily average of $2,611.93. At that rate his annual compensation would be $953,354.45. The amount paid this man for 64 days would pay the salaries of the nine Cabinet officers for a year and in addition would lack but little of paying the annual salaries of six district Federal judges.

Atlantic Coast & Realty Co., of Petersburg, Va., was paid $2,870.18 for one day.

Auctioneer Newell D. Atwood, of Boston, Mass., was paid $1,189 for eight days.

Auctioneer W. L. Bennett, of Columbia, S. C., was paid $1,202.57 for four days.

Jacob Cash, of New York City, was paid $4,046.85 for one day. At that rate his compensation for a year would amount to $1,477,100.

P. L. Crouch, of Des Moines, Iowa, for nine days was paid $17,962.74, a daily average of $1,984.98, at which rate his annual compensation would be $724,627.70.

Fay W. Danford, of Rochester, N. Y., was employed for three days, for which he received $13,585.88, a daily average of $4,528.62; at which rate his annual compensation would amount to $1,652,946.30.

Danford-Bliss, of Buffalo, N. Y., was employed for two days, for which was paid $4,445.48, a daily average of $2,222.74.

Joseph P. Day, of New York City, was paid $3,723 for two days, a daily average of $1,861.50.

Isidoro D. Deigado, of San Juan, P. R., for six days received $567.64.

John J. Erwin, of Jersey City, N. J., for one day received $1,765.

Fitzpatrick Tell Auction Co., New Orleans, for three days received $1,321.23.

Abe Franklin (no address given) for four days received $247.43.

Alfred Freeman, of New York City, for nine days received $21,007.59.

Samuel T. Freeman, of Philadelphia, for 12 days was paid $28,470.21.

Leo Fresh, of Atlanta, Ga., was paid $1,136.85 for one day.

Julius Gollober, of San Francisco, Calif., was paid $8,143.04 for seven days.

Dan Greenberg, of Los Angeles, Calif., was paid $1,775.36 for one day.

Henry J. Healy, of Worcester, Mass., was paid $2,175 for 23 days.

Bryan Kennelly, of New York City, was paid $7,725.96 for two days, an average of $3,862.98 per day; at which rate his yearly compensation would have been $1,409,987.70.

Aleck Licata (no address given) received $621.54 for seven days.

Thomas B. Lovatt, of Philadelphia, was paid $8,096.35 for seven days.

Joseph Rubin, of San Antonio, Tex., for 34 days received $34,389.11.

R. E. Swepston, of Chillicothe, Ohio, for one day was paid $2,177.50.

David B. Traxler, of Greenville, S. C., was paid $7,978.60 for five days.

Joseph P. Tupper, of Logan, Iowa, was paid $2,486.93 for one day.

A. A. Weschler, of Washington, D. C., was paid $153.82 for four days.

Fox, of Baltimore, was paid $13,659.45 on the 19th day of September, 1922, for crying a sale on that day.

Smith & Jaffe, 68 West Forty-fifth Street, New York City, were paid $28,102.26 for making a sale on August 16, 1921.

Gerth's Realty Experts, 505 Fifth Avenue, New York City, were paid $23,558.84 for sales made from the 16th to the 19th day of August, 1921; and for crying sales on the 10th to the 16th day of October, 1921, they were paid $56,030.82; and for crying sales on the 16th and 17th days of December, 1921, they were paid $45,407.52; and for crying a sale on December 7, 1922, they were paid $42,750. For the four sales just referred to that same firm was paid $167,747.18.

The total compensation paid to auctioneers, as just recited by me, amounts to $1,187,007.83, of which amount 14,659 per cent was paid during the Woodrow Wilson administration and 85.34 per cent under the administrations of Presidents Harding and Coolidge.

The report from the War Department carries this further significant statement:

Due to the necessity of submitting this report at this time, the Ordnance Department has been unable to furnish data relative to auctioneers employed by that department. The records on this subject at the various district ordnance offices have been boxed and stored; therefore there will be a delay in the submission of their report. As soon as it is received in this office it will be forwarded to your office promptly.

Thus it is revealed that only a partial list of these enormous payments are above recited and nobody seems to know what the total expenditures for the services of these auctioneers may be.

In the course of the speech made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] the following colloquy took place:

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. Is it not true that this system, which we must all condemn as being wasteful and extravagant, prevailed under both administrations?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I just so stated.

Mr. ANTHONY. And was caused by the laxity of Congress in this case in authorizing the War Department to make these sales of surplus property and to consume 5 per cent of the total amount realized in the expense of selling?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I can not answer the gentleman's question, because I have not the information.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman mean to say that Congress authorized a 5 per cent commission?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think I am correct in stating that Congress authorized them to spend 5 per cent of the amount realized in the cost of selling, and in this bill we are undertaking to curb their advertising costs.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I would like to have the gentleman present that authority; but even if it be true, that would not justify any public official who wanted to conserve the public money in spending these immense amounts the gentleman has referred to.

Mr. ANTHONY. It is stated in the hearings by the War Department officers that they are authorized to spend 5 per cent.

If, as suggested by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY], Congress had made any provision as to the expenditure of 5 per cent of the receipts for these goods, I venture the assertion that it was a limitation which provided that not more than 5 per cent of the purchase price should be spent for the sale of the goods.

It was not the intention of Congress that 5 per cent should be allowed for these sales, but it was a direction to the War Department that in no case should more than 5 per cent be so expended, and the law appears to have been interpreted by the officers who were executing same that if they could not find anywhere else to expend the money that they should give it to auctioneers, regardless of the value of their services. The law, of course, was drafted upon the assumption that it would be executed by honest officials, by officials diligent and vigilant in the discharge of their duties, by officials who would have some regard for the taxpayers and the people of the country. No legislation that Congress can enact will ever be made safe against corruption or incompetency, and this law is no exception. We must and do pass many laws reposing power in officers of the Government. We expect and have reason to expect that they will discharge their duties honestly and faithfully, in a businesslike manner, and with due regard for the people and their welfare, including the Treasurer of the United States. It is absolutely necessary for Congress to trust to some extent to the honesty and the vigilance and the common sense of the officials charged with the execution of the laws. It is an outrage upon the American people that any official should construe a limitation such as above recited to mean that he must pay 5 per cent of the selling price for the sale of these goods.

A few days ago the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] made this significant observation on the floor of the Senate:

Homes are being sold over this country because people are unable to pay their taxes.

Business men are distressed because they are unable to meet their taxes. Farms upon which people have lived for half a century, giving their time and their industry and their effort to making homes and rearing families, are now passing from them by reason of tax sales.

Equally distressing with the tax situation is the agricultural condition in this country. It would be difficult to command language adequately to describe the condition of the agricultural interests, especially through the great 15 Northwestern States, those great agricultural States. Speaking upon this matter some months ago, I referred to the fact that in one county in a great agricultural State there were 6,000 items in a single newspaper advertising property for sale which belonged to farmers. I received many letters from over the country wanting to know if that was not an error, whether it was not 600 instead of 6,000. It was not an error; it was a correct statement of the fact, and that is only indicative of a distressed condition which prevails throughout the agricultural regions, certainly in all the Northwestern States and, in my judgment, to a marked extent in all the States.

Thousands of men and women, not alone in my State but all over the West, are not only bankrupt but at the door of the poorhouse. I wonder if the people in official life realize what these people must think when they read this sordid story of waste, if nothing worse.

Every time waste or corruption is revealed somebody rises in or out of Congress and loudly proclaims Congress is to blame for enacting the law under which it occurred. When the Senate of the United States unanimously passed a resolution which was approved by the President, asserting that the oil reserves set apart for the Navy in time of danger had been bartered away "under circumstances that indicated fraud and corruption, in violation of the law and against the settled policies of the Government," men were heard to assert that Congress was to blame, and if it had not enacted certain legislation these reserves could not have been bartered away.

Why, of course, Mr. Speaker, if Congress had never set apart these reserves there would have been no reserves to lose. I suppose that should we wake up some morning and find somebody had sold or stolen the Goddess of Liberty from the Capitol Building some one would rise and say George Washington was to blame because he and his compatriots provided for a Capitol Building, and if they had made no such provision there would have been no Goddess of Liberty to steal. Again, Mr. Speaker, if we should some day find the Treasury looted of what cash still remains, somebody would say Congress is to blame because it levied taxes upon the people, and if they had levied no such taxes then there would have been no money in the Treasury to be wasted or stolen.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know what other men may think, but I give it as my candid opinion that the revelations in governmental affairs during the past 60 days have rocked the very foundations of this Government. Free institutions and popular government have received such a blow as they never received in the history of America. The right of free government is trembling in the balance; the virus of waste and corruption has gotten into the blood of official life in this country, and the best and only antidote that I can suggest is to promptly put somebody in jail.

INCREASE OF PENSIONS FOR THE SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

Mr. ALLEN. Under leave granted to extend my remarks I insert the following letter:

PIEDMONT, W. VA., March 19, 1924.

Members of Potomac Camp, No. 5, Department of West Virginia, United Spanish War Veterans, at its regular meeting on March 6 indorsed the Knutson bill (H. R. 5934) in the following language:

"Resolved, That the members of Potomac Camp, No. 5, United Spanish War Veterans, Department of West Virginia, do hereby go on record as indorsing the bill (H. R. 5934) which provides for an increase of the pensions for the Spanish war veterans, and to certain maimed soldiers; and be it further

"Resolved, That we pray and petition the United States Congress for immediate passage of this bill, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to Congressman R. E. L. ALLEN, requesting him to have it read into the RECORD.

[SEAL.]

NORRIS BRUCE, Commander.
CHAR. A. BOYLES, Adjutant.
S. C. RICE, Quartermaster.

THE EX-SERVICE MAN IS THE OUTSTANDING VICTIM OF OUR PARTICIPATION IN THE WORLD WAR.

Mr. GARBER. Mr. Speaker, the services rendered by the American soldier were the most important and determining factor in winning the World War. Our obligation to compensate him for such services is a part of the war debt itself and a preferred and prior claim upon the Government, more binding upon the conscience of the Nation than any other of its contractual obligations.

By selective draft nearly 4,000,000 men were pressed into military service. We should have drafted the services of capital and labor as well. We did not. Our neglect to do so caused the discrimination against the soldiers out of which arose the claim for adjusted compensation.

For the services of the men while in camp, we paid $1 per day; for the services of the men while overseas, $1.10 per day.

In agricultural States the young men were taken from their recently rented or purchased farms; in the cities and towns from their chosen occupations or professions. By arbitrary draft they were taken from their homes and families and compelled to abandon all their material prospects for the uncertain period of the war. Capital and labor remained at home and without license were permitted to take advantage of the Nation's necessities.

The young men, so taken, were hustled and jammed into hastily constructed and insanitary training camps. There they were subjected to unusual exposure, contagious diseases, and the daily grind of military training. From the camps 2,000,000 men were sent overseas in crowded ships; then in crowded cars were taken inland to camps and finally by weary marches up to the front to the trenches and the firing line.

At the time when the Government was paying its soldiers in camp $1 per day and overseas $1.10 per day, it paid its employees working in its navy yards, living at home, in the lap of luxury, convenience, and safety from $6 to $12 per day; in its arsenals from $6 to $10 per day; on its 10 per cent plus contracts from $5 to $12 per day. To its over 500,000 civil-service employees, receiving $2,500 per year or less, it has paid each a bonus of $240 per year for the last five years in addition to their regular salaries, or a total bonus of $1,200 each. Mind you, this is what the Government itself did in the payment of wages and salaries and bonus to its employees who remained at home. Do you believe it was fair for the Government to pay the men at home $12 per day for working on its ships and to pay the men fighting on the ship only $1.10 per day? Do you believe employees in its arsenals should have received $10 per day and the men on the battle field be limited to $1.10 per day? Do you think $2.35 per day for our fighting men facing death too much? Do you think $2 per day for our men training in camps facing disease too much?

The high wages at home were not only paid by the Government but in the channels of trade in the business world as well. Bricklayers, masons, plumbers, carpenters, for eight hours work, exacted from $8 to $14 per day. Common labor, in all its various forms, including labor on the farm, was paid from $4 to $6 per day.

It is true the soldier received his clothes and board in addition to his wage, but that advantage was largely neutralized by the unusual requirement compelling him to deduct so much for insurance. The business world pays for the insurance of its employees. The Government required the soldiers to pay their insurance out of their monthly wages. From the $30 per month received, must be deducted the $15 which the soldier was required to send back to his dependents in addition to the cost of his insurance, leaving him a balance of from $7 to $9 per month with which to pay his sundry expenses. When he received the $60 payment on his return home to begin life anew, he was without sufficient money, at the then existing prices, to purchase a civilian suit of clothes. He was without his chosen employment to earn even a competency. Stripped of everything he had, material and prospective, he was required to make new arrangements and incur new obligations to enter again the industrial world from whence he had been so arbitrarily taken.

The celebrations, greetings, and banquets for heroes home, in a short time had to give way to the menial task of digging in. To readjust himself to the changed conditions was the perplexing and most difficult problem of the returned soldier. He was the outstanding victim of our participation in the World War. He was the heaviest contributor and the heaviest loser.

That the people generally recognize and disapprove of the unadjusted discrimination against him is evidenced by their action in 22 States, authorizing payment of adjusted compensation.

The following table shows the cash bonus paid by the States to their veterans of the World War:

Illinois.....	$55,000,000
Iowa.....	22,000,000
Kansas.....	25,000,000
Massachusetts.....	22,275,000
Maine.....	3,211,397
Michigan.....	30,657,376
Minnesota.....	23,500,000
Missouri.....	15,000,000
New Hampshire.....	1,961,423
New Jersey.....	11,250,000
New York.....	45,000,000
North Dakota.....	11,000,000
Ohio.....	32,500,000
Oregon.....	20,000,000
Rhode Island.....	2,598,000
South Dakota.....	6,000,000
Vermont.....	1,500,000
Washington.....	13,500,000
Wisconsin.....	16,102,000
Colorado.....	8,000,000
Montana.....	4,500,000
Pennsylvania.....	35,000,000

Wherever the question has been submitted the people in the several States, by overwhelming majorities, have authorized the payment of adjusted compensation to their soldiers. The Representatives from such States might have colorable claim to oppose this measure on the ground that they have already taxed themselves and paid the adjustment provided for. Opposition based on such grounds might well be consistent and valid, but even in the majority of such States the people, through their Representatives, recognize the national obligation as still existing. So long as such unselfish spirit and appreciation exist this country will remain sound to the core and the safety of our cherished institutions will remain assured.

When a majority of the States already having paid a cash bonus to their soldiers are recognizing the national obligation and supporting this measure providing for its payment, what can be justly said in opposition by the people in the States not yet having contributed anything toward the payment of such adjustment? Nothing. Opposition from such sources would be indefensible. It would be ungrateful. To the credit of the people of such States, however, it can be truthfully said they are not ungrateful, not unmindful, or unappreciative. Through their Representatives they are supporting this measure and hope it will be speedily enacted into law as tangible evidence of their sense of justice and appreciation.

When we emerged from the war and took a survey of our finances conditions then existing were alarming. While the people in good faith accepted the slogan "Anything and everything to win the war," and contributed their last dollar toward the purchase of Government bonds, hyenas in human form prowled and plundered. Billions of the hard earnings of the people were wasted and squandered, confiscated and appropriated. The people were induced to borrow money from banks at a high rate of interest to purchase bonds upon the representation that it was necessary to raise funds to sustain our soldiers in camp and field. The moneys thus exacted, to the extent of billions, were loaned without authority of law to foreign countries after the armistice was signed. Corporations, trusts, and unscrupulous organizations of every kind and character pillaged and plundered. Contracts were given for war supplies to favorites at enormous prices without regard to the Nation's interests. The following record from the War Department shows with what criminal abandon the hard-earned dollars of the people were expended:

Forty-one million pairs of shoes for 3,500,000 soldiers, or 12 pairs for each man; 149,456,611 bread cans, or 42 for each man; 2 saddles, 4 covers, 6 halters, and 6 harnesses for each horse; 12,000 sets of ambulance harness, when the Army was using gas-driven ambulances; $20,000,000 for coke ovens and no coke; $35,000,000 for acid plants and no acid; $116,000,000 for poison-gas plants and no poison gas; $127,000,000 for docks never used; $60,000,000 for one powder plant, $90,000,000 for another powder plant, and no powder while the war lasted; $116,000,000 for a nitrate plant, and no nitrate during the war; over $1,000,000,000 for aircraft, and not a fighting plane at the front; another $1,000,000,000 for artillery, and less than 150 American-made cannons on the firing line; $3,500,000,000 for merchant ships, with less than 600 keels laid during the war, and more than 700 laid after the armistice, and out of a total of 1,300 ships, more than 1,000 were either too small or too slow, or otherwise wholly unfit either for international commerce or for coastwise trade, and now unsalable except for junk.

Unbelievable but true. Add to this $484,000,000 allowed and paid on post-war activities, mostly with no contract to support the gratuities; $11,000,000,000 paid to foreign governments with no evidence of debt taken, to say nothing of a contract to repay. I forbear to enumerate the hundreds of millions wasted on cantonments and other contracts on a cost-plus basis.

The Teapot Dome oil revelations showing an exploitation of the Nation's oil reserves are to be deplored. Those responsible must be prosecuted to the limit and imprisoned for their betrayal of the public interests. Every vestige of wrongdoing, grafting, and betrayal must be punished and the perpetrators driven from public life. There is no man in the United States in whom the people have greater confidence in seeing that this shall be done than Calvin Coolidge. But I submit that the attempted exploitation or development of the naval reserves is nothing as compared to the exploitation of the hard-earned dollars of the people's money to the extent of billions through the guise of war necessities during the brief period of the 18 months of the war.

On March 4, 1921, when the Republican administration took charge, there were 5,000,000 men out of employment, whose annual wage alone was $5,000,000,000. Importations from foreign countries were flooding our markets at the expense of our own laboring men. Our indebtedness had reached the staggering total of $26,581,966,852. The remains of the bacchanalian feast had to be cleared away. Unconscionable grafting contracts had to be canceled. Unnecessary employees had to be cut off the pay roll. Expenses had to be cut down. Revenues to pay the enormous annual interest charges and coming due indebtedness had to be provided for. The Nation had to find itself financially. Under a constructive Republican administration these things were done.

During such period opposition to incurring any additional governmental obligations had substantial, if not justifiable, grounds to support it. While our indebtedness is still large the prompt payment of all our national obligations as fast as they become due is assured. Our Budget has been balanced. During the last four and a half years we have paid off $4,800,000,000 of national indebtedness at the rate of $1,000,000,000 per year and our surplus annual revenues exceed $330,000,000 per year. Such marvelous progress in reconstruction work under Republican administration is unapproached by that of any other nation in the world. It stands without parallel and without precedent. Under such administration our national finances are in such condition that we can safely have not only tax reduction but adjusted compensation as provided in the present bill.

Section 201 of the bill provides:

The amount of the adjusted-service credit shall be computed by allowing the following sums for each day of active service in excess of 60 days in the military or naval forces of the United States, after April 5, 1917, and before July 1, 1919, as shown by the service or other record of the veteran; $1.25 for each day of overseas service and $1 for each day of home service; but the amount of credit of a veteran who performed no overseas service shall not exceed $500, and the amount of credit of a veteran who performed any overseas service shall not exceed $625.

Subsection C of section 203 provides:

If part of the service is overseas service and part is home service, the home service shall first be used in computing the 60-day period.

All applications for benefits under the provisions of the bill must be filed on or before January 1, 1925.

Section 401 provides payment in cash to each veteran upon proper application any time after the expiration of nine months from the enactment of the law the amount of his adjusted service credit, if, and only if, such credit is not more than $50. This section applies to the men who served 110 days or less, awarding them $1 per day and deducting the $60 paid at the time of discharge, leaving the balance in the amount of $50 or less to be paid in cash. It is estimated that the cash payments thus required will total $16,000,000.

Section 501 authorizes the issuance, without cost to the veteran designated therein, of a—nonparticipating adjusted service certificate of a face value equal to the amount of 20-year endowment insurance that the amount of his adjusted service credit increased by 25 per cent would purchase at his age on his birthday nearest the date of certificate, if applied as a net single premium, calculated in accordance with accepted actuarial principles, and based upon the American Experience Table of Mortality, and interest at 4 per cent per annum compounded annually.

The certificate and all rights conferred thereunder shall take effect—as of the 1st day of the month in which the application is filed, but in no case before January 1, 1925. The veteran shall name the beneficiary of the certificate, and may from time to time, with the approval of the director, change such beneficiary. The amount of the face value of the certificate shall be payable to the veteran 20 years after the date of the certificate, or, second, upon the death of the veteran prior to the expiration of such 20-year period, to the beneficiary named, except that, if such beneficiary dies before the veteran and no new beneficiary in the first instance has yet been named, the amount of the face value of the certificate shall be paid to the estate of the veteran. If the veteran dies after making application, but before January 1, 1925, then the amount of the face value of the certificate shall be paid in the same manner as if his death had occurred after January 1, 1925.

Section 502 provides—

after the expiration of two years after the date of the certificate it may be used as collateral security for the payment of loan to him. The rate of interest shall not exceed by more than 2 per cent per annum the rate charged at the date of the loan for the discount of commercial paper by the Federal reserve bank in the district in which the loan is made.

The amount of the loan is limited to—90 per cent of the reserve value of the certificate on the last day of the current certificate year or 60 per cent of the face value of the certificate. The reserve value of a certificate on the last day of any certificate year shall be the full reserve required on such certificate, based on an annual premium for 20 years, calculated in accordance with the American Experience Table of Mortality, and interest at 4 per cent per annum compounded annually.

It is estimated as of January 1, 1924, there were 3,038,283 veterans living who would be entitled to the adjusted certificates or insurance policies, and 389,583 veterans who served from 61 to 110 days entitled to the cash payment. Also there were 183,805 veterans who died prior to January 1, 1924, and whose dependents would be entitled to the adjusted service compensation in 10 annual installments.

Commissioned officers above the grade of captain in the Army or Marine Corps, lieutenants in the Navy, first lieutenant or first lieutenant of engineers in the Coast Guard, with others, are excluded from the provisions of the bill.

Section 505 creates a fund in the Treasury of the United States to be known as "the adjusted service certificate fund," and appropriates for each calendar year, beginning January 1, 1925, and ending with the calendar year 1946, an amount sufficient to meet all the payments required by the certificates issued, the appropriation for the calendar year 1925 not to be in excess of $100,000,000.

Out of a poll of 10,784 veterans, 66 per cent voted in favor of paid-up insurance. The American Legion in its national convention twice approved a bill with an insurance provision similar to the one in the present pending bill. It embodies the foresight and frugality of a Benjamin Franklin for the benefit of the veteran. While not so attractive now, the enduring wisdom of a paid-up insurance policy will be appreciated more and more each year. The financial resources thus extended to the veteran are exempt from all processes of the law, nonassignable, and payable only to him if living, and if dead direct to his beneficiaries. The bill will not disturb present financial conditions. It will permit of tax reduction, and at the same time meet our obligations.

We believe that such adjustment of our obligations to the soldiers will be acceptable alike to them and the people. The same sinister influences that ravished the national revenues during the war opposes now; the malefactors of great wealth, who shed copious tears for the dear soldier while the war was on and the profiteering was good, are now shedding tears of bitter rage at the very thought of paying their share of the necessary taxes. Sordid selfishness will intervene, and the mad, metallic commercialism of the post-war period will continue to oppose. It dare not plead a denial of services rendered. The unselfish sacrifice and undaunted gallantry of the American soldier upon the battle fields of the World War excite the admiration of the world. It dare not deny benefits received. The safety and security of this Republic, with its constitutional guarantees, stand unshaken and unimpaired. Its opposition must be one of subterfuge, misrepresentation, and delay. Professing a superior degree of appreciation, it pompously declares, "We must not 'commercialize patriotism.'" Having commercialized everything else of human relationship during and since the war, it now poses as a superpatriot in making this exception. Pushed to its logical conclusion, it would pay nothing to the men whose services were indispensable in the preservation of our defense and the maintenance of the national honor.

"If you want tax reduction you must defeat the bonus" is the last resort in the last trench of the opposition. Such appeal is an offer of public benefits resulting from administrative duty as a reward for assistance in defeating adjusted compensation. It is a subtle appeal to the taxpayer to oppose, but it will find no response in the bosom of the American people, whose liberality, public spirit, love of fairness, justice, and patriotism has never yet failed to meet the just and honest obligations of their Government in all its history.

The following is a telegram received by me from Cody Fowler, department commander, and J. William Cordell, department adjutant, of the American Legion of Oklahoma, urging support of the bill:

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., March 17, 1924.

M. C. GARDNER, M. C.

Washington, D. C.:

Oklahoma department of American Legion stands solidly behind you in your support and vote for the adjusted compensation measure, which will be before you for consideration on Tuesday, the 18th.

AMERICAN LEGION OF OKLAHOMA,

CODY FOWLER, Department Commander.

J. Wm. CORDELL, Department Adjutant.

I append the following table showing estimated cost:

TABLE NO. 1.—Estimated cost of soldiers' adjusted compensation under proposed legislation.

1. Estimated number entitled to adjusted compensation living Jan. 1, 1919	4,477,412
2. Estimated number in the above group who have died prior to Jan. 1, 1924	183,805
3. Estimated number entitled to adjusted compensation living Jan. 1, 1924	4,293,607
4. Estimated number living Jan. 1, 1924, who served 60 days or less	865,741
5. Estimated number living Jan. 1, 1924, who served from 61 to 110 days	389,583
6. Estimated number living Jan. 1, 1924, who served over 110 days	3,038,283
7. Average age Jan. 1, 1924 (years)	32
8. Average amount of adjusted compensation for those who served over 110 days (maximum service, 560 days)	$382
9. Adjusted compensation due those who have died prior to Jan. 1, 1924	$50,318,772
10. Total amount payable in cash to those now living who served 110 days or less	$14,799,470
11. Total cost of insurance provision by annual appropriations representing the actual premiums	$2,025,889,696
12. Total cost of insurance provision—equivalent level annual appropriations	$2,052,679,240

TABLE NO. 2.—Adjusted compensation.
[American Experience Table, 4 per cent.]

Endowment 20 years:
Single premium per $1,000	$496.62
Annual premium per $1,000	37.94
COST OF INSURANCE PROVISION.
Maximum service (days)	560
Average amount adjusted compensation	$382
[1.25 times American Experience Table, 4 per cent.]
Average amount policy	$962.00
Average annual premium	36.48
Maximum annual appropriation	110,896,564.00
Minimum annual appropriation	90,835,930.00
Approximate total cost	2,025,889,696.00

TABLE NO. 3.—Table showing the cost of insurance provision (20-year endowment policy purchased by 1.25 times adjusted compensation) to those who served over 110 days—American Experience Table 4 per cent.

Year.	Age.	Number living at beginning of year.	Number dying during year.	Annual appropriation.
1924	32	3,038,283	26,151	$110,836,564
1925	33	3,012,132	26,260	109,882,575
1926	34	2,985,872	26,368	108,924,611
1927	35	2,959,504	26,476	107,962,706
1928	36	2,933,028	26,584	106,996,861
1929	37	2,906,570	26,692	106,024,378
1930	38	2,879,535	26,799	105,045,394
1931	39	2,852,448	26,907	104,067,094
1932	40	2,825,028	27,015	103,089,575
1933	41	2,797,429	27,123	102,112,810
1934	42	2,769,432	27,231	101,136,879
1935	43	2,741,040	27,339	100,161,780
1936	44	2,712,212	27,447	99,187,511
1937	45	2,682,841	27,555	98,214,061
1938	46	2,652,828	27,663	97,241,429
1939	47	2,622,219	27,771	96,268,614
1940	48	2,591,072	27,879	95,295,614
1941	49	2,559,344	27,987	94,322,429
1942	50	2,527,014	28,095	93,349,051
1943	51	2,494,030	28,203	92,375,480
Total				2,025,889,696
Equivalent level annual appropriations for 20 years				102,633,962

TABLE NO. 4.—Illustration of loan values adjusted service certificate.

Endowment 20 years:
Amount of certificate	$1,000
Age at issue	32

Year.	Value of sinking fund end of year.	Loan value, 99 per cent.
3	$97.71	$96.73
4	183.88	179.99
5	170.28	163.82
6	200.57	198.61
7	250.36	233.22
8	300.06	267.75
9	327.76	302.98
10	354.58	348.12
11	482.62	390.25
12	485.01	436.50
13	538.88	484.99
14	585.38	535.84
15	634.66	589.19
16	716.02	645.22
17	782.33	704.09
18	851.14	766.02
19	923.59	831.23
20	1,000.00	900.00

PERMISSION TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the subject of adjusted compensation.

Mr. HASTINGS. I make the same request, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. Mr. Speaker, such permission was granted to a Republican.

AGRICULTURAL RELIEF.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for four minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to address the House for four minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, as we all know, there are various agricultural bills pending before the Committee on Agriculture, both of the House and of the Senate, seeking to grant relief to the farmers. As far as I am concerned, I want to vote for some relief for the farmers; but I want to vote for a bill that will do them some good, and I do not want to vote for any legislative nostrum that will fool the farmer and make him think he is getting something when he is not.

There is a bill pending before the Senate, introduced by Senator CURTIS, of Kansas, and one before the House, introduced by Congressman ASWELL, of Louisiana, that embody the principles promulgated by Mr. B. F. Yoakum, who, I understand, has given years of study to the agricultural problems of this country. I want to especially invite the attention of the House to those bills; but the purpose I have in addressing the House now is that Mr. Yoakum addressed the Kentucky division of the Farmers' Union at Lexington, Ky., on March 13, 1924, giving an epitomized statement of this bill, which I think is a splendid address, and which, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by including.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINCHELOE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Is it or is it not a fact that Mr. Yoakum is one of the representatives and the propagandist of the international bankers of New York?

Mr. KINCHELOE. I never saw Mr. Yoakum and do not know a thing on earth about him, except I have read the bill introduced by Senator CURTIS, of Kansas, and by Congressman ASWELL. I am not committing myself to the bill; but it seeks to encourage and perpetuate the cooperative marketing system of this country, and I am one who does believe that the only hope for the future permanent prosperity of the farmer of this country, regardless of the crop he raises, is cooperative marketing. [Applause.]

Mr. KING. I agree with the gentleman. I want a bill that will not fool the farmer, but I want to investigate from whom it comes.

Mr. KINCHELOE. I am not standing as sponsor for Mr. Yoakum. I never saw him, but I have read the bill and think it is a step in the right direction for cooperative marketing. I do not care from what source it comes if it is going to benefit the farmer and not hand him a lemon, as some of the bills now before the Agriculture Committee seek to do.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINCHELOE. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. Is the article directly on the subject now before the House for legislation?

Mr. KINCHELOE. Yes; it is an exposition of the bill that was introduced.

Mr. TILSON. And the bill now before the House.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Absolutely. Before the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield? I think I can enlighten the gentleman who asked the question with reference to Mr. Yoakum.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Yes. I do not know Mr. Yoakum and never saw him.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I will say that Mr. Yoakum belongs to the family of the wealthy Yoakums, but he seems to be impressed with the duty to work out what he has suggested here. It is true, as the gentleman from Illinois says, that he is connected with these vast interests in New York, but sometimes I have found magnificent personalities among them, and I believe Mr. Yoakum is one of them.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. KINCHELOE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. KINCHELOE. Mr. Speaker, under the leave to extend my remarks in the Record, I include the following:

ADDRESS OF B. F. YOAKUM BEFORE THE KENTUCKY DIVISION OF THE FARMERS' UNION, AT LEXINGTON, KY., MARCH 13, 1924.

Ours is an agricultural country, with 34,000,000 of its population feeding the other 70,000,000.

The world's greatest agricultural country is faced by a situation more menacing to the country's future than can be said of any other economic problem in any part of the world. I do not view the situation darkly, because I know the present disastrous situation is remediable, and in this I am in harmony with the great majority of the farmers of our country.

It is merely a question of devising and applying the proper remedy. To do this we must all earnestly, patiently, and hopefully apply ourselves with vigor, expedition, and determination. We can devise the remedy; Congress must apply it. In our capacity as the sole devisers of that remedy we must first abandon all unsound and impracticable theories. All agricultural societies and organizations should agree upon a sound and constructive program for submission to the lawmakers at Washington. This, then, will give Congress no possible reason or excuse to quibble over the principle involved or the terminology to be employed. In its spiritual as well as material life our Nation has never been so badgered and befuddled as since the unfortunate inheritance of corruption and irregular practices that have developed in the official family of President Coolidge. We are drifting utterly devoid of leadership. Without leadership no stable national progress can be made. We listen with indifference, if not with cynicism, to suggestions of what ought to be done and what can be done. We are losing faith in one another. The result is that there is no cohesion of mass opinion. There is growing a confused psychology of that mass opinion impossible of analysis, definition, or control.

If the farmers will get together, demand a quick remedy of their own condition, and if Congress shall respond promptly to the demand of the farmer's voice, it will have a stabilizing effect upon the entire Nation and restore contentment and prosperity to those engaged in the farming business.

I am not an alarmist. My life work has been constructive and not destructive. My view of America has always been optimistic and not pessimistic; but I would feel remiss if I did not speak with the utmost frankness. I would feel that I was not doing constructive work if I should not point out some of the destructive forces now at work and which must be speedily destroyed or this country of ours will be actually in danger.

Mr. B. C. Moomaw, of Barber, Va., in a recent letter to me, puts this situation correctly and concretely. He says:

"If the business interests compel the farmers to enter as a class into mass movements for the betterment of conditions and the recovery of normal opportunities, they will prove to be obstinate fighters. It would be to the highest interests of all classes to be as jealous for the farmers as they are coming to be for themselves."

This is not an idle prophecy. It is a warning from a thinking citizen.

The affiliations or line-up with which the agricultural vote finally allies itself will determine whether or not in the unsettled condition of the public mind we shall continue as a stable, prosperous Nation or face disastrous results by waiting too long in helping the farmers to receive their just dues from their investment and labor through a national marketing system. There is no subsidy, bonus, or sacrifice asked of the business world, but business interests can afford to be helpful in procuring enabling legislation. I will go further and say that the financial and industrial interests can not afford to remain indifferent to the great needs of agriculture, the supporting industry of every business in the country.

Upon the farm citizenship of the country devolves a responsibility that goes directly to the foundation of the Government. The agricultural population of 34,000,000 people is the only unorganized class of our entire citizenship, the only class not committed to a selfish policy without regard to the effect upon society. I am probably not going too far in saying that the agricultural population constitutes the balance wheel of the Nation's future. As an organized force, which is now rapidly progressing, the farmers will determine the future economic questions on lines equitable to all interests, disregarding its effect upon organized capital or organized labor.

I own farms myself, but I am sorry to say that they represent investments from which I can not make any money.

The spread between the prices paid the farmers and the prices their commodities are sold to consumers presents the most enormous, absurd, and wicked economic condition in the world. For foodstuffs that the farmers receive $7,500,000,000, the consumers pay $22,500,000,000. Who gets that $15,000,000,000?

Why has there grown up and is being maintained in this country a system that doubles the price of our foodstuffs when it reaches the consumer, after leaving the producer?

Why should we need such a vast army of food dealers to distribute from the farm to the consumer?

Why do our lawmakers regard it as necessary for the 34,000,000 farm population to feed and support 19,000,000 food-dealer population, which I have disclosed in my long and thorough investigation? How long can this deplorable condition last?

Why should not the farmer get his just proportion of the $15,000,000,000 now going for profit and distribution?

Why should not the farmer get 65 cents of the consumer's dollar instead of 35 cents, as under our present system? This would mean to the farmer his cost of production, with a fair profit upon his investment and his labor. The altered economic condition would so adjust itself as to reduce the price on all foodstuffs to consumers, thus bringing down the cost of living.

After an intensive effort for the past three years to find out the fundamental reasons that have brought about the present deplorable agricultural situation, I have devised a plan which students of the question have endorsed, both as to spirit and practice. Much has been printed upon this plan, and I have supplied thousands of the little pamphlets outlining the plan from my New York office. This of itself shows that the farming industry is beginning to receive the attention it deserves.

Under the plan, through boards of directors composed of farmers, a national cooperative system of marketing, operating under a Federal charter, would be established, with actual farmers in control of their industry, unhampered by Government interference or partisan politics. The farmers' product would then go almost directly from the field to the consumers' kitchens, cutting out the enormous middle waste now so expensive, both to the farmers and to the consumers.

Farmers are organizing to demand a marketing system under which they will fix the prices they sell their products for, not in a manner to do injustice to others but to do justice to themselves.

For political reasons, Congress seems determined to adjourn at an early date. I fear, unless the farmers of the Nation vigorously push their claim through a law that will enable them to handle their own business and fix remunerative prices for their products, necessary legislation will be postponed until next session, which means longer suffering for the farmers.

The ownership of the six and one-half million farms in the United States have, through bankruptcy and mortgage foreclosures, been reduced until these farms are now owned by less than three million people.

We could learn a helpful lesson by following the footsteps of the farmers of France. They are the political masters of France so far as their business is concerned. Through the political influence of the rural voters, they put governments in and they put governments out. They tell their government authorities to keep hands off of the farming industry. Through their organized power they control the marketing of their own products under a uniform and profitable marketing system. We might learn from the French farmers how to get the farms that are now being cultivated by tenants, into the hands of the people who till them, not only to the benefit of the farmers themselves, but to the benefit of our entire Nation. The farmers of France will not stand for a tax that is so burdensome that they can not live under it.

The tax upon the farmers of this country has continued to grow until it has caused bankruptcy and ruin to tens of thousands of farmers.

The total wealth of the United States (World's Almanac) is $300,000,000,000. The same authority gives farm values, including property, equipment, machinery, buildings, livestock, etc., at $73,000,000,000. Therefore, the balance sheet of the farm wealth of this country shows that approximately 25 per cent of the national wealth is composed of farm values.

It has become a habit of our political friends to tell the farmers that the enormous expenditures and obligations that the Government is incurring are taxed against others than the farmers, but the facts are that the farmers pay their pro rata of all, whether it be in the form of a Federal, State, or local tax. It makes no difference whether it cost $250,000 to make an oil investigation or it costs $5,000,000 to build a battleship, the farmers in the final analysis pay their share.

It was the farm vote that defeated the ship subsidy gift of $50,000,000 a year, of which gift they would have paid their proportion. But let us not now enter into a discussion of the political situation. Let us do our level best to keep this stupendous question out of politics, unless the politicians force the issue by further refusing to aid in organizing a broad and comprehensive national marketing system that will enable farm owners and tenants to make their business profitable.

Tenant farmers are suffering for lack of money to support themselves and families, and to clothe and educate their children, caused by their inability to make anything over a bare and poor living. The tenant farmers should be made a part of this great movement for the farmers' declaration of independence.

In almost every respect the Government has failed to do its part for agriculture. The Government keeps a record of what you sell your products for. It publishes the results of your business and your revenue once a year. It shows the small measly sum you are allowed yearly for your investment and for the work of yourselves and families. On the other side of the ledger there is nothing to show who gets the enormous sum of twenty-two and one-half billion dollars for which your goods are sold to the consumer.

For 50 years dealers and distributors of farm products have continued under established methods to gain the marketing control of farm products. The fact is that the farmers are supporting ten times as many dealers and their families as are necessary under a uniform national marketing system—a load that is breaking the farmers' back.

The farmers do not want new ways provided for them to get deeper into debt; they want a way to get out of debt, to pay their mortgages, and to become independent home-owning citizens.

The farmers know that their money is lost at the producing end, and they know that the profits are made out of their products at the marketing end. But they are not able to change this unfair and inequitable situation, and they can not change the present practice until they can control the prices of their products and eventually become the producers and the distributors.

The constructive policy of the Government should be dominated through a friendly political party that will regard and treat the business that is in the aggregate ten times larger than its nearest rival as the dominant industry of the country.

The inauguration of any big economic change that is calculated to deprive organized beneficiaries of unwarranted profits will have to face the strongest kind of opposition. These attacks will come through organized efforts, through secret propaganda, and probably through bills introduced in Congress, apparently friendly, usually with the intent of breaking down cooperative farm organizations to prevent farmers from reaping the benefits of prices fixed by their cooperative organizations.

It would be a more serious matter, however, to those antagonistic to a national agricultural cooperative marketing system to attempt to defeat an organization of farmers operating under a Federal charter which has the approval and indorsement of the Government than it would be for them as at present to attack and break down marketing associations composed of individual farmers operating as individuals under an unchartered association.

The agricultural population is against paternalism, a condition to be regarded as extremely dangerous and destructive by all thoughtful and loyal Americans. Yet there are those who would make the farmers wards of the Nation by placing them and their business under the paternal wing of the Government.

There has recently been introduced in Congress a bill which, amongst other things, provides in section 4 thereof the following:

"That within 30 days after the passage of this act the Secretary of Agriculture shall effect the organization of the association provided for herein. This association shall be incorporated when at least 1,000 persons eligible to membership shall have signed and acknowledged the articles of incorporation, which shall be prepared under the direction of the Attorney General in compliance with this act. These articles shall state that the incorporators seek to organize the association provided for in this act, and that they accept all of the provisions of this act in advance on behalf of the association so organized."

This bill is in the nature of a stock subscription association under which the Secretary of Agriculture would be placed in charge of its organization, which means its management by that department of the Government. Under the conditions of this bill the Government is willing to loan the farmers $10,000,000 at 4½ per cent interest. This is a bid to the farmers to place their industry under the control of the Government for the consideration of a paltry loan of $10,000,000.

There are two things I want to emphasize. One is that the business of any national marketing system should be under the exclusive control and management of the farmers who produce and own their productions without Government or outside interference.

The other is that all of the present organized and affiliated cooperative associations will be a great strengthening asset to the National Farmers' Marketing Association, without in any manner disturbing their present status or their future work.

Let me briefly tell you how the Interstate Agricultural Cooperative Association will operate.

First. Its headquarters will be at Washington, D. C., under a national board of directors composed of nine members, with authority to increase. The national board of directors will serve without pay. They will employ an active manager who will give his entire time to the business of the association.

Second. The national board will be authorized to organize State boards of directors, composed of seven, which number may be increased. The State boards to be composed of farmers and those with knowledge of farm cooperative work.

Third. The respective State boards will authorize county and community cooperative associations, which cooperatives will be under the general supervision of the respective State boards.

Fourth. The directors of the State boards, with the approval of the national board, will divide the territory of the United States into zones, taking into consideration the relations to the central markets, transportation for shortness of haul, and facilities for distribution.

Fifth. In each zone the State boards will establish zone headquarters with zone managers and with an efficient operating force necessary for economic operation.

Sixth. The zone managers will cooperate amongst themselves in every way necessary for the best results.

Seventh. The directors of the State boards will, with the approval of the national board, establish executive headquarters at some point near or tributary to the Mississippi Valley territory, with branch headquarters if deemed necessary.

Eighth. The executive board to consist of three members, whose entire time shall be devoted to the business of the association.

Ninth. The State boards will establish reasonable prices for the standard farm products which the executive committee will enforce.

Tenth. When it is to the best interests of the association, zone boundaries may be disregarded by the executive committee in determining the distribution of products, the protection of prices, the shortest line transportation, and the supply and demand of food products.

The association will not undertake in the beginning, or until it is fully functioning, to include all products.

The State boards of directors will determine and inaugurate the work with one or more standard products.

To more concretely illustrate, expressed in dollars, I will use the white potato and wheat.

Assume there will be an acreage planted to produce 300,000,000 bushels of potatoes and 700,000,000 bushels of wheat.

An assessment of 1 cent a bushel on potatoes would mean $3,000,000.

An assessment of one-fourth of a cent a bushel on 700,000,000 bushels of wheat would mean $1,750,000, and so on through the list of all farm commodities.

For instance: One-half cent of each dollar on a yearly crop, farm value, of seven and one-half billion dollars would produce thirty-seven and one-half million dollars a year to apply on operating expenses and the building up of a surplus fund for handling domestic and foreign trade.

I have gone into every angle and every phase of this problem trying not to fool myself and I am prepared to say that it can be carried out, giving to the farmers an additional seven and one-half billion dollars a year based on present production.

It is unfortunate for the farmers and the country that our Congressmen and leaders of public opinion do not give sufficient time to study and better understand this big problem and to realize what it means to every farmer, every community, and every business.

In conclusion, permit me to remind you that when the present investigation of the naval oil reserves disclosed the fact that the Government had been defrauded out of $200,000,000 worth of oil, the country was horrified. When our Congressmen realize that the farmers are being cheated every year out of seven and one-half billion dollars, an amount equal to $200,000,000 a year for 37½ years, they will undoubtedly extend to them a helping hand, especially as it involves no risk or tax upon the public.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak for 20 minutes following the reading of the Journal on Thursday, April 10.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that he be allowed to address the House for 20 minutes on Thursday, April 10, immediately after the reading of the Journal. Is there objection?

Mr. RANKIN. On what subject?

Mr. CRAMTON. With reference to an event of that day and the part of woman in our national life. I am advised that at that time the appropriation bills will be pretty well out of the way.

Mr. RANKIN. What is the significance of that day?

Mr. CRAMTON. The particular subject of my address will be the part of woman in our national life.

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, does the gentleman expect to bring up the statues of the three splendid women out of the dusty basement where they now are?

Mr. CRAMTON. I have no objection to the gentleman from Texas doing that.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman ought to do that first. I heard the address of the Speaker when we received the statues, and they ought to be brought up out of the basement.

Mr. RANKIN. There is no objection to the gentleman from Texas bringing it up. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?
There was no objection.

GERMAN RELIEF.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the German relief.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, no one can say that I am not in sympathy with the efforts to relieve distress in Germany or that I am prejudiced against the German people or German nation. This matter could and should be cared for by private charity. I have ever been in favor of granting relief when conditions warranted, yet in this case I find myself unable to indorse this measure.

This resolution authorizes the expenditure of $10,000,000 for the relief of women and children in Germany, which must be taken from the taxpayers of this country, when we now have 43,000 veterans of the World War suffering with diseases and who are without the relief and support to which they are entitled. These men are suffering from tuberculosis and neuropsychiatric diseases and are unable to maintain themselves or their dependents, and relief must be extended to them. This Congress will be asked, and it must pass, remedial legislation for the disabled of the late war. To that end a measure will be presented within a very short time which, when enacted, will call for between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 per annum more than the present cost of the relief for veterans. This will mean an additional burden upon the taxpayer, which will be cheerfully borne; but until our men, the men who fought in the late war, are cared for I am opposed to taking $10,000,000 from the pockets of the taxpayers of this country and turning it over to a foreign power.

WOODROW WILSON.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request that I made last night to insert in the Record an editorial upon Woodrow Wilson, written by Mr. Edward B. Lambricht, of Tampa, Fla., and a sonnet on Woodrow Wilson, written by Herbert Felkel, of St. Augustine, Fla.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to extend my remarks I insert an editorial written by Edwin D. Lambricht, of the Tampa Tribune, and "A Sonnet on Woodrow Wilson," by Herbert Felkel. I make the request because the articles are written by two of the best writers in the country.

[From Sunshine, published at St. Augustine, Fla., March, 1924.]

WOODROW WILSON.

[By Edwin D. Lambricht.]

The long illness ends. The weary patriot falls. The stricken statesman succumbs. Woodrow Wilson is dead! Above his bier, the world speaks its hasty judgment, as it spoke it while he yet lived, but history, which awaits the slow decisions of the years, stands silently aloof. The verdict of history will be rendered when the current storms are silenced, the immediate tempests calmed—in the clear, calm atmosphere of the impartial future.

Not one of our Presidents has borne such a burden as did this man, whose physical strength broke under the strain—not even Lincoln, for Lincoln's responsibility was national, while Wilson's was worldwide, and Lincoln, at least, was not maligned by those for whom he served. Not one of our Presidents was so misjudged, so subjected to the cruel barbs of enmity, jealousy, and hate.

After the war had been fought and won, when he was fighting another battle—this time to guarantee and preserve the things for which we fought, while the poisoned arrows of politics were quivering in his flesh—he was stricken with an illness from which he never recovered. It was the result of his exacting labors, the weight of the burden he bore, increased by the misrepresentations of those who, for partisan or personal reasons, refused to understand. Months of patient suffering, when he sat in his quiet home, forced to be merely a silent spectator of the world drama in which he had played the leading rôle; and then—the end.

No man now living may give a fair or unbiased estimate of Woodrow Wilson. We are too closely connected with the action which he dominated, the events in which he was the foremost figure.

But this much is assured. He will be for all time a figure in world history. Whatever may be the final verdict upon his career and upon his deeds, they will have an epochal significance in the chronicles of the ages. And, whether posterity praise or blame him, whether it pronounces him right or wrong, it must say that he was sincere.

Snatch a man from the studious quiet of a university; place him in the highest place on earth; suddenly thrust him, in the responsibility and gravity of this high place, into a war involving the greatest nations of the world. Nine out of ten men thus treated would succumb early in the struggle. Woodrow Wilson "saw it through." He did not weaken or falter while the battle was on, while the crisis impended. It was not while facing the world as the embodiment of his country, leading the forces of freedom, of humanity, of justice, of democracy, to a glorious victory, that he faltered and fell. It was not until he was fired upon, relentlessly pursued and assailed by his own people, that the mighty arm was palsied, the weary head drooped. And even then the dauntless spirit was unconquered.

Volumes have been written on Woodrow Wilson in his life; many more will be written now that he is dead. As this is being written thousands of other editorials are forming into words, and throughout the world men and women are discussing the lessons of the life that has just ended. Those who maligned him when he was among us doubtless will continue to do so now that he "belongs to the ages"; while those who regarded him as one of our noblest and ablest citizens will bring fresh flowers for his tomb.

But none will dispute this one estimate, this just appraisal, one for which we do not have to await the verdict of history, one which not even partisan rancor will refuse or personal defamation dispute—he was a great American.

A SONNET ON WOODROW WILSON.

(By Herbert Felkel.)

His might of pen sent hope around the sphere,
His classic slogans prince and peasant heard
As kingdoms hung upon his every word;
A will of iron and tongue quick, strong, and clear,
Unknown to him the sense of moral fear,
Listening more to conscience than to men,
While with himself he struggled for the right,
Pausing well before he sent young men to die;
But once in war, he called with all his might,
"Make safe the world"—a battle cry.
Autocracies were withered by his pen!
Peace on earth? Not yet. But strife for him is o'er—
The crippled soldier's heart will ache no more,
As nations' tears make wet a martyr's bier.

INCREASE OF THE SALARIES OF THE MAIL CLERKS AND CARRIERS.

Mr. LILLY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend remarks in the Record on the increase of salary of the mail clerks and carriers.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from West Virginia asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on the increase of the salary of the mail clerks and carriers. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LILLY. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I want to discuss briefly the proposal to increase the salaries of the mail clerks and carriers.

In the first place, these employees are skilled workers, skilled to a very high degree of efficiency due to the requirements of their everyday work. Their duties are hard and exacting. Men of exceptional mental and physical qualifications are required. In order to obtain a position as letter carrier or clerk a man must take a competitive civil-service examination and pass a physical examination which closely parallels that required for enlistment in the Army or Navy.

He is first appointed a substitute, for which he is paid at the rate of 60 cents per hour only for the time he is actually employed, which may range from only one hour per day to eight hours per day, if he works at all. After serving on an average of three years as substitute, learning the business, he may finally be appointed as junior letter carrier and assigned to a regular route. He has to report on schedule time, as early as 6 o'clock a. m., and route his mail for delivery or collect the mail from street letter boxes, and after attending to the many duties of his position starts to make his deliveries, and if he fails to be on time the patrons on his route complain of the delay, whether the mail be heavy or light or the weather be fair or foul. He must be an encyclopedia of postal information; his patrons depend upon him, as he is the only member of the postal organization many of them ever see.

His work is constantly supervised, and he is required to perform a stated amount of work per minute in order to meet the requirements of the efficiency standard.

The same requirements of efficiency and attention to details are made of the clerks, both men and women, who must be out at all hours of the day and night to open, sort, distribute, and handle the mails and keep up the records, and the salaries run about the same as the salaries of carriers.

I wish to make a comparison of the salary received by the mail clerk and carrier with that received by some of the trades not requiring such educational or physical standard. The hourly scale for knit-goods workers is $1.25; the printing trades average $59 per week; bakers' trades average $47 per week; metal trades, boiler makers, and machinists average from $49 to $55 per week; clothing trades average $50 per week; foundries and machine shops average about 69 cents per hour. You can readily see that the laboring men, who have regular hours and not nearly the responsibility, receive a higher wage than mail clerks and carriers.

Considering the preparation it is necessary for them to make, the heavy responsibility of their work, and their long hours of duty, we should not hesitate one moment to grant them a commensurate increase in salary. The Post Office is the largest and most efficiently handled of any department in the Government; the employees are high class, honest, and industrious. This Government should never allow these employees to work at less wages than outside employees of other trades. On account of the increasing cost of living they now hardly receive a living wage.

I think the old saying, "Just because the horse is good he needn't be worked to death," applies to the case of the mail clerks and carriers. As it does not seem expedient at this time to reduce the responsibility or hours of work, in the name of humanity let us give them an adequate raise in salary commensurate with the service and responsibility.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

The SPEAKER. There are two bills which it is agreed by the chairmen of the two committees interested should be referred: One is H. R. 4104, to amend an act entitled "An act to prevent the extermination of fur-bearing animals in Alaska," and so forth, and the other is the bill H. R. 754, to authorize the Treasurer of the United States to turn in to the treasury of the Territory of Alaska all moneys received from the sale of fur-seal and other furs as are the property of the United States of America from the Pribilof Islands. Without objection, the reference of these bills will be changed from the Committee on Ways and Means to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent to address the House for one minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, last night, as the Speaker recalls, I demanded the reading of the engrossed bill. While it places me in an awkward position, I think in fairness to some of my colleagues who understood I was going to demand the reading of the engrossed bill I ought to make a statement. I stated to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS], who has not been in good health, that I would demand the reading of the engrossed bill, and after the debate had closed, relying on my statement, he left the House. There was no further debate at that time, as the Speaker recalls. It places me in a very embarrassing position, but I am willing to take the odium and feel it due to the gentleman from Kentucky that I make this statement in order that he may be placed in a proper light. I withdrew my demand only because I was so earnestly solicited to do so by so many of my colleagues.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7877) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the War Department appropriation bill, with Mr. TILSON in the chair.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the committee rose on Saturday last, general debate had not concluded.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I ask the gentleman from Kentucky to consume some of his time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is informed that general debate was limited in the House to one hour and a half.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I suggest that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WURZBACH] had not concluded his speech. He stopped in the middle of it.

Mr. ANTHONY. I understand there is an hour and a half remaining and that the gentleman from Kentucky may use an hour on his side, if he desires. There is but one speech remaining on this side.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Is it insisted that I use my time now?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think it is desirable.

Mr. HARRISON rose.

The CHAIRMAN. How much time has been allotted to the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman, it was the understanding that I was to have an hour's time, but I do not think that I shall use more than half of that time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, in order that there may be no misunderstanding, I ask the gentleman from Kansas if I am correct in my view of the matter that I have an hour and that the gentleman from Virginia has an hour.

Mr. ANTHONY. The understanding is that general debate will close in an hour and a half. I also understood that the gentleman from Kentucky was anxious to use the time that he would otherwise have used in general debate when we reach certain items in the bill, to which I shall be perfectly agreeable.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. My understanding of the agreement made in the House is that it provided for that.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think that was the case.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman, I can not begin my discussion of this bill without making my acknowledgment to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY], the chairman of the subcommittee. His long experience both as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs and as a member of this subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, his familiarity with every detail of this work, his ability, his indefatigable energy, have made the task of his associates on this committee very easy. I think it due to the conscientiousness with which he has discharged his duty that I make this acknowledgment. [Applause.]

THE COST OF MILITARISM.

The first thing that strikes our attention in the consideration of this bill is the grand total sum appropriated. Three hundred and twenty-six million dollars is carried in this bill, a sum which in a day not very long ago would have paid all the expenses of the Government. In addition to this, a somewhat similar sum has been appropriated for the maintenance of the Navy; so that the grand total for the maintenance of the military establishments of this country exceeds $600,000,000. The total sum appropriated in the Agricultural appropriation bill is $56,000,000, and agriculture is the basic industry upon which all national prosperity is founded. Oh, if this $600,000,000 could be diverted from the maintenance of these great military establishments which take our young men away from useful vocations and train them to the bloodshed of their fellow human beings, if this enormous appropriation could be directed into some useful channels such as the construction of our public highways, to making fruitful our waste places, to developing our national resources, it would mean a blessing to millions of American citizens now living and to millions of American citizens not yet born.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I ask the gentleman if he agrees with that portion of the farewell remarks of his very distinguished fellow statesman, General Washington, upon the subject of a proper national defense?

Mr. HARRISON. I will come to that, and I am going to show who is responsible for the fact that these enormous appropriations are now demanded. All during the war, when sacrifices were being called for, we were told that this country was fighting to end war. This was to be what America would secure as the price of peace. Nothing else had she to gain out of her vast expenditure of blood and treasure. She desired no territory, she demanded no gold, but she did demand an abiding and enduring peace amongst all the nations of the earth. Against her protest and her utmost endeavor to keep the peace into all the world wars she had been forced, and she demanded security against a recurrence of such a thing in the future. For this she sent her young sons to battle and threw into the scale her national resources. When the war did end, the voice of America predominated in the council of the nations and a great American statesman embodied in the terms of peace the most promising hope of a perpetual surcease of strife that was ever held out to a war-torn world. Envy, hatred, and party malice thwarted his endeavors and disappointed the longings of the Christian peoples of every nation and race. Woodrow Wilson, after a noble fight, died a hero on the firing line. [Applause.] Now, five years after the termination of this war, we find the same old conditions prevailing, which this country fought to destroy. We find nations arming for future wars, rivaling each other in expenditures for the perfection of the deadliest weapon and all the outfit of war. Groveling in the dust with the burdens that the war has imposed, the nations are piling up still further burdens to meet the threatened devastation and destruction of the war of to-morrow. In this peace-loving country and in this civilized age these appropriations tell the fearful price we are paying for the failure to secure the fruits of the triumph of our arms. The dawn of the better day may not be near, but the seed of the idealism which Woodrow Wilson broadcasted will yet bear its fruit. With each succeeding generation, struggling onward and upward, with the memory of the hero enshrined in their hearts, humanity will attain in time the goal of a war-free world. [Applause.]

THE NECESSITY OF PREPAREDNESS.

I have said, Mr. Chairman, that if these appropriations could be diverted into channels of peace it would be a blessing to the American people, but as long as the old pre-war conditions exist it is as essential to-day to be prepared for emergencies as it has ever been in the past, and I can not say that, vast as this appropriation is, it is out of proportion to the exigencies that have been imposed on this country by a failure to effectuate a proper peace. I think the appropriations in some respects should have been increased, especially along the line of training our citizen soldiers. I have always believed that the Regular Army should be only the framework on which in war we could build our Army of defense out of the trained citizens of civil life. The National Guard is the principal organization of our citizen soldiery and should be liberally encouraged, trained, and equipped.

I must not forget the Officers' Reserve Corps, consisting of those who were trained on the battle field or in the camp. It contains splendid material for service.

The money that is appropriated in this bill for the training of our emergency officers in my opinion is not adequate. Only enough is appropriated as would give 15 days' training to an emergency officer once in five years. It seems to me that such a proposition is ridiculous. If we are going to train properly the emergency officers and the citizen soldiery of this country, sufficient appropriations ought to be made to effectuate that purpose.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I will.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I am glad to see that the gentleman does agree with the farewell remarks of his distinguished fellow statesman, General Washington.

Mr. HARRISON. I certainly ought to agree with General Washington, as in colonial days he represented Winchester in the house of burgesses and my unborn spirit, and I represent the shade of Thomas Jefferson, another father of the Republic [applause], and I am speaking what they thought. As I was going to say, I believe that the bulwark of our armed defense should rest with the citizen soldier. This bill, with all its cost, does not increase materially the size of our Regular Army. The great cost of these appropriations for military matters is the equipment in the varied services which is now rendered necessary for modern warfare, and therefore this $328,000,000 is not more than is sufficient, in my judgment, to meet the necessary demand of the Army service under modern conditions. I hope this country will never be found in the same condition it was at the time of the commencement of the last war. [Applause.] We were totally unprepared to meet the emergency that then existed. Having failed, for the reasons pointed out, to secure the fruits of victory, we must profit by past experience and prepare.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I will.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. The gentleman, as a member of the committee, knows that the manhood of the fighting part of the war did very well. Where it broke down it was on account of the vicious contractors, did it not?

Mr. HARRISON. I do not consider that it did break down. No tribute is too eloquent to fully portray the magnificent discharge of duty that our soldiers rendered both in the camps and field—

Mr. LA GUARDIA. And within a very comparatively short time?

Mr. HARRISON. In the short time they were in training; I was just coming to that. I think we owe an everlasting obligation to the ex-service men who so faithfully discharged their duties. Nearly every State in the Union has her conspicuous hero, and Virginia has hers; and I now put in the Record a clipping from the News-Leader, of Richmond, in regard to Corpl. Joseph E. Allen, a Virginian, who received the distinguished service medal and received from France the croix de guerre:

[From the News-Leader, November 11, 1919.]

CORPL. JOSEPH E. ALLEN, WHO CAPTURED 56 GERMANS, PRESENTS CITY MEMORIAL FLAG—HIGHLAND PARK MAN, MEMBER OF RICHMOND GRAYS, WEARS DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS AND CROIX DE GUERRE FOR DEEDS OF VALOR ON BATTLE FIELDS OF FRANCE—CEREMONIES AT 4 O'CLOCK THIS AFTERNOON IN STATE CAPITOL BUILDING, IN HALL OF HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Because his record was, in the opinion of his comrades, the most glorious made by a Virginian in the war, rivaling that of Al York, the fighting mountaineer from Tennessee, Joseph E. Allen, of 920 Third avenue, Highland Park, was selected to make the presentation of Richmond's memorial flag to the State of Virginia in the Hall of the House of the Capitol at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Allen, a corporal with the Richmond Grays, was wounded and sent home last March, but before he was put out of the fight he, with four men, had captured eight machine guns and their crews of 56 men, and to-day wears the distinguished-service cross and the croix de guerre.

He returned to Richmond Sunday from Newport News, where he has been employed for several months, to participate in Armistice Day exercises. While of a retiring nature, he consented to make the presentation, after the armistice committee had told him that there was no one with a finer record that could be obtained for the purpose, and that it was his duty to act on this occasion.

Young Allen, who was a corporal in Company B, One hundred and sixteenth Infantry (Richmond Grays Battalion), was born in Richmond on March 9, 1896, and is the son of William R. Allen, of Highland Park. He volunteered with the Grays and left Richmond on September 24, 1917, going to Camp McClellan for training. From there he went overseas in May, 1918, with the Twenty-ninth Division, and participated in the occupation of defensive sector "Haunt" Alsace, and in the Meuse-Argonne offensive.

COMRADES SAY NINETY-SEVEN.

In official records Corporal Allen is credited with having captured 56 men. Comrades who saw the Germans being brought in declared that there were at least 97 men in the contingent, but some of them became scattered, it is believed, before the official count was made. In addition, there were 40 or more of the enemy killed in the engagement, in which eight machine-gun nests were raided and silenced.

Marshal Petain of France decorated him with the croix de guerre. In the citation he said that "With the approbation of the Commander in Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, the marshal of France, commander in chief of the armies of the east, cites in the orders of the Army corps Allen, Joseph E., corporal, Company B, One hundred and sixteenth Infantry Regiment, because, with the assistance of four soldiers, he attacked and captured eight machine guns and their gunners."

Corporal Allen said today that he was in charge of three other men, Privates Maxey and Mayers, of Richmond, and Teckel, of Michigan, and they were working in the battle of Haumont Woods. When asked to describe the action, he offered the report of Maj. William A. Stack, battalion commander, as the best description of the work.

Major Stack reported that—

"About noon on October 8 our assaulting wave was being held up by galling machine-gun fire from 'fox holes' and 'pill boxes' held by German machine-gun crews who could not be seen. Waiting and watching for a little smoke, which sometimes could be seen on a cloudy day such as this was, Corporal Allen selected four privates from Company B to aid him and went to destroy this resistance.

HUN FELL AT EVERY SHOT.

"Arriving closer to the Huns, Corporal Allen found a great deal more than he expected to find, but by so placing his men and with the aid of that ever-present determination of the American soldier to do or die, he surprised and brought in 8 machine guns and their crews, consisting of 56 prisoners. The success of this great work is almost wholly attributable to good marksmanship, for every shot fired by any of this group of men brought down a Hun. No shots were fired unless a good target presented itself."

Some few days after his raid of the German machine-gun nests, on October 25, Corporal Allen was wounded in the Battle of Grand Montagne and was sent to a hospital. In March he was sent back to this country ahead of his unit, and on April 14 he was discharged from the Army at Camp Lee. Since then he has spent some time in Richmond, but went to Newport News during the summer for employment in the shipbuilding plant.

[Applause.]

When a demand came for extraordinary gallantry he met it with the spirit which animated the American Army. As I have pointed out, our legislation should show our gratitude to the ex-service men, but it seems impossible to secure any consideration of measures by the Republican Party, in control, devoid of politics.

THE ADJUSTED COMPENSATION BILL.

Every two years the bonus or adjusted compensation bill for the ex-service men is trotted out for its effect on the election. After the elections we hear nothing more about it until the next election requires its resurrection. No question about it, there is a division of sentiment in the country on the propriety of this measure. The big-business interests, who contribute to the Republican campaign funds, are against it, and the ex-service men are for it, and they contribute the votes. The Republican management handles this situation profitably. The Republican President vetoes the bill and gets the contributions, and the Republican Congress votes for the bill to get the votes. The ex-service men get nothing, but are stalled off with promises.

The ex-service men so long denied the benefits of this bill should conform to the requirements of the election law to entitle them to vote, pay their capitation taxes, and register, if required, and visit their wrath upon a party who only under the Democratic lash is forced into even any pretense of action, and betrays them to the extent it is thought feasible.

There is, no doubt, opposition to this bill based on conscientious conviction. To persons who honestly differ, each is entitled to the respect of each other. There has been waged, however, against this bill a mass of false propaganda, which is well calculated to mislead well-intentioned people.

First. A great deal of falsehood is disseminated in regard to the cost. I believe with Mr. T. W. Miller, a distinguished Republican in the public service, that the figures of the Treasury Department are juggled to suit Mr. Mellon's purposes. Anyone with a pencil and pad can figure out that the cost is grossly exaggerated. The basic theory of the adjusted compensation is that each man is to receive $1 a day for service in this country and $1.25 a day for oversea service, but in no event to exceed 500 days. In round numbers, 4,000,000 men were in the service—2,000,000 served in this country, 2,000,000 overseas. If every man in the service served the entire period, the total cost could not exceed $2,250,000,000. But, as we know, very few served such a length of time, and according to fair estimates the average length of service would not exceed 200 days, and the total cost would not be $1,000,000,000. Just here it is necessary to do a little more juggling with figures. The payment of this money is spread over 20 years with interest, and the accumulated interest is added to the cost, which is wholly unfair in the estimate of the cost. Interest is the price of the use of the money and not a part of the cost. If one buys a horse for $100 and gives his note payable 50 years after date with interest, at the end of the period he would have to pay $400, but surely this is not the cost of the horse. It is just such juggling as creates the cost in this case.

This matter, however, ought not to be considered in a commercial sense. If, in good faith and conscience, the ex-service man is entitled to this adjustment, he should be paid the same regardless of cost. If commercial considerations are decisive, then the district I represent is bound to be largely a beneficiary. The tax cost is necessarily negligible, and the distribution of the adjustment a large asset. Ever since the Civil War the pensions to Civil War veterans have been a large outgo from the district with very little or a negligible return. In this the outgo will be negligible, but the money distributed throughout the district will be considerable and it will be largely a reversal of the Civil War pension status.

Second. The equity of the claim is, in my judgment, indisputable. The pay of the soldiers was arbitrarily fixed, and he was arbitrarily brought into the service if he did not volunteer. His business was disrupted and the service he was called on to render was beyond compensation. Out of the $30 paid him, he must often make family allowances and pay insurance. He was morally coerced to pay money to the Liberty bond vendor and the Red Cross and other charitable collectors. Those who did not go into the service received such pay as was never dreamed possible. Wages advanced phenomenally. After the war there were more multimillionaires and billionaires than millionaires before the war.

The war, by the efficiency of our Army, terminated one year in advance of expectation. In the last appropriation bill approved by the Military Affairs Committee was carried in round numbers $13,000,000,000. By the early termination of the war, at least six billions were saved to the taxpayers. Then all sorts of contractors and dealers with the Government flocked to Washington to secure equitable adjustment on their contracts and claims. Those who in prospect of contracting with the Government had made ruinous expenditures applied for equitable consideration. The mine owner, the factory, the supply man, and all others received a fair adjustment. All received respectful consideration except the ex-service man. The cold shoulder was his portion and oratory on his duty as a patriot was the answer to his demands, until the Republican Party saw fit to play politics.

Third. There can be no real question that the precedents favor such an adjustment. There has not been a war in this country in which the principle has not been recognized. The Revolutionary War, the Mexican War, and the Civil War furnish precedents, not only in acts of Congress but in the acceptance of bounties by the most distinguished men in national history. George Washington received a bounty from Virginia. Lafayette received $200,000 and a land grant. Abraham Lincoln received bounty in the Black Hawk War. Gen. Robert E. Lee applied for and received bounty lands for services in the war with Mexico. A long list of patriots were recipients of like bounties. Other countries in this war have given bounties to their soldiers. Many States of the Union have given bounties to those who served from their States.

Precedents are written on every page of our national history. I have not a word in criticism for the young soldier who dislikes the principle of the bill. Were I a young ex-service man I might be inclined to prefer to be held in esteem for the sacrifices I made in answer to the call of my country than receive any compensation under any plan of readjustment of the compensation. But this is a matter for the ex-service man to determine for himself. Neither on principle nor precedent can he be denied consideration if he chooses to demand an equitable adjustment.

VETERANS' BUREAU.

The Veterans' Bureau is the vehicle by means of which the country has undertaken to take care of the disabled men. Congress has never sought to escape the responsibility and the duty which the country owed to those who were disabled in the line of duty. Millions and millions of dollars have been appropriated, so that there might be no means neglected of furnishing relief to these men. It is a most discouraging reflection that waste and extravagance and dishonesty should have at any time entered into the distribution of these moneys. The recent scandals and the indictment of a former director are distressful occurrences in our national life. These matters are now being investigated in the criminal courts, and punishment should be meted out to guilty parties.

I can not say, however, that the new management is giving satisfaction. There seems to be a determined purpose to show a reduction in appropriations without regard to the suffering inflicted upon disabled men. I have had my attention called since the new régime to many instances of unjust consideration of the compensation due to applicants to relief under this law. This is not a bureau in which economy should be practiced upon those who are entitled to relief. The people of this country have spoken in no uncertain way that every consideration should be given to men suffering from disabilities incurred in the line of duty. There is no division of sentiment in this country on this point, and yet every day instances are brought to my attention in which remuneration to the disabled men has been ruthlessly reduced without adequate justification therefor. I could put into the Record instances which have come under my observation. This, however, it seems to me, is more properly to be considered when the appropriation is brought before the House for this specific purpose.

THE BURSUM BILL.

A bill passed the Senate at the last session of Congress without a dissenting voice and was sent over to the House and referred to the Military Affairs Committee, which simply pigeonholed it. This is known as the Bursum bill, that gave to the emergency officer disabled in the line of duty the same relief which is given to an officer in the Regular Army, disabled under like conditions. It seems to me, as a matter of principle, that where one is serving his country on the battle field or in the camp as an officer, the country should be stopped from denying him the status of an officer of the Army. If he is an officer to fight the battles and incur the suffering and disability, he should be an officer to receive such benefits as those to which an officer of the Regular Army is entitled. [Applause.] In the selective draft law, section 10, under the provisions of which this emergency officer entered the service, it was thought that such a question had been put beyond dispute. Section 10 reads as follows:

That all officers and enlisted men of the forces herein provided for other than the Regular Army shall be in all respects on the same footing as to pay allowances, and pensions as officers and enlisted men of corresponding grades and length of service in the Regular Army.

And not only this, but another provision of the statute law expressly declares that all distinction shall be obliterated between the emergency army and the Regular Army and the National Guard, and that all should be designated by the single term of the National Army. In spite of this legislative declaration, the War Department has ruled that an emergency officer injured in the line of duty was not entitled to be retired under the provisions which are applicable to disabled officers in the Regular Army. Retired pay should certainly be considered either as "pay," "allowance," or "pension." If it is not one or the other of these, it is hard to determine what would be a proper definition.

Measures to correct these injustices have been introduced in both bodies of Congress and are pending in this body before the Veterans' Committee. I sincerely hope that that committee will not undertake to deny to this House the right to pass upon such a measure, as the Military Affairs Committee has done in the past.

MILITARY PREFERENCE.

The last Democratic Congress enacted on March 3, 1919, a statute that all honorably discharged soldiers should have preference in the consideration of their applications for civil appointments. The Democratic administration carried this statute rigidly into effect. Every applicant who received a rating of 65 in a civil-service examination was placed on a preferred list, and no matter what the rating of an applicant who was not entitled to military preference his application could not be considered until the military list was exhausted. Upon the Republican administration taking charge this regulation was altered so that the man with a military preference was entitled to only five points more than he would have received if he had not had his military preference. Even this defiance of the law has been carried further, and the military preference has been utterly ignored where political considerations could be subserved. Various instances have come under my observation in the district that I have the honor to represent in which this military preference has been absolutely disregarded and men who have been wounded on the field of battle have been denied appointments in favor of some Republican whose only claim was his service to his party.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I will say that in the Internal Revenue Service in New York Democrats get all the jobs. I can not get any.

Mr. HARRISON. I wish you would bring them down here.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I can not get them out. [Laughter.]

Mr. HARRISON. If actions of this character were the unauthorized acts of some petty provincial boss, an apology for such utter disregard of the ex-service men's rights might be found in the belief that higher authority would discourage such practice. I regret to say that the practice seems to have received the direct approval of the President of the United States, and this, too, even where the ex-service man was made to pay for appointment under his application. The huckstering of political appointments was fully known to the President when he selected his secretary. He must also have known of the treatment of men with military preference, that I now put in the RECORD, when he appointed Mr. C. Bascom Slemph his secretary. I read now some interesting letters:

[C. B. Slemph, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 19, 1921.

DEAR BEN: We have a rural-route matter at Meadows of Dan in Patrick County that I want you to try and work out on a way that we can get something out of it.

The eligibles are Alvin M. Barnard, Wm. B. Clark, and John A. Smart, all Democrats. They are ex-service men and we will have to appoint one of them. The question is, can we get the one we appoint to put up some cash. I know you can do it if anyone can.

It would be immaterial which one we appoint. My suggestion would be to work it through Arch Staples so as to not get in any huddle that might hurt. If you can agree to get one of the three to do something we can make the appointment at once. You better not use my name or Mr. Slemph's in the matter. Just say that you have authority to make the recommendation that will go. I inclose you a little note that will back you up in this connection. See what you can do and let me know. Get all you can.

Your friend,

L. B. HOWARD.

[Laughter.]

In that letter was this inclosure:

[C. B. Slemph, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 19, 1921.

This is to say that Mr. B. R. Powell is authorized to recommend rural-mail carrier at Meadows of Dan, Va.

L. B. HOWARD, Secretary.

[C. B. Slemph, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 19, 1921.

DEAR BEN: Further relative to rural route at Meadows of Dan, I wrote you about to-day, I would get all I could out of the matter. Give it to the one that will give you the most. You should have at least $200, I think.

With best wishes, I am,
Sincerely,

L. B. HOWARD, Secretary.

Mr. TUCKER. This was from the same Mr. Slemph, and the appointment was made according to his suggestion.

Mr. HARRISON. Oh, yes; and here is another.

[C. B. Slemph, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., February 4, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

MY DEAR MR. POWELL: Please accept my thanks for your letter of the 3d, inclosing checks in the amount of $100.

You are doing good work. Keep it up.

With best wishes, I am
Sincerely yours,

C. B. SLEMP.

Mr. PEERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman give us the date of that letter?

Mr. HARRISON. That letter is on February 4, 1921. The Meadows of Dan matter occurred long after collections for party deficit ceased. There was no possible excuse; there was no canvass pending, and no deficit to be made up, or anything of that character. It would seem that things got to be rather nauseous in Virginia, and we have this letter:

[C. B. Slemph, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
*Washington, D. C., December 22, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR BEN: I have letters in regard to the collection of money for post offices. One must be very careful about this. It will bring the party into disrepute, which would be bad for everyone. We must preserve our standing with the people and with the administration.

With best wishes, I am
Sincerely yours,

C. B. SLEMP.

And now, as a reward—and as these matters were all published, I suppose, as an indorsement of the principle—we find him appointed by the President his confidential adviser.

It is evident from these letters that, according to the Republican administration, the question is not did a man bleed for his country, but did he bleed for the distribution of patronage? [Laughter.] The first was the question which a Democratic Congress propounded, and the second is that which the present Republican administration propounds. I think the Democratic Party has a right to insist that every measure that has been passed for the benefit of ex-service men and disabled men should be properly enforced, and that the ex-service men, regardless of their political affiliation, should be entitled to receive the benefits of them.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, may I tell my friend something of my own experience?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I long ago found what you and others have doubtless found to be the fact, namely, that in spite of a profession, which turned out to be a mere false pretense, to give some regard to considerations of merit; instead of basing appointments exclusively upon party considerations, this administration, through the officials of the Post Office Department, has not concealed its purpose to appoint a Republican postmaster in every instance where a Republican candidate can be put on the eligible list. In my district all Democratic eligibles, however highly they may be rated on the examinations, and notwithstanding they may be entitled to the preference accorded ex-service men, have been turned down and Republicans selected. In the very first case that occurred I was frankly told by the officials that the purpose was as I have stated, and time and time again I have been informed that the department had referred or would refer the selection from the list of eligibles to the member of the Republican National Committee from Virginia for the final word.

Mr. HARRISON. And his final word is always in favor of a Republican, notwithstanding the military preference. That has been my experience. I have had cases in which a man has been wounded on the battle field, and in order to prevent the appointment of such a man to the place to which he was entitled, and to which the grateful people of the community desired he should be appointed, they have actually transferred a man from some distant place who was a Republican and cut him out of the appointment in that way.

In order that the country may be fully advised of the extent to which appointments to office have been sold, and which must be now considered indorsed by the President, I put in the Record a number of letters not necessarily pertaining to military appointments but bearing on the general methods followed in appointment to office in the State of Virginia under the present administration.

In explanation, Mr. B. R. Powell was the man selected by Mr. Slomp to make the recommendations.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 27, 1921.

DEAR BEN: I inclose you a copy of letter I received from Mr. Jones a short time ago. I have succeeded in pulling his son over the top and am ready to make the appointment, but before we do so it will be necessary for you to get in touch with him and arrange for some money. We will have to have at least $150 in order to come out whole. It took half of that amount to put the matter over, which I will explain to you when I see you. I want you to handle the matter instead of writing to them direct. It is a very delicate matter, and I had to do some strong wire pulling to get it through, and I know you can work it in the right way. I would not write any letter on the matter but phone the boy to come and see you. If you can, I would like for it to all be arranged by the first of the year. This is a lifetime position for the boy, which he would not have gotten if it had not been for me, and I feel sure they will appreciate fully the circumstances and protect me in the matter. If you think it is worth more than the above amount, you can arrange accordingly. How are you getting along on the Meadows of Dan matter?

Your friend,

L. B. HOWARD.

P. S.: Be sure and destroy this letter after you are through with it.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 16, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR MR. POWELL: I certainly did enjoy being with you at the convention, and I appreciate the many courtesies extended to me while there.

I am going to depend on you to work out the Henry County appointments. If our friend Doctor Smith does not fall in line as he should, I think you ought to connect with some one else in that county, and still I think the doctor will be all right if you will have a long talk with him.

Of course, you know that it is necessary in making these appointments to get men in that will help us in a financial way, and also I want you to look after the situation in Campbell County.

I will send you copies of letters that I write to Mr. Morgan, the county chairman, so you can keep in touch with the situation. Let me hear from you all along.

With best wishes, I am,
Sincerely yours,

L. B. HOWARD, Secretary.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 25, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR MR. POWELL: I think I have succeeded in having Clyde Boone appointed rural mail carrier at Wirtz. Had you better see him and have him help a little?

With best wishes I am,
Sincerely your friend,

L. B. H., Secretary.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR BEN: I have had Mr. Moon appointed acting postmaster at Saxe. I suggest that you see him at once and have him help us. He should have his appointment within a few days.

Your friend,

L. B. H.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR BEN: In reply to copy of letter you wrote Mr. Brady, I am not in a position to know who is getting the money in your county. In order to make sure I believe I would send it all here. Let me hear from you.

With best wishes, I am,
Your friend,

L. B. H., Secretary.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 2, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR BEN: I thank you very much for your letter of December 7 inclosing clipping. I appreciate your loyalty and shall be glad to reciprocate at all times when I can.

With best wishes, I am,
Sincerely yours,

C. B. SLOMP.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 20, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR MR. POWELL: The Post Office Department has asked us to give them the name of some one who they can appoint acting postmaster at Scottsburg. Please get in touch with Lee Wolfe and give us the name at your earliest convenience. Be sure and get some one that will help us out in our finances.

With best wishes,
Sincerely yours,

L. B. HOWARD, Secretary.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 2, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR MR. POWELL: I think I have arranged for the appointment of Mrs. Angel at Boon Mill without an examination, though I prefer that you keep this in confidence.

Do you think it would be wise to ask them for a little more help on our State work. I am just informed that the Post Office Department has called on the civil service to hold examinations at Halifax and Charlotte Court House, Va., so it will not be very long before we can get these matters settled. Let me hear from you all along.

With best wishes, I am,
Sincerely yours,

L. B. HOWARD, Secretary.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 26, 1921.

DEAR BEN: The postmaster at Lennig, Halifax County, has resigned and wants to be relieved by January 1. Please get in touch with Lee Wolfe and give us name of some one who can appoint acting postmaster, fourth-class office, paying about $500 per year. Get some help out of party you recommend.

Sincerely,

L. B. HOWARD.

[C. B. Slomp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., February 4, 1921.

Mr. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

MY DEAR MR. POWELL: Your letter under date of the 3d relative to marshalship received. I know of no promise that has been made in this connection. I have not made any and don't suppose anyone else has.

It is my desire to work everything out satisfactory to all our friends.

With best wishes always, I am,
Sincerely yours,

C. B. SLOMP.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., January 12, 1921.

DEAR BEN: The postmaster at Henry, in Franklin County, has died. The department is asking for the name of some one to appoint acting. The office pays about $600 per year. I wish you would get in touch with Beverly Davis or some one and let us have name as soon as possible. I would have the party send in a little contribution—say $25 or $35.

Sincerely yours,

L. B. H., Secretary.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. POWELL: If you can, arrange the balance of the $200 that I wrote you about. I am leaving for home on about the 23d, and would like to have it before that time. Let me know when I can serve you.

With best wishes, your friend,

L. B. H., Secretary.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., January 15, 1921.

MR. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

MY DEAR MR. POWELL: I thank you for your letter of the 14th relative the South Boston post office matter. I feel sure we will be able to control the situation when the time comes. I shall appreciate if you will keep me advised all along. With best wishes always, I am

Sincerely yours,

C. B. SLEMP.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 28, 1921.

DEAR BEN: Lee Wolfe has recommended Witt H. Henderson for acting postmaster at Lennig. I have recommended him so he can take charge January 1, 1922. Suppose this is all right with you. Lee said he would send $25 on this. Look after it. Doctor Smith was here yesterday raising hell about matter in Henry County. Will write you fully about it to-day or to-morrow. Keep all my letters confidential, and don't say anything about the Smith matter until you hear further.

Your friend,

L. B. H.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., January 14, 1922.

DEAR BEN: Everything came in O. K. this morning. I gave Mr. S. 200. He has taken your matter up with Judge McD. Let me know when I can serve you.

Your friend,

L. B. H., Secretary.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 26, 1921.

MR. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR MR. POWELL: I have succeeded in having Mr. Archie H. Kirkland appointed rural mail carrier at Concord Depot.

Can you see him and have him help out a little on expenses. You know how to handle matters of this kind so there will be no come-back. I understand he is a very fine man, a good Republican, coming from Massachusetts.

With best wishes I am,

Sincerely yours,

L. B. H., Secretary.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 27, 1921.

MR. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR MR. POWELL: The Civil Service Commission has announced examinations for postmasters on August 13 at Charlotte Court House, Halifax, and Concord Depot.

Please get in touch with our people at these places and have them thoroughly prepared for these examinations.

I received your letter this morning in regard to the appointment of rural mail carrier at Wirtz, but it came too late, as on yesterday I succeeded in getting Mr. Clyde Boone appointed and wrote you accordingly.

I think you ought to see Mr. Boone before he gets his appointment and tell him what a fight we have made to have him appointed and make him promise to help out on expenses. Let me hear from you.

With best wishes I am,

Sincerely yours,

L. B. HOWARD, Secretary.

[C. B. Slempp, ninth district Virginia—Committee on Appropriations.]
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., September 14, 1921.

MR. B. R. POWELL, Gretna, Va.

DEAR BEN: I am just in receipt of your letter and inclosure from Mr. Meen. I wrote you on yesterday that he had been appointed acting postmaster. His appointment should reach him within a few days.

I note what you say about young Parsons doing some work in the eastern end of the district. My advice would be to just let them do what they can and keep in close touch with your friends in your county and the other counties of which you are referee. We have the advantage, for I will keep you posted about any and all vacancies and will refer them to you. You will have to work on Doctor Smith some more, as I wrote you. He is now getting awfully anxious about the post office. We can do nothing now toward making this appointment unless the present postmaster can be removed on charges. If they will get up some charges and send them in, we will go to work on it. I wish you would write Doctor Smith and explain that we are doing everything we can along these lines. You might say to him that we have won out on everything we have undertaken, with one exception, and will win on that sooner or later.

Don't worry about the action of the people in the western end of the district. Just let them do what they can. Remember that we are your friend and will stay with you. Let me hear from you all along.

With best wishes,

Your friend,

L. B. H.

P. E.: Destroy this letter after you have read it.

I may add that the numerous canceled checks presented on a former occasion were indifferently payable to or indorsed by L. B. Howard, secretary, or C. Bascom Slempp.

THE WAR FRAUD CLAIMS.

During the last Congress we heard a great deal about the fraudulent conduct of the contractors during the war time and under the Wilson administration. There have been huge sums of money spent by this administration in the prosecution of the so-called war fraud claims. For the third time, this bill carries a lump-sum appropriation of $500,000, which is exclusively dedicated to the auditing of war contracts. It is an addition to another $300,000 lump-sum appropriation that is given to the Department of Justice for the collection of the war fraud claims, so that now $3,000,000 of lump-sum appropriation has been dedicated to this purpose.

I know of no greater waste of money during this extravagant administration than is exhibited in the prosecution of these so-called war fraud claims.

During the last Congress a special committee was appointed and this special committee was divided into five subcommittees. For months these five subcommittees sat simultaneously. Most diligently they explored every pigeonhole and inquired into every possible clue that might disclose loss to the Government from fraudulent contracts. Incidentally, they spent $149,000 of public money. They made voluminous reports, and the printed testimony covered many volumes of closely printed matter. It would seem, therefore, that the way of the Department of Justice had been made easy. It was made so easy that in the opinion of two gentlemen on the Republican side of the Chamber the Attorney General should be impeached for failure to take the necessary and proper steps to bring the culprits to justice. Propositions to this end were submitted to the House, and then for the first time the Attorney General comes before the House in the shape of a letter addressed to the President, in which he claims that his failure to prosecute has been due to lack of funds. If he had only the proper appropriation, $192,000,000 would be unearthed and men high in official life would be exposed. I think that the Attorney General is entitled to speak for himself in this matter, and I read here an extract from his letter:

"The transactions out of which these cases grow, in a vast majority of instances, took place during the preceding administration. Naturally little or nothing was done during that administration to bring these matters to light. As the country will soon have reason to know, influential personages in the Government who had knowledge of these transactions and were in a position to make disclosures were personally interested in concealing them.

It is not to be wondered, therefore, that upon coming into office I found not only that practically nothing had been done in the way of investigating and prosecuting these offenses but that no machinery had been set up for handling the cases in an orderly and systematic way."

At the time this request was preferred it was shown by Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee that the Attorney General had at his command the following list of assistants:

47 special attorneys.....	$181,200
170 special assistant attorneys.....	850,000
District attorneys.....	900,000
Regular assistants.....	550,000
Special agents.....	2,000,000

And, too, Congress was so impressed with the hundreds of millions of dollars of which the Government had been cheated and were so indignant that men high in official life had escaped punishment that the $500,000 was immediately forthcoming. It was placed absolutely at the discretion of the Attorney General. At the same time, in order to still further facilitate the work of the Attorney General, a lump-sum appropriation of another $500,000 was given to the War Department. I here insert from the hearings the expenditures of the $500,000 given to the War Department:

Salaries, total number of persons, and number employed in each grade.
($500,000 audit fund of war claims.)

1 employee, at $5,000.....	$5,000
5 at $3,600.....	18,000
4 at $3,000.....	12,000
1 at $2,700.....	2,700
5 at $2,500.....	12,500
7 at $2,400.....	16,800
6 at $2,200.....	13,200
1 at $2,100.....	2,100
12 at $2,000.....	24,000
1 at $1,900.....	1,900
55 at $1,800.....	99,000
8 at $1,700.....	13,600
17 at $1,600.....	27,200
11 at $1,500.....	16,500
35 at $1,400.....	49,000
8 at $1,300.....	10,400
58 at $1,200.....	69,600
3 at $1,100.....	3,300
4 at $1,000.....	4,000
1 at $720.....	720

Total..... 390,820

Total number of persons employed, 237.

In addition, of course, to the salaries paid, the employees received the $240 bonus. Two hundred and thirty-one employees were thus employed under this fund to audit the claims so that the Attorney General might have all the necessary information which he could possibly require for the performance of his function. This, too, was in addition to the enormous evidence that had been collected by the investigating committees, of which I have already spoken. I insert here the information given to the committee from the Attorney General's office as to how he expended his $500,000:

DECEMBER 31, 1923.

War transactions section.

SPECIAL ASSISTANTS TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

	Salary.
T. M. Bigger.....	$10,000
Charles Kerr.....	10,000
Thomas W. Hardwick.....	10,000
Henry W. Anderson.....	10,000
C. Frank Reavis.....	10,000
Roscoe C. McCulloch.....	10,000
James N. Linton.....	10,000
Milton D. Purdy.....	10,000
Ralph E. Moody.....	7,500
William T. Chantland.....	7,500
Arthur Carnduff.....	7,200
R. R. Farr.....	6,000
Marion C. Early.....	6,000
John Paul.....	6,000
Harry E. O'Neill.....	5,000
Herbert E. Hadley.....	4,500
Archib K. Shipley.....	4,200
P. H. Marcum.....	4,200
F. Donald Enfield.....	4,000
F. Edward Mitchell.....	4,000
Albert Levitt.....	3,600
Simoon Atkinson.....	3,600
H. R. Smith.....	3,600
Richard L. Merrick.....	3,500
Paul S. Dodson.....	3,500
Beverly A. Davis, Jr.....	3,500
Paul J. Mullen.....	2,000

Total..... 169,400

James M. Butler (compensation to be determined).
Robert S. Conklin (compensation to be determined).
Robert C. McClure (compensation to be determined).
John J. Parker (compensation to be determined).
John P. Phillips (compensation to be determined).
Meier Steinbrink (compensation to be determined).

EXAMINERS IN QUARTERMASTER UNIT.

	Salary and bonus.
William Armstrong Hunter (New York).....	$2,160
J. F. Reardon (New York).....	2,160
F. V. Wills (New York).....	1,800
Dwight H. Williams (New York).....	1,800
Henry M. Matter (New York).....	2,160
Edward T. Gardner.....	1,800
John J. Burke.....	1,760
Francis M. Crawford.....	1,560
H. Dabel Anderson.....	1,560
O. W. Hughes.....	1,560
	19,400

EXAMINERS IN ORDNANCE UNIT.

Leo W. Dunn.....	2,160
John W. Fihelly.....	2,160
W. H. S. Callahan.....	2,160
W. O. Burtner.....	2,160
J. M. Baber.....	2,160
P. J. Friel.....	2,160
Eugene V. Bullett.....	2,000
John F. Moore.....	1,760
Joseph P. Lieb.....	1,760
C. C. Keiser.....	1,760
A. E. Sullivan.....	1,760
J. Arthur Mattson.....	1,560
Edwin J. Pond.....	1,560
Emmett M. Doherty, executive assistant to the Attorney General.....	2,000
	27,120

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEER AND INVESTIGATORS.

Ernest J. Wessen.....	6,000
Stanley B. Attwood.....	3,000
Samuel F. Lambert.....	3,000
James A. Welker.....	3,000
Raymond L. Joy.....	3,000
Daniel H. Dunbar.....	2,400
	20,400

STENOGRAPHERS, TYPISTS, AND CLERKS.

Joseph M. Day, special law clerk.....	2,500
Eva B. Uhl, secretary.....	2,500
Agnes L. Brown, chief file clerk.....	1,800
Margaret M. Kelly, special employee (examiner).....	1,800
Dorothy D. Lewis, stenographer.....	1,800
Mrs. Marjorie Baggarly, stenographer.....	1,000
Dorothy H. Gascon, stenographer.....	1,000
Mrs. Josephine D. Grabill, stenographer.....	1,000
Helen C. Hironimus, stenographer.....	1,000
Ruth C. Lealie, stenographer.....	1,000
Dorothy James, stenographer.....	1,000
Elizabeth Farrell, stenographer.....	1,400
Marguerite C. Furrow, stenographer.....	1,400
Reila M. Lane, stenographer.....	1,400
Mrs. Beatrice M. Paterson, clerk.....	1,400
Vera M. Kelley, stenographer.....	1,300
Vera M. Cleavenger, typist.....	1,200
Ned M. Hughes, clerk (office of Solicitor of Treasury).....	1,200
Winifred Louise Lamb, typist.....	1,000
Mrs. Edith P. Anderson, clerk.....	1,000
Walter K. Caldwell, special employee (chief messenger).....	1,000
Helen P. Mills, typist.....	900
Wade H. Furrow, special employee (messenger).....	720
	33,966

ACCOUNTING—INVESTIGATION DIVISION.

	Salary
James Cameron, director.....	$18,000
E. C. Andrews, accountant.....	1,760
E. J. Armbruster, accountant.....	2,400
Florence Austin, accountant.....	1,500
F. M. Bellows, accountant.....	3,000
R. D. Betikof, accountant.....	1,560
C. B. Boland, accountant.....	3,000
L. Breslow, accountant.....	3,000
Louise A. Brown, accounting clerk.....	1,200
A. B. Browne, accounting clerk.....	1,200
W. E. Cadwallader, accountant.....	6,500
C. M. Crain, accountant.....	2,160
W. H. Dempsey, accountant.....	2,080
J. E. Espinosa, accountant.....	1,800
J. H. Fortune, accountant.....	4,500
J. H. Fraser, accountant.....	1,200
Helen Gieseking, typist.....	1,200
B. B. Gilliland, accountant.....	1,760
C. W. Hanger, accountant.....	1,760
Max Hers, accountant.....	3,000
R. V. Johns, accountant.....	3,000
L. E. Kieffhaber, accountant.....	4,200
F. S. Langhenry, typist.....	1,200
J. B. Lowell, engineer accountant.....	3,000
H. W. McCally, accountant stenographer.....	2,400
J. W. Maley, accountant.....	1,560
G. C. Mantz, accountant.....	2,160
Julian I. Marks, accountant.....	5,000
J. F. O'Hare, accountant.....	1,560
O. L. Orr, accountant.....	1,760
H. C. Oviatt, accountant.....	3,000
J. M. Owens, accountant stenographer.....	2,260
C. W. Porter, accountant.....	1,800
J. P. Prescott, accountant.....	1,800
F. G. Read, accountant.....	3,300
M. Ruppert, clerk.....	1,200
E. W. Shepherd, accountant.....	2,160
H. J. Simmons, accountant.....	2,160
S. C. Simon, accountant.....	2,160
S. J. Smallwood, accountant.....	1,960
H. A. Smith, accountant.....	4,200

	Salary.
J. H. Smith, accountant	$3,300
R. D. Spaulding, accountant	1,440
L. W. Townsend, accountant	5,000
W. D. Wilcoxson, accountant	1,900
G. W. Wilson, accountant	2,740
J. A. Wilson, accountant	1,500
B. P. Wheatley, accountant	2,160
Total	134,220
Total plus bonus	404,500

It will be observed that although $500,000 has been appropriated for the purpose of auditing these claims by the War Department, the salaried list of the Attorney General shows nearly $330,000 expended for this same purpose. It will be observed that the salaries in the War Department are moderate, but it will equally be observed that the salaries in the Attorney General's department are extraordinary in their amounts, one auditor receiving $18,000 a year. It is plain, in my judgment, that the auditing ought to be done by one or the other of these departments, in order to prevent duplication. If the $500,000 is given to the War Department for the purpose of auditing the claims, then the Attorney General should be required to call upon the War Department to make such audits as he deems necessary. The Attorney General has now had three years' appropriations to the War Department to audit his claims. He has now been given three special appropriations of $500,000 each to collect the claims. He has had the benefit of the $149,000 expended by the special committee and the five simultaneously sitting subcommittees to ascertain all possible evidence on which to prosecute these claims. It would seem, then, that we should have at least had a perspective of the $192,000,000, which he informs us in the communications at the last Congress he was going to turn into the Treasury. We should at least have had some perspective of the men in high places that he was going to place behind prison bars. Where are those $192,000,000? Where are the great men that he was going to punish? It would seem that one indictment has stood the fire of the courts, but that was one case against some Republican national committeeman of the State of Georgia. He has not been tried, but he has been indicted. Of all those that have been indicted, the courts have thrown the indictments out of court as wholly unjustified and unfounded on fact. And where is the $192,000,000? I notice that the report of the committee claims that some $2,000,000 was collected in one place, $5,000,000 collected in another, and $7,000,000 collected in another, but it is disappointing when we read the testimony as to these collections. I observe that very few of these collections seem to have ever reached the Treasury. In regard to the $5,000,000 on page 299 of the record, I directly asked that question whether that $5,000,000 represented money paid in the Treasury, and General Walker answered, "No; it is a settled issue, in so far as the Government is concerned. It was taken into consideration by the claims board when the actual settlement was made." As to the $7,000,000 item on page 312 of the hearing, it is stated that $578,507 of the same have been collected, so that there does seem to have been collected about $2,000,000, but this was collected by the War Department and not by the Department of Justice.

We hardly miss a daily paper which does not contain some item in which the litigation instituted by the Department of Justice has not met disaster. The results obtained from these enormous expenditures of money have been to the last degree humiliating. Nothing worthy of the name has been collected through the expenditures of all these millions of dollars. The court proceedings record one governmental disaster after another. Suits for large sums are placed on the court calendars with a great deal of parade and blowing of trumpets, and there they sleep either without prosecution or they are dismissed by the courts when the cases are called on the calendar.

If, however, the expenditure of all this money has been disastrous there is one happy feeling of congratulation, and that is that the Attorney General founded a hospital for the lame ducks of the administration. One has only to read the names and reflect how happy it is that the Treasury can take care of so many public servants that the people have discredited. It is a proud reflection on us Virginians that of the 28 highly paid attorneys some six or more come from the State of Virginia. How did the Attorney General know that all of this legal talent was lurking in the highways and hedges of that great State? Was the mentor the President selected called on for suggestions? There are 48 States, and each State would be entitled to about half an attorney apiece, but Virginia is given six. Looking at the results in the courts, however, it might seem that in the six we have not exceeded our fair lot. One of the provisions of the appropriation act was that no attorney should receive over $10,000, but in another happy exception H. W. Anderson, of Virginia, is provided for by giving him an appointment that draws from the packers of Chicago an additional $10,000, so that Virginia again is specialized in the fact that one of the attorneys at least receives double the amount authorized by the statute. I am not sure that the additional $10,000 is paid out of the Treasury, but it is paid as the result of a governmental designation. While it is extremely gratifying, therefore, that these lame ducks are so tenderly provided for out of this lump-sum appropriation, yet I insist that the taxpayer should have some consideration, and that the time is now here, painful as it may be, to shut the door of the Treasury. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON].

[Mr. CRAMTON was granted leave to revise and extend his remarks in the Record.]

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, some of our friends in the House for some time have been taking a great deal of interest in the matter of campaign funds with particular reference to the question of beer, wine, and so forth.

We have all just received a very appealing letter. It is a letter that is going not only to the House but to the country as well and gives all of those who have a thirst for beer and light wine with a real kick in it an opportunity to subscribe and get into an organization that means business. The organization is the National Liberty League, with headquarters at Omaha, Nebr. The president of it is Mr. William P. Custard, and that name itself, suggestive as it is of the pie counter, is more or less illuminating as to the methods and the real purposes of this organization. Not 2.75 beer, as has now become the slogan of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL], in his more modest efforts of late, but 5 per cent beer and 20 per cent wine is what this organization promises. Their campaign fund is to be a $5,000,000 campaign fund, and they want to reach 10,000,000 as to membership.

The letter is as follows:

THE NATIONAL LIBERTY LEAGUE,
NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS,
Omaha, Nebr., March 23, 1924.

[William P. Custard, president, A. L. Bixton, vice president, Dr. A. J. Sabourin, chairman, national campaign fund committee. Help our $5,000,000 campaign fund (copyright). Don. H. DeBow, national secretary and treasurer. Help reach the ten million mark. For members in every State. Nonpartisan. No saloons. Nonsectarian. Organized by business men, citizens, and taxpayers for the purpose of obtaining a repeal or modification of the Volstead Act and legislation under proper regulations and supervisions of the manufacture and the sale of light wines and beer. We stand for strict governmental regulation and control; for a revenue to be produced, thereby reducing taxes; for strict enforcement of present laws until modified or repealed; for sanity and common sense; for a referendum on this important question; for the election of men to legislatures and Congress to vote for the repeal of prohibition liquor laws. We are glad to cooperate with all similar organizations. It is our plan to enlist the support of every man and woman in the Nation who believes in the league's principles. We stand against the old saloon system; against the prohibition hypocrite; against the bootlegger; against the poison liquor; against commercialization of the liquor traffic. All funds are expended in an educational campaign, circulation of petitions, obtaining members, etc. All donations to our educational campaign fund appreciated. Special membership, $5 per year; regular membership, $1 per year.]

Hon. LOUIS C. CRAMTON,
House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: You are, of course, well informed as to the change in sentiment regarding prohibition. The majority of the people believed that with the saloon eliminated the prohibition question would be settled and taken out of our State and National politics. It is our belief that the legislative and judicial branches of our State and Federal Governments have gone beyond what the people intended when they voted for prohibition.

Believing it is your desire to represent the will of the majority, the members of The National Liberty League will expect your wholehearted support and ask for your cooperation in fighting:

First, for repeal or modification of the Volstead Act to permit the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines containing not more than 5 per cent and 20 per cent of alcohol by volume, respectively, with revenue derived therefrom to be applied to the reduction of taxes and our national debt.

Second, for the abolishment of the present restrictions placed on physicians in prescribing liquors for medicinal purposes.

Third, against passing any more prohibition laws until the present are efficiently and impartially enforced.

Fourth, against appropriations for unsuccessful prohibition bureaus.

Respectfully yours,

THE NATIONAL LIBERTY LEAGUE,
DON E. DEBOW, National Secretary.

In order that you may proceed with due information as to how much of this $5,000,000 is going to be used to bring back 20 per cent wine, I want to read something from the Sunday Bee, of Omaha, Nebr. The Bee has more or less stung the philanthropic motives of this organization. The heading says "Liberty League patriots consume 90 cents; leave dime for great work," and the article is as follows:

Promotion expense of the National Liberty League, with headquarters in Omaha, eats up 90 per cent of the receipts, Don E. De Bow, organizer, secretary, and treasurer, admitted yesterday in District Judge Stauffer's court.

The other dime in the dollar goes to the league and is used for the purpose of defraying league expenses, he said.

Of the 90 cents, local managers get 50 cents, State managers get 25 cents, and De Bow himself gets 15 cents, according to his testimony.

De Bow was being examined to determine whether or not he has any property to satisfy a judgment of $6,100 returned against him recently in connection with a suit brought by D. E. Cleveland, in which Cleveland alleged that De Bow gave him a faulty deed to some property in Missouri.

"Isn't it a fact that the Liberty League is merely a phantom organization?" asked J. Dean Ringer, former police commissioner and attorney for Cleveland.

He withdrew the question on objection raised by attorneys for De Bow that the character of the organization was not material to the issue.

De Bow testified that the league has about 1,000 paid-up members. He said he has not opened up a bank account for the organization, due to the fact that expenses have eaten up all the dimes accruing to it, and there have been no funds to deposit.

He said the league has its headquarters at No. 405 Paxton Block, in a doctor's office, and that it pays no rent.

He was ordered to bring the league's books into court next Saturday.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OLIVER].

Mr. OLIVER of New York. Mr. Chairman, the amazing story told to the House last Saturday by Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky of the waste of public money in the War Department in the payment of extraordinary fees to auctioneers for the sale of surplus Army stock is the last word in business inefficiency and waste of the present administration. By this system the Government has not only paid millions of dollars to auctioneers but by faulty advertisement of sales and bad distribution of sales has lost millions of dollars in the bargain.

In the meantime the President sits like a sphinx in the White House dreaming of presidential primaries and designing decorations for his band wagon in the next campaign. Meanwhile we see his Attorney General made heir by will to the largest part of the estate of Jesse Smith, his grafting friend and intimate. The intimacy that existed between the two could not be better proven by a thousand witnesses than by the will on file in the probate court in Ohio. And yet the Attorney General's brother, executor of the will, refuses to allow an examination of the assets of the estate by a Senate committee. Surely this is an extraordinary refusal. Did brother Mel act in order to protect the honor of the head of the Department of Justice or merely to protect his property? If he acted merely to protect his property let him know that no one in Washington is trying to take away a single dollar of the property. It has been well known that Jesse Smith was more powerful in the Department of Justice than high officials there. He held no office yet he had his desk there and the right of entrance. He was the Attorney General's pal and companion. Now he wills to his bosom friend more of his estate than he gave to the woman he took as his wife. His brains were blown out in the Attorney General's apartment either by his hand or the hand of another. No autopsy was performed, no inquest was held. He was hurried to the grave. To-day Jesse Smith stands revealed as a collector of graft from whisky deals, fight films, conspiracies, and other piracies. He died when the trial of a great bootleg ring in New York was called. And he willed his money derived from graft to the Attorney General of the United States, the head of America's Department of Justice. But America is forbidden to see the records of that estate. They are now sacred and secret. Why? Is the Attorney General afraid if they are opened they will blacken the character of his dead friend? Or is he afraid that if they are opened they will show that the head of the Department of Justice of America is fighting a woman so that he might become possessed of the graft his dead friend collected. For whom did Jesse Smith collect the money in life if he provided before death that it should go to the Attorney General? Jesse Smith was merely a storekeeper in a small town in Ohio before Daugherty became Attorney General. Yet he lived by the side of the Attorney General in Washington, shared his office, lived and died in his home. And he never held a position or drew a salary or had a fortune. The records of the probate court in Ohio of Mel Daugherty's bank should be open to the public inspection.

Yet the President merely confers with his campaign managers. Why does he not turn over to Secretary of State Hughes the task of finding out the facts? In New York Mr. Hughes conducted the great insurance investigation which resulted in electing him governor. Why does not the President tell Harry Daugherty to lay before Secretary Hughes the facts about that will? If the President will not help the Senate committee to secure the information, why does he not get it himself? In a few days Secretary Hughes could get the facts for him without interrupting his conferences about the next campaign. The President is not a judge. He is an executive. He is acting like a sleepy judge in court with a jury at his elbow to listen to the evidence and take the responsibility for deciding the facts. There is no complex law point in this case. Plainly it stands, Shall Harry Daugherty be allowed by the President to conceal the evidence that all America demands? If he wants to conceal it, let him step out of the Cabinet and conceal it if he can. If he wants to stay in the Cabinet, why is he afraid to reveal the facts about the will and estate of Jess Smith?

The President made his reputation in Massachusetts by dismissing policemen after they had gone on strike. Must Cabinet officers go on strike before they are dismissed? Or is the President afraid to discharge any public official greater than a policeman.

The President owes it to the country to unlock the secrets of relationship of Harry Daugherty and Jesse Smith, the secrets of the will, the secrets of the estate, or else he must stand before the country approving of an Attorney General who fights a woman for the possession of graft. [Applause.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KVALE].

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I had no idea that I would be granted any time to-day or I would have prepared an address on the subject, but I want to say a few words about matters in general, anyway. I have sat here day after day listening patiently to discussions of bills and amendments providing for all these appropriations for the Navy and for other purposes, and I suppose I shall have a like experience during this debate on the bill providing for Army appropriations. My heart bleeds through it all when I consider what all this money is being used for. I refer not so much to the expenditures that have been revealed here by the gentleman from Kentucky, the hundreds of thousands of dollars to auctioneers, and all the other graft. I refer to what has been used in what is considered a legitimate manner, for the upbuilding of our Army and Navy, for the strengthening of what is called the national defense, and for all so-called legitimate purposes.

I have listened to these figures, and I have noted the invisible power that is back of all this. Let me say that I have unbounded respect for the power that is railroading through all this legislation. I have sat here, and, with the majority of the gentlemen of this House, I have had my hands and feet tied and my mouth bandaged while we had rammed down our throats the so-called adjusted compensation bill.

Mr. YOUNG. Will the gentleman yield? One vote more than one-third would have given you a week. There were more than that on the opposite side. All you had to do was to vote, and one vote more than one-third would have given the gentleman a week or two weeks. The bill would have remained on the calendar.

Mr. KVALE. The gentleman knows how that vote would have been misinterpreted by the very gentleman who is now speaking to me.

Mr. YOUNG. The gentleman could have had a whole week to explain it and to pass a better bill if he could have found one.

Mr. KVALE. I think a better bill could have been passed, and I hope the Senate will enable us to pass a better bill.

Mr. WATKINS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KVALE. Yes; I yield.

Mr. WATKINS. The gentleman from North Dakota might explain why they excepted from the bonus bill the female veterans of the World War and did not give them any rights, if it is such a perfect bill, he being a member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. KVALE. I agree with what the gentleman says.

Mr. YOUNG. Why did you not vote against suspension? You had plenty of votes on that side to prevent it.

Mr. WATKINS. Why did you put that exception in the bill?

Mr. KVALE. If the gentlemen will pardon me, I have the floor, and all this is coming out of my time.

Mr. Chairman, during the World War I pleaded for justice and a square deal for the soldier. I saw no reason why the man who bared his breast to the enemy should not be paid at least as much as the one who remained at home. As is well known, Congress voted the service man a bare pittance while the man thousands of miles away from the trenches made good money in almost every conceivable occupation. Since the close of the war I have advocated adjusted compensation for the ex-service man as a matter of plain and simple justice.

I have voted for this paid-up insurance measure under protest. In the face of the promise, the carefully impressed assurance by administration leaders that full and ample consideration would be given the adjusted compensation bill and other bonus bills if only the Mellon tax plan were considered separately, I consider it nothing short of a willful insult to the ex-service man and a disgrace to the name of this body for you who had this bill in charge to ram it down the throats of the House Members.

You know, and everyone knows, that it is not a soldier's adjusted compensation. It is nothing but a political makeshift. Because you knew that if we voted against the "gag rule" for its consideration we would be represented in our districts as opposing its consideration at all, you knew you would be victorious. Because you knew, in addition, that if we voted against this insurance bill in the hope of later passing the original adjusted compensation bill, we would likewise be held up before our constituents as opponents of a bonus and as traitors to the cause of the ex-service man, you sat upon the floor of the House and laughed uproariously, raucously, insultingly, at the few Members who were able in the limited time to voice their resentment and their protests.

This one feature, the elimination of the cash-payment option, has changed this bill from a measure that does the ex-service man a just act to a measure that not only betrays his best interests, but allows Members complacently to return to their districts saying they have supported a bonus, and allows the financial interests and the money lenders to receive, through interest and discount and other charges, a large part of the bonus. Plans have been proposed including a cash-payment option that would not cost the Government any more than the insurance proposal embodied in the bill passed by the House, and in all likelihood not as much.

I wanted to see the cash-payment feature a part of the bill. The soldiers have waited five years. They have hoped that your promises to them would be kept. Hundreds of thousands of ex-service men throughout the country would prefer to see this bill fail of passage and enactment; then, perhaps, at the next session, with another party at the helm, another membership here, we could give the man who asks an adjustment of his war compensation the treatment at our hands that he asks, and that he so eminently deserves.

I sat here yesterday and watched a somewhat similar procedure. I voted for the bill to give $10,000,000 for the relief of starving women and children in Germany, and I would gladly have voted for a larger amount. But it requires no great political acumen to recognize the fact, brought out by some of the speakers, that mercy and humanitarianism were not the only considerations in this case.

I listened to Members preaching sermons from this floor, and for a time I thought I was back in my old calling, only sitting in a pew instead of standing in the pulpit. Extracts from the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew were read. I was glad to hear those excerpts from the New Testament. I have quoted that portion of it hundreds of times and most heartily subscribe to every word of it. But I could not help thinking that perhaps back of it all there was this invisible power, with other motives not quite so hallowed. I do not impugn the motives of any man, least of all the motives of the gentlemen instrumental in bringing this resolution before the House—

Mr. YOUNG. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KVALE. No; I shall have to decline to yield further. I believe their motives were the highest and noblest. I have no reason whatever for believing anything else. Nevertheless I have more than a suspicion that back of it all was that invisible power that put it through for political purposes. For that reason I appreciate the stand of gentlemen in this House who refused to vote for it. But, as stated, I voted for it, and I would be glad to vote for double and treble the amount. I believe that in such cases even a political purpose can achieve some ultimate good.

I do not believe that any Member who has familiarized himself with the abundance of complete and competent evidence of widespread and acute distress now prevailing in Germany failed to see the crying need for relief. If they opposed the resolution it was for some other reason, perhaps worthier.

The misery, starvation, disease, pestilence, want, suffering—all these—have been pictured to us again and again. When I think that 20,000,000 people are actually starving, that 50 per cent of the children in the larger areas are tubercular, that others are undernourished, crippled, and deformed from rickets; when I think of the lack of fuel and clothing and supplies, then I regret that the sum we voted to appropriate was not substantially larger.

These suffering, dying women and children are in every sense casualties of the Great War. We did not wage war upon them nor they on us. Many of them have been born since the war. While it is true that some of us represent sections of the Nation, such as mine—the Great Northwest, where there is acute financial distress, there is food in plenty everywhere; in fact, our trouble is that there is such an abundance of food at low prices that the farmer is unable to market it. For humanity's sake I rejoice at the passage of this resolution.

I am reminded, too, when I speak of the financial distress among our farmers, of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Jones] and adopted by the House. The fact that the resolution, thus amended, provides that in the purchase of the several foodstuffs and materials for this relief work preference should be given to the American farmers and cooperative farm-marketing organizations, thus eliminating middlemen and profiteers, constitutes another reason why I was glad to vote for this measure.

While I think I can appreciate the viewpoint of those who opposed the measure on constitutional grounds, I nevertheless feel sure that we are in this way clearly obeying the mandates of the Constitution in "promoting the general welfare" and securing "the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." Benefits and blessings in future years, in countless ways, will be our reward; but greater than all these will be the knowledge that we have followed the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, that we have acted the part of the good Samaritan, and so in a very material way helped to heal the wounds left by the war and to promote peace on earth.

And now I expect to sit here for the next two or three days and listen to debate on these proposed appropriations for the Army, appropriations that are more than double the amount appropriated in the year before the war to end war. That will not tend to promote peace on earth.

The gentleman in charge of the bill on the Republican side, I believe, spoke about some surgical operations that have been performed on the Army bill. I do not know what the gentleman understands by operations, but it seems to me that he would call the removing of a growth on your little finger a serious surgical operation. That is the kind of operation that has been performed on the Army bill through these many years, and I doubt if the growth has been removed. We have more than doubled our appropriations for the Army, and that despite the fact, as I said, it was a war to end war. Where is this all going to end? We have millions and hundreds of millions to spend in this way, but when it comes to taking a little out of the Treasury for the toilers and producers of this land who are in dire need we have nothing to spare. Army and Navy, battleships and submarines, guns and powder and poison gas, and all pointing to war and more war.

Where are the gentlemen now who will read the Master's words in the New Testament in opposition to this large appropriation for the Army? Let them come now and read from the Sermon on the Mount. Let them come and read the Master's words, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." That was the truth when those words were uttered 1,900 years ago and it is the truth to-day. All these measures are but measures to bring on more and more war. You know that the larger the appropriations for the Army and the Navy the nearer we are to war. You can not get away from that.

I refuse to go along on these large appropriations, and if I thought there was the slightest hope of passing them I would offer an amendment after every section cutting the appropriations in half; but I suppose it would be futile to attempt it. We can not even have a record vote on these different appropriations here because of the rules governing the procedure in this House, and so it will be rammed down our throats again. And I half suspect that we never will see the day in the life of this Congress when the resolution offered yesterday by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. RAMSEYER] will be considered here, providing for the profits to be taken out of war. Every Member of this House knows, and every intelligent human being knows, that when you take the profit out of war you have stopped war. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL].

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I hope in what I say everyone will take it as a friendly criticism of the Army, something that might be made constructive. I quite agree with the gentlemen who have spoken about the enormous expense of our Army and Navy. We are spending too much money in national preparedness, but I want to remind gentlemen on the Democratic side of the House that those on the Republican side of the House are responsible for the greatest reduction in national preparedness that ever happened in this country.

Mr. RANKIN. In what respect?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. No; I can not yield, I have not the time. When we took charge of the Army it had been illegally enlisted to 240,000 men in the Regular Army, or some sixty to eighty thousand men beyond the appropriation bill, and the administration, your administration, was asking for universal military training. If we had consented to that, your bills would have run to-day over $1,000,000,000 for the Army.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the gentleman allow me to call his attention to the fact that the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, Mr. KAHN, was the gentleman who introduced that bill?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Oh, the gentleman from Virginia knows very well that it was the Secretary of War of the Democratic administration who sent the bill to the Committee on Military Affairs, with the request that it be introduced.

Mr. HARRISON. But he could not introduce it.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. And it was the Republicans who defeated it.

Mr. STEVENSON. Will the gentleman state who introduced the bill? It was Mr. KAHN, of California.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I refuse to yield. I only wanted to remind gentlemen on both sides that if they want to take the profit out of war they can do it. There will be enough gentlemen on the Republican side to help you.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman introduce the proper resolution?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Certainly, I will. I refuse to yield further. I have only 10 minutes, and the gentleman knows it. I simply want to say this, that you will never have in this country any honest-to-God preparedness until you take the profit out of war, and you will never take the profit out of war until you take it out of the peace-time preparedness, and you can do it.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman is a member of the Military Affairs Committee.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I have not the time to yield.

Mr. RANKIN. We are willing to help you and will be glad to.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I hope you are; but you know very well that the trouble is that rich contractors are getting contracts all the time from the Army and from the Navy and from the Shipping Board for work that could be easily done in the arsenals and the navy yards of the country, which are now practically standing idle. It is not so easy for Congress to stop that, for I realize that it would take some very drastic amendments, and there is the trouble. Congress is willing to stop it, but they will not do so. I am reminded right there of the way that the War Department acts when Congress legislates. We have been legislating for some eight or nine years trying to get a one-year enlistment in the Army. It was written into the law several years ago, and it reads as follows:

SEC. 27. Enlistments: Hereafter original enlistments in the Regular Army shall be for a period of one or three years, at the option of the soldier, and reenlistment shall be for a period of three years.

Have any of you ever heard recently of a man getting into the Army for one year? The General Staff laid down a policy and ignores the will of Congress, and practically defies Congress by so doing. Some of you are lawyers. Can you find here a way by which they could avoid carrying that simple two-line statute out? I venture the assertion that there is not a lawyer who would risk his reputation on the fact that the War Department had any right to interpret the statute excepting that the soldier should choose whether he would enlist for one year or three years.

The War Department, however, sets up the right. Now, I think that would save the War Department a good deal of money. They do not think so, but that does not make any difference; it is in my opinion simply a question of law enforcement.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I will.

Mr. CRAMTON. Does not the gentleman think that if the War Department would conform to the law it might be able to keep their enlistments more nearly up to the authorized strength?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I do; but that is not the question. Why, the gentleman here talks about law enforcement more than anybody else, and this is nothing but a question of law enforcement.

Mr. CRAMTON. I am trying to help the gentleman enforce this law.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I refuse to yield further at this time.

Mr. CRAMTON. If the gentleman objects to my trying to help him in the matter, I am sorry.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I want to say just a word on coast fortifications before I finish. I am glad the committee has seen fit to reduce appropriations for coast fortifications, especially at the Panama Canal. So far as I am concerned, I think they could have stricken out all of it, not but what we ought to have coast fortifications but because the plans of the War Department for the fortifications of the Panama Canal are 20 years behind the time. They are obsolete before you begin them, and if they go to work and spend the millions of dollars that they have asked for before they finish the job they will be coming back here to Congress and asking us for millions to tear them down and put something more modern in their place.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I will.

Mr. BARBOUR. Can the gentleman tell us what he would put in down there?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I have an idea that we should not put cannon on top of a hill or mountain. A fixed fortification is obsolete to-day, and has been for 20 years. They should use protected concealed places and movable or railroad artillery. If they will do this, they will have modern protection, and that at one-half the expense.

Mr. BARBOUR. The gentleman understands the present plan does not contemplate putting cannon on top of a mountain.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I think the gentleman had better examine the plans of the War Department.

Mr. BARBOUR. Does the gentleman refer to Taboga Island?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I refer to the fortifications on the Atlantic side. And I think the cannon you are preparing to put in on the Pacific side is a fixed fortification, to be put on the highest hill they can find. Everyone knows where it is, and it makes a fine mark to aim at and hit.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. Chairman, many northwestern people have written to me to protest against the drawback provision of the Fordney-McCumber law and to declare that the wheat duty of 30 cents per bushel was thereby made valueless. There is no truth in this. No wheat has been imported under the drawback provision. Some of my correspondents to whom I have explained this have then expressed the opinion that it would be necessary to wait a few months to learn whether a drawback of duties would be claimed by flour millers. It is not necessary to wait a minute to know whether any drawbacks will hereafter be claimed covering importations of wheat already made. There are two requisites upon the part of wheat importers which must be met before a drawback of duties may be obtained.

It is necessary in the first place to make a formal application to the Treasury Department, giving information as to the character of the plant where the wheat is to be manufactured and how the wheat is to be handled, and a showing as to the responsibility of the concern. If this is satisfactory, the Treasury will give its approval.

No milling concern has received such approval since the passage of the Fordney-McCumber law. Prior to that time the following concerns had been approved:

Duluth-Superior Milling Co., Duluth, Minn.
 Washburn-Crosby Co., Minneapolis.
 S. W. Hershey Flour Mill Co., York, Pa.
 Superior Flour Co., San Francisco, Calif.
 David Stott Flour Mills, Detroit, Mich.
 Hecker-Jones & Jewell Milling Co., New York.
 Tacoma Grain Co., Tacoma, Wash.

In addition to approval by the department as just explained it is also a requisite that the importer of wheat shall at the time of importation serve notice on the customs collector that he intends later to ask for a drawback. I have just received telegrams from the collectors of the chief customs houses on the Canadian border, who state that no such notices have been given to them.

It is therefore established, beyond a doubt, that the so-called wheat drawback, as contained in the Fordney-McCumber law, has not yet been used.

There have been drawback provisions in every tariff bill for many years, whether enacted by Republicans or Democrats, but they have practically not been utilized. Occasionally some mill has ground a small consignment and then has abandoned it as unworkable.

The drawback provision in the Fordney-McCumber law is worded differently than such provisions in former laws, and many of us were afraid that it would permit large importations with the payment of practically no duty, so many of us in the West opposed it vigorously. It seems, however, that, like its predecessors, it is unworkable.

There have also been complaints about milling wheat in bond. There is no special provision in the Fordney-McCumber law for milling wheat in bond. There is a manufacturing-in-bond provision which applies to any article imported in bond, and under which wheat may be handled. But such a provision has been in tariff laws for many years, whether enacted by Republicans or Democrats. In justification it is asserted that if a foreign article does not enter American consumption it should not pay a duty, and by permitting the manufacture and exportation of such article it gives employment to American labor. For illustration, we have big exports of cocoa and chocolate products. The raw material for such products is brought into the United States in bond and manufactured in bond. It gives employment to a large number of people who spend their money in the United States.

An examination of the figures covering imports of wheat shows that the present portion of wheat imported in bond ground and exported without payment of duty is comparatively small as compared with the total imports of wheat free of duty under the Underwood law:

Data regarding wheat and flour imports and wheat manufactured in bond.

(Fiscal years (from July 1 to July 1) 1921, 1922, 1923, and 1924.)

Fiscal year 1921 (the last year under Underwood law):

Imports of wheat.....	51,004,024
Imports of flour (expressed in bushels).....	6,393,978

Total bushels.....	57,398,002
--------------------	------------

Fiscal year 1922:

Imports of wheat.....	14,465,509
Imports of flour (expressed in bushels).....	2,785,972

Total bushels.....	17,251,481
--------------------	------------

Fiscal year 1923:

Imports of wheat.....	18,012,540
Imports of flour (expressed in bushels).....	1,932,322

Total bushels.....	19,944,862
--------------------	------------

1924 (July 1, 1923, to February 1, 1924):

Imports of wheat.....	17,775,533
Imports of flour (expressed in bushels).....	560,479

Total bushels.....	18,336,012
--------------------	------------

Included in the above totals of imports there was manufactured in bond without payment of duty:

Fiscal year 1921: None, because wheat free under Underwood tariff law.

Fiscal year 1922.....	6,172,837
-----------------------	-----------

Fiscal year 1923.....	9,280,787
-----------------------	-----------

July 1, 1923, to February 1, 1924.....	8,192,362
--	-----------

The total of imports for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1924, will probably not be much more than those for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1923, because navigation on the Great Lakes will probably not open before May 10.

These figures show that, even with the manufacturing-in-bond provision in force, the imports of wheat have been greatly reduced under the Fordney-McCumber law as compared with imports under the Underwood law. As already explained, the manufacturing-in-bond provision has been in every tariff law, Republican or Democratic, for many years, and it is exceedingly doubtful whether either party would consider its repeal.

Mr. Chairman, the duty on wheat has been of decided advantage to American wheat growers. Those who have given study to the subject know this is true. It is unfortunate that quite a number of people in the wheat areas, even in the Northwest, have said that the wheat duty is valueless. It is both reckless and unwise to make such statements, because the people of the East and South are not particularly enthusiastic about the wheat duties and sometime they might call the bluff.

The Bismarck (N. Dak.) Tribune in discussing the subject says that wheat farmers may be injuring themselves by constant misrepresentation of the operation of the tariff on wheat. I shall not stop to read this article but shall have it printed in the RECORD.

CONCERNING THE TARIFF.

Congressman GEORGE M. YOUNG points out forcibly to the people of North Dakota how they may be injuring themselves by constant misrepresentation of the workings of the Republican tariff law through either misunderstanding or ignorance of the facts. There has been much opposition in North Dakota to the "drawback" provision in the Fordney-McCumber tariff; the opposition has found expression in Nonpartisan League meetings and in the resolutions of the "Real Republican" convention alike. Granted that Mr. YOUNG's figures are true, the situation has been grossly misrepresented.

It is pointed out by him, first, the "drawback" provision of the law means nothing. He says: "Drawback provisions have been in every tariff law, both Republican and Democratic, in one form or another, but no wheat worth mentioning has ever come in under such provision, and absolutely not one bushel of wheat has been imported under that provision of the Fordney-McCumber law."

There is no "milling-in-bond" provision in the law, he points out, but there is a "manufacturing-in-bond" provision in the law. It is not true, however, if Mr. YOUNG's figures, which presumably are official, are correct, that this provision destroys the value of the tariff law. For example, under the Underwood (Democratic) tariff law 57,398,002 bushels of Canadian wheat were imported in 1921; under the Fordney-McCumber (Republican) tariff law but 19,944,863 bushels of wheat were imported in 1923. While there is not available any comparison of the importations of manufactured-in-bond wheat for 1921 because wheat was free under the Underwood law, the total amounted to but 9,280,787 bushels in 1923 under the Fordney-McCumber law.

As Mr. YOUNG aptly remarks: "If northwestern people continue to assert that a wheat tariff is valueless, Congressmen from the East and South, who as a rule are skeptical about the value of a wheat tariff, might in some future Congress take northwestern wheat growers at their word."

There is a case for argument on the manufactured-in-bond provision. It has been insisted upon by representatives from manufacturing communities not only with reference to wheat but with reference to other raw materials imported, on the ground that to bring foreign materials in the country to be manufactured and sold abroad brings employment to American workmen. There is not, however, valid ground for the declaration that the wheat tariff does not keep Canadian wheat out.

President Coolidge has taken a step in the interest of the northwestern farmers which ought to further reduce the amount of Canadian wheat imported, by increasing the duty from 30 to 42 cents a bushel under the flexible provisions of the Fordney-McCumber law. Tariff protection is essential to northwestern wheat growers; the people of the Northwest ought to admit it, uphold this Republican principle, and let the rest of the country know they will fight for it.

It is believed that there will be a great reduction in the quantity of wheat imported under the tariff rate of 42 cents per bushel recently proclaimed by President Coolidge upon the advice of the United States Tariff Commission.

When the Fordney-McCumber bill was under discussion it was said that placing a duty on wheat as high as 30 cents per bushel was an effort to deceive the wheat farmers by making it appear that much was being done for them, and that 10 cents a bushel would be sufficient to keep Canadian wheat out of the United States. Over 10,000,000 bushels of wheat actually paid the duty of 30 cents per bushel during the fiscal year 1923.

Mr. Julius H. Barnes, wheat director during the war and the best authority on grain prices in this country, in an article in the Nation's Business, said the wheat duty was worth about 23 cents per bushel on the higher grades. Other authorities have said it amounted to more than 23 cents per bushel.

I doubt if any law ever passed by Congress has been so persistently and viciously misrepresented as the Fordney-McCumber law. When the bill was before Congress it was repeatedly asserted that there would be little revenue collected under it because the rates of duty were said to be prohibitive. Instead more goods have been imported under it than under the Underwood law, and almost twice as much collected in duties. Indeed, no substantial reduction could now be made in income taxes were it not for the decided success of the Fordney law from the revenue standpoint.

A correspondent for a British newspaper says that the Fordney-McCumber tariff law discriminates against the American farmer in that it carries duties on virtually all articles purchased or consumed by the farmer. It is excusable for a foreigner to make so serious a mistake, but with less excuse quite a number of our own people, without stopping to read the law, have fallen into the habit of making the same observations.

A reading of the law discloses that if there has been discrimination it is for and not against the farmer. The free list gives the farmers decidedly the best of it.

Plows, tooth or disk harrows, headers, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills and planters, mowers, horse-rakes, cultivators, threshing machines, cotton gins; machinery for the manufacture of sugar; wagons and carts; cream separators valued at not more than $50 each, wholesale, and all other agricultural implements are free of duty.

All animals imported for breeding purposes are on the free list. Binding twine comes in free of duty.

Lumber, including that planed, tongued, and grooved; clap-boards, laths, shingles, logs, timber, poles are on the free list. Cement is free, also limestone rock, asphaltum, bitumen, and tar.

Fertilizers are free of duty, including guano, manures, bones used for fertilizers, potash used for fertilizers, muriate of potash, sodium nitrate, potassium nitrate, calcium nitrate, used for fertilizers are free.

Barbed wire, plain or galvanized, and fence posts are not dutiable.

Leather, harness, and saddles are on the free list, also pads for horses, also boots and shoes.

Gasoline, benzine, kerosene, and crude, fuel, or refined petroleum are on the free list.

Instead of virtually all articles being dutiable which farmers must buy in connection with their business, the bulk of them are on the free list.

I am not unmindful of the serious extremity in which farmers in the hard-wheat belt are placed; but their troubles have not been occasioned by the tariff. From the standpoint of a well-balanced tariff, they have been given fair rates of duty on farm products. They have not in all cases been prohibited, but they should remember that they are the ones who have always been most pronounced in their views that tariff rates must be reasonable and not so high as to prevent importations, and they should also remember that there have been heavy importations of many manufactured articles subject to duty.

True, living costs are high, but they are caused by things other than the tariff. A glance at the free list will recall to us that the costs of some of the articles in that list have advanced more in price than have some other articles now subject to duty. It was declared in the Democratic platform of 1912 that the high cost of living was caused by a high tariff, but under the Underwood bill, with reduced tariff rates, the costs of living steadily mounted.

Those who are complaining that rates of duty are now high will perhaps be surprised to learn that the average rate of duty collected on all imports the last year of the Underwood law was 14½ per cent, while under the Fordney-McCumber law it is 15½ per cent. Partly because of this slight average increase, but more on account of the readjustment and fixing of rates upon a scientific basis, business has been greatly quickened and unemployment has ceased.

Those who reflect that there were millions of men out of work at the time President Harding took the oath of office who are now well employed should think well before they declare for a change in tariff policy.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, if there is any more time, I yield the balance of the time to myself. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 16 minutes remaining. Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I did not know from my experience on the subcommittee on the Army bill that the Republican patronage of Virginia was involved in the subject, but it seems it was involved. I am not surprised that Bascom Sleep has not been able to distribute that patronage satisfactorily to the gentleman from Virginia and his colleagues.

Now, with reference to the war-fraud returns and with reference to the half million dollars from the audited war contracts, it seems to me there is a decided distinction here in the audit of the War Department and the prosecution of these war-fraud cases by the Department of Justice. One is a business audit to determine the business status of the contract; the other is a legal audit, a legal transaction to try to recover on a claim that they find. I believe that there is a fair showing here.

The actual cash collections by the Finance Department in the War Department were $2,760,000 plus, $280,422 by the Air Service, $578,507 by the Comptroller General, and $4,218,000 by the Department of Justice. There has been referred to the Department of Justice for action $13,824,000. There has been referred to the General Accounting Office $6,947,000. There has been covered in other adjustments by claims board $5,892,000. Amount pending investigation or adjustment, $10,657,000. Now the report says that the Finance Department has recovered $2,700,000, which was covered into the Treasury. The Air Service has covered in $280,000, and that by the Comptroller General was $578,000, and $4,218,000 by the Department of Justice. Now, the item that the gentleman from Virginia referred to of $5,892,000 was not a cash item, but was an offset to counterclaims covered in the Court of Claims to be taken into consideration by the court in the adjustment of claims. There was no intention of trying to cover that into the Treasury, and for that reason I believe we are entirely justified here in retaining this item in this bill. And they contend at the end of this year they will practically have completed the audit of these claims in this department.

The part of this bill I want to discuss with you at the present time is with reference to the river and harbor item. The item in the bill is for the amount carried in the Budget estimate. It is the contention of the War Department that carrying out their contracts which they have now entered into, that they will be able to proceed to the next time an appropriation will be available; that under this bill at the present rate of four and a half to five millions per month they can carry on the present program to its completion, and they have plenty of funds to carry it on until the next appropriation becomes available. It seems to me that there are several phases of this item that we want to consider. It was in the last Congress that we practically said in this country that we are going to stand by river and harbor improvements and make every effort to put navigation on our rivers and our harbors. I think one of the interesting facts which was developed in the hearings on this bill was the particular fact that where we have our harbors best improved there we get the best return for the least money in public expenditure. I have reference to the Great Lakes, and if you will turn to page 1514 of the hearings on the nonmilitary part of this bill you will find at the bottom of that page the return per ton per dollar is there estimated:

	Total commerce (tons).	Ton cost average.
		Improvement.	Maintenance.
Principal seacoast harbors.....	267,386,342	$0.015	$0.022
Secondary harbors and coastwise channels.....	26,379,955	.104	.089
Lake harbors and channels.....	280,541,933	.002	.008
Principal rivers.....	33,015,071.66	.346	.058
Secondary rivers.....	6,637,116	.017	.158

So that where you find our harbors are best improved, it is in the section of the Great Lakes. There the Government expenditures are the least per ton of any place in all our waterway system. In that connection I want to suggest to the House that we are now spending about $6,000,000 in the harbor of New York.

Mr. MORTON D. HULL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. MORTON D. HULL. What do you mean by return per ton?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. The Government is paying out for improvements and dredging so much money, and in return there are so many tons of commerce carried on that particular river or in that particular harbor.

Mr. MORTON D. HULL. Is it the proportion of the appropriation to the business done in the harbor per ton of vessel capacity?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Absolutely.

Now there is one phase developed here that I think will be of interest to the gentlemen from New York. We find there is about $6,000,000 in this bill for the improvement of New York Harbor and the subsidiaries of New York Harbor. In the general discussion there were many questions asked as to who controlled or who had any supervision or had the right to supervise or fix the ton rate in New York Harbor. We had investigations of this matter, and we had the report of the port authorities of New York. We have gone through that carefully, and we do not find that in the expansion of their plan any arrange ment has been made by the joint legislatures of New York and New Jersey wherein the Government or anyone else has the right to supervise the tonnage charges on freight carried from one place to another. It seems to me that is a phase of legislation that we ought to go into.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to insert in my remarks a letter received from Mr. Eastman under the date of February 18, 1924, involving this question. I will insert it in my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Following is the letter referred to:

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION,
Washington, February 18, 1924.

Hon. L. J. DICKINSON,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: At the hearing before the War Department section of the Committee on Appropriations on February 15 you brought to my attention certain matters in connection with transportation charges at New York Harbor. I told you that this commission had under way some investigation of the port situation at New York in connection with the Port of New York Authority, and that I would let you know the nature and status of this proceeding. I find that the facts are these:

Primarily at the suggestion of the Port of New York Authority, a corporate body, we entered an order under date of December 11, 1922, instituting on our own motion an investigation into the plans of such corporation with respect to the betterment of transportation facilities at the port of New York, and to determine what, if any, order in the premises may, or should, be entered by us. I inclose herewith a copy of the order instituting the investigation.

The Port of New York Authority was organized, as will be seen from the inclosed copy of a letter, under treaty entered into between the States of New Jersey and New York, and subsequently approved by the Congress. Broadly speaking, the purpose of the organization is to investigate the needs of the harbor of New York from a transportation standpoint, and to recommend, and effectuate so far as practicable, a plan and system for the improvement of transportation facilities at that port. The inclosed letter gives in detail the various steps taken in the organization of this corporation and sets forth in general terms its plans.

The general scope of the plan which the port authority has in mind, as I understand it, involves the following principles:

"1. That terminal operations within the port district, so far as economically possible, should be unified.

"2. That there should be consolidation of shipments at proper classification points so as to eliminate duplication of effort and inefficient loading of equipment and realize reduction in expenses.

"3. That there should be the most direct routing of commodities so as to avoid centers of congestion, conflicting currents of traffic, and long truck hauls.

"4. That terminal stations established under the comprehensive plan should be union stations, so far as practicable.

"5. That the process of coordinating facilities should, so far as practicable, adapt existing facilities as integral parts of the new system, so as to avoid needless destruction of existing capital investment and reduce, to far as may be possible, the requirements for new capital; and that endeavor should be made to obtain the consent of local municipalities within the port district for the coordination of their present and contemplated port and terminal facilities with the whole plan.

"6. That freight from all railroads should be brought to all parts of the port wherever practicable without breaking bulk, this necessitating tunnel connection between New Jersey and Long Island, and tunnel or bridge connections between other parts of the port.

"7. That there should be urged upon the Federal authorities improvement of channels so as to give access for that type of water-borne commerce adapted to the various forms of development which the respective shore fronts and adjacent lands of the port best lend themselves to.

"8. The highways for motor-truck traffic should be laid out so as to permit the most efficient interrelation between terminals, piers, and industrial establishments not equipped with railroad sidings and for the distribution of building materials and many other commodities which must be handled by truck, these highways to connect with existing or projected bridges, tunnels, and ferries.

"9. That definite methods for prompt relief should be devised which can be applied for the better coordination and operation of existing facilities while larger and more comprehensive plans for future development are being carried out."

(The foregoing was taken from a publication quoting from a statement of counsel for the port authority made at the hearing.)

The comprehensive plan, so called, of the port authority was submitted to the two State legislatures and received their approval. The port authority was empowered, to the extent that the States could empower it, to proceed with the effectuation of its plan. Since it involved matters over which the Federal Government had control, the plan was submitted to the Congress, and by joint resolution consent was given to the carrying out of such plan, subject to existing Federal laws and Federal agencies.

The legislative act authorizing the port authority to proceed toward the accomplishment of the plan emphasized the point that such progress should be made as might be found to be "economically practicable."

The port authority had determined that the step most practicable at the present time is the unification of Belt Line No. 18, so called, in its comprehensive plan, which at present consists of the rails of several carriers extending from about Edgewater, N. J., on the north to Bayonne and Constable Hook on the south. Hearings were held under the order of investigation jointly with the port authority and testimony was presented by engineers of the latter and by the railroads with a view to determinations (1) on the part of the port authority, whether the plan was "economically practicable," and (2) on the part of this commission, whether under the interstate commerce act any action is warranted or necessary on our part. The hearings were conducted by division 5 of the commission. At the conclusion of the second hearing the chairman of the division recommended that the carriers and port authority appoint a joint committee to see whether plans acceptable to all concerned can not be worked out. We are now, I believe, awaiting a report from this committee.

I do not understand that there is any special act of Congress giving us jurisdiction over the work of the port authority. Such jurisdiction as we have is embraced in the interstate commerce act, and it appears that there has already developed a difference of opinion among the parties to the proceeding as to whether or not we have any authority in the premises.

I am inclined to think that the proceeding which I have described above does not cover the matters which you had in mind. If you will let me know just what these are, I shall be glad to procure any further information that is available.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH B. EASTMAN, Commissioner.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. It seems to me that with the vast tonnage going through New York Harbor and the vast tonnage that they have there, plans should be worked out by which that tonnage may be advanced, and we have various plans in this report prepared by the authorities and we ought to have some means devised by legislation whereby the consumer and the shipper can be protected by having those charges supervised and to see that they are not excessive.

Another phase of this bill is the question of improvement of the barge system maintained both on the Mississippi River and on the Warrior River. Both of these systems have run at a loss, but I believe that the Government is warranted in continuing the experiment. Why? Because it exerts a certain influence on freight rates, in the first place, and in the second place it is gradually developing into a successful operation.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there for a question?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I would like to ask the gentleman a question about the Warrior River. Does he think the Warrior River project will ever develop into a real carrying project with benefit?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes; and I think the reason it is not successful at the present time is very apparent. The Warrior River has at the upper end the Birmingham mines, a great coal deposit up there. That coal is carried down the Warrior River and is distributed through the South. The fact that the barge system on the Warrior River is not successful at the present time is, in my judgment, due to the fact that they have not the proper kind of equipment in order to carry that traffic. Their equipment was the equipment left over as the result of war experiments. It is not adapted to that purpose. I do not know whether they will be able to dredge out the river so that they can carry this size of barges, but if they make a channel with the proper width and depth there is no reason why that traffic should not be carried.

Now, many say, "Why do they not run the barge system at a profit on the Mississippi River?" At the present time it is due primarily to the fact that they have a stretch of river near Memphis where they have had trouble all the season to maintain the channel on account of the accumulation of sand. They have at Cairo another section where they are asking for a little additional money this year in order to maintain that system. I believe that between St. Louis and St. Paul they are going to be able to maintain a shallow barge system that will successfully carry traffic up and down the Mississippi River. I know this has been a dream of many years. All the old packet boats have been driven off the Mississippi River. Why? We have passed through the era of railroad development. We must now seek a more economical means of transportation. We have got to go back to the old system provided by the Maker when He made this country, and we must take advantage of some of the waterways that we have here in order to economize in transportation. It seems to me this is important and that we should be able to develop that river so that it will carry traffic and carry it on schedule. With the establishment of the Henry Ford distributing point at Minneapolis and St. Paul they are going to put on a set of barges that will run in shallow water between St. Louis and St. Paul. However, we have been dealing with this barge traffic only a short time. Some of the barges seem to be too large to make the turns in the river, and for that reason there are a great many of these phases that have to be gradually worked out, and I believe they will be successfully worked out in the near future. I take it that the committee will approve the item for the improvement of river and harbors.

Now, there are increased items in this bill; they are liberal, too.

One of them to increase the fortifications of the Panama Canal and the Hawaiian Islands, and the other to increase the number of horses and mules in the Army.

We have had a good bit of discussion about these two items. Now, first, as to the big guns to protect the mouth of the Panama Canal on both the Pacific and Atlantic side. There were some on the committee who thought we ought to put in only two, one on each side, one on the Pacific side and one on the Atlantic side, while there were others who thought we ought to put in four. Those in favor of the four had the larger number of votes, and for that reason four are provided for in the bill.

I believe the Panama Canal is becoming immensely important to this country and, of course, it should be properly protected. I was one of those who thought that two guns would be sufficient, but we have the guns on hand and the matter of their installation is not of sufficient financial importance to prevent their installation, and for that reason I shall make no effort to try to reduce the amount which is carried for this additional equipment for the Panama Canal.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. BARBOUR. It was also brought out, as I recall, that the relative cost of installing the four guns would be relatively less than that of installing two guns; that is, the relative cost.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes; for the reason that it is necessary to build railroad tracks and make the necessary preparations to put in one gun and that you can use the same equipment for the second gun.

Mr. BARBOUR. That is the idea.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. This is to be a fixed fortification, is it not?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. And it is to be placed as high as we can place it and so it will be easily hit.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Oh, no; it is not to be placed in a high altitude, as I understand it.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. But it is to be placed on the highest place that can be found there, is it not? That is, the land on which it is to be placed is the highest to be found there?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. That is not my understanding.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired and all time has expired. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONTINGENCIES OF THE ARMY.

For all contingent expenses of the Army not otherwise provided for and embracing all branches of the military service, including the office of the Chief of Staff; for all emergencies and extraordinary expenses, including the employment of translators and exclusive of all other personal services in the War Department or any of its subordinate bureaus or offices in the District of Columbia, or in the Army at large, but impossible to be anticipated or classified; to be expended on the approval or authority of the Secretary of War, and for such purposes as he may deem proper, $68,540: Provided, That not to exceed $49,040 of the money herein appropriated shall be expended for the payment of salaries of civilian employees connected with the sale of war supplies and the adjustment of war contracts and claims: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this act shall be used for the payment of expenses connected with the transfer of surplus property of the War Department to any other activity of the Government where the articles or lots of articles to be transferred are located at any place at which the total surplus quantities of the same commodity are so small that their transfer would not, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, be economical: Provided further, That the amount expended or obligated for advertising sales of surplus War Department property during the fiscal year 1925 shall not exceed $50,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Kentucky rise?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I wish to make a motion to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking unanimous consent to insert an explanation in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman for that purpose.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, the other day, in my remarks on this bill, I stated that there had been a very unnecessary duplication of work relative to the making of maps. Colonel Naylor came over to my office this morning to see me and said that there was a misunderstanding about the matter because of unexplained conflicting testimony between himself and General Smith, who is out in Kansas. I believe the explanation is satisfactory, as offered by Colonel Naylor, and I wish to insert his analysis of it in the Record for the purpose of clearing up whatever conflict of testimony there may be between them.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record in the manner indicated by him. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to follows:

The principal function of the map section of the Military Intelligence Division is the preparation and distribution of maps of foreign countries not produced by any other department of the Government. No map is produced that can be obtained from any other Government department. In the preparation of these maps the major part of the work consists in the accumulation of the data and the extending of it by experienced draftsmen on the tracings from which maps are subsequently run off. In nearly all cases it takes months of intensive work by these draftsmen in preparing these tracings. Due to the fact that there is no printing plant directly under the Military Intelligence Division call is made upon the engineering lithographing plant at Washington Barracks, and on occasion the Geological Survey, which also has a printing plant, to go through the mechanical process of running off the map on their presses when once the Military Intelligence Division has prepared the necessary tracings. These plants are reimbursed for the cost. If the Military Intelligence Division had a printing plant it could do this itself. No calls are made upon any other department of the Government for maps of this kind.

In order to prevent a duplication, when maps are called for of continental United States or the insular possessions, the request is referred to the appropriate department providing them.

The Military Intelligence Division also furnishes the necessary foreign maps for the course at the Army War College. The map section of the Military Intelligence Division has quite an extensive photographic plant so that it can make its own photographic copies and does not have to call upon other departments of the Government the same as in the case of printing of maps.

It has actually distributed maps of its own compilation or photographic copies of maps which could not be procured from any other source during the period of the fiscal year 1922-23, plus four months, approximately 30,000 copies, and foreign prepared maps for which it is the sole source, 9,763 copies.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REECE: Page 5, line 1, strike out the figures "$68,540" and insert "$63,540: Provided, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed and authorized to transfer to the Department of Agriculture for use in improvement of highways and roads the following war materials, equipment, and machinery out of the reserve stocks, to wit: Fifteen hundred 5-ton caterpillar tractors, with tools and spare parts; 5,000 motor trucks, 1 to 5-ton capacity, and 500 ordnance mobile machine-shop trucks, with tools and spare parts."

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, I would prefer that the gentleman make his point of order.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. I make the point of order on the ground that it is legislation and that legislation of this kind should go to the proper committee and not be put on an appropriation bill on the floor of the House.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, the Chair will notice that the amendment limits the appropriation, reducing it from $48,540 to $63,540, and in order to do that I have provided in the amendment that the War Department turn over certain surplus war material, which they are now holding in reserve as surplus, to the Department of Agriculture to be used for road-building purposes.

In order to store this material, which is being held as surplus, it is, of course, necessary that certain employees be paid by the department to take care of it; storage must be paid for and men must be kept on the pay roll in order to go out and turn over the motors in the trucks and tractors so as to keep them from jamming up with rust. By turning this material over to the Department of Agriculture and putting it into use we are thereby able to reduce the appropriation and, in my judgment, it seems to be a limitation.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Where is this surplus war material stored at this time?

Mr. REECE. It is stored at various Army camps throughout the country and in practically all sections of the country. A number of the trucks are stored at Camp Holabird, and I have here pictures of the trucks showing some of them sitting out in the weather. They are deteriorating very rapidly, in fact. The wooden parts of the trucks are practically all gone and only the metal parts remain; but still they are valuable to the Department of Agriculture for road-building purposes, because the wooden parts can be restored.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Is there any objection on the part of the War Department to allowing these trucks to be transferred and used by the road bureau of the Agricultural Department?

Mr. REECE. I might say to my colleague that the War Department heretofore has been given authorization to turn over certain surplus war material; but they have done so with reluctance, it seems, and they insist on holding a large quantity of this machinery in storage. This amendment not only authorizes but directs the Secretary of War to turn it over.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE. Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE. Of course, we understand there is a law now providing that where the Army or the War Department declares certain of these articles surplus they are turned over to the Department of Agriculture. I think I understand my colleague's position, and there is some force in what he has said, that we have very large reserves, and the purpose of his amendment is to undertake to go into those reserves and require them to declare the reserves surplus, or a part of them, and then they would be allotted to the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. REECE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee if it is not a fact that the representative of the War Department who appeared recently at a hearing before the gentleman's committee, the Committee on Military Affairs, in reference to a bill of the same tenor as the amendment which the gentleman offers, did not state that none of the proposed material was surplus but all of it would be needed in case of a national emergency?

Mr. REECE. If I remember correctly, he stated that they had in reserve the quantity of material provided for in this amendment. He said, however, that these caterpillar tractors and machine-shop units were being held in reserve possibly to be distributed to certain reserve units provided for in the national defense act. But I might add that these tractors are rapidly becoming obsolete. Since these tractors were manufactured there have been several new designs that have come out, and if I am advised correctly the War Department has recently given an order for the purchase of 20 new 5-ton caterpillar tractors because of the fact that these others are obsolete.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I would like to suggest that all this is with reference to the merits of the amendment and not to the point of order. My point of order is that it is not germane and that it is legislation. If it is germane, then we are willing to discuss the merits of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands it is claimed to be in order under the Holman rule, and the Chair understood it was being discussed along that line, as to whether it was a retrenchment.

Mr. REECE. That is correct, Mr. Chairman. I was attempting to bring out the point that by making certain dispositions of this material we would be able to reduce the expenditures provided in the bill.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. On what expenditure is the proposed amendment intended to be a limitation? I submit it is not a limitation but is entirely new legislation.

Mr. CARTER. The gentleman does not claim it is a limitation. The gentleman claims it is in order under the Holman rule.

Mr. REECE. If I may add, certain parts of the appropriation provided for in this section must of necessity go to the upkeep of this material.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. No; Mr. Chairman, there is nothing on the face of this bill that shows that tractors are kept or that the officials employed under this item have to do with taking care of tractors, and that being the case I contend it does not come within the purview of the Holman rule at all.

Mr. CRISP. Has the Chair made up his mind on the proposition?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like very much to hear the gentleman from Georgia. The Chair was looking up some of the decisions in connection with the argument on the point of order.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I knew nothing of this amendment until the gentleman from Tennessee offered it and it was read at the clerk's desk, but from the reading of it, I was convinced that the gentleman had offered it to come within the purview of the Holman rule. Under our rules no legislation is in order on an appropriation bill unless it comes within the Holman rule, which provides that legislation is in order provided it reduces the number of employees of the Government or if it reduces the number of salaries or if it retrenches expenditures.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Can that be presumed or be a matter of conjecture, or must it show?

Mr. CRISP. It must be apparent, and as I caught the reading of this amendment it shows that on its face. This amendment as read reduces the appropriation covered in the bill from $68,000 to $63,000, which shows on its face a reduction of the money appropriated and covered by the bill of $5,000, which clearly, so far as that reduction is concerned, comes within the Holman rule. The question now arises as to whether the legislation is necessary and germane and, as a direct result, following and connected up with the reduction.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to hear the gentleman on that very point.

Mr. CRISP. I was coming to that. I was stating the rule. I am not familiar with this bill, and to be perfectly frank, I do not know what item in the bill it is offered to, but I asked the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. REECE] a moment ago if his amendment was offered to the item in the bill that covered the taking care of these tractors, automobiles, and so forth, that are dealt with in the amendment, proposed to be turned over to the State highways departments, and he said it was.

Mr. REECE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. REECE. I might call the gentleman's attention to another proviso, a little further down in this section, which provides "that none of the funds appropriated in this act shall be used for the payment of expenses connected with the transfer of surplus property of the War Department to any other activity of the Government," showing that it is contemplated in this measure that probably certain material may be transferred.

Mr. CRISP. I count myself happy in having a gentleman in the chair who is familiar with the military activities and familiar with the various appropriations and bureaus of the War Department, because for many years he was a very able and efficient member of the Military Affairs Committee.

If the amendment is offered to an appropriation in the bill that deals with the maintenance and care of this property that is provided to be turned over to the highway departments, tractors, trucks, and so forth, then, Mr. Speaker, the legislation is germane and necessarily connected up and follows with the reduction, because if you dispose of 1,500 tractors and a number of trucks naturally the expense of maintenance and caring for them is less than it would be if the Government retained them.

Therefore, you can consistently, legitimately, and logically reduce the amount of the appropriations provided for care and maintenance. If that is true—and I am frank to say I am not familiar with the items in the bill—then it seems to me clearly the amendment is in order under the Holman rule, because it reduces expenses and the legislation proposed is directly connected up with the reduction.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the Chair get at the facts. This appropriation of $68,540 is carried in the appropriation bill:

For all contingent expenses of the Army not otherwise provided for and embracing all branches of the military service, including the office of the Chief of Staff; for all emergencies and extraordinary expenses, including the employment of translators and exclusive of all other personal services in the War Department or any of its subordinate bureaus or offices in the District of Columbia, or in the Army at large, but impossible to be anticipated or classified; to be expended on the approval or authority of the Secretary of War, and for such purposes as he may deem proper.

That is rather general in its terms.

Mr. ANTHONY. None of the money appropriated goes to the upkeep and care of these articles that the gentleman from Tennessee is seeking to turn over from one department to another, and so it is apparent to me that it would not reduce this item by one cent.

Mr. REECE. Will the gentleman state what provision in the bill does provide for the upkeep of this material?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think one of the ordnance items a little further on.

Mr. REECE. I have examined the bill carefully and I do not see where an appropriation of this kind could be used. In the previous Army appropriation bill the question has arisen under this same section. You have a further proviso relating to surplus material—

Mr. ANTHONY. That is in regard to the transfer of material heretofore authorized, and was placed there so that the Secretary of War would not be called upon to use money for contingent purposes.

Mr. REECE. The money must be provided in the bill somewhere for this expense to which I refer. I have examined the bill carefully in its various sections and I can not find it.

Mr. ANTHONY. The only item I can think of is the item for the care of ordnance material.

Mr. REECE. Some of this is in the quartermaster department.

Mr. ANTHONY. Then the item with reference to transportation covers it.

Mr. REECE. But a part does not come under the item of transportation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair has no hesitation as to the principle of parliamentary law applicable here, which has been so very clearly stated by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Criss]. The only difficulty is in the application of those principles and the rules to the facts in the case. This seems to be an appropriation for contingent expenses of the Army. The present occupant of the chair has some familiarity with appropriations for contingent expenses for the different departments of the Government, and especially with contingent expenses of the Army. Having that knowledge it seems to the Chair that it would be straining a point to assume that any of the expenses referred to would come out of this particular appropriation. Of course, if the appropriation does not relate to the same subject as the legislation proposed in the amendment, as the gentleman from Georgia has said, it would not be in order under the Holman rule.

Mr. REECE. Will the Chairman, or the chairman of the subcommittee state what section does provide for this upkeep?

The CHAIRMAN. It is not the province of the Chair to furnish this character of information but it seems that the gentleman from Kansas has indicated at least two places in the bill where the upkeep of the property referred to may be provided for. It seems to the Chair clear that the expense of the upkeep of this material is not paid from this particular appropriation. The proposed legislation apparently does not relate to the appropriation item in the bill to which it is offered as an amendment and therefore is not in order under the Holman rule. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. On Saturday last there was considerable criticism of auctioneers' fees in the sale of surplus material and the methods of advertising. It is generally recognized that the auction method is probably the wisest way in which to dispose of surplus property, and particularly during the last two and a half years that method has been as far as possible employed. That has resulted undoubtedly in better prices than could otherwise have been secured. I think that can be reasonably established. I think it will be agreed that if the Government is going into commercial business it must adopt somewhat commercial practices. The impression was given here that the auction sales of Government material involved merely the auctioneers standing upon an auction block and calling out in the familiar way, but that creates a false impression.

The auctioneering of these materials involves a very elaborate process. The auctioneer must have an elaborate organization. He must employ numerous persons, and it requires two or three weeks before the auction sales that they shall attend at the place where the sale is to be held for the purpose of classifying, sorting, and tagging the property.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will, but I have only five minutes.

Mr. DOWELL. Does the gentleman think the prices for auctioneering this material are reasonable?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I do; and I am coming to that if the gentleman will permit me to continue.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. May I ask the gentleman whether or not any part of these sales came under his immediate attention or control at the time he was serving as Assistant Secretary of War?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes, they did, they came under my general jurisdiction. I can not profess to a very great familiarity with the details of the matter.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman one other question. I shall try to have the gentleman get further time. I think this question ought to be gone into. The gentleman was assistant Secretary of War, and ought to be familiar with it, and the gentleman was there in the War Department when they were paying what I think are exorbitant prices for auctioneers.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Well, I have given way for a question and not for a statement.

Mr. DOWELL. I want to find out about that.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I think I can disabuse the gentleman's mind of that impression.

Mr. DOWELL. I do not think the gentleman can, so far as the price is concerned. Was any effort made aside from these organizations the gentleman has referred to, to sell this property at reasonable prices by persons who were in the business and who would do it for a reasonable compensation?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. All the effort to sell this property by negotiated sale or even by offers on sealed bids were not satisfactory. They led to dissatisfaction upon the part of the buyers generally. It was finally determined that the only way, the proper way, to merchandise this property was to put it up on the auction block so that everybody in the world could have an opportunity to purchase it.

Mr. DOWELL. I would like to ask the gentleman one further question. By putting it on the auction block the gentleman does not mean that they would want to pay the man who auctions it off an unreasonable price simply because he was selling at auction.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. By no means. That question answers itself. All I say is this, that if the Government goes into the commercial business, and certainly the disposal of these great blocks of material involve a great business transaction—

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. WURZBACH. Is it not a fact that a great deal of the surplus property had been sold by private negotiations shortly after the present Secretary of War was appointed?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Before the present administration I think the method of sale by sealed bids or negotiations was very much more liberally followed than it has been under the present administration. There were some few sales by that method in the early part of this administration, but latterly wherever possible the auction method has been pursued.

Mr. WURZBACH. Is it not a fact that complaints were made in respect to the methods of sale by private negotiation?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I hope the committee will not tie me down to the five-minute limitation if all these questions are to be asked.

Mr. WURZBACH. I do not want to take the gentleman's time.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. The total fees involved in the criticism amounted to $1,188,760. These fees related to sales which produced gross receipts amounting to $74,984,942.12. A little figuring will show that that represents an expense of 1.59 for the auctioneer. I have been reliably informed that many of these auctioneers have to pay in necessary expenses of sale that fall upon them up to 70 per cent of the amount of their fees. Assuming that it is 50 per cent, then the total net returns of the auctioneers would be about three-quarters of 1 per cent. It is my understanding that the average rate paid to auctioneers for merchandising this class of property—and I am now referring to the merchandise sale particularly—range from 5 per cent to 10 per cent, depending on the locality, custom, or the law in force.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I want to know whether this statement in the remarks of the gentleman from Kentucky on Saturday last is correct:

The testimony showed that the auctioneer did not pay for the advertising nor for any other expense incident to the sale. The compensation allowed the auctioneer in every instance was merely for saying, "How much am I offered for this piece of property?"

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Oh, that gives an entirely wrong impression. It is quite incorrect.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. If the gentleman will pardon me right there, my declaration upon that subject is based on what the Director of Sales testified to before the committee.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Then I say to the gentleman that either the Director of Sales was in error or the gentleman from Kentucky misunderstood him, because the expense of printing these catalogues, some of them running up to $15,000, which are sent all over the country, and the expenses I have described, preliminary to the sale, having people out through the crowd during the sale, the checkers, the recorders during the sale, the bookkeepers, amounted to a very considerable sum. I venture to say that at one large auction sale at the Brooklyn base the auctioneer would have a personnel of 75, whose compensation would have to come out of his fee.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. And how many million dollars would that help amount to?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Take it in this way: On the total of $1,188,000, if the expense is 50 per cent, it would be 50 per cent of $1,188,000.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I have just received a letter from Mr. Fox together with a statement. I know nothing about the matter. The gentleman does know about it. After the gentleman concludes, I shall ask permission to read this letter and this statement.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. The committee will notice that I am attempting to proceed as rapidly as possible, and I trust that they will indulge me until I get through. On the low rate paid it is a fact that many of the auctioneers in the larger places declined to take this business because the fee is less than the customary fee which they receive. I have in mind at least two cases of that kind. I know one case where a well-known auctioneer in New York City, probably the best-known auctioneer of real estate, declined one of these auction sales upon the ground that the return was so much less than his customary fee.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Does the gentleman know how much the sale will realize, that particular sale?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I could not say; I do not recall. It was somewhat within this scale, I think. I will say to the gentleman that the rate on real estate, as I recall—I have not the figures for that—was very little more than the rate on merchandise. Now, the scale on merchandise, in the disposition of this vast amount of Army material, was established about two years ago and was about this: 6½ per cent on the first $25,000, 2 per cent on the next $25,000, 1½ per cent on the next, and 1 per cent on the next $50,000, a quarter per cent on the next $75,000, and a quarter per cent on all over $200,000. The average auction sale on merchandise would yield about $250,000, and the maximum gross fee, $3,500, was 1½ per cent upon the total, and on a million-dollar sale at this rate the total fee would be $5,375, or a per cent of 0.5375.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. The figures the gentleman has given in reference to the fees paid these auctioneers, can the gentleman inform the committee just how this compares with what are paid in civil life to an auctioneer?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I thought I had stated that they are very much less.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I did not hear the gentleman.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. The elements of cost involved in these auction sales are very much less than would occur in commercial practice.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Of course the gentleman takes into consideration that in this class of sales they are usually sold in bulk, so to speak.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. No.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. And not to be put on the same plane as auction sales held in stores and things of that sort?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I beg the gentleman's pardon, they send out a catalogue giving the sales, a pamphlet of some 50 or 60 pages, all classified in lots varying in size, and sometimes these sales take two or three days.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Is it not a fact that in these sales amounting to millions of dollars that the property was sold in bulk largely, sales amounting to thousands of dollars for each lot?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. No; I do not think that would be a correct picture of it. That would occur, of course, in a case where the sale was of a large special lot of property offered at sale, but it would not apply at all to a sale by auction where the property is divided up into convenient lots.

Mr. CRISP. Will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will.

Mr. CRISP. Were there contracts made with these auctioneers by the Director of Sales?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. They were made by the War Department—no; my impression and recollection would be that the actual contract was made by the surplus-property officer, or the officer in charge of the surplus-property sales of each of the seven bureaus. Now, to digress just a moment, the actual sale and the responsibility for the sale of surplus material is with each one of those bureaus. In the Quartermaster General's department it is the surplus-property officer, and he conducts the negotiations for the arrangement and makes the contract. The Director of Sales would probably approve of the contract.

Mr. CRISP. Here is what I was anxious to get from my friend, who is a distinguished ex-Assistant Secretary of War, and that is whether these contracts were made by the Director of Sales as a civilian employee or whether or not they were made by an Army officer?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. That brings up an entirely different matter. There was until just before the commencement of this administration a civilian Director of Sales at a large salary and a civilian personnel involving a large salary list. That was all changed; so that since early in 1921 the whole of this selling function has been in the property officers of the Army in the various departments, and the Director of Sales since then has been an officer of the Regular Army.

Mr. STENGLE. Will the gentleman yield for just a question?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will.

Mr. STENGLE. Will the gentleman explain why in advertising these sales the location was left out and the hour of the sale left out?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I recall that was referred to in the remarks. All I can say as to that is there certainly has been no complaint at the War Department that anybody had ever been deprived of the opportunity of purchasing by reason of any failure to give publicity in that regard.

Mr. STENGLE. How could a man go to a sale if he did not know where it was and when it was?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Well, the advertisement always plainly stated when catalogues would be furnished; and if anyone was interested in the sale, he could apply for the catalogue, which contained all the information as to time and place. Now, then, the gentleman who made this criticism divided these gross fees into 15 per cent for the last administration and 85 per cent for the present administration. I have had that looked into somewhat, and it works out about this way. The returns show, without any question, on these $75,000,000 sales, which were not all the sales by any means, $6,674,871.12 were in the last administration, the auctioneer fees amounting to $170,193.85, or 2.55 per cent of the gross receipts; $68,310,071 were in this administration, the commissions being $1,018,576, or 1.48 per cent.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be given an additional five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Now, with regard to the particular sales referred to by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON], I will insert in my remarks a detailed statement as to each.

May I say to the gentlemen of the House that if there is anyone who has any doubt in his mind or any question in regard to these matters, the answers and full information can easily be secured. The disposition of that bureau is to throw its doors wide open to anyone who wishes to inquire into its processes. I say without fear that any reasonable man could not establish it otherwise, that this function of the Government has been as clean as a bound's tooth, and that these processes have been conducted on an efficient plan and to the great advantage of the Government.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I am not through yet.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON. Is there any difficulty in the War Department about having somebody in the War Department itself conduct these sales?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. It seems to me the answer is patent. It is not the business of the officers of the Army to do this.

Mr. HARRISON. I am not talking about officers. I mean the civilian employees. Why should we go around with these expensive auctioneers when some employees in the War Department could do the same thing?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. The difficulty is that it is a highly specialized function. It requires experts, and in dealing with the subject the War Department has been justified in pursuing the course it has.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is it not a fact that only since the beginning of the gentleman's régime in the War Department the auction system embracing the sales system has been restored?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. No. I will say that the auction method has been the usual method of selling surplus property. It is a fair statement, I think, that formerly negotiated sales and sales upon sealed bids were more usually employed than the sale by public auction.

Mr. SNELL. Has the gentleman brought out in his remarks so far the percentage of cost of sales in the last administration as compared with the former?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. You have that in your statement?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. STENGLE. Will you not insert in the Record, from the information you have, a list of the papers in which these advertisements appeared, together with their claimed circulation?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will submit that if it is practicable. That, like any other information desired, can be furnished.

Mr. WEFALD. I understood also that these auctioneers paid for the advertising. How did it come to happen that they did not advertise the location of the sale?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I think that question has already been asked and answered.

Some question was raised here as to whether these auctioneers had to bear any part of the advertising cost. Most of the advertising is done by the Government, and a small part of the advertising the auctioneer carries. He carries the cost of the putting up of the posters and distribution of the handbills and other matter of that kind that might fairly be classed as advertising.

Now as to this question of advertising, the present arrangement has been in force since 1919, supplementing a previous unsatisfactory system, which was not considered to have afforded purchasers or those who might be interested in this property an opportunity to bid upon it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has again expired.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. May I have five minutes more to finish this subject?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent for five additional minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Now there were three methods open to the Government to handle this advertising. One was to draw experts from the advertising field and place them on the pay roll as Government employees. The salaries required made this impracticable; and besides, had that been done, that expense, according to the practice of the newspapers, would not have been borne or assumed by them. Another plan was to employ an advertising agency, where the usual expense of 15 per cent upon the total advertisement would have been borne by the publication. The objection to that was really raised, as I understand, by the newspapers themselves. The other plan was to permit the newspapers themselves to put in the office of the Director of Sales, or in the sales department, a group of their own people who were skilled advertising people, and pay them themselves; people who could make up the copy and the layout and illustrations and everything that was required, and give the people in the department the benefit of their skill.

Now, that method was adopted and it led to the appointment of what was known as the "surplus property committee," which was appointed by organizations representing about 75 per cent of the newspapers and trade journals of the country. This was a committee that operated entirely without pay, as a sort of co-operative service bureau of the news and trade papers. They selected or appointed these people who had been in the sales office preparing the advertisements. The expenses and salaries of these people were borne by the newspapers through an assessment pro rata upon the newspapers carrying the advertisements, the figuring of the assessments and the collection from the newspapers being carried out by this committee.

Mr. STENGLE. Did that committee fix the space limits of the advertisement, or did the department?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Not at all. This committee had nothing to do with the selection of the publications nor with the actual placing of the advertisements and the amount of the space occupied. That has been retained in the control of the officers of the department itself, and I may say has been very jealously guarded.

Now, the result of this system has been a very much lower advertising cost.

It has cost the newspapers themselves less, and the Government has been spared the expense of preparing or writing the advertising copy.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Does the gentleman say the Government has not been at any expense in paying for advertising?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Oh, not at all. I mean for the expense of this service.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. What service?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Of preparing the advertising matter. The expense of advertising has been, on the whole, about one-half of 1 per cent of the amount of the sales.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. But did not the arrangement permit a few men to go out and gather $57,000 for themselves which could have been saved if the Government had placed these advertisements directly in the newspapers?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. The Government does place them directly in the newspapers.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. But did not the newspapers pay approximately $57,000 in order to get these advertisements, when they could have gotten them for nothing?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. No; I do not think that is a correct statement of that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. It is absolutely correct.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. During the last year, as I recall, the amount was $38,000. Of course, it has not been a payment by the Government. What the gentleman means is: Why did not the Government prepare these advertisements and assess them against the newspapers? The answer to that is that it is contrary to their practice.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. But it is a practice about which we are complaining, if the gentleman will permit the suggestion.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will say that the department may be able to get along with the $50,000 provided in this bill for next year's business, and I believe it can be done within that. This whole arrangement has been so advantageous to the Government, in my judgment, that I should rather hope it would not be changed.

Mr. STENGLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. STENGLE. Will the gentleman insert in the RECORD, while he is inserting other things, the rate per line per thousand circulation that is to be paid for this wonderful service?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will say to the gentleman that I shall be glad to furnish that information, if it is practicable to do so.

Mr. STENGLE. The reason I ask that is this: Having had some experience in that line, the wonderful service the gentleman refers to as having been brought about by a board that was without the pale of the department has been included in that charge and the Government paid for it.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. But I submit to any gentleman who has had business experience that an advertising rate of one-half of 1 per cent is a very, very low rate. I am told that the average rate for merchandise advertising runs from 3 per cent to 11 per cent.

Mr. STENGLE. Does the gentleman refer to one-half of 1 per cent per line or of the total sales?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I mean on the total sales.

Mr. STENGLE. The gentleman means on the results?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. STENGLE. But the average advertiser does not guarantee results.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, we are all entirely in favor of conducting the activities of the War Department at the least possible expense, and I am sure there is no one on this side who less desires to cast imputations of unfairness on any of those who have been working for the Government than the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON].

I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. WAINWRIGHT], the former Assistant Secretary of War. I have absolutely no personal knowledge of the matter and I have no personal knowledge of the auctioneers, except that I have known them by reputation in Baltimore for a long time.

I received a few moments ago by mail, sent over from my office, a letter from the auctioneers calling attention to certain points, and I think it is only fair to the House that I take a moment and present those matters. Here is a letter from M. Fox & Sons Co., auctioneers and liquidators, 202 Hearst Tower Building, Baltimore, Md.

Before reading this letter I think it is only fair that the committee should know that the employment of M. Fox & Sons Co., auctioneers, is not a new thing and dating from only a recent administration in the War Department, but that if there is any just criticism of these auctioneers or the system under which they were employed, that criticism should begin back in 1918 and should be made equally in those days if it is proper to be made now.

Back in 1918, on October 14, at Camp Meade (Admiral), Md., these auctioneers had charge of a sale at the remount station, amounting to $7,294.50, and of which sale Maj. P. F. Meade was in charge. On November 5, 1918, at Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J., there was a sale of remount horses, mules, harness, and wagons amounting to $11,189.50, of which Capt. J. D. Turnham was in charge, and on December 28, 1918, at Camp Meade (Admiral), Md., there was a sale amounting to $5,704, of which Maj. P. F. Meade was in charge.

I have here a list of the sales which these people have made for the Government, and I ask unanimous consent that I have permission at this point to insert this list of sales in the RECORD for the information of the House, also the letters from the War Department in relation to these sales.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The list referred to follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE QUARTERMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, January 30, 1923.

Mr. ROBERT FOX,
213 Courtland Street, Baltimore, Md.

DEAR MR. FOX: I take pleasure in forwarding you this letter to bear testimony of your excellent work in the sale of over 40,000 surplus horses and mules for the United States Army. Your sales started in October, 1918, and have continued to practically the present date. I was personally present at most of the larger sales and can, therefore, state from first-hand knowledge that your work was efficient, thorough, and highly satisfactory, as shown by the prices secured; and that you always had the interest of the Government at heart.

Your acquaintance and personal contact with all the large horse and mule dealers in the East, your extensive mailing list, and your correct system of advertising always insured a large attendance at sales, spirited bidding and, consequently, brought good prices.

Yours sincerely,

C. L. SCOTT,
Major, Quartermaster Corps.

Remount division—Sales for the remount division included horses, mules, harness, and wagons.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1918.
Oct. 14	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	$7,294.50	Maj. P. F. Meade.
Nov. 5	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	11,189.50	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
Dec. 28	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	5,704.00	Maj. P. F. Meade.
1919.
Jan. 3	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	6,673.50	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
7	Camp Green, Charlotte, N. C.	339,493.00	Capt. B. R. Whitthorn.
7	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	59,359.00	Maj. P. F. Meade.
7	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	61,667.50	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
9	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	13,878.66	Maj. J. R. Valentine.
14	Camp Upton, Yaphank, N. Y.	43,116.00	Capt. J. J. Byrne.
21	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	103,105.50	Maj. J. R. Valentine.
23	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	74,806.50	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
28	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	120,190.00	Maj. P. F. Meade.
30	Camp Upton, Yaphank, N. Y.	95,093.50	Capt. J. J. Byrne.
Feb. 5	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	81,600.50	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
7	Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.	164,512.00	Capt. P. J. Burdette.
10	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	152,448.00	Maj. J. R. Valentine.
12	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	215,350.00	Maj. E. G. Cullen.
14	Camp Sevier, Greenville, S. C.	104,260.00	Capt. O. L. Overmeyer.
17	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	59,237.00	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
17	Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.	122,000.00	Capt. P. J. Burdette.
19	Camp Green, Charlotte, N. C.	144,918.50	Capt. B. R. Whitthorn.
21	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	90,835.00	Maj. P. F. Meade.
28	Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C.	67,195.00	Capt. P. J. Burdette.
Mar. 3	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	195,600.00	Maj. J. R. Valentine.
7	Camp Sevier, Greenville, S. C.	120,524.00	Capt. O. L. Overmeyer.
10	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	71,205.50	Maj. P. F. Meade.
10	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	125,180.50	Lieut. Col. A. E. Wilbourn.
28	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	49,880.50	Maj. P. F. Meade.
Apr. 23	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	96,290.00	Maj. E. G. Cullen.
25	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	115,685.50	Maj. P. F. Meade.
28	Camp Upton, Yaphank, N. Y.	96,096.00	Capt. J. J. Byrne.
30	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	51,625.50	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
May 2	Camp Dovens, Ayer, Mass.	104,868.50	Lieut. Col. C. W. Neal.
June 17	do	13,164.50	Capt. Howard Farmer.
19	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	12,254.00	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
21	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	15,860.00	Lieut. E. Raschke.
Aug. 11	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	95,306.50	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
14	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	26,554.50	Lieut. E. Raschke.
18	Camp Upton, Yaphank, N. Y.	133,190.00	Capt. J. J. Byrne.
Sept. 22	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	134,318.60	Lieut. Col. Robert Sterrett.
Oct. 21	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	35,221.25	Lieut. H. E. Hagan.
27	Fort Meyer, Fort Meyer, Va.	3,129.50	Maj. W. A. Gray.
Dec. 3	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	534.30	Capt. J. D. Turnham.
6	Front Royal, Front Royal, Va.	13,502.50	Maj. M. G. Richardson.
11	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	4,357.50	Lieut. H. E. Hagan.
1920.
Jan. 5	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	45,023.50	Lieut. Col. Robert Sterrett.
May 10	do	17,095.00	Do.
June 28	do	89,212.00	Do.
July 27	do	5,047.50	Do.
Aug. 19	Front Royal, Front Royal, Va.	7,360.50	Capt. L. A. Beard.
Sept. 27	Camp Bragg, Fayetteville, N. C.	4,395.00	Maj. A. M. Reeves.
Oct. 21	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	970.40	Lieut. J. T. McKay.
Nov. 23	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	26,052.00	Capt. L. Martin.
1921.
Mar. 22	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	7,227.00	Lieut. J. T. McKay.
Apr. 18	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	30,562.50	Capt. E. Raeder.
July 5	do	3,321.00	Capt. J. W. Timmons, Jr.

Remount division—Sales for the remount division included horses, mules, harness, and wagons—Continued.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1921.
Aug. 2	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	$7,648.00	Capt. E. Berg
8	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	6,206.50	Lieut. Col. S. Coleman.
8	Baritan Arsenal, Meachem, N. J.	2,900.00	Lieut. J. J. Breen.
12	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	11,677.00	Capt. J. F. Neu.
22	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	86,562.00	Lieut. Col. S. Coleman.
26	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	78,478.50	Lieut. J. T. McKay.
Sept. 18	Ordnance Reserve Depot, Fig Point, Va.	1,719.00	Capt. Stuart Cooper.
15	do.	1,674.50	(U. S. Navy.)
16	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	2,636.00	Capt. E. Berg.
20	Camp Eustis, Lee Hall, Va.	1,661.00	Capt. J. L. Corbett.
27	Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C.	2,227.50	Capt. J. Van Ness Ingram.
Oct. 18	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	2,576.50	Capt. J. L. Slade.
Nov. 17	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	9,671.50	Maj. Geo. Luberoff.
21	Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C.	28,697.00	Maj. John Fawcett.
23	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	28,637.50	Maj. Emil Engel.
1922.
Mar. 6	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	2,781.50	Capt. W. M. Pierce.
27	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	14,818.00	Lieut. J. T. McKay.
Sept. 29	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	1,116.00	Capt. W. M. Pierce.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE QUARTERMASTER GENERAL OF THE ARMY,
Washington, July 13, 1922.

M. Fox & Sons Co.,

213 Courtland Street, Baltimore, Md.

GENTLEMEN: After close observation and personal contact extending over a period of more than one and one-half years in connection with your services as auctioneers at sales of surplus Government property I have no hesitation in stating that your work in that behalf has been capably and efficiently performed.

The manner in which these sales have been conducted by you speak of a high degree of capacity and ability in this field, and the results attained, as evidenced by the prices realized at these auction sales, have been uniformly favorable.

Your dealings with the Government and the purchasing public have been honorable, fair, and impartial, and I unhesitatingly recommend you to anyone needing the services of a successful and high-class auctioneer.

Truly yours,

L. E. HANSON,
Lieutenant Colonel, Quartermaster Corps,
Chief, Surplus Property Division.

Surplus property division—Sales for the surplus property division included a wide range of commodities, such as clothing and equipage, textiles, subsistence, leather and harness, hardware, tools and machinery, electrical equipment and supplies, metals, paints, tobacco, household and office furniture, stationery and office supplies, water transportation material, general supplies, etc.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1920.
June 11	Quartermaster depot, Baltimore, Md.	$84,290.00	Maj. A. D. Hughes.
24	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	27,303.00	Lieut. Col. G. G. Bailey.
Dec. 2	Colgate Warehouses, Baltimore, Md.	15,246.70	Maj. W. E. Murray.
1921.
Jan. 19	Army supply base, Brooklyn, N. Y.	169,977.14	Lieut. Col. J. R. Pouria.
Feb. 23	do.	264,892.00	Do.
Mar. 29	Colgate Warehouses, Baltimore, Md.	29,306.50	Maj. J. P. Keeler.
June 28	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	117,463.12	Capt. Ed. Berg.
July 1	Army supply base, Keaney, N. J.	83,396.77	Lieut. Col. J. W. Pouria.
28	Quartermaster depot, Philadelphia, Pa.	32,636.22	Maj. Chas. E. Jones.
Aug. 30	Army supply base, Brooklyn, N. Y.	1,266,000.88	Lieut. Col. J. R. Pouria.
Sept. 6	Colgate Warehouse, Baltimore, Md.	26,423.65	Capt. J. H. Dent.
13	Quartermaster depot, Washington, D. C.	15,717.27	Col. H. C. Bonnycastle.
20	General reserve depot, Schenectady, N. Y.	122,225.40	Capt. C. A. Kraus.
Oct. 6	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	141,008.08	Col. G. G. Bailey.
11	Quartermaster depot, Pittsburgh, Pa.	65,283.30	Capt. T. R. Maul.
18	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	83,662.80	Capt. J. L. Slade.
31	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	112,906.77	Capt. E. Berg.

Surplus property division—Continued.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1921.
Dec. 15	Army supply base, Brooklyn, N. Y.	$580,046.65	Lieut. Col. J. W. Pouria.
1922.
Jan. 5	Colgate Warehouses, Baltimore, Md.	104,721.45	Capt. J. H. Dent.
9	General reserve depot, Schenectady, N. Y.	267,288.18	Capt. C. A. Kraus.
17	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	44,067.95	Col. G. G. Bailey.
24	Quartermaster depot, Pittsburgh, Pa.	161,740.50	Capt. T. R. Maul.
Feb. 2	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	104,523.36	Capt. L. S. Woods.
8	Quartermaster depot, Washington, D. C.	50,090.13	Lieut. Col. C. O. Zollars.
24	Colgate Warehouse, Baltimore, Md.	20,897.98	Capt. J. H. Dent.
Apr. 10	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	89,069.30	Lieut. Col. J. R. Pouria.
25	General reserve depot, Schenectady, N. Y.	247,519.72	Capt. C. A. Kraus.
26	Army supply base, Boston, Mass.	353,927.00	Lieut. Col. Clifford Gama.
May 16	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	63,608.54	Lieut. J. B. Joseph.
June 27	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	145,078.75	Capt. W. M. Pierce.
July 7	Quartermaster depot, Washington, D. C.	113,484.04	Maj. C. B. Eckels.
27	Camp Holmbird, Baltimore, Md.	4,664.42	Capt. J. L. Shanley.
Aug. 3	General reserve depot, Columbus, Ohio.	1,574.37	Lieut. E. R. Stevens.
9	Army supply base, Brooklyn, N. Y.	1,400,386.02	Col. F. W. Van Duzen.
15	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	31,685.81	Capt. W. M. Pierce.
18	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	7,530.25	Capt. H. H. Reeves.
Sept. 6	Army supply base, Port Newark, N. J.	46,516.66	Capt. W. E. Cashman.
15	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	188,871.08	Capt. H. H. Reeves.
19	Quartermaster depot, Jeffersonville, Ind.	200,474.43	Maj. Jas. D. McKeany.
29	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	543,745.85	Capt. L. S. Woods.
Oct. 11	Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla.	21,552.34	Capt. W. R. Maynard.
24	Air intermediate depot, Montgomery, Ala.	7,153.21	Maj. R. S. Brown.
Nov. 2	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	83,060.50	Capt. L. S. Woods.
27	do.	8,174.00	Do.
Dec. 8	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	140,564.27	Capt. T. J. Powell.
14	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	6,443.88	Capt. H. H. Reeves.
1922.
Jan. 30	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	119,677.00	Capt. L. S. Woods.
Mar. 6	Army supply base, Brooklyn, N. Y.	713,463.04	Maj. W. A. McCain.
Apr. 5	Quartermaster depot, Washington, D. C.	32,460.25	Col. H. C. Bonnycastle.
10	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	840,806.88	Capt. T. J. Powell.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF AIR SERVICE,
Washington, December 29, 1922.

To whom it may concern:

"A laborer is worthy of his hire," and when his work is well done he ought to be commended for it. It is in the attitude of employer the material disposal and salvage section of the Army Air Service stands.

M. Fox & Sons, auctioneers, during the past summer conducted a total of seven auction sales of Air Service surplus property, and the section has every desire to express the highest appreciation and thanks for the way in which these sales were conducted by its corps of most efficient and obliging assistants, who gave the Government valuable and conscientious service.

It is, therefore, with much satisfaction the material disposal and salvage section of the Air Service recommend M. Fox & Sons, auctioneers, as being entirely reliable and efficient, and who will discharge with fidelity all sales intrusted to their care.

HARRY GRAHAM,
Lieutenant Colonel, Air Service,
Chief, Material Disposal and Salvage Section.

Air Service—Sales for the Air Service included airplanes, airplane engines, miscellaneous airplane spare parts, metals, veneer, aviators' clothing, tools and machinery, hardware, cloth, chemicals, etc.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1922.
June 7	Air Service depot, Morriston, Va.	$45,957.79	Lieut. U. G. Jones.
Aug. 24	Park Field, Millington, Tenn.	17,427.81	Capt. Paul J. Mathis.

Air Service, etc.—Continued.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1922.
Aug. 29	Souther Field, Americus, Ga.	$109,969.10	Maj. L. S. Churchill.
Oct. 11	Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla.	17,510.55	Capt. W. R. Maynard.
24	Air Reserve depot, Montgomery, Ala.	25,105.02	Maj. H. S. Brown.
30	Air Reserve depot, Richmond, Va.	146,974.93	Lieut. A. W. Martinstein.
Nov 14	Air Reserve depot, Long Island City, N. Y.	122,199.78	Capt. S. J. Idzorek.
1923.
Jan. 24	Wilbur Wright Field, Fairfield, Ohio.	44,013.77	Maj. A. W. Robins.
Feb. 6	Air Intermediate depot, Middletown, Pa.	65,041.59	Maj. R. M. Jones.
May 2	Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex.	22,965.38	Maj. F. D. Lockland.
17	Rockwell Field, San Diego, Calif.	52,218.45	Maj. H. H. Arnold.
June 22	Air Intermediate depot, Middletown, Pa.	35,492.62	Capt. S. J. Idzorek.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SURGEON GENERAL,
Washington, February 15, 1923.

M. Fox & Sons Co.,

213 St. Paul Place, Baltimore, Md.

GENTLEMEN: Now that we are closing up the sales campaign on medical and hospital supplies, I take this occasion to express to you my appreciation for the excellent results you have obtained in disposing of surplus medical material.

Not only your own efforts but those of your very efficient organization have brought results which are completely satisfactory to all concerned in the disposal of these supplies.

Please accept my best wishes for your continued success, and permit me in closing to again express my deep appreciation for the successful manner in which you have conducted all sales for this office.

Sincerely yours,

S. S. CREIGHTON,

Major, Medical Corps, United States Army.

Medical Department—Sales for the Medical Department included drugs, medicines, chemicals, hospital and sick-room supplies and equipment, instruments and appliances, clothing, etc.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1921.
June 28	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	$2,202.50	Lieut. C. G. Manning.
July 28	Quartermaster depot, Philadelphia, Pa.	11,777.81	Lieut. W. W. Tobin.
Oct. 27	Army supply base, Brooklyn, N. Y.	68,317.94	Col. F. M. Hartack.
Dec. 9	Quartermaster depot, Philadelphia, Pa.	35,551.74	Lieut. W. W. Tobin.
1922.
Aug. 15	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	2,700.00	Lieut. C. G. Manning.
Oct. 6	do	20,322.75	Do.
11	Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla.	2,700.50	Capt. W. R. Maynard.
Oct. 27	Quartermaster depot, Washington, D. C.	140,396.61	Maj. S. S. Creighton.
Nov. 16	Quartermaster depot, Philadelphia, Pa.	41,547.27	Lieut. J. C. Schwager.
Dec. 8	Quartermaster depot, Washington, D. C.	54,077.65	Maj. S. S. Creighton.
7	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	94,380.85	Capt. T. G. Williams.
1923.
Feb. 1	Army supply base, Brooklyn, N. Y.	294,630.62	Lieut. Col. Carroll D. Buck.
June 28	Quartermaster depot, Washington, D. C.	10,587.51	Maj. S. S. Creighton.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF CAMP UTILITIES OFFICER,
Camp Abraham Eustis, Va., April 7, 1920.

From: Maj. W. R. Richards, utilities officer, Camp Eustis, Va.

To: M. Fox & Sons Co., Baltimore, Md.

Attention Mr. Robert Fox.

Subject: Sales report.

MY DEAR MR. FOX: I take great pleasure in thanking you for the highly successful manner in which our sale was conducted at this camp yesterday. As this was the first sale of this kind in this locality, the amount realized was in excess of what we expected, the sales totaling $84,926.50.

The value of the equipment sold yesterday, in my estimation, was in the neighborhood of $70,000, so the difference realized on this sale was owing entirely to your efforts and the very successful manner in which the sale was handled.

Any recommendation which I may make in your behalf could not extend to you my appreciation for your efforts in our behalf.

Allow me to again assure you of my highest appreciation to you and all your associates connected with you in the handling of this sale.

Wishing you all the success possible, and I will be very glad if the occasion arises to have you handle another sale for us, I remain,

Yours very truly,

W. R. RICHARDS,

Major, Quartermaster Corps, Utilities Officer.

Salvage division—Salvage material refers to articles worn out and not fit for repair or reconditioning. The scope of commodities under this heading embraced clothing and equipage, leather and harness, machinery, scrap metals, office furniture and equipment, etc.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1921.
July 19	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	$4,718.25	Capt. E. Berg.
Sept. 16	do	17,478.80	Do.
20	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	52,598.25	Lieut. W. J. Goinsey.
Dec. 19	do	20,965.25	Lieut. J. T. McKay.
1922.
Jan. 17	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	11,897.19	Lieut. J. B. Joseph.
24	Quartermaster depot, Pittsburgh, Pa.	1,347.61	Capt. T. R. Maul.
Mar. 16	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	330,791.44	Capt. W. M. Pierce.
Apr. 29	Army supply base, Boston, Mass.	6,440.23	Lieut. Col. Clifford Game.
May 22	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	431,857.91	Capt. W. M. Pierce.
26	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	28,918.38	Capt. E. E. Bowman.
June 7	Air Service depot, Morrison, Va.	1,198.00	Lieut. U. G. Jones.
Aug. 1	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	67,810.25	Capt. H. E. Norton.
18	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	17,964.32	Lieut. J. T. McKay.
Sept. 6	Army supply base, Port Newark, N. J.	6,462.27	Capt. W. E. Cashman.
Oct. 6	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	112,967.00	Capt. L. S. Woods.
11	Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla.	3,064.10	Capt. W. R. Maynard.
Nov. 11	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	5,807.50	Capt. Jos. S. Crase.
2	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	0,890.50	Capt. L. S. Woods.
Dec. 14	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	17,784.42	Lieut. G. B. Kidwell.
15	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	1,533.00	Capt. Jos. S. Crase.
1923.
Jan. 30	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	8,944.50	Capt. L. S. Woods.
Feb. 20	Fort Myer, Va.	10,974.24	Lieut. Chas. E. Elde.
June 30	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	6,222.03	Capt. L. F. Page.

SALVAGE BOARD, WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ORDNANCE,
Washington, November 17, 1920.

M. Fox & Sons Co.,

20-26 South Pass Street, Baltimore, Md.

GENTLEMEN: It is the desire of the Ordnance Salvage Board to express its appreciation of the efficient and businesslike manner in which you handled the several auction sales which have been conducted for the disposition of surplus Ordnance property.

There have been innumerable difficulties attendant upon the sales which have been given to you, and the manner in which you have surmounted these difficulties and the efficient and courteous service which you have rendered the Ordnance Department should be a source of much satisfaction to you as it undoubtedly is to the Ordnance Department.

The reports of the results of the auction sales which you have conducted show that you have secured prices which in the majority of cases greatly exceeded the expectations of the Salvage Board representatives.

I wish also to thank you personally not only for the results which you have obtained but for the forbearance and courtesy which you have shown under trying conditions.

You are to be especially commended for the catalogue which you prepared covering the auction sale at Aberdeen Proving Ground on November 11, 1920. It was one of the best that I have ever seen.

It is the hope of the Ordnance Salvage Board that we will be able to continue to make use of your services in the further disposition of surplus property.

Yours very truly,

DWIGHT H. SHURTLEWORTH,

Major, Ordnance Department, United States Army,
Chairman Ordnance Salvage Board.

Ordnance Department—Sales for the Ordnance Department included tools and machinery, electrical supplies and equipment, plumbing fixtures and supplies, office furniture, hardware, metals, etc.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1920
May 28	Park Plant, Baltimore, Md.	$158,549.72	Lieut. R. C. Wilson.
Aug 6	Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Aberdeen, Md.	123,288.60	Col. H. W. Schull.
Nov. 11	do.	46,220.19	Do.
Dec. 17	do.	6,255.50	Do.
1922
Sept. 25	do.	52,172.50	Col. W. H. Tschappat.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE DEPT QUARTERMASTER,
QUARTERMASTER INTERMEDIATE DEPOT,
Jeffersonville, Ind., April 29, 1921.

From: Commanding officer.

To: M. Fox & Sons Co., 213 Courtland Street, Baltimore Md.

Attention Mr. Robert Fox.

Subject: Public sale of auto vehicles April 28, 1921.

1. The writer desires to express his appreciation of the manner in which you handled the public sale of motor vehicles at this depot on April 28, 1921. The results obtained were extremely satisfactory, and the methods and means used by you in conducting this sale meet with the full approval of the undersigned.

2. The way in which you conducted the preliminary arrangements of the sale, your activity, the actual selling, the closing thereof, the manner in which you cooperated with the officers of this depot, and the interest displayed by you in conserving the interests of the War Department call for most favorable comment.

3. The writer desires to congratulate you upon your ability as an auctioneer.

L. D. CABELL,
Commanding Officer.

Motor Transport Division—Motor transport sales involved touring cars, auto trucks, trailers, motor cycles, bicycles, and tires.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1919
Sept. 8	Ordnance Depot, South Amboy, N. J.	$30,755.00	Maj. Jos. S. Crane.
18	Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.	11,941.50	Maj. R. C. P. Evans.
25	do.	17,543.50	Do.
Oct. 2	do.	26,345.00	Do.
9	do.	45,245.00	Do.
16	do.	58,410.00	Do.
17	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	31,252.50	Lieut. E. A. Stoll.
23	Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.	121,415.00	Maj. R. C. P. Evans.
30	do.	64,037.50	Do.
31	Baritan Arsenal, Metuchen, N. J.	17,530.00	Capt. E. S. Miller.
Dec. 2	Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.	354,647.00	Maj. R. C. P. Evans.
5	Edgewood Arsenal, Edgewood, Md.	920.00	Lieut. Philip E. Iversen.
1920
Feb. 27	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	12,890.00	Maj. Jos. S. Crane.
Apr. 6	Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.	34,763.00	Maj. R. C. P. Evans.
16	Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Aberdeen, Md.	5,010.00	Lieut. Col. J. A. Brooks, jr.
May 7	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	2,982.50	Maj. Jos. S. Crane.
Aug. 2	do.	5,225.00	Do.
Nov. 12	Baritan Arsenal, Metuchen, N. J.	5,631.00	Captain Zellers.
27	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	4,713.50	Maj. Jos. S. Crane.
1921
Jan. 18	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	7,055.00	Capt. E. G. Coursen, jr.
Feb. 17	Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.	375,040.00	Lieut. Col. George E. Ball.
Apr. 7	Camp Jessup, Atlanta, Ga.	35,589.00	Lieut. Col. W. R. Kendrick.
14	Camp Normoyke, San Antonio, Tex.	33,837.00	Captain Ellis.
22	Camp Boyd, El Paso, Tex.	26,147.00	Maj. R. Butler.
28	Quartermaster depot, Jeffersonville, Ind.	71,578.00	Lieut. Col. L. D. Cabell.
May 5	General reserve depot, Schoenectady, N. Y.	20,004.00	Capt. C. A. Kraus.
12	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	90,574.00	Maj. Jos. S. Crane.
June 15	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	3,900.50	Capt. H. S. Evans.
24	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	12,766.30	Lieut. J. B. Joseph.
July 7	Army supply base, Port Newark, N. J.	9,555.10	Capt. Wm. E. Cashman.

Motor Transport Division—Motor transport sales involved touring cars, auto trucks, trailers, motor cycles, bicycles, and tires—Continued.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1921
July 8	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	8,075.80	Maj. Jos. S. Crane.
12	Quartermaster depot, Jeffersonville, Ind.	76,789.00	Lieut. Col. L. D. Cabell.
19	Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va.	405.00	Capt. E. Berg.
29	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	6,606.00	Lieut. J. B. Joseph.
Aug. 1	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	6,550.00	Capt. W. E. Durst.
23	Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio.	6,921.50	Capt. M. O. Boone.
Oct. 21	Camp Meade, Admiral, Md.	6,039.50	Capt. O. A. Schwartzwelder.
24	General reserve depot, New Cumberland, Pa.	60,000.00	Lieut. J. B. Joseph.
Nov. 3	General reserve depot, Columbus, Ohio.	60,503.50	Lieut. E. Hostetter.
8	Camp Jessup, Atlanta, Ga.	30,988.00	Lieut. Col. W. R. Kendrick.
Dec. 30	Camp Eustis, Lee Hall, Va.	914.00	Capt. J. L. Corbett.
1922
Feb. 24	Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.	23,415.50	Lieut. Col. Geo. E. Ball.
Mar. 21	Air reserve depot, Buffalo, N. Y.	11,120.00	Maj. Robt. Coker.
June 7	Air service depot, Morrison, Va.	470.00	Capt. J. L. Corbett.
July 15	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	4,183.50	Lieut. J. H. Holder.
27	Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.	37,193.60	Lieut. Col. Geo. E. Ball.
Aug. 1	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	3,262.75	Capt. Jos. S. Crane.
3	General reserve depot, Columbus, Ohio.	28,505.00	Lieut. E. R. Stevens.
Sept. 19	Quartermaster depot, Jeffersonville, Ind.	182,126.00	Capt. H. H. Noyes.
21	Air reserve depot, Middletown, Pa.	9,220.50	Capt. H. R. Springer.
Nov. 10	Ordnance depot, South Amboy, N. J.	744.80	Capt. Jos. S. Crane.
1923
Mar. 30	Columbus, Ohio.	17,137.50	Maj. H. M. Trippe.

2915 THIRTEENTH STREET NE.,
Washington, D. C., September 3, 1920.

MR. ROBERT FOX,

Care of M. Fox & Sons Co.,

20-26 South Paca Street, Baltimore, Md.

DEAR MR. FOX: It was my intention before leaving the Army to write you officially regarding the satisfactory manner in which your company handled the various auction sales of surplus construction material for the Construction Division.

In carrying out the agreement under which the sales were held, your company more than fulfilled the promises made to me in regard to assistance and cooperation prior to the sale itself and the actual holding of the auction.

I feel that it is due you to have a statement of this nature, and I would add that should I personally have any similar material to dispose of it will give me great pleasure to have you handle the work, for I know that it would be well and satisfactorily done.

Yours very truly,

J. H. KLINCK,

Formerly Major, Quartermaster Corps,

Officer in Charge Procurement Division,

Construction Division of the Army.

Construction Division—Sales for the construction Division comprised buildings, contractors and builders' equipment and supplies, pipe and pipe fittings, valves, tools and machinery, electrical supplies, plumbing fixtures and supplies, etc.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1920
Apr. 6	Camp Eustis, Lee Hall, Va.	$75,982.35	Maj. W. R. Richards.
8	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	61,734.00	Maj. L. G. Thom.
9	Camp Alexander, Newport News, Va.	6,549.00	Do.
June 30	Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J.	68,019.37	Capt. G. B. Burch.
1921
Mar. 18	Fort McHenry, Baltimore, Md.	1,075.00	Major Gray.
May 24	East Potomac Park, Washington, D. C.	1,675.00	Lieut. Col. H. L. Evans.
24	Washington Barracks, Washington, D. C.	666.00	Capt. Nels J. Thorad.
Dec. 30	Camp Eustis, Lee Hall, Va.	500.00	Capt. J. L. Corbett.

Engineer Department—Sales for the Engineer Department embraced tools and machinery, engineering instruments, supplies and equipment, railroad supplies and equipment, iron and steel, etc.

Date.	Place of sale.	Amount.	Officer in charge.
1922.
Mar. 16	Army supply base, Norfolk, Va.	$6,863.71	Capt. H. C. Whitehurst.
Apr. 19	do.	4,282.91	Do.
1923.
Jan. 19	Fert Humphreys, Va.	50,176.43	Capt. L. D. Clay.
Mar. 30	Columbus, Ohio.	84,841.53	Maj. H. M. Trippe.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. The letter to which I referred contains in it a statement which was made by Mr. Robert Fox, who is apparently the president of this corporation. The letter reads as follows:

In view of the statement made by Representative BEN JOHNSON, of Kentucky, on March 22, on the floor of the House, regarding commission paid us by the Government for conducting auction sales, we have taken the privilege of mailing you under separate cover a copy of our booklet, "Satisfied," giving a résumé of our Government work from 1918 to June, 1923.

The statement made by Representative JOHNSON "that we did not pay for any advertising or any other expenses incident to the sales," is absolutely incorrect and very misleading to the public. For your information we inclose herewith newspaper cutting of our Mr. Robert Fox's statement given to the press, which is correct.

Our books and records are open to inspection by any United States Government authorized authority and we would welcome any investigation.

Respectfully yours,

M. Fox & Sons Co.
By MORTON M. Fox.

Now, the newspaper statement which is a part of that is very brief. I want to say that in making this statement I have not the faintest implication or faintest idea that the statements made by the gentleman from Kentucky are intentionally incorrect or that he had the slightest intention of making incorrect statements. I do not know whether they are incorrect or not, but I am presenting this information for the consideration of the committee.

The statement referred to appeared in the Baltimore Sun on March 23, 1924, and is as follows:

FIGURES MISLEADING ASSESSMENTS ROBERT FOX.

Robert Fox, president of M. Fox & Sons Co., Maryland Casualty Building, yesterday declared that the statements of Representative JOHNSON were inaccurate and misleading. In a statement issued just before he left for Charleston, S. C., where he is to conduct a sale of surplus Government goods, Mr. Fox said:

"Our company has been for years one of the official auctioneers for various departments of the Government; in fact, it was the first auctioneer to represent the War Department. Since October, 1918, its activities were devoted almost exclusively in the service of the Government.

"Except in a few special instances, where a fixed amount is paid for our services on a per diem basis, we are not paid for so many working days, but receive a commission based on the amount realized by us for the merchandise sold.

CITES EXPENSES ENTAILLED.

"From these commissions which we have received we furnish and prepare at our own expense large quantities of advertising matter, such as catalogues and newspaper ads. In some instances it has been advisable to make announcements and give details of sale in as many as 50 publications throughout the country. In addition we furnish our own personnel for the preparation of each sale, which includes a careful classification and appraisal of values of the merchandise offered. Necessarily, we must employ a considerable and efficient force of high-class men to accomplish good results for the benefit of the Government. We defray our own expenses for hotel accommodations, travel, and incidentals in connection with the sales which we have conducted in all parts of the country, often necessitating the shifting of personnel from Atlantic to Pacific coast.

"As to making public the amount of money received by this company as its commissions for conducting these sales on behalf of the Government, I regret that I can not do so except with the consent of the Government, as I believe our relations with it are of a somewhat confidential nature.

"However, I can make this definite statement: 'In our largest business during any one year with the Government the total gross commissions for the entire year did not aggregate the amount referred to in the stated 113 working days.'"

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes more, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. DOWELL. I ask that it be made five minutes, Mr. Chairman, because I want to ask a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Now, just one word, gentlemen, and then I shall be glad to yield for questions. I wish again to point out that this company has been serving the War Department since October, 1918; that their activities are listed in the list which I have filed, and that they have conducted one sale at Camp Holabird, with as many as 5,000 people present as possible bidders, and have conducted various other sales throughout the country. I now yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DOWELL. Has the gentleman obtained from the War Department the amount paid to this firm for these services?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to my colleague—

Mr. DOWELL. I notice that he does not give that, and says it is a private affair. I would like to know if the gentleman has examined the War Department accounts to ascertain what this firm has drawn for its services during the time it has served as auctioneer?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. The gentleman is in error. I did not say this was a "private affair." I will repeat to the gentleman what I said a few minutes ago to the committee. I said that I have absolutely no knowledge of this matter at all except as contained in the information which I have just received from the auctioneers. I know nothing about it otherwise. I now yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I simply want to say in reference to the question of the gentleman from Iowa that this particular concern is one of those which the gentleman from Kentucky discussed on Saturday, and the statement is made in the Record that M. Fox & Sons, of Baltimore, were employed on 113 different days and received a total recompense of two hundred and thirty-odd thousand dollars.

Mr. DOWELL. I think the gentleman will concede that his constituent was receiving at least a fair compensation for the services that he rendered.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to the gentleman that I am not at all sure that any of these auctioneers are my constituents. They happen to come from Baltimore, but I do not know that they are my constituents, and I rather resent the gentleman's suggestion that I am interested in this merely because they are possible constituents of mine. They are not, but they are entitled to a fair hearing. I do not know anything about them except their general excellent reputation. I know this House wants the facts, and I know the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. JOHNSON) wants the facts, and I am trying to help you get them. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Is it possible to ascertain by merely glancing at the figures whether the compensation was excessive or inadequate? Are there not so many other factors that enter into that ascertainment that it is perfectly hopeless and useless simply to set forth some figures without explanation?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to the gentleman from Massachusetts I entirely agree with his suggestion contained in his question. The Military Affairs Committee, in the early days of the Sixty-seventh Congress was greatly concerned about the prompt disposal of excess war material, and it is a very big task to properly dispose of such war material and to get proper returns. Here is a letter from the quartermaster at Camp Holabird on February 25, 1921, to the M. Fox & Sons Co., stating, "The fact that the sale realized almost $150,000 more than we expected or hoped for is sufficient evidence of your ability as auctioneers. To you belongs the lion's share of praise for our success."

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask that the gentleman have two minutes more, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks that the time of the gentleman from Maryland be extended two additional minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BLANTON. Does the gentleman think that it is a sufficient answer to the facts that our colleague from Kentucky put in the Record the other day for Secretary of War Weeks to merely state that some of the auctioneers received merely one-fourth of 1 per cent, when one-fourth of 1 per cent on enough property that could be sold under the hammer in a few hours could amount to several hundred thousand dollars. It is a question of what a man is earning per day in this auctioneering business that my colleague from Kentucky was discussing, and I am sure there is not a man in this House who will get up here and defend those auctioneers who have been profiteering on this Government.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I am perfectly frank to say to the gentleman from Texas that if that is the only statement that the Secretary of War has made, it is not sufficient, but that it is not the only statement that has been made.

Mr. BLANTON. That is all that has appeared in the newspapers. I have watched them carefully and that is all I have seen from Secretary of War Weeks in the press.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I want to say to the gentleman that I agree with him that one-fourth of 1 per cent commission on some of the huge amounts of money that have been expended from 1918 to date in the sale of various surplus war materials might be too much, but, in all fairness, and I know the gentleman from Texas and the gentleman from Kentucky are seeking a fair disposition and a nonpartisan consideration of the question, and I am approaching it from that standpoint—

Mr. BLANTON. Would the gentleman mind yielding for just one other question?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. In one moment. In all fairness, I desire to call attention to two facts: First, that the employment of these auctioneers started in 1918 under the Democratic Secretary of War and has continued ever since; that the employment of these auctioneers started under Secretary Baker and has continued since.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield for one further question?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. The press stated—I do not know with what authority—that the War Department had selected our colleague, the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. WAINWRIGHT] to answer our friend from Kentucky. The gentleman has spoken, but he did not answer him to my satisfaction. I wonder if the gentleman is speaking for the War Department, officially?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I regret that my colleague from Texas, who is always so alert, did not hear the preliminary remark I made to my statement. I said I had utterly and absolutely no personal knowledge of this matter in any possible way; but that as a supplement to the very clear and able statement made by the former Assistant Secretary of War, our colleague from New York [Mr. WAINWRIGHT], and knowing that the gentleman from Kentucky also wanted to have all the facts that were available, I took the liberty of furnishing to the committee a communication which I had this morning received from Mr. Fox, the auctioneer. These matters are furnished for the information of the committee.

Mr. DOWELL. Because a system started in 1918 appears to have been extravagant, is that any reason why it should be continued now?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I do not think any system which is of itself improper, if it is improper, started under a Democratic administration should continue.

Mr. BLANTON. But it ought to stop.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has again expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I had with me on last Saturday when I addressed the House a list of sales furnished me by the director of sales. I have just sent over to my office for the list and I now have it in my hand. It is here, and subject to the inspection of any gentleman in this House; and if anybody will come and examine the list and find that my statement does not agree with every figure that the director of sales has made on these sheets I will stand right here and eat and swallow all of this paper. [Laughter and applause.] This serious matter is all too true. Let me read you the part of the hearings which you will find on page 181 in the testimony of the director of sales:

The commissions will average about between 1 and 2 per cent for all auctions.

Mr. ANTHONY. What is the highest amount you ever paid an auctioneer at any sale that you have had?

Major HARTMAN. The maximum for commodity sales is $8,183.91 for selling $2,123,563.13 worth of material.

Mr. ANTHONY. For a day's work?

Major HARTMAN. $8,183.91 altogether. It averages less than 1 per cent for a $2,000,000 sale.

Mr. JOHNSON. A thousand dollars a day would pay him fairly well?

Major HARTMAN. Yes, sir; but out of that he must pay for at least five employees that we require him to have, print the catalogues, and do a certain amount of paid local advertising, arranging and tagging the samples, and listing the samples, and rendering the abstract of sale.

Mr. ANTHONY. Why would it not be better for you to print the catalogues and take charge of the sale, and just hire a man to cry it?

Major HARTMAN. In the first place, we have not the personnel to carry on that kind of work. It is true, we take it out of the proceeds of sale when they come due, but we can not be sure that a sale is going to actually come off.

That is the statement of the director of sales himself about hiring five employees to help do the work; and if catalogues are required to be printed, the cost is taken out of the amount of sales. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WAINWRIGHT] spoke of the auctioneer having 75 men to help him conduct a sale. But the director of sales himself knocks off 70 of these men and says there are only 5. Is the statement true that $8,183.91 is the biggest one day's sale? At the metropolis of my own State, within 40 miles of where I live, according to the statements contained in the War Department's statement, nearly $25,000 was paid for one day's sale.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Kentucky yield to the gentleman from Nebraska?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I do not desire the gentleman to yield, Mr. Chairman. I want him to go on and tell the hideous story to the ears of the country. I rise to suggest that there are not as many here now as there ought to be—not enough to transact business. I do not want to raise the point of no quorum, if I can help it. I think the Chair ought to raise it himself. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky will proceed.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. The concern to which I just referred at Louisville, Ky., was the Louisville Real Estate & Development Co. The director of sales gave it to me in writing that for that sale of one day they paid $24,194.80. Therefore $8,183.91 is not the largest fee paid for one day.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Has the gentleman the figures of the amount that was produced by that sale?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I can find it if I be given the same time that other gentlemen have had.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. May I say that I propose to explain each item the gentleman has referred to, and therefore I will not press my question.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. If I can get the time I will find what each sale amounted to.

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. BEGG. I am curious to know whether the auctioneers paid for this kind of advertising. This is one of the advertisements or catalogues about which they have spoken. Did the auctioneer pay for it or the Government pay for it?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I never saw an advertisement of the kind the gentleman has in his hand until he exhibited it here.

Mr. BEGG. This is the Simonton ordnance plant. If the auctioneer is compelled to furnish advertising like this and put it out, that is one thing.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky be allowed to proceed for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kentucky be allowed to proceed for 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. It seems that the gentleman from Ohio failed to hear what I just read from the hearing as coming from the director of sales in answer to a question put by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY]. Mr. ANTHONY asked Major Hartman, the director of sales, "Why would it not be better for you to print the catalogues and take charge of the sale, and just hire a man to cry it?" Major Hartman replied, "In the first place, we have not the personnel to carry on that kind of work. It is true we take it out of the proceeds of sale when they come due, but we can not be sure that a sale is actually to come off."

If they take it out of the proceeds of the sale, is it not being paid for by the Government of the United States?

Mr. BEGG. That is the question I am interested in, and I could not quite get it from the testimony that the gentleman read. Whether it comes out of the amount due the auctioneer or is paid by the Government is an important thing.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me in order that I may answer the gentleman?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. All of these catalogues came out of the auctioneer.

Mr. BEGG. If the gentleman from New York is correct and this advertising comes out of the auctioneer, it is entirely possible that a fee of $40,000 is not an unreasonable fee.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. But the director of sales says that it comes out of the proceeds of the sale, and the proceeds of the sale belong to the United States Government.

Mr. BEGG. And the ex-Assistant Secretary of War says flatly, without any qualification, that it comes out of the amount paid to the auctioneer.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. But the ex-Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Wainwright, only a few minutes ago, frankly disclaimed any intimate knowledge with these affairs. The Director of Sales himself, who has that intimate information, says that the cost of advertising comes out of the proceeds of sale; and, to repeat, the proceeds of sale belong to the United States Government.

Mr. BEGG. I grant that coming out of the proceeds of sale is all right, but so does the amount paid to the auctioneer come out of the proceeds of sale.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. And consequently the United States pays both the auctioneer and the cost of printing.

Mr. BEGG. Do they lose the auctioneer's fee plus this catalogue, or only the auctioneer's fee, and the auctioneer gets this much less?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. It is made quite clear, I think, that the United States Government pays the auctioneer, and then reimburses the auctioneer, out of the proceeds of sale, for the cost of such advertising as the auctioneer may expend.

Mr. BEGG. If that is true, that is an entirely different understanding than I have.

Mr. STENGLE. Is it not a matter of record somewhere so that we can get the exact facts with regard to this?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes. If the gentleman will yield, perhaps this will throw a little light on that. Major Hartman says in the hearings, in reply to a question from Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky:

Yes, but out of that he must pay for at least five employees that we require him to have, the printing of the catalogues, and do a certain amount of paid local advertising, arranging and tagging the samples, listing the samples, and rendering an abstract of sale.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. And then, at that point I asked him if he made an abstract of title or an abstract of sale. He said that he made an abstract of sale. What is an abstract of sale? An abstract of title is a difficult thing to get, and it costs money; but an abstract of sale is just a plain, simple, written report of what things were sold and the price paid for them.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. MURPHY. Has the gentleman any information with reference to what retail dealers or even wholesale dealers who find themselves clogged with merchandise pay to experts to clean that merchandise up—sales managers who come in and take charge of stock that is more or less dead and move it? Has the gentleman any figures as to what merchants pay for that sort of service?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Of course, I have not.

Mr. MURPHY. May I enlighten the gentleman?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Not in my time. The gentleman can get time for his own remarks.

Mr. MURPHY. Right here I would like to make the statement.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Does the gentleman know that he is taking much of my time?

Mr. MURPHY. I shall try to get the gentleman five more minutes. I have some knowledge of those things and I say to the gentleman that the fees run anywhere from 5 to 15 per cent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. On a $2,500,000 sale, conducted on one day?

Mr. MURPHY. It is just this way: A man that is clogged up with unsalable merchandise is willing to pay anyone that is able to move it a fee that is reasonable at any time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. But that man is broke while the United States is solvent.

Mr. MURPHY. The United States had millions and millions of dollars' worth of merchandise that it did not know how to get rid of. They did not have the sales experts.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. And they chose to give it away rather than sell it?

Mr. MURPHY. They did not give it away any more than this House, with four hundred and some odd Members, by a great big majority the other day gave away the rights of the people down there at Muscle Shoals.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Oh, the gentleman is surely not going to make a Muscle Shoals speech in my time, is he?

Mr. MURPHY. Very well.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, getting back to the statement made by the director of sales, that the biggest one day's sale was approximately $8,000, I have just told you of one sale amounting to nearly $25,000 a day. The same source of information, the director of sales, recites that Smith & Jaffe, of 68 West Forty-fifth Street, New York City, were paid $28,122.28 for making a sale on the 16th day of August, 1921. That is more than three times $8,000. Again, that auctioneer was paid $45,467.52 for crying a one-day sale on December 7, 1922.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. WAINWRIGHT] has spoken of the per cent that was paid during the Democratic administration and the per cent that was paid during the Republican administration. I wish the gentleman to bear in mind that I have not injected politics into this discussion. It is a calamity to both Democrats and Republicans that so much money has been thrown away to the winds by being paid unnecessarily to auctioneers, but since the gentleman himself has injected politics, let me say this to him: That the sales made under a Democratic administration were small ones. As small a fee as $2.50 was paid for a sale.

Several small auctioneers' fees ranging from $5 to $10 were paid under the Democratic administration, but the director of sales fails to give any of those under a Republican administration. Those made under the Democratic administration were in 1919 and not in 1918, as the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL] says. There were only three sales made by the Democrats, each of which amounted to as much as a half million dollars. I am speaking now from memory, but I shall not make a big mistake even in the figures. Under the Republican administration there were, if I recollect correctly, 12 sales of more than a half million dollars. There were about 14 sales of more than a million and a half dollars and less than two millions, and there were sales, I think, of more than two and a half millions each.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. If the gentleman will give way, did not the gentleman himself make that comparison between the two administrations in his remarks? I did not do it except in a very inoffensive way, simply following up the allusion which the gentleman himself had made.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes; but I did it in a non-partisan way. I did not undertake to make a percentage on small sales and compare that with a rate on big sales for the purpose of making an invidious or partisan comparison.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. If the gentleman will yield just a minute. All I said was that the figures of percentage of auctioneer fees on gross rates up to March 4, 1921, averaged 2.55, and since 1.48.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes; but those fees, if correct, were on the sale of a truck now and then, or on an old automobile now and then, or on some piece of worn-out property that brought but little.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I ask that the gentleman may have 10 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. It has been stated, and correctly so, that the larger the sale, the less became the rate of per cent payment. Why could not an arrangement have been made by which there should be a maximum daily compensation?

The prudent business man, to whom reference has been made, beyond question would have done that. For these sales a percentage has been paid when the man representing the Government sees in advance that a daily compensation of $25,000, $35,000, or $40,000 a day would be paid. Except for a willingness to indulge in wasteful extravagance, such an arrangement would not have been made.

Now, another thing that appeared a moment ago through a question put by the gentleman from New York in referring to the papers in which the advertisements were put. I have not sought to inject politics into this matter at all. But in reply I will say that at Louisville, the metropolis of my State, there were at the time these sales were being advertised four daily papers—The Courier-Journal, The Evening Times, The Evening Post, and the Louisville Herald. The Post, the Times, and the Courier-Journal each one separately at that time had more circulation than did the Herald, then a Republican paper. Not one of the Democratic papers received a line or a penny for advertisement. Everything paid for in the way of advertising in Louisville was paid to the Louisville Herald, then a Republican paper.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. If the gentleman will give way, may I state to the gentleman that neither I, as an Assistant Secretary of War, nor the Secretary of War had the slightest knowledge of where these advertisements were placed. They were placed by Army officers, who, I hope, know no politics and had no interest in the matter except to secure the best advertising medium.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Gentlemen, that is the most deplorable statement I ever heard made on this floor—that those in authority know nothing about this subject.

Mr. WATKINS. Especially for advertising costing nearly half a million dollars.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Those who placed the advertisement got approximately $57,000. They received for doing that 8 per cent, 9 per cent, and 10 per cent, and the amount of advertisement, placed at a conservative figure, would be a half million dollars, and we are now told that nobody in authority in the Department of War knows one God's blessed thing about it.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. The gentleman from New York said he hoped these Army officers did not know anything about politics. He did not say they did not.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I say from my knowledge Army officers do not know anything about politics and do not practice politics.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman please tell me whether the director of sales who appeared before the committee was an Army officer or not?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Maj. Charles D. Hartman graduated at West Point, is either an Engineer or a Coast Artillery officer, as I recall, and was assigned against his will to this job. It is one of the most thankless jobs that can be given to an Army officer.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. It was not a thankless job to the people who got the results of it. I really did not know, and I asked the gentleman in the utmost good faith whether this man was an Army officer or whether he was one who came in during or since the war. I have no knowledge whatever of him.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I will.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. In fairness—I know the attitude in which the gentleman has approached this attitude, entirely nonpartisan, and so is mine—I want to ask the gentleman if his observations apply to the sales made through these various auctioneers in 1918 and 1919?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. There were none made in 1918.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to the gentleman there were a number of sales made at Camp Meade and numerous other places.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. If that be true then my information is incorrect, but the director of sales made no report of sales prior to 1919.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. In 1918 and 1919. I wanted to make it clear. I understand the gentleman's observations to apply equally to sales made in 1918 and 1919 and any subsequent sales.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Before answering, may I ask the gentleman whether the same man who fixed these auctioneer fees in 1919 and 1920 is the man who now fixes them?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to the gentleman that I repeat my statement that I know absolutely nothing about the War Department end of fixing these arrangements; but I will say to the gentleman that I do know that, as reported in the statement which I made to the committee, the sales were made in apparently the same way in 1918 and in 1919; and I simply wanted to give the gentleman the opportunity to repeat his statement, that he regarded the 1918 and 1919 sales no differently from the later ones.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I can say this with the utmost frankness, that whoever—under whatever administration it may have happened I care not—employed auctioneers at thousands and thousands of dollars a day did a great wrong to the American people, and I do not care a continental whether he was a Democrat or a Republican. [Applause.]

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. DOWELL. And is it not also true that this has been going on ever since the sale of this surplus property began, and on down to the present?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. My information is that since 1919 it has come down to the present; and even since this statement was given me by the director of sales, I have ascertained that an additional sum of between $3,000 and $4,000 has been paid to the firm of Fox, of Baltimore.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. No matter when it began, this is the time to stop it. It is not a question of when it began. It is a question of when it will stop.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I have listened with interest and considerable shock to the statement made by the gentleman from Kentucky. I believe the gentleman's statement to be entirely true. It is in some respects the most despicable of all the robberies of the Treasury that have been perpetrated, and I think the gentleman from Kentucky has rendered a great public service by what he has done.

This is not a question of politics, as I look at it, at all. As the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] said, it is utterly immaterial when it began. The question is, Who are the guilty persons; and are we going to stop it now? Those are the important questions. As I read in the speeches the other day, there was one auctioneer who, in a very short time, received as an auctioneer more than all the nine Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States had received in salaries in three years.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Without referring to the Record, if my memory is correct, that statement is correct, and that man Fox over in Baltimore, in less than a third of a year, received more than the President receives in three years.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. BOYLAN. Does not the gentleman think that is a very good argument why we should compensate our officials better?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Does the gentleman refer to the auctioneers or to the President? [Laughter.]

Mr. BOYLAN. To have a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States and a Cabinet officer trying to get along in the city of Washington on $12,000 a year. Does not the gentleman think that fact keeps men who are capable of holding office from serving?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I think so.

Mr. BOYLAN. You can not hire an auctioneer at so much per day, as you would hire a bricklayer or a baker or a butcher or a candlestick maker.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Upon what meat doth the auctioneer feed that is denied the bricklayer, the President, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, or the Cabinet officer?

Mr. BOYLAN. I would do justice to the auctioneer too, but the President of the United States and the Supreme Court Justices and Cabinet officers and all these distinguished gentlemen are denied adequate compensation.

Mr. BLANTON. I wonder if the gentleman from New York is trying to argue that if you paid a Congressman $25,000 a year you would have better material from a certain district in New York? [Laughter.]

Mr. BOYLAN. I will say to the gentleman that New York has no apology to make for the material which it sends here. We have no apology to make, and if the gentleman wants to take that up we will be glad to take it up at any time at his convenience. We have no apology to make.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

Mr. WATKINS rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will first recognize the gentleman from Ohio and then the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, there is not anything in this question to get excited about from my viewpoint. It may be that these auctioneers have made a rather unreasonable figure for the services they have performed.

Let me present the question to you from the angle of any business man in the House or out and not from the angle of a lawyer. Let us suppose that the Government might have hired some auctioneer for $100 a day. I am going to make the illustration simpler by saying we have an automobile to sell. The Government hires me for $100 a day to go out and sell that automobile or other automobiles. There is not anything involved to my interest at all except to do the business and get back to my office. I will say that I sell that automobile for $75, because I have no interest in it, and I collect my daily wage. But let us see. Supposing the Government had hired me on a fee basis, my earnings to be contingent on the amount of money I have received for the Government. Is it not quite likely that I am going to exercise every single bit of my ability as a salesman to get the last nickel I can get for the article sold, and that the Government thereby will make money instead of losing money? In other words, suppose I was to have $5 for my day's work and went out and sold the article for $75. Or I have another kind of contract, a 10 per cent contract, and by exercising all my ingenuity I get $100 as the price of the automobile, and I have my $10 as my compensation instead of $5. You can probably hire men at $5, but I am getting $10, and I have made for the Government $90. But does the Government make money by paying me on a commission basis? Certainly. I submit the question to any man in the House who desires to do business.

If you go out and hire a man to sell things for you, you would rather have the best salesman there is to be obtained in the country on a commission basis, because the more he makes the more he is making for you.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. Yes; I will yield briefly, because I do not want to ask for more time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I yielded to the gentleman quite liberally.

Mr. BEGG. And I secured the gentleman more time. But I do not want to ask for more time myself.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I want to ask the gentleman this question: If at a sale where, for instance, 100,000 blankets are to be sold, 100,000 pairs of shoes are to be sold, 100,000 sheets are to be sold, 100,000 saddles are to be sold, and 100,000 sets of harness are to be sold, does the auctioneer know one-millionth as much about the value of those articles as does the big buyer who is there to buy them?

Mr. BEGG. My answer to the gentleman is simply an answer of practical business. I have had some experience in salesmanship all over the United States, and I will say to the gentleman that I would rather pay some man $10,000 to go out and sell a proposition for me than to pay some other men their expenses, because the man who can not sell is expensive and dear if you do not pay him anything, while the man who can sell can not be paid too much, if he is getting value out of the product he is selling.

I think it is questionable whether the gentleman from Kentucky is performing a great service for the country in bringing this proposition forward. If the Government has been cheated, then the gentleman is performing something for the Government, but if the Government has received more through the employment of these auctioneers on a percentage basis than it would have received through any other avenue open to it, then the gentleman is not performing a service, but he is only serving to excite the people about something that does not exist.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BEGG. I can not yield until I have finished.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Would not the goods sell themselves?

Mr. BEGG. We tried the question of hiring a man on a flat salary in 1919. At that time we hired a civilian at $25,000 a year. Now, then, the gentleman from Kentucky has some ground on which to stand if, by comparing the results of the sales under the private man at $25,000 a year, it is found that the Government received more per pair of shoes and more per blanket and more for everything else than it received under the auction commission kind of contract. If that is found to be true, then the gentleman has a point on which to argue.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman's time be extended two minutes, as I would like to ask him a question.

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to have two more minutes added, because I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. ALLGOOD. And, Mr. Chairman, I would ask to have it extended two minutes, because I want to ask him a question.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I will ask unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes, at the end of which I will quit, regardless of what happens.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BLANTON. Now, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Ohio has had a lot of experience in the commission business and he ought to know about it. Do I understand him to argue on this floor that the good people of the thirteenth district of Ohio would get better service if they paid the distinguished gentleman on a commission basis instead of paying him a salary?

Mr. BEGG. If they were sending me down here to sell articles I know they would, because I was elected on the record I made in salesmanship, and I sold it to my district on a commission basis. Now I will yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OLIVER].

Mr. OLIVER of New York. Is it not a fact that the advertisements in these cases were so badly worded and so badly placed—

Mr. BEGG. I am glad the gentleman has brought that out. But go ahead and finish your question.

Mr. OLIVER of New York (continuing). That it was impossible for anyone to say that a salesman even had a bare chance, and that runs to the general criticism made by the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. BEGG. I do not think there is a man in this House who doubts that the auctioneers paid for the advertising; that is in the testimony, and I do not want to waste time on it. However, the difference between a good piece of advertising and a poor piece of advertising is just the difference between money well spent and money thrown away, and I submit that if the Government had undertaken to pay for the advertising and allowed the auctioneers to spend the money recklessly, or if any of the Government officials, without being experts in advertising and not knowing the advertising which would bring results, had undertaken to spend the money they would have wasted it. Now, any man with ordinary experience in a selling way knows that that kind of advertising [indicating] costs money, and I am not afraid that these men collected too much money for advertising of that kind.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman says he was a salesman previous to coming to Congress, and most Members here know that I have had some little business experience. I will ask the gentleman whether he knows of anything that was ever sold at auction, or through any other method of selling, for less than 4.19 per cent?

Mr. BEGG. Why, God bless you, no.

Mr. SNYDER. And is it not the rule that the normal commission for selling goods is 5 per cent or more?

Mr. BEGG. Yes; and you have a low contract when you get a 5 per cent contract.

Mr. SNYDER. I know it is usually more than that.

Mr. BEGG. And the only reason the Government got a lower percentage than that was because they had volume.

Mr. SNYDER. And the reason these auctioneers got these large fees was because they at times sold large amounts of merchandise in a minute.

Mr. BEGG. Yes; and here is another angle to the proposition. If you got sick, whom would you send for—a horse doctor? If the Government had billions of dollars' worth of surplus blankets, where would they go to get some man to dispose of them? Would they go to New York or would they go out into Ohio and pick somebody that knew nothing at all about where to go to find customers? You in your particular line can go out in your particular line and find business, but I will say to you, seriously and with no egotism, that I can sign you up on a commission contract this afternoon to go and do work or I can put you on a flat salary to go out and do work, and in the next six months you can not earn enough to pay your carfare, and I can follow you, with the same territory, and I can get enough business to pay more than my congressional salary a whole year. Now, what is the difference? It is not because I am smarter than you, but because I have been trained in that special line and do not get excited when a man makes a few thousand dollars if he is a specialist, particularly if he is earning more for you than you are able to earn for yourself.

Mr. ALLGOOD. As I understand it, then, you are defending these auctioneers?

Mr. BEGG. I most certainly am, if they earned their money.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I would like to suggest that there is nothing before the House, and we would like to proceed to read the bill now for a few lines.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WATKINS] was on his feet seeking recognition.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oregon offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WATKINS: Page 5, line 12, after the word "economical," strike out the balance of the paragraph down to and including the figures "$50,000" in line 15.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment, and in connection with it I simply want to say that the surplus goods sold by these auctioneers amounted to more than $446,000,000 and that the cash received was about $54,000,000, or about 12 per cent of the value. If that is any indication of the service this Government is getting from these experts or from these salesmen, then deliver us from that kind of auctioneers and that type of salesmen, but I submit the amendment, Mr. Chairman, because economy is the watchword, and the present appropriation carries this work up to June 30, and after June 30 there will be nothing to sell, and consequently there will be no need of any appropriation for this purpose. The testimony before the House committee having this bill in charge discloses these facts; Major Hartman was on the stand, and Mr. ANTHONY said:

Mr. ANTHONY. I think you have stated that sufficiently. Last year the director of sales estimated that practically all of the surplus property in the War Department would be disposed of by the end of the fiscal year 1924, but it is evident, Major, that your office will be required for use for some time yet.

Major HARTMAN. Yes, sir; the Secretary of War has tentatively agreed or has tentatively expressed his intention of closing up the office of director of sales by June 30.

In view of that testimony, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I can see no need for this appropriation, and therefore I offer the amendment to strike out the sum of $50,000.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, in reference to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon, I think he is entirely mistaken in referring to this proviso as having anything to do with auctioneers. The limit of expenditures to $50,000 is confined to advertising only and has nothing to do with auctioneers.

Mr. WATKINS. I did not say it did.

Mr. ANTHONY. I understood the gentleman to say it did.

Mr. WATKINS. The gentleman misunderstood me. I simply said that if the service this Government was getting was indicated by the results shown from these sales, it was useless to expend anything, but that I wanted to direct my remarks to the fact that we did not need these salesmen after June 30, because we would have no goods to sell.

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman is entirely in error there. The evidence shows that approximately $80,000,000 worth of goods in the War Department are on hand for sale now and have been declared surplus; that there will be $20,000,000 to $40,000,000 more declared surplus, and this proviso would permit them to expend not more than $50,000 for advertising those goods, which is a very reasonable and a very moderate expenditure, and the Government should be allowed the benefit of such publicity.

Mr. WATKINS. Why spend anything if you can not get more than 12 per cent of their value. You can get that much without spending a cent for advertising.

Mr. ANTHONY. I will say to the gentleman that the goods on hand now are goods that are practically unsalable, and if the Government gets anything out of them, it is that much to the good. The War Department has been achieving marvelous results in selling a lot of property which has been considered dead property. The revenue this year is nearly $100,000,000 which the War Department has received from the sale of surplus property.

Mr. WATKINS. Are not those goods sold "as is" and "where is"?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think so; yes.

Mr. WATKINS. Nobody inspects them and the goods are bought sight unseen.

Mr. ANTHONY. No; I think I can say to the gentleman that these sales are very carefully conducted and that we are getting good value.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman from Kansas yield?

Mr. WATKINS. The testimony discloses the fact that there will be practically no further need for the salesmen or for advertising the sales, because there will be nothing to sell.

Mr. ANTHONY. We have $80,000,000 worth of property on hand that we want to sell.

Mr. WATKINS. Would not the appropriation which is available between now and June 30 take care of that?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think not. It will take more than a few months to sell all this property. It will probably take all of next year to sell it.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman from Kansas yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. Then the argument made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] falls to the ground, because he was upholding the amounts paid to the auctioneers on the ground that they had to do this advertising, and yet the gentleman from Kansas is providing the War Department with $50,000 more to advertise.

Mr. ANTHONY. I want to make this point clear to the gentleman from Texas: That we put a limit on this advertising because the testimony shows that the War Department expended $450,000 for newspaper and periodical advertising last year.

Mr. BLANTON. Then it was not the auctioneers who paid the cost of advertising.

Mr. ANTHONY. The auctioneers spent money for advertising, and so did the War Department, and we have limited the War Department to a reasonable amount.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. If the War Department has $80,000,000 surplus material, what is to prevent other departments going into the market and buying similar material at its market value?

Mr. ANTHONY. We have a joint board in which all the departments of the Government are represented, and they are keeping careful tab on all commodities desired for the Government use and to see whether it embraces any surplus property which the Government has and that it does not buy anything that is surplus. We are positive that that is now the business custom.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. If the amendment of the gentleman from Oregon should prevail, would it not have the effect that the entire $68,000 appropriated in the paragraph would be available instead of the $50,000 in the proviso? In other words, does not the amendment defeat its own purpose?

Mr. ANTHONY. No; I hardly think it would have that effect, because, as I explained the other day, the law passed in the nineties gives the War Department authority to expend from receipts received from property sold for the cost of selling, advertising, and so forth.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I ask this for information. The statement has been made here that some one testified before the subcommittee that he expected to complete the sales by July 1 and that the office of director of sales would be dispensed with. Is that true?

Mr. ANTHONY. The testimony shows that the office of director of sales will be abolished on July 1 and that thereafter the sales will be conducted by the regular sales division of the War Department.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. And you have $80,000,000 of surplus material undisposed of.

Mr. ANTHONY. Approximately.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. After having sold $446,000,000 at this tremendous expense that has been detailed by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON], that is an admission on the part of the Department of War that the process of selling during the last two or three years through the director of sales, with all the attendant extravagant expenses, was entirely unnecessary.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think the House ought to know just what has been accomplished by the War Department in the sale of surplus property.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman's time be extended five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee asks that the time of the gentleman from Kansas be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think the House ought to know the result of the sales of this surplus property. The figures show that since 1919 the cost value of all material sold was $2,679,000,000, and the War Department has received in cash $1,268,396,000; so it shows that these transactions have not only reached tremendous figures but that the net returns have run into an enormous amount of money, which has found its way into the United States Treasury. Notwithstanding the expense at which the sales have been conducted, the net returns to the Government have been large and we have been able to dispose of much property that otherwise the Government would have received little return for.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. I will.

Mr. BULWINKLE. How much in claims has the War Department paid back?

Mr. ANTHONY. There was no adjustment of claims in this matter. These sales were all for cash.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Are there not some claims pending in the War Department?

Mr. ANTHONY. The only knowledge I have of adjustments are those referred to by the gentleman from Virginia this morning in settlement of matters where cases are pending in the Court of Claims, and they have reached conclusions with these firms where certain offsets have been made in the settlements of claims by the Government against contractors.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Does the gentleman know how many bills there are introduced in this House at the present session for relief of these men whose property has been sold?

Mr. ANTHONY. I have no knowledge of that, and that would be a different matter from this, anyway.

Mr. WATKINS. Will the gentleman explain who does pay the cost of advertising where there is an expenditure of not over $50,000? The testimony on page 181 of the hearings has been read in part. The argument here is made by some that the Government pays it, while others claim that the auctioneer pays. What is the situation?

Mr. ANTHONY. The facts are the advertising is carried along on parallel lines. The auctioneers made expenditures for advertising which was included in the percentage that the War Department paid them. The War Department was carrying on another extensive and expensive advertising campaign. We want to limit the amount of money that the War Department will be allowed to expend for advertising in the future.

Mr. WATKINS. Will not the gentleman admit that the Government does pay for the advertising?

Mr. ANTHONY. The Government does not pay for all of it, both parties have been paying for the advertising.

Mr. STENGLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. STENGLE. I understood the gentleman to say that the Government paid last year $450,000 for advertising.

Mr. ANTHONY. They did.

Mr. STENGLE. Has the gentleman any way to inform the committee as to how much as an offset for that advertising was spent by the auctioneers, what percentage?

Mr. ANTHONY. We have no means of checking up the amount of money spent by the auctioneers.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. I have before me here figures and percentages of the cost of advertising to the Government to sell that $1,200,000,000 worth of property of which the gentleman has spoken, and the cost of advertising is given here as six-tenths of 1 per cent. The auctioneer's commission, plus the advertising that he did, was 1.59 per cent, and the personal and other expenses of handling this merchandise and the overhead was 2 per cent, or a total cost of 4.19 per cent on a sale of all the merchandise. Does not the gentleman think that was very cheaply done?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. QUIN. Mr. Chairman, I have not consumed any time on this Navy legislation or this Army legislation, but the time has arrived when I feel that I must say something. I am surprised that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] has the gall to get up before the House of Representatives and not only condone but actually recommend this raid upon the United States Treasury through the War Department to pay these auctioneers these enormous sums of money. Every man in the House knows that when the Congress of the United States authorized these sales of the vast supplies that the Government had on hand at the end of this war, at no time was there a Member on this floor, unless it was the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG], who thought that the Congress of the United States was authorizing anybody in the War Department to rob the taxpayers of this country. [Applause.] Yet, in recommending himself as a salesman, he actually had the temerity to tell this House that these men who received all the way up to as high as $25,000 a day each, and that only a portion of a day, for selling goods that we had gone out through bond issues to get, raking almost blood money from the taxpayers of this country, were not paid too much. Nobody ever believed that the money of the taxpayers would be squandered in any such manner as that. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] has related here what they have been doing. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WAINWRIGHT], although I do not know what he said, seems to think that it was all right, and not knowing who is responsible for it, it occurs to me that this House ought to have an investigating inquiry into the responsible heads who authorized any such outrageous conduct on the part of the Director of Sales or anybody else.

My judgment is that the taxpayers of the United States, not knowing what is going on here, who read the speech that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] made, would think that the Congress of the United States thinks it is all right and honorable to go out and rob the taxpayers of this Republic.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I ask my colleague on the Committee on Military Affairs if he is not going a little bit strong in making this attack upon a system inaugurated by that splendid patriot, Secretary Baker.

Mr. QUIN. I do not have much regard for Secretary Baker's business ability, but I do not think that he ever engaged in any kind of thievery. Tell me that anybody in the War Department has authorized some flannel-mouthed auctioneer to get $25,000 for six hours' work—

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. QUIN. I have not the time.

I contend that any officer of the Government who would go out and take the people's money at the rate of $25,000 a day and give to it some auctioneer for selling what the taxpayers bought with hard labor is guilty of embezzlement of power and a betrayal of trust, and it is time for the Congress of the United States to recognize the fact that the people of this country who paid the money into the Treasury ought in some regard to have the respect of the lawmaking body.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. QUIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. QUIN. Is it possible that anyone would condone this kind of conduct that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] says is all right? What will the people who actually go out and toil say? Do you know that there are people in the United States who start early in the morning and work all day long for a dollar and a dollar and a quarter? Do you know, sir, that there are millions of people engaged in farming in this country, and that the statistics of this Government show that they each do not clear 75 cents a day? Yet the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] wants that class of people, who are in large measure bearing the great burden of taxation in this country, to understand that it is perfectly honest and legitimate for some person down here in the War Department to rob them by giving some fellow standing up on a box selling goods $25,000 a day for doing it. To give an auctioneer $4,800 a day is cheap, so he thinks. Yet the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] wants his constituents and the honest American people to think that it is all right to rob these people who work so hard to earn this money and with it pay some auctioneer in some city of this country these exorbitant sums. Does he think it is honest and right to rob this mass of the people who were called upon to buy Liberty bonds, who had speeches made at them from pulpits and schoolhouses, from every kind of platform, begging them to buy bonds in order that we might conduct this war against the ignoble Huns across the sea? Is it right for him now to say that it is patriotic to take that money so raised away from these people in such outrageous manner as that described here by the gentleman from Kentucky? [Applause.]

And on top of this these auctioneers, whom the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] recommends so highly, who only secured out of every 100 cents' worth of property 12 cents, he holds up the advertisement as he did when he knows the hearings show that every dollar of that money came out of the Treasury of the United States to pay for those advertisements, and the advertisements showed neither the place nor the hour of sale, so only a few could be there to bid. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to withdraw my amendment and substitute another amendment for it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oregon asks unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment that is pending and substitute one which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. WATKINS: Page 5, line 15, after the word "exceed," strike out "50,000" and insert "$5,000."

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit this observation, that in view of the fact that the auctioneers pay for most of this advertising and in view of the fact that they only get 12 per cent of the value of the goods, and, further, in view of the fact they have only $82,000,000 to sell, I feel that $45,000 will be saved to the Government.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, if the purpose of the committee is absolutely to tie the hands of the War Department and to prevent the sale of this property, that will be a good amendment to adopt.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute: Strike out "$5,000" and make it "$10,000."

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman send up his amendment?

Mr. BLANTON. It is not necessary to send it up.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Texas.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLANTON to the amendment offered by Mr. WATKINS: Strike out "$5,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$10,000."

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I will say to my friend from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] that I have helped him along to-day, as I have not taken up very much time. I merely want to say to my friend from Mississippi [Mr. QUIN] that he can not blame members of the same fraternity for defending each other. Commission men always defend commission men, and we must not blame our friend from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] at all. It is a question of loyalty to their fraternity.

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BLANTON. In a moment.

Mr. BEGG. I would like to ask that question right here.

Mr. BLANTON. In just a minute. I am going to tell you something about the surplus-property business that is almost as important as this unconscionable payment to auctioneers. There was something said in the press a year or so ago about there being an enormous number of Cadillac cars stored over here at Camp Holabird. I could not believe it, and I wanted to find out, so I got in my car, and, while I hate to go through Baltimore, I did have to go through there to get to Camp Holabird.

I went over there and found a splendid man in charge of Holabird; there is no doubt about that. He was just as nice as any man could be, so far as not letting you get in any of his warehouses was concerned, but he would tell you all you wanted to know in his office. He did not have the reported number of Cadillac cars, for he admitted he did not have them. He said that the newspapers had made a mistake; that they did have the reported number of motor vehicles, but they were not Cadillacs, as only a nominal amount of them were Cadillac cars, he advising me that most of such motor vehicles were motor cycles. Of course, I took his word for it, as he would not let me in the warehouses.

But there have been thousands of new cars all over the United States just after the war which should have been sold to the public, but which were held out in the weather and permitted to waste and not sold. I saw them down in the fields near San Antonio, Tex., out in the mud for two years right after the war, and among them there were new cars—Cadillacs, if you please—very fine cars, not a scratch on them and had never been used. When I asked why they did not sell them they said that the War Department would not authorize it. Do you know why? The War Department, as sure as you are sitting in these seats, made a contract with the automobile manufacturers that they would not sell them until they had to sell them as second-hand, damaged machines.

Mr. BEGG. A Democratic War Department?

Mr. BLANTON. The difference between the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] and myself is this: That he searches only for a Democratic goat, but when I find something wrong going on in the Government I do not stop to ask who is in charge—whether he is a Democrat or a Republican—but I go after it and try to clean it up, whether it is Democratic or Republican.

Mr. BEGG. This was a Democrat who made that contract? Mr. BLANTON. No; it was probably made by some Republican officer in the War Department.

Mr. BEGG. A Democrat?

Mr. BLANTON. It was under Democratic administration, yes.

Mr. BEGG. Yes; surely.

Mr. BLANTON. But high Army officers were in charge of the various bureaus there and it is continued here under a Republican administration. Many of these high Army officers in charge were Republicans.

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I would gladly, but I want some of my five minutes myself. [Laughter.] Oh, this is the old, old song, "We are just carrying on what we found." We Democrats carried on what we found when we took charge of the existing administration. It seems, since you have been in charge, as if somebody did not have enough initiative of their own to stop these practices.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; I must yield to my colleague.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Does not my friend think former Secretary of the Interior Fall would have been better off financially and politically if he had been an auctioneer rather than a member of the Cabinet?

Mr. BLANTON. Well, it seems lately as though a good many have been getting what they wanted whether Secretary of the Interior or auctioneers.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Or Secretary of the Treasury under a Democratic administration?

Mr. BLANTON. Not while he was a Democratic official. And I want to say this—and I am not afraid to say it—let not the gentleman imagine that Mr. McAdoo will be the nominee of the Democratic Party. [Applause.]

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I agree with the gentleman, and I hope he will not be.

Mr. BLANTON. Because he has not any show on earth, and I am not afraid to say it. The Democrats are not going to nominate him, or anyone else who is on the pay roll of men who bribe public officials. But he is honest. He has never taken a dollar that has been a dishonest dollar when he was a public official. It has been in business, private business, since he went out of office, and even then I do not approve of it.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. LEHLBACH). The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WATKINS].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. WATKINS. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 42, noes 48.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oregon offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WATKINS: At the end of line 15, page 5, insert the following: "Provided further, That no auctioneer shall be paid more than $100 per day out of any money appropriated by this act for services rendered."

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I make a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. It is too late, because an amendment has been offered by the gentleman from New York.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment has not been offered to the Chair and has not been read by the Clerk. What is the point of order of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The point of order is that the amendment is legislation and not germane to the paragraph.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman can not discuss the point of order, because the amendment has not been read yet.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I thought the gentleman said it came too late.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say, in addition to that, that the paragraph deals with the sale of property by the War Department. The paragraph is labeled "Contingencies of the Army"—contingent expenses. This is simply a limitation on the compensation of the man who is engaged to conduct the sale. The proviso reads: "Provided further, That the amount expended or obligated for advertising sales of surplus War Department property during the fiscal year 1925 shall not exceed $50,000." The mere reading of that proviso would indicate that the amendment is not only germane but in order as a limitation.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, in this paragraph an appropriation is made for the purpose of disposing of certain property of the War Department. That is the object of this appropriation. It is the object of the limitation with reference to advertising. Now, if Congress can make an appropriation of so much money for the purpose of disposing of property, certainly the House has at the same time the right to say that no more than a certain amount of the sum appropriated shall be expended for a particular purpose in the disposition of that property. It seems to me, under the circumstances, that it is clearly within the power of the House, in the process of making the appropriation, to provide that only so much shall be paid to an auctioneer or only so much shall be paid for advertisements.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. LEHLBACH). The Chair is ready to rule. The language of the amendment is—Provided further, That no auctioneer shall be paid more than $100 per day out of any money appropriated by this act for services rendered.

This clearly is not a limitation on the appropriation, because it simply fixes the pay that the auctioneer shall receive at not more than $100 a day. It does not limit the expenditure of the $50,000 appropriated; but on the other hand, inasmuch as it limits the pay of the auctioneer, it comes under a section of the Holman rule, and is in order; and therefore the point of order is overruled.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I maintain that it is not germane to the paragraph, because none of this money appropriated in the paragraph is to be used for the purpose mentioned.

The CHAIRMAN. The money is appropriated by this paragraph to further sales of material, as is shown by the limitations contained in the proviso. It pertains to the salaries of civilian employees connected with the sale of war supplies, and also limits the sum to be obligated for advertising sales; so that it is germane, in the judgment of the Chair.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland offers an amendment to the amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HILL of Maryland to the amendment offered by Mr. WATKINS: Strike out "$100 per day" and insert "no more than was paid under the authority of the Secretary of War in the year 1918, 1919, or 1920."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I want to oppose the original amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, there has been a lot of "non-serious" conversation this afternoon, but to me this is serious. I do not believe that any of you gentlemen on this side believe that I want to waste Government money. Now, if the gentleman's amendment is adopted limiting the pay of the auctioneer to $100 a day, do you know what you are doing? You are compelling the Government to sell this stock by some other method than by the use of an experienced auctioneer. There is no argument about that at all.

As I said a minute ago in my remarks—and I meant it—there was not any partisanship, because if I wanted to be partisan I could make some nasty remarks, but I believe this is business. The only way to tell whether we are paying too much is to compare what we received for the same articles under a civilian private salesman at $25,000 a year, and I will submit to you that with some millions of dollars worth of sales under the private system of salesmanship we did not realize 8 cents on the dollar of the original cost. Now, I do not know whether we have realized too little or not, but I do know as a business man that the only kind of a contract I would sign if I owned the property would be a percentage contract, if I were going to sell on the auction block. I know that everybody else who would do business would do it that way. It is a question we can not control. I am sorry, and you are sorry, we have this property, and we are all anxious to get the most out of it, but I do not believe the time has arrived in this country when every man connected with the Government is a crook, and I do not believe the time has arrived when every man in the public service needs to be watched and restricted for fear he will steal the Treasury. There are some honorable men in the War Department, and I believe they are just as anxious to salvage every dollar's worth of value out of this as we are. If they can sell these supplies in the most profitable way, let us not handicap them by saying, "You must hire a man by the day at $100."

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Maryland has offered an amendment which, in effect, provides that no greater sum shall be paid to an auctioneer for his service than was paid during the years 1918, 1919, and 1920. Of course, it is evident to everyone as to what actuated the gentleman from Maryland in offering that amendment to the amendment.

I am a partisan Democrat. I admire a man who believes in the principles of the Republican Party and who stands up for them and defends them; likewise I admire a Democrat who believes in the Democratic principles. But, gentlemen, I have never been enough of a partisan to display it upon the floor of this House on a proposition which involves thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars of the money of the American people. Nor can I understand the viewpoint of anyone, be he Democrat or Republican, who would seek to play with a serious proposition like this for partisan advantage.

The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] in his statement the other day, when he presented this matter and when he rendered such a great service to the American people by presenting it, said at the outset that he was not actuated by any purpose to gain a partisan or political advantage, and I submit that the gentleman from Kentucky in his position to-day has given no cause to those gentlemen who seek to make something political or partisan out of it. It is no excuse or defense for this administration in its misuse of public funds to say that it was following the precedent set by previous administrations, even if such be a fact. In the first place, no sale took place in 1918, if the Director of Sales is to be believed, and I have examined his statement, and it has been shown to the gentleman from Maryland. The armistice was not signed until November 11, 1918, and no sales were made in that year, according to the report of the Director of Sales.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to the gentleman that the statement I made this morning was to the effect that the sales made in 1918 were immediately after the armistice, and I gave a list of the sales.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I have examined the statement submitted by the gentleman from Kentucky, which came from the Director of Sales, and I am positive there is not a sale shown upon that paper prior to August, 1919, save possibly two or three very small sales a month or so before. That statement was submitted by the Director of Sales, and yet the gentleman from Maryland, upon his responsibility as a Representative—and he has repeated it—has stated that sales took place in 1918.

Now, gentlemen, why did he make that statement? What purpose did the gentleman have in making the statement? This is not a partisan matter, and I hope Representatives here are willing to rise above partisanship and that Republicans and Democrats alike will attempt to protect the American people and their Treasury in this matter. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes more.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object—I call the attention of the committee to the fact that it is now nearly half past 4 o'clock and we have read but three pages of this bill. I think every gentleman will agree with me that it is of the utmost importance that we should get rid of at least two appropriation bills this week in order that we may not give another body an opportunity to say it has not the time to act upon them in time to adjourn in the first week of June. I do not believe there is a gentleman present who does not want to adjourn early in June. The public business demands action, and I certainly hope we may proceed as quickly as possible in the consideration of this bill.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, further reserving the right to object, I am not one who wants to adjourn early in June.

I think it is more important to the American people that this legislation have due consideration as we go along rather than to hasten its consideration in order that we may get out of here in time to take part in political campaigns during the summer.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to proceed for three additional minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I will yield for a brief question.

Mr. BEGG. I agree with the gentleman's sentiment absolutely. The thought I have in mind is that we do not want to kill any of the Government's methods for getting the most out of these goods. If the auctioneers have been getting too much, instead of killing the legislation would it not be better to limit the percentage to be paid to the auctioneers? I would like to have the gentleman's opinion of that proposition.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I would be glad to see anything adopted which would prevent the payment of any such outrageous fees as have been paid to auctioneers during the past few years.

Mr. BEGG. I would probably agree with the gentleman.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Now, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL] has offered an amendment which proposes to make the legal rate for auctioneers that which was paid during the Democratic administration, and he states that that is the rate which prevails now. So I take it the gentleman from Maryland, representing the city from which one of these favored auctioneers comes, is prepared to indorse and approve the amounts paid to these auctioneers during the past few years. What are the facts? The facts are that under the Democratic administration there was something like $6,000,000 received from the sale of surplus property, whereas under the present administration there has been something like $68,000,000 received from such sales. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] made the statement, and it has not been contradicted so far as I know, that under the Democratic administration the sales were in comparatively small amounts, while all the big sales, the sales in large bulk and large quantities, have taken place under the present administration. But, gentlemen, if the auctioneers were paid too much under the Democratic administration it was wrong, and we ought not to commend or condone it now. If they are paid too much under the present administration, and I think all but one or two gentlemen upon this floor will concede that, then we ought not to condone it, whether we be Republicans or Democrats. You gentlemen upon this side of the Chamber, I submit, can not justify the acts of the present administration by the claim that an excessive amount was paid under a previous administration, even if such be a fact. [Applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I do not know, and I do not suppose anyone here knows, whether the policy pursued either by the present administration or the last administration is justified in the matter of sales, but there is one thing certain, we are not going to be able to find out whether it was justified or not by the adoption of the amendment that is pending. There is not a man here who can tell whether the amendment should be adopted or not. We can not regulate intelligently the question of charges without some investigation, and this bill is not the place to try that. This amendment only embarrasses the situation and does not clarify it. There is not a man here more bitterly opposed to any extravagance or any unjustifiable waste than I am, I do not care by whom it is committed, and I have no sort of defense to make, no matter what the administration is or who the man in the administration is, of any act that ought not to be performed, but let us show some sense and let us exercise some judgment.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. Does not the gentleman think that $50,000 is too much to pay for this service?

Mr. MADDEN. I do not know. I have not the slightest idea and neither has anybody else, but I will tell you how we ought to get at it. I have a suggestion to make. This matter ought to be legislated upon, if it is going to be regulated, and this bill is not the place for such legislation. We have a Military Affairs Committee that has jurisdiction over this subject. The whole matter ought to be referred to that committee. They ought to send for persons, for papers, and for everything connected with the case, and get at all the facts, whatever they may be, and then present a bill to this House that will remedy the evil, if there is one. Do not let us try to assume we are remedying any evil by the adoption of this amendment. We are not, and the amendment ought not to be adopted.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, in view of the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDOEN], with which I entirely agree, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my substitute to the amendment, and I hope the amendment itself will be withdrawn by the gentleman on the other side of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the substitute offered by the gentleman from Maryland to the amendment is withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon.

The amendment was again reported.

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the committee divided and there were—ayes 59, noes 53.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers

Mr. ANTHONY and Mr. WATKINS.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 66, noes 54.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

GENERAL STAFF CORPS.

CONTINGENCIES, MILITARY INTELLIGENCE DIVISION.

For contingent expenses of the Military Intelligence Division, General Staff Corps, and of the military attachés at the United States embassies and legations abroad, including the purchase of law books, professional books of reference, and subscriptions to newspapers and periodicals; for cost of special instruction at home and abroad, and in maintenance of students and attachés; for the hire of interpreters, special agents, and guides, and for such other purposes as the Secretary of War may deem proper, including $5,000 for the actual and necessary expenses of officers of the Army on duty abroad for the purpose of observing operations of armies of foreign states at war, to be paid upon certificates of the Secretary of War that the expenditures were necessary for obtaining military information, $65,500, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War: Provided, That section 3648, Revised Statutes, shall apply neither to subscriptions for foreign and professional newspapers and periodicals nor to other payments made from this appropriation in compliance with the laws of foreign countries under which the military attachés are required to operate.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. TILSON). The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. LAGUARDIA offers the following amendment: Page 6, line 11, after the word "operate," insert: "Provided, That no funds herein appropriated shall be expended for the pay, allowance, or expense of any retired officer of the United States Army assigned to duty as a military attaché at any United States embassy or legation abroad."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I want to call the committee's attention to the fact that there are no duties in the Army in peace time more important than the duties of a military attaché assigned to a foreign country, and we should send keen, intelligent officers, the best that the Army can produce, to perform such duties. Recently it has been the custom for the War Department to send retired officers to perform these duties at some of the capitals. They go there for the social attraction offered by the European capitals and are of little, if any, military value.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Certainly.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman must know that the War Department does not send them. They are sent by the State Department.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The military attachés?

Mr. MADDEN. Certainly.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Oh, no; the gentleman is in error. They are sent by the War Department. They are simply attached to the embassies or legations to give them a diplomatic status in a foreign country, but they are selected by the War Department; they report to the War Department, and their duties are solely military or naval. Let me give you an instance. We have at Paris a gentleman who is a resident of Paris, a retired officer, an elderly man, who has not the keen interest a younger and more active man may have and is of no value to us as a military attaché except for his social activities he promotes from time to time.

Mr. BACON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. BACON. Does the gentleman know that this man served on the staff of Marshal Foch during the war?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. How old was he then?

Mr. BACON. I have no means of knowing his age.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. How old is he now? He is a retired officer and ought to be kept on the retired list.

Mr. BACON. He did not retire because of age.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. What did he retire for?

Mr. BACON. Because he wanted to. He retired before the World War and was called back into active service when the war broke out.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Oh, the gentleman is in error. The gentleman ought to understand the duties of a military attaché and know that he should be a staff officer or officer of the line and recently in active service with the prospect of returning to troops in order to be of real service as a military observer in a foreign country.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I will.

Mr. McKENZIE. What is the grade of this particular officer that the gentleman refers to?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. He is a colonel.

Mr. McKENZIE. The gentleman is familiar with the fact that when we wrote what is known as the Army reorganization bill we abolished what is known as the Mex-colonel and prohibited the taking of a young officer and boosting him a grade so as to give him a position as a foreign attaché, and put it on the ground that if a colonel was necessary they should take a colonel and put him over there.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. The World War has taught us that if you have a colonel worth anything you can not have a superannuated old man, because he is no good. If you want simply an ornament for a 5-o'clock tea, that is another thing.

Mr. McKENZIE. The gentleman would not assume to say that a second lieutenant given a higher grade, given a boost and made a colonel, would be in any better position?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. No; but let us not go to extremes. I would not take a shave tail out of West Point, and I would not take an old retired officer.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman want to dictate the kind of a man who should be selected?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. If a man is retired from the Army, he should remain retired.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman from New York yield?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Assuming that an officer in the World War lost his arm in action, he would become incapacitated for active duty and be put on the retired list. Does the gentleman think that because of that casualty the officer would not be desirable as a military attaché?

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Oh, no; but we have not an officer in that position.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. But the gentleman is trying to legislate for all conditions.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I am trying to legislate to prevent the conditions we have in France. I say we ought to have in France, Germany, Italy, and Japan officers who are alert, competent, young, and intelligent—able Army officers of this country.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the amendment on the ground that it is legislation on an appropriation bill and not germane to the subject matter.

The CHAIRMAN. No; the point of order was reserved. The Chair thinks this is a limitation on the qualifications of the person receiving the appointment and therefore the Chair overrules the point of order. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

ARMY WAR COLLEGE.

For expenses of the Army War College, being for the purchase of the necessary special stationery; textbooks, books of reference, scientific and professional papers and periodicals; maps; police utensils; employment of temporary, technical, or special services, and expenses of special lecturers; for the pay of employees; and for all other absolutely necessary expenses, $60,540.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move a pro forma amendment to strike out the paragraph. I want to use this minute to call the attention of Members to a provision here that possibly might escape attention. It is on line 11, page 7, "Expenses of special lecturers." Some of you may not know that some of the finest lecturers in the United States from the best universities come periodically to the War College and deliver lectures, and it is worth the time of any Member to go down there and hear them. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE.

Salaries: For personal services in the District of Columbia in accordance with "The classification act of 1923," $1,261,340; all employees provided for by this paragraph for The Adjutant General's office of the War Department shall be exclusively engaged on work of that office.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. ANTHONY: Page 8, line 15, strike out the figures $1,261,340, and insert in lieu thereof $1,331,340.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, when the bill was originally considered by the subcommittee we decided that the cut made in the force of The Adjutant General's office was too severe, and we agreed at that time that we would grant an increase, but the increase does not show in the bill, and so I have offered this amendment at this time.

Briefly, the Budget recommended about 100 clerks over what they have now. That is the one office in the War Department whose work ought to be right up to the minute, and the work is right up to the minute now. We believe that by permitting this increase, which is just half what The Adjutant General wants, the work will be kept up to date.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. BEGG. Is the work any heavier in The Adjutant General's department this year than it was last year?

Mr. ANTHONY. No. We are acting upon the theory that it will not be quite as heavy.

Mr. BEGG. Then what is the idea of increasing it about $250,000? Last year we gave them $1,145,330, and this year you are giving them under this amendment one million three hundred thousand and odd dollars.

Mr. ANTHONY. This year's appropriation, as the gentleman knows, carries an increase due to the reclassification law and the bonus as well, which accounts for the difference in the amount.

Mr. BARBOUR. If the adjusted compensation act goes into effect it will mean a whole lot more work for The Adjutant General's office.

Mr. ANTHONY. Oh, it will strain every energy they have to get away with it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I want to add just a word in support of the amendment proposed by the chairman of the committee by saying that the figures which appear on the text of the bill are the result of a mistake. The committee was unanimous on the opinion that in order to keep approximately near the same number of clerks that The Adjutant General now has under the new classification established, it was necessary to increase the amount of money, and, therefore, I wish to add my word in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. LEHRACH having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5073) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes, and had further insisted upon its amendment to the amendment of the House and ordered that Mr. SMOOT, Mr. CURTIS, and Mr. HARRIS act as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 195.

Whereas one Clarence C. Chase is, and for more than a year last past has been, a civil officer of the United States, to wit, the collector of customs at the port of El Paso, Tex.; and

Whereas in the prosecution of an inquiry by the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys of the Senate under Senate Resolution 147 it became necessary to inquire into the source from which one A. B. Fall, late Secretary of the Interior, secured large sums of money at or about the time or shortly after he entered upon negotiations resulting in the execution of leases or contracts relating to the naval oil reserves; and

Whereas it appears from the testimony taken and proceedings had before the said committee that the said Clarence C. Chase entered into a conspiracy with the said A. B. Fall to mislead and deceive the said committee concerning the source of such moneys, and that pursuant to such conspiracy the said Clarence C. Chase on or about the 29th day of November, 1923, endeavored to induce one Price McKinney to represent to and testify before the said committee that he had loaned to the said Fall at or about the time hereinbefore mentioned the sum of $100,000; and

Whereas the said Clarence C. Chase well knew that the said Price McKinney had made no such loan to the said Fall; and

Whereas the said Clarence C. Chase being, on the 24th day of March, 1924, called before the said committee and interrogated concerning the matters herein referred to by the said committee, declined and refused to answer any questions in relation to the same upon the ground that his answers might tend to incriminate him; Now therefore be it

Resolved, That a copy of the testimony adduced and the proceedings had before the said Committee on Public Lands and Surveys under Senate Resolution 147 be, with a copy of this resolution, transmitted to the House of Representatives for such proceedings against the said Clarence C. Chase as may be appropriate.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of officers: For pay of officers of the line and staff, $30,338,000: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to Maj. Charles C. Cresson, United States Army.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I will state that there is a tentative agreement between myself and the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. ANTHONY, that this item was to go over until we got to the next page, and that we would then treat this with another item like it together.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think it would save a great deal of time in debate if the two items in respect to Major Cresson and Colonel Hunt could be considered at one and the same time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. But voted on separately.

Mr. ANTHONY. Voted on separately, but debated at the same time, and if I may be permitted to do so now, I ask unanimous consent that that be done.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. WURZBACH. I think it is fully understood that there are different issues involved in these two cases. I would prefer to take up the case of Major Cresson first. At the same time I do not want to delay or fail to help in the expedition of this bill by objecting.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. As I understand the suggestion of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY], it would not prevent the Cresson case from coming up first.

Mr. ANTHONY. As suggested, we will vote first on the case of Major Cresson, because his name appears first in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair understand the suggestion of the gentleman from Kansas, it is that it all be read as one paragraph, down to line 12 on page 10?

Mr. REECE. I object to this being read as one paragraph.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I do not think we ought to take this up this afternoon. We have done a good day's work. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. It was understood by both gentlemen that this matter was going to come up to-morrow.

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman withhold his point until we can come to some agreement?

Mr. BLANTON. Certainly.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas now on the floor offered an amendment and was recognized by the Chair, as he understood.

The CHAIRMAN. No; the Chair did not recognize the gentleman until he found out whether the gentleman in charge of the bill or the ranking minority member wanted to be recognized.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I do not want to lose my opportunity to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will lose none of his parliamentary rights.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. My amendment does not relate to this particular matter at all.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, the first paragraph on page 9 has been read. I desire to make the point of order on the proviso of that paragraph.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that his point of order comes too late.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Oh, no. There has been no argument on the paragraph.

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I desire to offer.

The CHAIRMAN. That seems to be inconsequential, whether the point of order is made against it or not. It is evidently not subject to the point of order.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I have an amendment which the Clerk has at the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. There are other amendments. Did the gentleman from Kansas and the gentleman from Kentucky agree?

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, before proceeding with the consideration of the amendment I ask unanimous consent that when the items in reference to Major Cresson and Colonel Hunt are reached that they may be debated at the same time to-morrow.

The CHAIRMAN. One item has been reached and read.

Mr. ANTHONY. I ask unanimous consent that debate in reference to Major Cresson be postponed until we reach the item in reference to Colonel Hunt to-morrow, at which time the debate may be at such length as may be agreed upon at that time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. And consideration.

Mr. ANTHONY. And consideration.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object. I do not think it is fair to Major Cresson that this unanimous-consent request be permitted to go through. I do not want to be captious in any sense of the word about it, but it is a very serious proposition involved here, and one that may have a far-reaching effect. Major Cresson's honor and good name are at stake and I do not think any of the rights he may have should be overlooked here, and I must object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry?

Mr. ANTHONY. I have not the floor.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I understand there was an informal agreement reached that those two items should be taken together and half of the time should be controlled on one side and half on the other.

Mr. ANTHONY. It is my purpose to ask that there be two hours' debate, one hour to be controlled by the gentleman from Kentucky and one by myself.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. My question is, whether in view of the fact that objection has been interposed we can not divide in two the agreed period of two hours, and have one half devoted exclusively to the Cresson case and the other half to the Hunt case, and have the two issues voted upon separately.

Mr. ANTHONY. And within the hour the Cresson case be disposed of before taking up the other?

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I think it would be acceptable to Members of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. REECE. That is all right. I do not wish to be understood as being in any wise prejudiced against the Hunt case.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [Cries of "Regular order"!] The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 9, line 4, after the figures insert, "Provided, That no part of the funds appropriated by this act shall be utilized for the recruiting or enlisting of boys under the age of 21 years without the written consent of the parent or guardian, if any, of such boys.

Mr. ANTHONY. I want to make the point of order on that amendment on the ground that it is new legislation which changes existing legislation.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Does the gentleman want to move to rise?

Mr. ANTHONY. If the gentleman will let it go over until to-morrow I will move to rise.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Unless the Chair wants to rule now.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman want to be heard on the question?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Before the Chair rules.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kansas wish to be heard?

Mr. ANTHONY. On the point of order, no, I do not, except to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that the ages of enlistment are fixed by existing legislation in reference to minors, and this changes existing law with reference to such enlistments.

Mr. BLANTON. There was such a provision carried in the present bill. This will set aside and change the substantive law.

Mr. ANTHONY. That is law for one year only.

Mr. BLANTON. It is the law now; it is the law until July 1.

Mr. CRAMTON. While it is the law until July 1 it is not one minute after July 1, and this bill has nothing to do with the present time. It has to do with the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Mr. BLANTON. The Chair last year held that was in order.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on the point of order if the Chair proposes to rule on it to-night.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will rule to-night if the committee wishes the Chair so to rule.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, if the Chair wishes to rule to-night I am perfectly willing to have him do so, or I would be satisfied to have the Chair rule to-morrow morning.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is willing to do that, with the assent of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. TILSON, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having under consideration the bill (H. R. 7877) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. JOST, for 10 days, on account of important business.

To Mr. ACKERMAN, for three days, on account of important business.

To Mr. KINDRED, for two weeks, on account of illness in his family.

FIRST DEFICIENCY BILL, 1924.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 7449, the first deficiency bill for 1924, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 7449, the deficiency bill, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, there is a piece of legislation in that bill providing altogether for $200,000 for certain tracts of park land here in the District. That is a matter that is now pending before the Committee on the District of Columbia, and I have some data against that provision, to which, I believe, if understood by the Members of the House, they would never agree. I do not believe that the Senate should put such legislative matters on a deficiency bill.

Mr. MADDEN. If the gentleman will listen to me for a moment, I will say that if we could reach an agreement on that matter in conference it would not cost the Government any money. If we can not, we will bring it back.

Mr. BLANTON. Then I withdraw my reservation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Madden]?

There was no objection; and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. MADDEN, Mr. ANTHONY, and Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the Interior Department appropriation bill, H. R. 5078, and ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that the statement accompanying the conference report on the Interior Department appropriation bill be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement.

The statement accompanying the conference report was read. The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5078) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17 and 19.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 15, 18, and 39, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$150,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following: "$400,000 of which amount $245,000 shall be used for drainage purposes, but only after execution by the Truckee-Carson irrigation district of an appropriate reimbursement contract satisfactory in form to the Secretary of the Interior, and after confirmation of such contract by decree of a court of competent jurisdiction and final decision on all appeals from such decree"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree on the amendment of the Senate numbered 47.

LOUIS C. CRAMTON,
FRANK MURPHY,
C. D. CARTER,

Managers on the part of the House.

REED SMOOT,
CHARLES CURTIS,
WM. J. HARRIS,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5078) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year 1925 submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

On Nos. 15 and 16, relating to irrigation systems on the Flat-head Indian Reservation, Mont.: Appropriates $150,000, instead of $300,000, as proposed by the Senate, and $50,000, as proposed by the House, and makes the appropriation available for "continuing construction," as proposed by the Senate, instead of confining it to "maintenance and operation," as proposed by the House.

On No. 17: Appropriates $15,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $30,000, as proposed by the Senate, for maintenance and operation of irrigation systems on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.

On Nos. 18 and 19, relating to irrigation systems on the Black-foot Indian Reservation, Mont.: Appropriates $20,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $60,000, as proposed by the Senate, and makes the appropriation available for "continuing construction," as proposed by the Senate, instead of confining it to "maintenance and operation," as proposed by the House.

On Nos. 38 and 39, relating to the Newlands irrigation project, Nevada: Appropriates $400,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $155,000, as proposed by the House, and inserts a substitute for the language proposed by the Senate requiring a contract with the water users binding them to reimburse the Federal Government for the cost of the drainage, which substitute provides that the money for drainage shall not be used until the irrigation district shall have executed a satisfactory reimbursement contract and the same shall have been confirmed by decree of a court of competent jurisdiction and final decision on all appeals from such decree shall have been rendered.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree upon the amendment of the Senate No. 47, relating to the Bright Angel toll road and trail in the Grand Canyon National Park.

LOUIS C. CRAMTON,
FRANK MURPHY,
C. D. CARTER,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, this report disposes, first, of the amendments in dispute with reference to certain Indian irrigation projects in Montana, on the Fort Peck, Flathead, and Blackfeet Reservations. In connection with these three items I may say that the total House figures for the three were $85,000, being restricted to operation and maintenance. The Senate figures were $390,000, of which $360,000 was for the Flathead Reservation.

On this matter, when it was pending in the House last, before we went into conference, the gentlemen from Montana [Mr. EVANS and Mr. LEAVITT] presented arguments in behalf of an increase of the appropriations for construction, particularly upon the Flathead Reservation. Their arguments were such that, although the conferees were opposed to an increase for that purpose, and I presented such arguments as I could, the House barely sustained us at that time by a vote of 33 to 31.

Mr. CARTER. And the motion of the gentlemen from Montana was to concur in the Senate amendment, which was $300,000, twice as much as that to which we had agreed.

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes. In other words, we barely, by a vote of 33 to 31, escaped instruction to agree to $300,000. In view of that and in view of insistence of the other body, the conferees have agreed to an amendment, $150,000 for the Flathead as against $50,000 in the House bill and $300,000 as in the Senate action. The Fort Peck and Blackfeet items are continued at the House figure.

I express the hope that when the authorities of the Indian Service come before us a year from now they can give us a more thorough exposition of the facts in connection with that than it has been possible for us to secure this year. The House conferees, in view of the action of the House that I have referred to, have felt warranted in yielding to pressure in this instance.

As to the Nevada item relating to reclamation, the Newlands project, an appropriation of $245,000 for drainage purposes has been acceded to by the House. That is a matter which was not submitted to the Congress by the Budget. It was originally proposed by the department to use that same amount of money for the beginning of the Spanish Springs Reservoir, which was, however, not defended by the Reclamation Service as feasible when they appeared before our committee, and hence was not recommended by us. Since then the question of additional drainage has come up. The presence of alkali has made drainage an especially grave problem on the Newlands project. It was somewhat discussed in our hearings, and a very forcible argument was presented for it in the House in the first instance by the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. RICHARDS], who has brought full information to the attention of the House conferees. Associated with Mr. RICHARDS has been one of his constituents, Mr. True Vencill, who has summarized the facts with reference to this item very forcibly, and I will ask consent to extend my remarks for the purpose of including that letter.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record as indicated. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The letter referred to follows:

MARCH 7, 1924.

HON. LOUIS C. CRAMTON, M. C.

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CRAMTON: Referring to our conversation of yesterday, I write to confirm what was said and to furnish the information you requested as to the action of our irrigation board with respect to the manner in which its members contract with the Government in the premises.

I wish to impress upon you that seepage water is already on the surface of many of the homesteads and is within 12 inches of the surface on a number of others. This means destruction to these farms unless drained immediately. When the fertility of the soil is once destroyed by seepage it takes from one to three years of constant irrigation and cultivation to restore these lands to their original production. An analysis of this condition is that the farmer loses three years of time and is unable to grow any crops, therefore can not meet his water payments and living expenses and would be forced in some cases to abandon his homestead.

The ponderous and expensive machinery which was used in doing the drainage work covered by the $700,000 contract with the Government, which was completed January 1, 1924, is now lying idle on the project. Farms are being destroyed by seepage day by day. The Government's investment, as well as the farms, is being destroyed. Does it not therefore seem wise to provide funds to complete this drainage without delay, simply as a matter of good business?

In answer to your question as to why we did not get the drainage movement started sooner, I find that in looking over our minutes of the directors' meeting held on November 5, 1923, the project manager and engineers were instructed to investigate the necessity for further drainage and estimate cost of construction, which report I have just learned this morning is now in the files of the reclamation service in Washington. The engineers did not have this data completed until the fore part of January, so that we could estimate the approximate amount that would be needed.

The following resolution was passed by the irrigation board at its meeting the fore part of February.

"The livelihood of approximately 125 actual settlers, as well as the investment of the United States Government, is seriously threatened unless more drainage is done. Seepage conditions on these 17,500 acres, unprotected, are getting worse instead of better, and undoubtedly many of the settlers will have to leave if relief is not afforded immediately. Estimates and plans of the work needed now being made indicate that an expenditure of about $250,000 will be necessary for the work, to be covered by an appropriate contract for repayment provided by the district."

Concerning the amendment added by Senator ODON relative to drainage on the Newlands project, it is perfectly satisfactory to the Senator to substitute the amendment suggested by the chief counsel of the Reclamation Service, which is as follows:

"$400,000, of which amount $245,000 shall be used for drainage purposes, but only after execution by the Truckee-Carson irrigation district of an appropriate reimbursement contract satisfactory in form to the Secretary of the Interior, and after confirmation of such contract by decree of a court of competent jurisdiction and final decision on all appeals from such decree."

In reply to your question as to how this contract would be confirmed by the court I wish to say that it would be handled in the same manner as a will for probate. It would be submitted to the court by a petition from the district, in accordance with the State law.

In the event I have failed to cover fully what you desire I shall be very glad to furnish such further information as you may indicate.

Very sincerely yours,

TRUE VENCILL.

Mr. CRAMTON. That disposes of the matters which are cleaned up by the conference report.

There is a matter which I should have brought to the attention of the House for the purpose of properly making the Record in accordance with an agreement that the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] and I entered into with reference to amendments 13 and 14, which were disposed of in the previous report concerning the Chickasaw, Choctaw, and Creek attorneys. Those who have been interested in this item have agreed to this: That the appropriation carried in the bill, as it has now been agreed to by the two Houses, for the attorneys of the Chickasaw and Choctaw Tribes is based on the theory that the McMurray case will be tried in the court of claims during this fiscal year and not appealed; if it is not tried this fiscal year or is appealed, any necessary additional expense by reason thereof will be regarded as an emergency and should be considered the proper basis for a deficiency to that extent.

The principal increase that has been created in the bill by the Senate is out of the reclamation fund. There is an increase of $910,000 from the reclamation fund in the final action as compared with the House action. The final action of the bill, apart from the reclamation fund or the Indian reimbursable items or the tribal funds—that is, that which comes from what might be called the general fund of the Treasury—is a total of $250,353,255.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. CRAMTON. I yield, if the gentleman desires.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I just wanted to suggest that legislation covering a matter of $250,000,000 or $300,000,000 ought to be considered by more than a couple of dozen Members of the House.

Mr. CRAMTON. I will say to the gentleman from Nebraska that the House has already disposed of the bulk of this, and in view of the gentleman's suggestion, I will simply put this table in the Record.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAMTON. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to say to the gentleman from Nebraska that the gentleman need not be uneasy at all. The gentleman from Michigan is looking after the people's interest on this bill. The gentleman has been able to hold his own with the powers that be elsewhere.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. That encourages me very much.

Mr. CRAMTON. It is $34,269,554 less than the appropriation for the current year.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman from Michigan will yield, with reference to what the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Howard] said, the situation is that all these matters have been disposed of except three or four irrigation items that we now have before us, which I assume the House will back the committee up in, and in those matters the House has cut considerable off of the only Senate amendments agreed to, with the exception of one, and has refused to agree to two others, and the gentleman has receded and has agreed to cutting down the amounts. The only things now in question are the four amendments, and one other amendment which is not to be considered this evening, as I understand.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman from Michigan permit me to ask a question?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. Does the gentleman have the figures showing the amount authorized to be expended this coming year out of Indian tribal funds? I thought perhaps the gentleman had that in the statement and would incorporate it in the Record.

Mr. CRAMTON. It is $2,173,800.

Mr. HASTINGS. Expended from Indian tribal funds?

Mr. CRAMTON. About $300,000 less than the current year. I will ask unanimous consent to extend in the RECORD the following statement and analysis:

Interior Department appropriations for 1925.

	(1) Tribal (not included in total in col. 5).	(2) Indian reimburs- able.	(3) Reclama- tion fund.	(4) All others.	(5) Total, exclusive of tribal funds.
1924 or current year.	$2,406,000	$2,609,250	$12,260,000	$282,699,750	$297,520,000
Budget for 1925.....	2,170,800	2,030,950	10,856,000	239,892,381	275,069,331
Reported to House.....	2,185,800	1,873,000	9,946,000	249,908,965	263,727,965
Passed House.....	2,178,800	1,853,000	9,946,000	249,948,565	263,747,465
Passed Senate.....	2,173,800	2,246,200	10,856,000	251,100,568	266,202,758
Conference action.....	2,178,800	2,041,200	10,856,000	260,853,268	265,250,455

The above table and the following analysis includes the $100,000 for Bright Angel Trail in the Grand Canyon National Park, proposed by the House and still in disagreement as Senate amendment 47.

The total expenditure, authorized from tribal funds is $2,173,800, which is $232,200 less than the current year, $3,000 above the Budget, and $5,000 below the House bill.

The total Indian reimbursable is $2,041,200, which is $568,050 less than the current year, $20,250 above the Budget, and $188,200 above the House bill. The increase above the House figure, slightly modified by other amendments, results chiefly from addition of $82,200 for steel bridges for the Pueblo Indians and the $100,000 I have previously referred to for irrigation on the Flathead Reservation.

The total appropriations from the reclamation fund, a special revolving fund set aside solely for work under the reclamation act, are $10,856,000. This is $1,394,000 less than the current year, is exactly the Budget figure, and is $910,000 above the House bill. The increases above the House bill are $245,000 for drainage on the Newlands project, which I have above discussed, and $665,000 for the continuation of construction of the American Falls Reservoir on the Minidoka project.

The total appropriations carried in this bill from what might be called the general fund of the Treasury, excluding those from the Indian tribal funds, those from the reclamation fund, and reimbursable Indian items are $250,353,253, which is $32,307,504 less than the current year, $8,939,126 less than the Budget, and only $404,690 more than the House bill, an increase over the House bill of approximately one-sixth of 1 per cent. If the large sum appropriated for payment of pensions is eliminated from consideration, the increase is only about 1 1/2 per cent of the balance.

The total appropriations carried in the bill from all Federal funds, reimbursable or otherwise, Indian tribal funds not being included, are $263,250,455, which is, as I have already said, $34,269,554 below the current year, and is $9,818,876 below the Budget and $1,502,900 above the House bill, an increase over the House bill of a little more than one-half of 1 per cent or, excluding the fund for payment of pensions, the increase over the House bill is only about 3 1/2 per cent.

My purpose in giving this analysis is not only to give information which I think will be of interest, but also to emphasize how satisfactory the bill is from the House point of view.

The statement is not given for the purpose of claiming any undue credit for the House conferees. On the contrary it is to be said that those who have charge of the bill in another body have been vigilant in protecting the bill against undesirable amendments and against increases generally.

Mr. OLDFIELD. Will the gentleman from Michigan yield?

Mr. CRAMTON. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. OLDFIELD. Is this the bill in which appears the amendment known as the Bright Angel Trail amendment?

Mr. CRAMTON. That is amendment No. 47, which is still in disagreement, and is not covered by this agreement. It will be the only item remaining in disagreement after this report is agreed upon.

Mr. OLDFIELD. Do you expect that to be agreed to?

Mr. CRAMTON. I expect that ultimately the House action will be concurred in by the Senate.

Mr. OLDFIELD. And the gentleman expects to insist—

Mr. CRAMTON. It is not my purpose to-night to take any action with reference to that amendment.

Mr. OLDFIELD. Just one further question. Does the gentleman expect to insist in the future?

Mr. CRAMTON. I will say to the gentleman from Arkansas that the House conferees feel very strongly with reference to that proposition—the need that there is for the United States to assert its control over one of its national parks and to put that park in shape so that the public may in safety visit it, and not run the risk of drinking typhoid water or encountering other dangers. We feel that the rights of the United States are paramount, and when clearly defined by the Supreme Court should be observed by all. We feel that no one individual, whatever his station in life or official position, should be allowed to stand in the way of the common good, based on well-defined public rights. We do not believe toll should be collected on any road or trail in a national park, and that it is especially undesirable that the Bright Angel Trail should remain in any ownership except that of the United States, which owns the park in which the trail is situated. Ownership of the trail other than by the United States adds to the opportunity for private interests to defy the United States. Those same private interests which are now most actively opposing the House action in this matter have in the very recent past sought to gain control of this trail, and are now violently and impudently interfering with proper administration of the park. The House action heretofore taken is in the public interest and I feel it must be maintained. I will not ask action further on amendment 47 at this time.

[Mr. CRAMTON was granted leave to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

JIM HOGG COUNTY, TEX.

Mr. GARNER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table and consider at this time bill S. 2625, a similar House bill having been favorably reported on the calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 2625 and consider the same, a similar bill being on the calendar. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask if the bill appropriates any money out of the Treasury.

Mr. GARNER of Texas. No; I never take any money out of the Treasury. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

A bill (S. 2625) to detach Jim Hogg County from the Corpus Christi division of the southern judicial district of the State of Texas and attach the same to the Laredo division of the southern judicial district of said State.

Be it enacted, etc., That Jim Hogg County of the Corpus Christi division of the southern district of the State of Texas be, and the same is hereby, detached from the said Corpus Christi division and attached to and made a part of the Laredo division of the southern district of said State.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 23 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, March 26, 1924, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

412. A letter from the Acting Secretary of Labor, transmitting a list of miscellaneous papers of the Bureaus of Labor Statistics, Immigration, and Naturalization which will be of no further use in the transaction of official business; to the Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers.

413. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation "authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to accept certain lands in the vicinity of Pensacola, Fla., to assure a suitable water supply for the United States naval air station at Pensacola"; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

414. A letter from the Acting Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation "to authorize the Comptroller General to relieve Fred A. Gosnell, former disbursing clerk, Bureau of the Census, and the estate of Richard C. Lappin, former supervisor of the Fourteenth Decennial Census for the Territory of Hawaii, and special disbursing, in the settlement of certain accounts"; to the Committee on Claims.

415. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation "to extend the provisions of the national bank act to the Virgin Islands of the United States" (H. Doc. No. 229); to the Committees on Banking and Currency and Insular Affairs and ordered to be printed.

416. A message from the Senate of the United States, transmitting copy of Senate Resolution 195, relating to Clarence C. Chase, collector of customs at the port of El Paso, Tex., together with certain testimony adduced before the Senate Committee on Public Lands and Surveys; resolution ordered to be printed and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. FISHER: Committee on Military Affairs. H. J. Res. 163. A joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to loan certain tents, cots, chairs, etc., to the executive committee of the United Confederate Veterans for use at the thirty-fourth annual reunion, to be held at Memphis, Tenn., in June, 1924; without amendment (Rept. No. 359). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. LEAVITT: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 3756. A bill granting to the county of Custer, State of Montana, certain land in said county for use as a fairground; without amendment (Rept. No. 360). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LEAVITT: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 4319. A bill authorizing the conveyance of certain land to the city of Miles City, State of Montana, for park purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 361). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WINSLOW: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 7015. A bill to authorize the purchase in the open market of certain supplies for use on the Panama Canal or in the Canal Zone; with amendments (Rept. No. 363). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. VAILE: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 3927. A bill granting public lands to the town of Silverton, Colo., for public park purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 364). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 3260. A bill to alter the practice and procedure in Federal courts, and for other purposes; with amendments (Rept. No. 365). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7271. A bill to amend section 284 of the Judicial Code of the United States; with an amendment (Rept. No. 366). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. McSWAIN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2319. A bill for the relief of John H. McAtee; without amendment (Rept. No. 362). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 754) to authorize the Treasury of the United States to turn into the treasury of the Territory of Alaska all moneys received from the sale of fur-seal and other furs as are the property of the United States of America from the Pribilof Islands; Committee on Ways and Means discharged, and referred to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

A bill (H. R. 4104) to amend an act entitled "An act to prevent the extermination of fur-bearing animals in Alaska," etc.; Committee on Ways and Means discharged, and referred to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

A bill (H. R. 7743) granting an increase of pension to William Weaver; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 7356) to repeal a part of section 5, chapter 127, Thirty-ninth United States Statutes at Large; Committee on the Judiciary discharged, and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. SNYDER: A bill (H. R. 8201) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a Veterans' Bureau and to improve the facilities and service of such bureau, and further to amend and modify the war risk insurance act," approved August 9, 1921, and to amend and modify the war risk insurance act and to amend the vocational rehabilitation act; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. LEHLBACH: A bill (H. R. 8202) to amend the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes," approved May 22, 1920, and acts in amendment thereof; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. KELLY: A bill (H. R. 8203) to provide for parcel fee for parcel-post mail matter in excess of 4 ounces in weight; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. GARBER: A bill (H. R. 8204) to provide for the reopening of the Otoe Indian Boarding School, Oklahoma, and to appropriate money for its maintenance; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. REED of Arkansas: A bill (H. R. 8205) to prevent the sale of cotton and grain in futures markets; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 8206) to amend the Judicial Code, and to further define the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals and of the Supreme Court, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MORROW: A bill (H. R. 8207) to extend the provisions of the homestead law so as to allow certain credit, in lieu of permanent improvements, for the period of enlistment to soldiers, nurses, and officers of the Army, and the seamen, marines, nurses, and officers of the Navy and the Marine Corps of the United States; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. COLE of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 8208) amending the act of August 2, 1919, to increase the pay of certain employees of the Government Printing Office, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. DENISON: A bill (H. R. 8209) to create the Inland Waterways Corporation for the purpose of carrying out the mandate and purpose of Congress as expressed in sections 201 and 500 of the transportation act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 8210) to fix the salaries of officers and employees of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the United States Court of Claims, and the United States Court of Customs Appeals; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CONNERY: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts favoring passage by Congress of legislation increasing the compensation of postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts requesting Congress to appropriate funds to carry out certain recommendations of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army made in furtherance of the national defense act of 1920; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BLAND: A bill (H. R. 8211) to correct the military record of Abraham Hetrick; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DENISON: A bill (H. R. 8212) granting an increase of pension to Lizzie Wright; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOWELL: A bill (H. R. 8213) granting an increase of pension to Jane E. Hart; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8214) granting an increase of pension to Rachel Morris; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DYER: A bill (H. R. 8215) granting an increase of pension to Robert H. Seidel; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GLATFELTER: A bill (H. R. 8216) granting an increase of pension to Maria Heusser; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8217) granting an increase of pension to Laura J. Nonemaker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GREEN of Iowa: A bill (H. R. 8218) granting a pension to Emma E. Blake; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota: A bill (H. R. 8219) granting a pension to Emma L. Dugent; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAPES: A bill (H. R. 8220) granting an increase of pension to Sylvester B. Brott; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUBEY: A bill (H. R. 8221) granting a pension to Ellen Lessing; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SWING: A bill (H. R. 8222) for the relief of Robert C. Osborne; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. TABER: A bill (H. R. 8223) granting a pension to Harriet D. Rackham; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEFALD: A bill (H. R. 8224) granting a pension to William Roof; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOODRUFF: A bill (H. R. 8225) granting a pension to Fannie Teeple; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8226) granting a patent to the First State Savings Bank of Gladwin, Mich.; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2012. By Mr. ARNOLD: Petition of city and district committee of the Workmen's Circle of Rhode Island, protesting against the passage of the Johnson Immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2013. Also, petition of sundry citizens of Keensburg, Ill., asking for the passage of legislation which would materially reduce immigration to this country, and further asking that the base of percentage be the 1890 census; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2014. By Mr. GRAMTON: Petition of the Business Men's Association, Mount Clemens, Mich., urging favorable action on the bill proposing increase in salary for postal employees; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2015. Also, petition of the Parent-Teacher Association, Fairgrove, Mich., urging favorable action on the child-labor amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2016. Also, petition of C. H. King and the other rural carriers at Marlette, Mich., urging favorable action on the Paige bill (H. R. 7016); to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2017. By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Sherres-Gillet Co., of Chicago, Ill., opposing House bill 762; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2018. By Mr. KING: Petition of the Dorothy Quincy (Ill.) Chapter of the Daughters of American Revolution, in favor of Towner-Sterling educational bill, fireproof archives building, and migratory bird bill; to the Committee on Education.

2019. Also, petition of Colonel Jonathan Latimer Chapter, D. A. R., for the adoption of the Star Spangled Banner as the national anthem of the United States; to the Committee on the Library.

2020. Also, petition of Hon. John T. Doyle, secretary Civil Service Commission, in re House bill 7495.

2021. Also, petition of M. C. Foster and 90 other citizens of Table Grove, Ill., and vicinity, urging the repeal of tax on trucks, parts, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2022. Also, petition of the Association of Drainage and Levee Districts of Illinois, at its meeting in Beardstown, held December 14, 1923; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

2023. Also, petition of the Atkinson, Ill., Women's Club, favoring the Johnson Immigration bill and the Porter narcotic bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2024. Also, petition of Subordinate Lodge No. 122, of the Croatian League of Illinois, protesting against the passage of a "selective immigration act"; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2025. By Mr. LEAVITT: Petition of Terry, Mont., Post of the American Legion, indorsing the Johnson Immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2026. By Mr. MAGEE of New York: Petition of Secretary John Cappon and other members of the International Association of Machinists, Syracuse Lodge, No. 881, in favor of House bill 2702, requiring that all strictly military supplies be manufactured in Government-owned navy yards and arsenals, etc.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

2027. By Mr. O'CONNELL of Rhode Island: Petition of members of the city and district committee of the Workmen's Circle of Rhode Island, opposing the Johnson Immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2028. By Mr. PATTERSON: Petition of numerous citizens of Camden County, N. J., for modification of the Volstead Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2029. By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of Rev. Gaetano Iorizzo and other foreign-born American citizens living in the vicinity of Hackensack, N. J., requesting the Congress to be considerate for Italy and other races of southern Europe in the immigration legislation (H. R. 7905) about to be considered by the House of Representatives; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2030. Also, petition of Pasquale Clecone and others, representing The Sons of Italy, all naturalized citizens of the United States and living in the State of New Jersey, requesting the Congress to be fair with Italy and the races of southern Europe in determining the immigration legislation, so there will be no unjust discrimination; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2031. By Mr. SMITH: Petition of Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Blackfoot, Idaho, protesting against legislation providing amendment to Volstead Act permitting 2.75 per cent beer; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2032. By Mr. TEMPLE: Petition of Lodge August Rebel, No. 250, S. N. P. J., Meadowlands, Pa., protesting against certain proposals before the Congress of the United States regulating immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2033. By Mr. THOMPSON: Petition of Fulton County (Ohio) Board of Education, expressing disapproval of the proposal to establish a Federal department of education; to the Committee on Education.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, March 26, 1924.

(Legislative day of Monday, March 24, 1924.)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The principal clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Caraway	Ferris	Hedin
Ashurst	Colt	Fess	Howell
Ball	Copeland	Fletcher	Johnson, Minn.
Bayard	Couzens	Fraser	Jones, N. Mex.
Borah	Cummins	George	Jones, Wash.
Brandegee	Curtis	Gerry	Kendrick
Brookhart	Dale	Glass	Keyes
Broussard	Dial	Gooding	King
Bruce	Dill	Hale	Ladd
Bursum	Edgo	Harrell	Lodge
Cameron	Edwards	Harris	McKellar
Capper	Elkins	Harrison	McKinley

McLean
McNary
Mayfield
Moses
Neely
Norris
Oddie
Overman

Pepper
Pittman
Ralston
Ransdell
Reed, Mo.
Reed, Pa.
Robinson
Sheppard

Shortridge
Simmons
Smith
Smoot
Stephens
Swanson
Trammell
Wadsworth

Walsh, Mass.
Walsh, Mont.
Warren
Weller
Willis

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to announce the unavoidable absence of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] on account of illness.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-seven Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the bill (S. 2625) to detach Jim Hogg County from the Corpus Christi division of the southern judicial district of the State of Texas, and attach the same to the Laredo division of the southern judicial district of said State.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7449) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes; requested a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. MADDEN, Mr. ANTHONY, and Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7449) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. WARREN. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, accept the invitation of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. WARREN, Mr. CURTIS, and Mr. OVERMAN conferees on the part of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. WARREN presented a resolution adopted by the Drustvo Bratje Miru Lodge, No. 254, S. N. P. J., of Diamonds ville, Wyo., protesting against the passage of immigration legislation discriminating against the Slovenes, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. SHEPPARD presented a petition of sundry citizens of Austin, Tex., praying an amendment to the Constitution granting equal rights to women, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CAPPER presented a petition of sundry citizens of Paradise, Kans., praying for the passage of legislation entirely restricting immigration for a period of five years, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. WILLIS presented a petition signed by approximately 5,000 citizens in the State of Ohio, praying for the passage of legislation granting adjusted compensation to veterans of the World War, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. WILLIS, from the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions, to which was referred the bill (S. 2573) to amend and reenact sections 20, 22, and 50 of the act of March 2, 1917, entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 304) thereon.

Mr. LADD, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2825) to extend the time for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across Detroit River within or near the city limits of Detroit, Mich., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 305) thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (S. 807) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to determine and confirm by patent in the nature of a deed of quitclaim the title to lots in the city of Pensacola, Fla., reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 306) thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED.

Mr. WATSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on yesterday they presented to the President of the United States enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 75. An act for the relief of the Cleveland State Bank, of Cleveland, Miss.; and

S. 1982. An act granting the consent of Congress to the construction, maintenance, and operation by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., its successors and assigns, of a line of railroad across the northeasterly portion of the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the State of Minnesota.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. HARRELD (by request):

A bill (S. 2933) to amend the act of Congress of March 3, 1921, entitled "An act to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906, entitled 'An act of Congress for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes'"; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. PITTMAN:

A bill (S. 2934) making an appropriation for additional water storage in Spanish Springs Valley, Newlands reclamation project, State of Nevada; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

By Mr. CARAWAY:

A bill (S. 2936) to require registration of lobbyists, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. EDGE:

A bill (S. 2937) granting a pension to Elizabeth K. Brown; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MCKINLEY (for Mr. McCORMICK):

A bill (S. 2938) to amend the war risk insurance act; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 2939) for the relief of Bruusgaard Klosteruds Dampskibs Aktieselskab, a Norwegian corporation of Drammen, Norway; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 2940) prohibiting the importation of crude opium for the purpose of manufacturing heroin; to the Committee on Finance.

A bill (S. 2941) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint Philip T. Coffey to the position and rank of captain in the United States Army and immediately retire him with the rank and pay held by him at the time of his discharge (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SMITH:

A bill (S. 2942) for the relief of James C. Baskin; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ELKINS:

A bill (S. 2943) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth S. Reed; to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLICATIONS OF OFFICIAL PAPERS OF THE TERRITORIES.

By Mr. RALSTON:

A bill (S. 2935) for the publication of official papers of the Territories of the United States now in the national archives. Mr. RALSTON. Mr. President, the State Historical Society of Indiana has been petitioning Congress for several years past to have printed the official papers relating to its Territorial government, which are now on file in the archives in Washington. There is a period from the organization of the Territory northwest of the River Ohio in 1787 to the admission of the State of Indiana in 1816 in which Washington was the real capital, to which official papers were sent. Comparatively few of them have been brought to light in recent years, and these by the efforts of private citizens. Every State west of the Allegheny Mountains is in the same situation. The people of 35 States of the Union are denied access to the sources of their own history because the United States holds these papers unpublished. The deprival of the opportunity for historical investigation is felt the more keenly because these States are now passing through the centennial period, when their history becomes a matter of general public interest.

The object of this bill is to put these official papers into print, and I give it my hearty support because I believe the best system of Americanization is through education in our own history, National, State, and local.

The Carnegie Institution has performed a valuable service by publishing a list of these documents, a quarto volume of nearly 500 pages, of which I have a copy here. In this the papers relating to each State are printed under the name of the State to which they refer, and any Senator who desires to know the wealth of historical material which this publication would make accessible to his own constituents can readily see it here.

I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Printing. The motion was agreed to.

REDUCTION OF INTERNAL REVENUE TAXES.

Mr. COPELAND submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 6715, the tax reduction bill, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 4) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the adoption of amendments thereto.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it ought to announce that the Senate is now operating under a unanimous-consent agreement which limits Senators to 10 minutes upon both the joint resolution and any amendments that may be offered thereto. If there be no further amendments to be offered as in Committee of the Whole, the joint resolution will be reported to the Senate.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote whereby the so-called Jones amendment to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The committee amendment was amended and then agreed to as amended.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. As the Senator from South Carolina has signified a desire to move to reconsider the vote by which the Jones amendment was adopted, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment offered by the committee as amended by the Jones amendment was adopted.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Under the unanimous-consent agreement is the motion in order? Was not the agreement simply to consider amendments, and is it now in order to move to reconsider an amendment already agreed to?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion that the unanimous-consent agreement is simply an agreement limiting the time during which any Senator may speak. The Chair is of the opinion that the motion to reconsider is in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The joint resolution, as I understand it, is like a bill, and is first considered as in Committee of the Whole. It then goes to the Senate. I think the Senate is entitled to another vote on the Jones amendment when the joint resolution reaches the Senate. Then the Senate will have another opportunity to vote on it, I understand.

Mr. McKELLAR. That would not interfere with the right of a Senator to move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. OVERMAN. But there is no use to reconsider it if we have another opportunity to vote on it.

Mr. DIAL. If we are to have another vote on it, I do not care to press my motion to reconsider.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from North Carolina to ask if there will be an opportunity in the Senate to vote upon what is known as the Jones amendment?

Mr. OVERMAN. That is the question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion that there will be no such opportunity to vote directly upon the amendment, but the question can be raised by a motion to strike the Jones amendment from the joint resolution as reported to the Senate from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. In that case, I withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution is in the Senate and open to amendment.

Mr. DIAL. Now I move to strike out the Jones amendment to the committee amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina moves to strike from the joint resolution the amendment adopted on motion of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES], which will be stated by the Secretary.

The READING CLERK. On page 3, line 1, after the word "case," there was inserted the language, "shall be submitted to the legislatures of the several States"; and in line 6, after the words "several States," there were inserted the words

"after affirmative or negative action by the respective legislatures."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is upon agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DIAL], to strike out the words inserted as stated by the Secretary.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] a question. As I understand, there are three schools of thought, or three opinions, in the Senate about this proposed constitutional amendment. There is a group of Senators who are opposed to changing the present methods of amending our Constitution; there is another group of Senators, led by, or at least in agreement with, the Senator from New York, who will vote for the Judiciary Committee proposal if the Jones amendment shall be added to it; and there is still another group of Senators who prefer the committee proposal without the Jones amendment. I should like to ask the Senator from New York if he and the other 12 or 15 Senators on his side of the Chamber who are in agreement with him will refuse to support the committee proposal if the Jones amendment shall be eliminated from the joint committee resolution?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I have no right to speak for any number of Senators here. I can not say how they might vote.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. How about the Senator himself? What is his opinion?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I announced when I was discussing this matter in the first instance that I regarded the original joint resolution as much the more preferable, and that the committee substitute was, in my judgment, preferable to the present Constitution; but there are other Senators who do not agree with me in that opinion, and I can not speak for them.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I know some Senators on this side of the Chamber—

Mr. WADSWORTH. As a matter of fact, if I may make this observation, the Jones amendment as attached to the Walsh substitute, I think, was proposed in the nature of a compromise, to gather around the joint resolution itself the greatest number of affirmative votes in order that it might receive the two-thirds vote of the Senate which is necessary to its passage; and I very much hope that it will remain in that status.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. It was upon that assumption that I voted for the Jones amendment as a compromise, thinking that if a proposed amendment to the Constitution could not be submitted directly to the people, an indirect way of getting the people's judgment was better than giving the people no voice at all. I wish to make a suggestion to Senators who are sincerely devoted to popular government and who believe in leaving the ratification of constitutional amendments to the people alone. If you had before you the question of amending our Constitution so as to elect Senators by a direct vote of the people and were faced with the alternative of adhering to the old provision of the Constitution, which left the election of Senators alone to the State legislatures, or of adopting an amendment leaving the question in the first instance to the legislatures without any power to make a final decision but allowing an appeal from them to the people, what would you do? Would you not accept an amendment providing only for preliminary discussion and vote by the State legislatures with final decision reserved to the people rather than keep the election of Senators with the legislatures? There can be but one answer—take the best you can get that will give the people authority to sanction changes in their Constitution. To get the final decision of the people who should hesitate about going even in an indirect way to the people rather than giving the power to amend the Constitution solely and alone to the State legislatures?

I repeat, I prefer to go directly to the people, but it is quite apparent, from what I have been able to learn, that we can not get a two-thirds vote in the Senate for that proposition. Now, under the Jones amendment we can go to the people by indirectness by first going to the legislature. What difference would it make in the election of a Senator if, while the legislature should vote to support a Republican Senator, there were subsequently the right to go to the people and the people themselves could choose a Democrat?

It seems to me, Mr. President, that, much as I personally should prefer the direct way, rather than destroy the possibility of popular action and so as to give the people the right of final decision, we ought to accept the proposal of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES].

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, will the Senator from Massachusetts permit me to make an inquiry?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Would it not be possible to take the final vote upon the joint resolution framed in the way which the Senator from Massachusetts suggests he desires it to be framed; and if the joint resolution in that form should not receive the two-thirds vote, then could we not take up the other proposition?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I should welcome that. I should have no hesitancy in voting for referring the question of the ratification of constitutional amendments directly to the people.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I have made the inquiry because I can see no special advantage in the substance of what is known here as the Jones amendment.

I do not see why two tribunals should undertake to pass upon an amendment to the Constitution. Under the Jones amendment the legislature first would pass upon it in a merely advisory way, and it would ultimately have to go to the people anyway. I can not see the reason for the delay which would be occasioned by that process.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Does not the Senator agree that a method of finally getting the question of ratification to the people, no matter how many legislatures may intervene, is better than never getting it to the people and leaving the question solely to the legislatures?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I quite agree to that; and if I were convinced by a vote taken in the Senate that we could not act on the subject in the other way, then, of course, I should be perfectly willing to accept the compromise.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I suggest to the Senator that he ask unanimous consent that such a vote may be taken.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. If that is the best parliamentary way to reach it, I should be very glad to do that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is not prepared to commit himself as to that parliamentary situation.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I suppose if we could get unanimous consent that it might be done.

Mr. WADSWORTH. What might be done?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. We might take a vote upon the joint resolution with the Jones amendment eliminated and see whether it could pass this body or not.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I think I can make a suggestion by which such vote can be arrived at. If the Jones amendment is stricken out, there will then be an opportunity to vote on the committee amendment by itself. If that should carry by a two-thirds vote, the desire of the Senator from New Mexico and the Senator from Massachusetts would be met. If it should be defeated, a motion could then be made to reconsider that vote, and then the Jones amendment could be taken up again and added to the committee amendment. So that could be arrived at, and, if that is what the Senators desire, the way to get it would be to strike out the Jones amendment in the first instance.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I think, in view of the procedure suggested, that those of us who are opposed to the Jones amendment might very well vote to strike it out, and then later, if we find that we have not a two-thirds vote to carry the joint resolution as a whole, to reconsider that vote and add the Jones amendment.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. So all those who evidently are of the same mind upon this subject as the Senator from Massachusetts and myself would be safe in voting to strike out the Jones amendment.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President I should like to ask the Senator from Montana a question. I was in agreement with the Senator from Montana in reporting his substitute from the committee and I should like to have it adopted by the Senate if that could be done. The reason why I for one voted for the Jones amendment was that I did not think if it became a part of the joint resolution it would interfere with the submission of proposed amendments to the people; and I thought in that form the joint resolution was more apt to pass, as I realized there were some Senators in the Chamber who would not vote for the committee report as the Senator from Montana had drawn it. Now the Senator from Montana suggests that if we strike out the Jones amendment and have a vote directly on the amendment as reported by the committee, which is the amendment of the Senator from Montana, and if that shall be lost, then upon a motion to reconsider the Jones amendment might be reinstated. But have we any assurance that any Senator who votes against the amendment of the Senator from Montana will move to reconsider?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The answer to that is very easy, because it is a very common thing for a supporter of a motion to change his vote before the result is announced—

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I know it is.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. With a view to reconsidering.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am familiar with the device by which it is done, but all I want to know is, will it be done? I know it can be done if the spirit is willing. I merely mention that possibility.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I suggest that the Senator make the experiment and vote with us to strike out the Jones amendment, and then, if he thinks it desirable, he can move to reconsider later.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not want to make the experiment, because I want to save something if I can of this reform "of back to the people," and I am afraid that in the swapping of horses we will never get across the stream.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, there are forward-looking men on both sides of this Chamber—and in my opinion they constitute a majority of the Senate—who would like to vote for the submission of an amendment which, if adopted, would make it easier for the people to amend the Constitution. But no one can vote for the pending resolution as now encumbered by the Jones amendment without voting further to obstruct the existing method of ratification.

For example, many of us hope that a child-labor amendment to the Constitution may soon be favorably reported by the Committee on the Judiciary; that we may be able to submit it for ratification, and that ratification may be had without a moment's unnecessary delay. The ratification in its present form of the resolution now before the Senate, if effected prior to the ratification of the child-labor amendment, would afford the enemies of the latter measure additional means by which to delay it.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. NEELY. I yield.

Mr. CARAWAY. Under the Jones amendment, as I understand it, the people will finally determine whether or not a proposed amendment shall be ratified?

Mr. NEELY. That is true.

Mr. CARAWAY. If that is true, then has the Senator any objection to letting the people pass upon the proposed amendments?

Mr. NEELY. On the contrary, I very earnestly desire that the people; and the people alone, may pass on all proposed amendments to the Constitution without having to wait for the State legislatures to consider them. In other words, I favor prompt and direct action by the voters, instead of indirect action, delayed by interminable antecedent parliamentary debate.

There is no justification for the delay provided by the Jones amendment.

Mr. CARAWAY. May I ask the Senator if he would be in favor of abolishing the State legislatures?

Mr. NEELY. No; not for the purpose of enacting legislation.

Mr. CARAWAY. I want to ask the Senator another question. He has no objection, I understand, to the legislatures having something to do with discussing a matter which is not legislation. He is for the referendum and recall, I take it for granted, and believes that the act of a legislature should be referred to the people whenever they want it referred.

Mr. NEELY. I have no objection to letting the people pass on any matter of public policy. I am not afraid to trust them.

Mr. CARAWAY. The only objection, then, the Senator has to the Jones amendment is that delay might be involved.

Mr. NEELY. That is correct.

Mr. CARAWAY. Well, is it not wise to give a chance to have a proposed amendment examined so that the people may have an opportunity to form an intelligent opinion on it, or would the Senator—

Mr. NEELY. Let me answer that question by saying that the people of this country do not need the assistance of any benevolent legislative guardian in order to reach a proper conclusion.

Mr. CARAWAY. Then, why not abolish the legislatures and have all legislation by the people?

Mr. NEELY. For many obvious and adequate reasons, of which I shall specify but one. It would be not only impracticable but utterly impossible for a majority of the people to convene, consider, and enact legislation. But it is neither impossible nor impracticable for them to consider proposed amendments to the Constitution in their homes, and cast their votes for the ratification or rejection of such amendments at the polls.

Mr. CARAWAY. If the Senator wants a referendum, it will take time to have a question referred to them; but the thing I am after is this:

I have seen so much of propaganda, and the Senator, I am sure, has seen it. There is a fine example of it going on right now in this country. There ought to be some place where the propagandists could be exposed, and the people could ascertain the real merits of the controversy. Amending the Constitution is not like an act of the legislature. It is fundamental. It affects the rights of everybody who lives in America, and it is presumed to affect their rights for all the rest of the ages. Therefore there ought to be some chance for them to know what is actually beneath the proposed amendments. They ought not to be swept along by the propaganda of somebody with a sinister interest and with some money back of him who seeks to get something that he knows he could not get if the people had time to examine the matter.

Ordinarily the man who comes here with whip and spur and wants to ride over the legislature and get something done immediately has something that he knows will not stand examination. We saw that in the case of the Mellon plan. You were told to vote for the Mellon plan and put on your hat and go home; and had it been possible to coerce you and other Senators, the Mellon plan would have been adopted and everybody with large fortunes would have been smiling and everybody else would have been "broke."

Mr. NEELY. Yes; but as long as the able Senator from Arkansas and my good friend the distinguished Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] and the patriotic Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] and many others that I could readily name are here, there is no danger that the Senate will be swept away by plutocratic propaganda in favor of the Mellon plan or against adjusted compensation for the soldiers.

But, Mr. President, to proceed for a moment: I desire to make it clear that I shall vote for any resolution that will enable the people, without enforced delay, to vote for or against the ratification of amendments to their Constitution. I shall vote for this joint resolution now before the Senate, if we can strip it of the Jones amendment, which, at least in point of time, makes it even more difficult than it is at present to amend the Constitution. But if the motion to strike out the Jones amendment is lost, I shall be compelled to vote against the resolution.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, it seems to be conceded that the only objection to the Jones amendment is delay. I presume the greatest delay that could occur would be two years. Inasmuch as we have waited 140 years to propose this amendment, there does not seem to have been any great demand for immediate action.

I have wanted myself to see the people have the opportunity to pass directly upon proposed amendments to the Constitution.

This amendment is that where a proposal to amend the Constitution shall have been passed down to the States the legislatures shall discuss it; vote upon it. It then is referred to the people. The legislatures can delay it only a short time, and if the Senator from West Virginia is anxious to keep the legislatures from long delaying it he might offer an amendment to the joint resolution providing that the legislatures should receive the amendment in the morning and pass on it in the afternoon, and hasten it on down to the people.

I know that it can not work any harm to any real, meritorious amendment to the Constitution to have a forum where the proposal can be examined and where fallacies may be exposed and mistakes may be pointed out, if there are mistakes or fallacies. Amending the Constitution is such a serious matter that we ought to do it with care and ought to do it with wisdom; and any opportunity to examine into the question that does not impose an unreasonable delay ought not to be objected to by anyone who believes that the proposal ought to have intelligent examination, and who has some proposition to offer to the people the merits or demerits of which he is perfectly willing for the people to know. This affords just that one opportunity.

I am for the joint resolution and I shall vote for it, with or without the Jones amendment; but I am unable to see any valid reason, Mr. President, why the question should not be intelligently examined, why the people should not be given an opportunity to know exactly what it is that they are required to pass upon and determine whether it shall be or shall not be a part of the organic law. The legislatures can not defeat it. It can only give to the question the examination that it would give to any other important question; and if one is in favor of the initiative and referendum, I can see no reason why he should object to this.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, before the Senator sits down, will he yield to me?

Mr. CARAWAY. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I just want to ask the Senator this question: He says that the legislature could not defeat the amendment. Suppose the legislature did not act within the eight years, what would be the effect of its nonaction? I am merely asking for information.

Mr. CARAWAY. I had not thought of it in that light. It might be well to offer an amendment to the joint resolution providing that the legislature shall act upon the amendment within a reasonable time.

Mr. McKELLAR. It has occurred to me, if the Senator will permit me to interrupt him again, that it would be very easy for people who were interested in effecting such a result to bring about such a condition in certain legislatures that the amendment would not be acted upon at all during the eight years, and in that way a very meritorious amendment might be defeated by the legislatures themselves before it ever got to the people.

Mr. CARAWAY. I can not conceive of a legislature being blocked so that it could not pass upon it one way or the other. I think that is highly improbable.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will change my question. Suppose that as a result of mere inaction of the legislatures 13 of them failed to act: Then would it not have the effect of defeating a very worthy amendment?

Mr. CARAWAY. The sinister interest would have to block the legislature and reblock it, because every State would have had at least two to four terms of its legislature in the eight years, and most of them would have had four different legislatures in that time; so I rather imagine that there would be no trouble of that kind. However, I should not object to an amendment to the Jones amendment that would suggest that the legislature shall act promptly.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President—

Mr. CARAWAY. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. COPELAND. I should like to ask the Senator this question: Suppose you have a situation, which is very common in my State, where one party controls one house, and the other party controls the other house. It very often happens that all legislative procedure is blocked by reason of the difference of opinion in those two houses. My judgment is, if I may suggest it before the Senator answers the question, that the Jones amendment should be removed entirely, and the matter should be submitted directly to the people in order that they may pass upon it.

Mr. CARAWAY. Of course, answering facetiously, if I were the Senator I would change my legislature so that I would have a Democratic majority in both houses.

Mr. COPELAND. I agree with the Senator as to that.

Mr. CARAWAY. And I rather think that the people will look after that matter at the coming election; but in the event I am mistaken about that, it would make no difference if the legislature were divided and each house passed upon it; it would have to go down to the people. They could not block it by that process. I am going to vote for either amendment; but I do not see, seriously, if a proposition is so meritorious that it can bear investigation, and it is so serious as to change the fundamental law of the land, why anyone should object to having all the information and all the candid, intelligent, and constructive criticism that might be offered by the various assemblies of the States.

I do not know anything about the method of reaching the people in any State except my own. I know that ordinarily, if there is not some great local interest at stake, the people are not inclined to examine abstract questions with care; but if you will discuss it and arouse their interest so that they may and will turn their attention to it, I have every confidence that they are going to decide it correctly. If, however, they are asked to pass upon a proposition without any opportunity to know its real merits, you who want to amend the Constitution are making a serious mistake; because if an amendment is proposed to the Constitution and handed down to the people about which they get no opportunity to get information, they are going to say: "We had better keep what we have than to go to something that we do not know," and therefore they will vote "no," and you will defeat the very object that you have in view by trying to keep the people from knowing the merits of the proposition you offer to them.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Arkansas has expired.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY] stated that the only objection to the Jones amendment was the delay involved. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] has indicated that he voted for the Jones amendment as a matter of securing results; and I want to say a word with reference to the two suggestions.

First, as to the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts, there is at least one Member of the Senate who is in favor of submitting questions of amendments to the Constitution to the voters of the respective States but who will not vote for the Jones amendment or for any amendment to which it is attached; so that some votes may be obtained in that way, but others will be lost.

There are other objections to this amendment. In my judgment it is decidedly preferable, for the reasons that were advanced by the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], among others, that constitutional amendments should be submitted to the voters of the States rather than to the legislatures. However, up to the present time there has been, I think, no substantiation of the contention that the legislatures of the States have defied the will of the people. In my judgment, the ratification by the legislatures of the various amendments which have been recently adopted has been in conformity with the will of the people and has conformed to what the people would have done. I favor submitting amendments to the people generally, not so much because they differ with the legislature, but because they are the proper ultimate source of authority. I look upon the Jones amendment as an effort to compromise between two ideas as to ratification, and the result is a sort of a half-breed which has the vices of both its parents and the virtues of neither.

The Jones amendment involves delay so great that the sponsors of it have felt the necessity of providing an additional period of time up to eight years. In other words, they apprehend that under the Jones amendment it might take at least eight years to get an amendment through.

The length of time taken to ratify amendments may be illustrated by the table showing the time during which amendments have been before the people. The longest period of time any amendment was pending between submission and ratification was that involved in the ratification of the sixteenth amendment, which took three years and six months. The next longest was the time involved in the ratification of the eleventh, which took three years and four months. The first 10 amendments to the Constitution were ratified eight months after submission, the fifteenth amendment in one year and one month, the seventeenth in one year and sixteen days, the eighteenth in one year and one month, and the nineteenth in one year and two months. So the proponents of this amendment are anticipating that the delays which may occur under the Jones amendment on an average might be eight times as long as they have been in the past. Delay is a serious matter.

The other point upon which I base my objection is this: The legislatures of the States are the sovereign legislative bodies of the respective States. If this amendment were made a part of the Constitution, it would reduce the legislature of my State and the legislatures of other States to a position which would really result in a degradation of them. In other words, this amendment to the Constitution of the United States seeks to make of sovereign legislatures crossroads debating societies, saying to them: "We want you, for purposes of publicity, to hold a debate upon a matter over which you have absolutely no authority, and your decision will be entirely irrelevant to the ultimate decision of the question." I think that if Senators honestly wish the adoption of the amendment they should recognize that the amendment must be adopted by the legislatures, and if in the amendment each legislature is told, "We are asking you to degrade yourself to the position of a crossroads debating society for public information," the ratification of the amendment will be in grave danger of defeat.

As I see it, the submission of the Jones amendment will be an imputation upon the State legislatures made by an act of Congress, which they will resent, and the amendment will not be ratified. If Senators are interested in securing a change in the method of ratifying constitutional amendments, they will eliminate the Jones amendment. I doubt if it could pass Congress, and I am sure it could not pass the legislatures of three-fourths of the States.

The analogy sought to be drawn yesterday between the position the legislature would occupy under the Jones amendment and inferior courts, I think, would perhaps be a truer analogy if it should be said that the Jones amendment would reduce the legislature to the position of a justice of the peace court in a preliminary hearing in a criminal case, but even there humble courts would have more power than would the legislature under the Jones amendment. I think the analogy suggested is false in other respects than that.

I think the argument based on publicity is altogether too specious. If the Congress of the United States desires to give publicity to any proposed amendment, it has before it an amendment to which it can attach proper machinery and means for securing publicity, and need not say to the State legislatures, "Will you please debate this matter and see that it gets publicity?" You will not get a debate in the legislatures of the States upon a matter over which they have no authority. The fact that they can render a futile and nugatory judgment is not going to interest the legislatures, nor will it interest the press when it comes to considering and reporting the proceedings of the legislature.

As I see the Jones amendment, it has one purpose and it will have one effect, and that is delay. There are amendments desired by the people of the United States. The adoption of the Jones amendment would probably mean the defeat of those desires, but in any event it would mean long postponement. There is an effort to put men in Congress, like myself, who believe in popular submission of these questions, in a position where we must either vote against apparent submission of these questions to the people or vote for an amendment which would mean that that submission should be at such a remote date that the desire for amendment may perhaps have passed away or the amendment come so late as to lose much of its effectiveness.

For instance, a child labor amendment to the Constitution, for which I hope to vote, might be delayed for 8 or 10 or 15 years or indefinitely. During that delay children in the mills and in the factories who might have the advantage of it would have gone into their graves or into the decay which follows upon such labor. So that I for one, believing in the submission of constitutional amendments to the people, shall vote against any joint resolution which contains the Jones amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, before the Senator takes his seat I want to ask him a question. Suppose the Walsh amendment, or the committee amendment, together with the Jones amendment, were adopted. What would be the procedure in the legislature of the Senator's own State, for instance? What would they do? How would they bring it up at all? How would they go about acting on it, and what inducement would there be for any legislature to act on it at all, or take any steps whatsoever in connection with it?

Mr. ADAMS. I can not conceive of the legislature taking any active interest in it, because it would be a mere perfunctory performance, which they would undertake some day, at their leisure, when they had no matter which concerned them to consider. The Jones amendment suggests the old doggerel to me:

Mother, may I go out to swim?

Yes, my darling daughter;

Hang your clothes on a hickory limb,

But don't go near the water.

In other words, they are in favor of the principle of submitting all these measures to the people but wish either to avoid actual submission or to at least make it as difficult and as remote as possible.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I want to inquire of the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] or the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE], who are members of the committee, touching this language. I am sure they have given it great thought. The language is:

The Congress . . . shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of this Constitution when ratified by a vote of the qualified electors in three-fourths of the several States.

Why was the question of a majority of the qualified electors omitted, and why was it just made to read "ratified by a vote of the qualified electors"?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The question was not raised in the committee, although it occurred to me myself, and I considered it. The language is the language of the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] as the Senator from Mississippi is aware. It is his draft. I assume that in this case a vote of the electors meant a majority. That is the conclusion at which I arrived.

Mr. HARRISON. It does not say a majority of the people, leaving it to the States. I thought the committee had probably given the matter consideration.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Of course, on a vote for acceptance or rejection, there could be only two sides. It seemed to me that a plurality was equivalent to a majority, and vice versa. Where you can vote only "yes" or "no" on a question, one side necessarily has a majority, if he gets a plurality. It is not like an election where there might be three candidates, and one candidate had to get a majority over the other two.

Mr. HARRISON. Of course, inasmuch as this leaves it to the rules and regulations of the States as to how an election should be held, the Senator thinks that a State legislature could say that when 5 per cent of the qualified electors of the State have voted for the proposition it could be ratified?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I think if a majority of those voting voted in the affirmative, it would be ratified. But there is nothing in the proposed amendment as it stands, in my opinion, which requires that a State can not express itself unless it gets a majority of all the qualified electors.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator from Mississippi read the language again?

Mr. HARRISON. The language embodied in the Walsh substitute is:

Which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of this Constitution when ratified by a vote of the qualified electors in three-fourths of the several States.

Mr. GEORGE. That undoubtedly means, Mr. President, a vote of the majority of the qualified electors, and precisely that question arose in my own State. We were never able to get a majority of the qualified electors to vote in a general election, because in a general election there was scarcely ever a majority cast on either side or both sides of any given issue, our primary so largely superseding our general elections.

Mr. HARRISON. Does that language meet the Senator's approval?

Mr. GEORGE. No, Senator; that is but one further evidence of the fact that this amendment if incorporated in the Constitution as now proposed would effectively foreclose the possibility of amending the Federal Constitution.

Mr. HARRISON. How would the Senator suggest that it be changed to carry out his idea?

Mr. GEORGE. If it is at all desirable to have the Constitution amended as proposed, the joint resolution should be changed so as to provide that any proposed amendment would be ratified when voted for by a majority of the qualified electors voting in the election. Precisely that provision we had to put into our own Constitution in order to obtain action on constitutional amendments.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator has no doubt, however, that under the following language the State would have a right to say whether a majority of the electors voting in the election should carry the ratification; or would it have to be a majority of the electors of the whole State?

Mr. GEORGE. I would not hazard a statement on that, Mr. President; but I think that if that amendment went into the Constitution as now proposed, to that extent the States themselves would relinquish their rights to prescribe the manner of holding their elections. I think it would necessitate an affirmative vote of a majority of the qualified electors of the States, and precisely that can not be obtained in my State, and I am sure it can not be obtained in many other Southern States, because a majority of the qualified electors do not vote in general elections.

Mr. HARRISON. That is quite true, especially in the South. I want to ask the chairman of the committee further—

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I want to ascertain more fully the views of the Senator from Georgia on this important subject, if the Senator from Mississippi will allow me. Is the Senator discussing the question of the vote by qualified electors?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. Did the Senator from Montana hear what the Senator from Georgia said?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; I came in while he was speaking.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Georgia contends that this language would necessarily mean that before a State could ratify a majority of the qualified electors of that State would have to vote for any proposed amendment, and that in certain States in this country in a general election sometimes only one-tenth of the qualified electors vote, and consequently we would never secure the ratification of some States for a proposed amendment.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I have very profound respect for the views of the Senator from Georgia, knowing his great ability as a lawyer. Were it not for the views which I understood him to express—and I heard only the concluding portion of his remarks—I should say that there was no question at all that the language referred to required ratification by simply a majority of the electors voting in the election, voting upon that particular question.

Mr. ROBINSON. That is the question. Would it require a majority of the qualified electors who vote in an election or a majority of those who vote on that particular question? The distinction is very important, because in some of the States experience has shown that when constitutional amendments have been submitted to be voted upon by the electors, a great many of those who participate in the election fail to express their will respecting the particular question involved in the constitutional amendment. It happens that in some of the States, in many cases where a majority of those who voted on the constitutional amendments favored its adoption, a majority of the electors participating in the election failed to do so and therefore the amendment was lost.

Mr. HARRISON. I have just a minute of my time left—

Mr. ROBINSON. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. HARRISON. I merely want to ask one other question so that it may be discussed, because I shall not have the time to discuss it. I notice that it is provided in the Constitution that the House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second year "by the people" of the several States.

I am calling to the attention of the Senator that the word "people" is used. When the amendment was adopted as incorporated in the Constitution now giving the right to the people to elect their Senators, the language used is this:

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years.

The Senator will note that in both those instances the word "people" is used. In the pending amendment the words "qualified electors" are used. Why the distinction? My time has expired, but I wanted to ask the question to bring out some discussion about it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I shall be glad to answer the question in my own time. My judgment about the matter is that there is no difference, but I believe that it would be wise to adopt in this amendment the very language of the Constitution applicable to the election of Senators and Representatives. I think it would be wise to amend it in that respect.

I want to say with respect to that suggestion that the Constitution provides that Members of the House of Representatives shall be elected by the people of the States. It does not say by a majority of the people. That, of course, is implied. It has always been held that that means a majority of the people who vote on the question as to the person who shall be the representative. It does not mean a majority of all the qualified electors and it does not mean a majority of every man, woman, and child. It means a majority of the qualified electors voting for the particular office. I think the rule with very little variance is that on questions of amendments of State constitutions the matter is to be determined upon the question whether a majority vote in favor of the amendment as against those who vote against it.

Mr. ROBINSON. I think the Senator's construction is correct. Some of the State constitutions, however, expressly provide that an amendment before it shall be deemed ratified must have been voted for by a majority of the electors participating in the election.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That removes all doubt.

Mr. ROBINSON. It is very different from the provision that is contained in the pending amendment. I think if the pending amendment passes as it is now written it will mean that in order to effect the ratification a majority of the qualified electors voting on the particular question must be in favor of the ratification.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But it seems to me that if we substitute the word "people" for "qualified electors" we would then put it in exactly the same situation as the original Constitution, and the construction given to that, of course, would apply to this language. Both Houses have always held that a man is elected a Member of Congress who gets the most votes of the people voting for the particular office. We might have 10,000 voting for governor in a State and only 8,000 voting for two candidates for Congress, one getting 4,500 and the other 3,500. The man who got 4,500 would be elected, even though he had not a majority of all the electors voting in the election.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. FESS. The provision prevails in Ohio that the amendment must receive a majority not of those voting on the amendment but of all those voting in the election.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But I feel sure that must be by virtue of some particular provision in the State constitution differing from others.

Mr. FESS. Yes; in our own State constitution.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But it seems to me if we have the same language that is used in other portions of the Federal Constitution the same construction must be given to it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If the Senator will allow me to interrupt him in his time, of course, when we say "by vote of the people" the result is the same. Nobody can vote except the qualified electors. It is really immaterial. I would not object to an amendment if anyone prefers it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut yield to me?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair desires to remind the Senate that the Senator from Connecticut has already spoken once.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I only spoke to a question of procedure, not on the amendment. I do not desire to take the floor now. I was only asking at that time if the Senator from Montana would yield. I want to say to the Chair that I have not spoken on any amendment or on the bill yet. I was speaking on a parliamentary question as to the effect of the motion to reconsider. I was not debating the joint resolution or any amendment thereto.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I did not understand that the Senator from Connecticut was addressing a question to me.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I was addressing a question to the Senator from Montana when I was speaking before, but not now.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Montana yield to me to ask a question of the Senator from Connecticut?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. I desire to ask the Senator from Connecticut this question: If it is the purpose beyond any question that a majority of the people voting in a particular election on the amendment shall ratify it—and I take it that is the purpose—why not express it?

Mr. ROBINSON. But it is not the purpose.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. No; it is not the purpose. We do not want to require a majority, because as the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] has just said, in many of their elections only 5 per cent of the people come to the polls.

Mr. McKELLAR. As I understand, it was the purpose of the committee to require the majority of those voting on the amendment.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Yes.

Mr. ROBINSON. But that is very different from the proposal to require a majority of those participating in the election.

Mr. McKELLAR. I so stated, but if it is the purpose simply to require a majority of the voters voting on the particular amendment, and that seems to be the purpose of everybody, why not express it in proper language to effect that purpose if we are seeking an improvement?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am perfectly willing that it should be so expressed. If the Senator will propose such an amendment I am willing to vote for it.

Mr. CARAWAY. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The language now is "by a vote of the qualified electors in three-fourths of the several States." If it were to read "by a vote of the qualified electors who voted on the question in three-fourths of the States," that would accomplish the purpose.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut yield?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I have not the floor.

Mr. CARAWAY. Will the Senator from Montana permit me to ask the Senator from Connecticut a question?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. CARAWAY. I thought we were trying to get away from the Federal Government supervising the election in the various States when we come to pass upon a constitutional amendment, and yet if we accept the amendment suggested by the Senator from Tennessee, the Federal Government would have to determine in each particular instance whether or not the State properly ratified it. Therefore would it not be very unfortunate to have anything in the amendment that undertook to say what would be a ratification by the people of the various States, because if we have it there then the Federal Government necessarily would supervise each election?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But the Senator will remember the point raised by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] that the language as it stands in the joint resolution would require a majority of all the electors who are qualified in the States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Montana has expired.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Mr. President, I move the following amendment: In line 5—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is an amendment already pending.

Mr. REED of Missouri. I want to offer an amendment touching the present discussion.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator can indicate it without offering it.

Mr. REED of Missouri. In line 5 I would propose to strike out the words "qualified electors" and insert "a majority of the people voting on the amendment," so that the clause would read, "when ratified by a vote of a majority of the people voting on the amendment in three-fourths of the several States."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is not in order at the present time.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I would like to have the attention of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] to the words "qualified electors." It is proposed, as I understand it, to put in the Federal Constitution a declaration that an amendment is accepted or rejected according to the vote of the qualified electors of the State. I should be most anxious to see the word "qualified" taken out and something very similar to the language suggested by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] inserted. I think it would be all sufficient if the words "qualified electors" were stricken out and the word "people" substituted in lieu thereof.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator mean that a man who is not a qualified voter in the State should be allowed to vote?

Mr. GEORGE. No; but I mean to say that the Federal Government ought not to say who is qualified in the State. That is precisely what I mean.

Mr. SIMMONS. The word "qualified," I think, would mean qualified under the laws of the State in which the election is held.

Mr. GEORGE. Perhaps so; but this is an amendment to the Federal Constitution in which we are proposing to use that language. Perhaps what the Senator says is true, but there ought not to be any doubt about it.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator would raise another question more serious than that if we used the words "people voting," because then some one might vote in a State under that language who was not a qualified elector in the State.

Mr. GEORGE. It would be under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the State. That language follows.

Mr. SIMMONS. The word "qualified" applies to the action of the State, and I think that clearly is the meaning. "Qualified under the laws of the State" is the meaning, and I think if we simply add the language, as suggested by the Senator from Georgia, "qualified electors voting in the election," it would be clarified.

Mr. ROBINSON. Or "voting for the amendment."

Mr. SIMMONS. That would be better.

Mr. GEORGE. That is true; but I would not say that the word "qualified" there would not have some significance when it was inserted into the Federal Constitution, even though it were followed by subsequent language that the election shall be held under such rules and regulations as each State shall prescribe. Those rules and regulations might not refer to the qualification of the voters themselves.

But waiving that question, and it may be more imaginary than real, it seems to me that the language could be made clear and definite and certain by simply providing that it shall be ratified by a vote of the qualified electors voting on the amendment, or the words "qualified electors" could be stricken out and the word "people" inserted.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. If the Senator will pardon me, I had intended to propose striking out the words "qualified electors" and inserting the words "by a vote of the people voting on the amendment in three-fourths of the States."

Mr. GEORGE. That would be quite satisfactory to me.

Mr. SWANSON. Would not that leave to the Supreme Court or the Federal court the question ultimately then, if the amendment were adopted, of determining who were the qualified voters both under the Federal law and under the thirteenth and fourteenth amendments?

Mr. GEORGE. Under the language suggested by the Senator from Montana?

Mr. SWANSON. Yes.

Mr. GEORGE. I do not think so. I think that would leave it clearly with the States, as it is now with reference to the election of Members of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

Mr. SWANSON. But the Senator must remember that the House and Senate are the judges of the qualifications of their own Members, and consequently that question rests absolutely with them. It seems to me the Supreme Court would pass on whether the amendment had been ratified under this provision. The question arises with the Supreme Court or with the Federal court, is this amendment the law? Has it been ratified in pursuance of this provision? They then pass on who are the qualified voters. Suppose some of the States do not allow people to vote under the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. Could that question possibly arise in determining whether the people voted or not?

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I had stated only a moment ago that if the words "qualified electors" remained in the amendment, and it should be submitted and finally ratified, some very embarrassing questions might arise.

Mr. SWANSON. How could that occur?

Mr. GEORGE. I suggested that very situation.

Mr. SWANSON. When an amendment has been ratified by the legislatures the courts have determined—and the same statement also applies to the election of Senators—that they can not go back and consider the question of the election of the members of the legislative body; that they themselves determine whether their members have been elected and are qualified as members of the legislature. Consequently in contests as to the election of Senators and contests as to the ratification of constitutional amendments the courts can not go behind the election of the members of the legislature which passed on these questions, because the legislatures themselves pass on the qualifications of their members.

The Senator from Georgia drew an analogy between the election of Members of the House of Representatives and of the Senate. We know that under the Constitution the House of Representatives and the Senate are the judges of the election and qualifications of their Members. Consequently a court can not determine that question. I desire to know before I vote whether or not the power is proposed to be put in the Supreme Court as to future amendments which are to be passed upon to decide the qualifications of the electors who voted in the election.

Mr. GEORGE. I should be unable to answer the Senator's question more directly than I have already answered it; that is to say, it seems to me that this identical language might give rise to difficult questions which can only be solved in the future.

Mr. SWANSON. How else could the questions be solved except by the Supreme Court ultimately deciding whether or not a constitutional amendment had been properly passed upon?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not know that it would be held that the States had relinquished the right to control the elections and to prescribe the qualifications of their electors; but under this amendment, it seems to me, that question might well arise, and that was the point which I made.

Mr. SIMMONS. May I ask the Senator from Georgia a question?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. Has not the Supreme Court of the United States repeatedly decided that each State may prescribe the qualification of its electors?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; unquestionably so.

Mr. SWANSON. Unless their action shall be contrary to the Federal Constitution.

Mr. GEORGE. But we are now proposing to put into the Federal Constitution language that might give rise to additional questions, which could only be settled by the court.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Georgia a question. This proposed amendment as drawn would make no change whatever in the process by which the authorities of the States certify to the Secretary of State that an amendment to the Constitution had been duly approved by that State?

Mr. GEORGE. Not at all.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. So that if anybody could go back of a certificate of ratification if this amendment were adopted, they could go back of it under the present Constitution just the same. The Senator will remember that when the certificate of Tennessee, I believe it was, that the woman suffrage amendment had been adopted by that State came in there was some protest, but the Secretary of State issued his proclamation that the amendment had been ratified, and the Supreme Court held, as I am advised, that it could not go back into the question of whether the action of Tennessee was legal or not, the authorities of the State having certified that Tennessee had ratified the amendment.

Mr. GEORGE. The Supreme Court accepted that certification as final.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I think the same situation would exist if this amendment were adopted.

Mr. GEORGE. Undoubtedly, after the certification had been made by the proper State authorities.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Yes.

Mr. GEORGE. But the certification might be stopped if the movement were made in time. These questions might arise, though I do not suggest that they would necessarily arise.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not think there is anything in this amendment which would allow such a question to be raised any more than under the existing Constitution.

Mr. GEORGE. Perhaps not, Mr. President, but when we write into the Federal Constitution the words "qualified electors"—

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But who has the right to say what the qualifications of the electors shall be?

Mr. GEORGE. Who does?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The States.

Mr. GEORGE. The States do so far as the State elections are concerned.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. But amendments are to be submitted to the States under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the States.

Mr. GEORGE. I understand, but why not insert in the joint resolution in lieu of that the word "people," just as we have it now in other constitutional provisions?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I have no objection to that, but it would not make any difference, because if we said "the people shall vote upon the ratification of amendments" nobody at the polls could vote unless he were a qualified elector.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OVERMAN in the chair). The time of the Senator from Georgia has expired. The question is on the motion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DIAL] to strike out the Jones amendment. Is the Senate ready for the question?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I think it is conceded that if the Jones amendment remains in the joint resolution delay will very likely follow any action under it. In fact, that was the consensus of opinion in the Senate when the Jones amendment was adopted, as was demonstrated by the action of the Senate by an almost unanimous vote in immediately approving the amendment of my colleague [Mr. HOWELL] fixing the limit for ratification at eight years instead of six years.

Mr. President, I am in favor of the amendment which has been reported by the committee which is known as the Walsh substitute, but I shall be opposed to it if the Jones amendment is retained. For one, I shall feel constrained to vote against the final adoption of the committee substitute unless the present motion prevails and the language of the Jones amendment is eliminated. I do not believe that the inclusion of the Jones amendment would mean that there would be any intelligent debate in the States on the question of the ratification of constitutional amendments. I can not myself conceive of a legislature devoting its time to the discussion of a moot question upon which its action would have no legal effect whatever.

I can see how, first, by the legislature not convening great delay might take place; and, second, that when the legislature shall convene those opposed to an amendment to the Constitution and who wanted to defeat its passage might unite in dilatory tactics and prevent debate or action, at least by the legislature; and until the legislature acted the people of the State, under the amendment now proposed by the joint resolution, would have no authority to act.

Those of us who believe that proposed constitutional amendments ought to be submitted to the people are put—I will not say intentionally—in somewhat of an embarrassing position by the addition of the Jones amendment, because it may be said, "You voted against a proposal you have always advocated; you voted against the submission of proposed amendments to the Constitution to the people themselves." Mr. President, I am willing to meet that criticism and cast my vote against the joint resolution rather than to vote for the joint resolution with the Jones amendment added to it, for that amendment will mean, in my judgment, two years' delay. If there is going to be any consideration given by the people to proposed amendments to the United States Constitution, it will not be added to by first causing a legal body, constituted for other purposes, to pass on it, with the provision that their judgment is a nullity when they get through. In my opinion, it will only be a means which will be utilized by those who are opposed to a proposed amendment to prevent its adoption at all.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I yield, but only for a question.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I should like to ask the Senator this question: Let us assume that the legislature is opposed to a proposed amendment of the Constitution and does not act on the matter at all; it does not either approve or disapprove, and does not do anything; then what?

Mr. NORRIS. Then nothing can be done.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. There is no possibility of mandamus a legislature, is there?

Mr. NORRIS. None whatever. It would simply be left up in the air and could not be ratified by that State. Therefore it seems to me that the Jones amendment nullifies the real principle involved of submitting proposed amendments to the people direct.

Mr. RALSTON. Mr. President—

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. RALSTON. It had not been my intention to participate in this debate; I have listened to it with great interest and considerable profit to myself; but I wish to ask the Senator from Nebraska, for whose judgment I have the highest respect, whether the same end could not be reached if the Jones amendment were stricken out and the State legislatures of their own motion were left to express their opinion as to what they think of a proposed amendment to the Constitution?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. RALSTON. Then why incorporate the Jones amendment in the joint resolution?

Mr. NORRIS. I do not know; I do not think there is any reason for adopting the Jones amendment except to defeat the real intention of the proposed constitutional amendment itself. There is nothing, as the Senator from Indiana says, if we strike out the Jones amendment, to prevent the legislature of a State, if it wants to resolve itself into a moot court, from discussing a proposed constitutional amendment. It may do so at its leisure, and it will have just as much effect in that case as though it were required to take action.

Mr. President, for fear my time may expire before I reach it if I discuss the pending question longer, I wish to say a word on another amendment which has been suggested by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], and which I think ought to be adopted. The Senator from Montana has expressed himself, as I understand, to the same effect. The amendment which I have in mind provides that when a proposed constitutional amendment is submitted to the people the question of its ratification shall be decided by a majority of those voting on the amendment. There might be a question, in my opinion, under the language of the joint resolution as it now stands, in that a legislature might fix rules and regulations so that a majority of the people voting at a given election would be required to ratify a proposed amendment to the Constitution, which would again practically prevent the ratification of practically nine-tenths of all the amendments that would ever be submitted. The States which have in their constitutions a provision which requires amendments to the State constitution to be approved by a majority of all the people voting at the election have found for all practical purposes that it is an impossibility ever to amend their constitutions. We had such a situation for a great many years in my State, and no amendment could be ratified. So we ought to have it clearly understood that when a proposed amendment to the Constitution is submitted the question shall be decided by a majority of the people voting on the amendment itself.

Mr. President, I hope Senators will not include the Jones amendment in the joint resolution unless they propose to nullify the real object that is sought to be obtained by the proposed amendment to the Constitution. It is an offer to the people that they are going to have an opportunity to vote on such questions and at the same time, it seems to me, that it is holding back the essence of it all if the Congress is compelled, first, to submit a proposed amendment to a body of men who have no authority except to talk about it, who have no authority to take any action that shall be binding even upon themselves when they come to vote.

The only argument in favor of the proposition—at least the only argument that is offered—is that it will lead to more debate on the subject. With that in view we have adopted an amendment extending the time limit to eight years in which a proposed amendment to the Constitution may be adopted. If an amendment of merit to the Constitution of the United States is submitted by the Congress, the people do not need eight years of debate to settle the question intelligently. No such length of time is needed in connection with any other line of procedure. The people will be able to pass just as intelligently, in my judgment, upon a proposed amendment submitted directly to them as though it were first submitted to a moot court in order to get some advice, which probably will not be forthcoming even if the proposed amendment is thus submitted. If there is pending to the Constitution a proposed amendment of merit, one that ought to be approved by the people, and the people are in favor of it, then the sooner they have an opportunity to express their wishes the better it will be, and the nearer we shall approach the fundamental idea of a government by the people. It is not a government for the people to say to them, "You may have a right to vote on a constitutional amendment, but before you do so it must be monkeyed with by a legislature which has no jurisdiction and to whom we will give the power to put it over from year to year."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Nebraska has expired.

The question is upon agreeing to the motion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DIAL].

Mr. ROBINSON. Let it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the motion.

The READING CLERK. The Senator from South Carolina moves to strike out, on page 3, line 1, the words "shall be submitted to the legislatures of the several States, and."

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I suppose that would have to be reached by a motion to reconsider.

Mr. WADSWORTH. The bill is in the Senate now.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum is suggested. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Edge	Jones, Wash.	Randell
Bayard	Edwards	Kendrick	Reed, Mo.
Borah	Ferris	Keyes	Reed, Pa.
Brandegee	Fess	King	Robinson
Brookhart	Frasier	Ladd	Sheppard
Broussard	Gerry	Lodge	Smith
Bruce	Glass	McKellar	Smoot
Burnum	Gooding	McKinley	Stephens
Cameron	Hale	McNary	Swanson
Capper	Harrell	Mayfield	Trammell
Copeland	Harris	Neely	Wadsworth
Couzens	Harrison	Norris	Walsh, Mass.
Curtis	Heflin	Oddie	Walsh, Mont.
Dale	Howell	Overman	Weller
Dial	Johnson, Minn.	Pittman	Willis
Dill	Jones, N. Mex.	Ralston

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, it seems to me that the course of the debate has demonstrated the wisdom of eliminating from the amendment the provision inserted yesterday at the instance of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES].

There is a value to be derived from the discussion of amendments to the Federal Constitution by the legislatures; but the effect of the Jones amendment is to give the legislatures the right to say whether a proposal to amend the Federal Constitution shall be submitted to the people. The language is, in part, that "after affirmative or negative action by the respective legislatures" the people may ratify proposed amendments to the Federal Constitution; consequently, until the legislatures have either approved or disapproved of a proposed amendment to the Constitution it can not be submitted for ratification.

If a legislature should take the position that, having no substantial function to perform in connection with ratification, it would therefore neither approve nor reject a proposed amendment, the result of that, of course, would be to deny to the people of the State the opportunity and privilege of voting upon the constitutional amendment; and unless the legislature of a State within some time short of eight years saw fit either to reject or to approve a proposed constitutional amendment, it could never be voted on by the people of that State.

I do not believe it is sound public policy, if we are to change the process of ratifying amendments to the Federal Constitution, to insert such a provision. If it is wise to change the method under which we have so far proceeded, if it is necessary and essential to say that instead of authorizing the State legislatures to ratify amendments to the Federal Constitution it is better and sounder policy to require that the ratification shall be by the vote of the people themselves, then why require that before they shall be permitted to vote upon an amendment the legislatures of their States must act either affirmatively or negatively respecting it? If there is advantage to be derived from changing the process of ratification, it will come more wholesomely by not imposing such a restriction as is contemplated by the Jones amendment.

There would be some justification, from the standpoint of Senators who think the Constitution ought to be more difficult to amend, for saying that ratification shall be both by the legislatures and by vote of the people; but that is not the proposal which the Senate is considering. The proposal is that before the people of a State shall vote on a constitutional amendment the legislature must either accept or reject that amendment, the object being, of course, to make the action of the legislature advisory. As pointed out by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. RALSTON], the legislature, like the Senate, can express its sense or conviction respecting an issue involved in a constitutional amendment or upon any other question of public policy; so that nothing whatever is accomplished by retaining the Jones amendment, except to give the legislatures the power to prevent the people of their States from voting upon an amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NEELY. I wish to ask the able Senator from Arkansas if it would not also be possible, if the pending joint resolution were passed and the amendment which it proposes were later adopted, for one more than a fourth of the States by their inaction alone to make it utterly impossible to amend the Constitution at all?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes. In States where a proposal is entirely repugnant to the legislatures the people of those States might be denied the opportunity of passing upon the amendment, and for that reason it might be made very difficult to amend the Constitution. If it is necessary to provide for the ratification of constitutional amendments by popular vote—and that is the real issue; do not deceive yourselves—let us frankly vote to do so. The purpose of the amendment is to enable the people directly to pass upon constitutional amendments, and it grows out of the belief here and in the country that legislatures have ratified constitutional amendments that could not have received ratification if it had been required to be accomplished through popular vote. That is where this proposal originates. Of course, there are other considerations attached to it and resulting from it; but the proposal is to change the method of ratification, and you are not accomplishing any wholesome result by giving the legislatures a perfunctory duty to perform.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DIAL].

Mr. McKELLAR. On that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, I do not wish to take much of the time of the Senate, but I want to say one word in reference to this measure. I have already made it plain that I am in favor of a proposition to give a majority of the people of the United States the right to amend their Constitution. I am opposed to any system of machinery that will make it harder to amend the Constitution.

Some in the debate have claimed that this arrangement in reference to the legislatures would not make it harder, and others have claimed that it would. The very fact that that question is debatable here in the Senate makes it to me a proposition that should be opposed.

I do not care to submit to the legislatures of the States an amendment that may or may not make it easier to amend the Constitution of the United States. I want to know that it will make it easier. It is the gateway amendment to the rights of the people, and I do not want to take the time or trouble to submit anything to them upon that question that is debatable.

Therefore I say that if this Jones amendment is not stricken out I shall certainly vote against the whole proposition. I believe it is more important that we make a political issue of this question of giving the people the right to amend their Constitution, and take it before them to see if we can not get somebody elected to Congress who believes in the people and who will give them their rightful chance than to submit some amendment that may make amendment of the Constitution easier or may make it harder, and probably in the end will only complicate the machinery of amending the Constitution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the motion made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DIAL] to strike out what is known as the Jones amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the Secretary will call the roll. The principal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NORRIS (when Mr. SHIPSTEAD's name was called). As announced before, the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is detained from the Senate on account of illness. On this vote, if he were present, he would vote "yea." He is paired with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PEPPER].

Mr. McKELLAR (when Mr. SHIELDS's name was called). I am informed that my colleague [Mr. SHIELDS] is ill to-day. If he were present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. WALSH of Montana (when Mr. WHEELER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. WHEELER] is absent on account of illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DIAL. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS], and in his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I wish to announce that if my colleague [Mr. PEPPER] were present, he would vote "nay." He is paired, on this question only, with the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD], as has been announced.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD], which I transfer to the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] and vote "yea."

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCORMICK] with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]; and

The junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. ERNST] with the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

Mr. SMITH. I have a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 39, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—39.

Adams	Edwards	Jones, N. Mex.	Reed, Mo.
Ashurst	Ferris	Kendrick	Robinson
Bayard	Fess	Ladd	Sheppard
Borah	Frasier	McKellar	Simmons
Brookhart	Gerry	Mayfield	Smith
Capper	Harris	Neely	Swanson
Copeland	Harrison	Norris	Trammell
Cousens	Hoflin	Pittman	Underwood
Cummins	Howell	Ralston	Walsh, Mont.
Dill	Johnson, Minn.	Ransdell

NAYS—35.

Ball	Dale	Keyes	Reed, Pa.
Brandeggee	Edge	King	Smoot
Broussard	Elkins	Lodge	Stephens
Bruce	Fletcher	McKinley	Wadsworth
Burns	Glass	McLean	Walsh, Mass.
Cameron	Gooding	McNary	Watson
Caraway	Hale	Moses	Weller
Colt	Harrell	Oddie	Wills
Curtis	Jones, Wash.	Overman

NOT VOTING—22.

Dial	La Follette	Phipps	Stanley
Ernst	Lenroot	Shields	Sterling
Fernald	McCormick	Shipstead	Warren
George	Norbeck	Shortridge	Wheeler
Greene	Owen	Spencer
Johnson, Calif.	Pepper	Standfield

So Mr. DIAL's motion was agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. NORRIS. As the Secretary read the Jones amendment at one time during the debate it did not seem to me that he read all the language of the amendment, and I want to make inquiry as to whether there is not some other language in that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary read a part of the amendment, but the whole amendment was before the Senate, and it has been stricken out on the motion of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DIAL].

Mr. REED of Missouri. Mr. President, in line 5, on page 3, I move to strike out the words "qualified electors" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "a majority of the people who vote on the amendment," so that the clause would read "when ratified by a vote of a majority of the people who vote on the amendment in three-fourths of the several States."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, some amendment should be inserted in line 6 on page 3. That clause reading "said election to be held under such rules and regulations as each State shall prescribe" was inserted later in the consideration of the amendment, but the word "said" is quite improper there, because no election is referred to. I move that the word "said" in line 6 be stricken out, and that the words "at an" be inserted in lieu thereof, and that after the word "election" the words "in each" be inserted, so that it will read:

In three-fourths of the States, at an election in each to be held under such rules and regulations—

And so forth.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, when the Jones amendment, so called, was added to the Walsh amendment, so called, a considerable number of Senators believed that that brought the Walsh amendment to such a condition as to satisfy them. A considerable number of those Senators had been intending otherwise to support the original resolution as introduced and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, perfected, as it was, upon the floor during the first days of this debate.

It is, therefore, I think, fair to say that the original joint resolution has not had any test vote in the Senate as compared with the committee substitute now perfected by the amendment adopted just a moment ago, but minus the Jones amendment. I therefore desire to introduce as an amendment to the pending joint resolution the text of the original joint resolution as introduced, perfected as it was upon the floor at my request several days ago, and I ask the Secretary to read it and then I wish to impose upon the Senate for five minutes in explanation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the proposed amendment.

The READING CLERK. As a substitute the Senator from New York offers the following:

The Congress, whenever two-thirds of each House shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which in either case shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of this Constitution when ratified by three-fourths of the several States through their legislatures or conventions, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress or the convention: Provided, That the members of at least one house in each of the legislatures which may ratify shall be elected after such amendments shall have been proposed; that any State may provide for a popular vote to affirm or reverse the action of its legislature, such vote to stand in lieu of prior action of the legislature; and that until three-fourths of the States have ratified or more than one-fourth of the States have rejected or defeated a proposed amendment any State may change its vote: And provided further, That no State without its consent shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair suggests to the Senator from New York that the original joint resolution was reported with an amendment proposed to it, upon which the Senate has been acting. If the Senate should now vote down the committee amendment that would raise the question of the Senator's original proposition.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Is it not the situation that the committee reported an amendment which was to strike out the Wadsworth proposition and insert the Walsh proposition?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is true.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Now, can the Senator from New York move to strike out what has not yet been adopted and insert something against which the committee reported?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, may I make a suggestion? The question before the Senate now is, as I see it, upon concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole, as amended. If that amendment is rejected, then the original joint resolution is before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that that would be the question.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I was laboring under the impression that the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole had been concurred in this morning.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; we had just been perfecting the amendment adopted as in Committee of the Whole. Now we vote on the question whether the amendment adopted as in Committee of the Whole, as now perfected, shall be concurred in by the Senate. If it is concurred in by the Senate, it takes the place of the original joint resolution. If it is not concurred in, then the Senator has his original joint resolution before the Senate for consideration.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I was proceeding under a misunderstanding. I thought the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole had been concurred in in the Senate and that the joint resolution was open to further amendment.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I inquire of the Chair whether the question is, Shall the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole be concurred in?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole be concurred in by the Senate?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Necessarily, I must withdraw my amendment. I thought I had heard the President pro tempore, who preceded the Senator from North Carolina as Presiding Officer, announce that the amendment adopted as in Committee of the Whole was concurred in by the Senate, and that the joint resolution was open to further amendment. That was my impression, but I may have been mistaken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon concurring in the Senate in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WADSWORTH. There is just this difference between the two propositions: The Walsh amendment strikes out from article 5 of the Constitution, in effect, the second alternative which the Congress has possessed all these 130 years, of submitting amendments to the Constitution to conventions to be called within the several States. That is to be eliminated as one of the alternatives and but one method is to be followed, namely, submission direct to the people in the several States. It is true that we have never resorted to the alternative of submitting amendments to State conventions, for reasons that apparently have seemed good from time to time.

I for one regret the striking out of that alternative entirely. I believe that some day it may prove, if retained, exceedingly valuable, for it is entirely possible that some day in the years to come an amendment will be proposed to the States of such an involved character, contemplating two or three or four subjects interlocked one with the other and having to do with the form of our Government, that the only practical way of giving consideration to them and proper conclusions reached upon them is through conventions composed of delegates elected by the people, just as was the case when the original Constitution was ratified in the thirteen States.

As Marshall said, as I recollect it, in one of his opinions later on when he was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the people upon that instance used the only machinery that they could possibly use in order to get an intelligent conclusion. I think it is a mistake to take out that alternative. I do not think it is controlling, and I have said so before. I regret its elimination, for no Senator here can prophesy truly and accurately as to what may occur in the future. We may have a national convention called at the request of two-thirds of the States some day for a general revision of the Constitution, and that national convention may propose a number of things.

The national convention is still provided for in the Walsh amendment, but it certainly would be helpful if, following a rather comprehensive revision of our Constitution recommended by a national convention, it should be in turn referred to conventions held within the several States where the different interlocking elements and suggestions may be thrashed out by men elected solely for that purpose.

That is one difference between the original joint resolution and the Walsh amendment. It may not seem controlling to Senators here at this day and hour, but no man can tell whether it would not be an exceedingly valuable thing to retain. Certainly it is not in violation of the theory that the people shall rule in the matter of making changes in their fundamental law if the people may do it directly through conventions composed of delegates elected by them, and in some instances it is the only way they can do it effectively.

Now, as to the normal method of having the votes taken in the States on a normal amendment such as we have been discussing, the difference between the Walsh amendment and the original joint resolution is that the Walsh amendment is mandatory in that it provides that all amendments to the Constitution hereafter shall be ratified by direct vote. The original joint resolution on that score contains this language:

That any State may provide for a popular vote to affirm or reverse the action of its legislature, such vote to stand in lieu of prior action of the legislature.

I apprehend that the right given to the States under such language would be almost immediately taken advantage of. I do not believe there is a State in the Union whose people and legislature would neglect to take advantage of the right thus given to them. We have had the case of Ohio where the people attempted to take that right, the right of passing upon Federal amendments, but the Supreme Court, I think, in a perfectly correct decision, said that under Article V as now existing they did not have the right to vote on Federal amendments. This provision would give them that right.

Senators have said a good deal about delay. Let me remind the Senate that under that permissive clause, which, in my judgment, would in the long run become in effect mandatory or, rather, universal in its application, a legislature can act immediately upon an amendment as soon as it is submitted if the legislature is in session, and any delay thereafter would be inflicted solely upon the demand of the people of the State. In other words, the Legislature of Ohio could ratify an amendment; and if its action was satisfactory in that regard to the people of that State, the ratification would stand so far as that State is concerned. But if it were not satisfactory, within a very short time thereafter a popular vote could be had upon the question. So I think, in so far as the saving of time is concerned—and many Senators seem to be concerned about it, although personally I am not, because I think the more slowly we proceed, generally speaking, in amending the Constitution the better, within reasonable limits, of course—I would suggest to those Senators who are worried about the length of time that it seems to me that would provide a quicker solution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from New York has expired.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, before a vote is taken on what is in effect the relative merits of the so-called Walsh amendment as amended and the original proposition made by the Senator from New York, I desire to call the attention of the Senate to a situation which exists in the committee amendment as amended with reference to the number of people that possibly may ratify an amendment to the Constitution.

I had hoped, and still hope, that the amendment might be in such shape as to enable me to support it, but the Senate has adopted an amendment to it which provides, in line 5, that ratification shall be had by a vote of the majority of the people who vote on the amendments. Now, there is no provision at all that the election shall be held at a regular election. That is within the control of each State. It is very readily conceivable that a State might provide that ratification should be had at some special election where this matter would be the only thing that would be at issue and where there would be a very small percentage of the electorate who would be at the polls.

Senators know how difficult it is, even in a hotly contested campaign, to get electors to take enough interest in public affairs to go to the polls. Some one has brought out the fact in this debate that Senators are elected here—distinguished and able Senators—by a vote of 10 per cent of the qualified electorate, or 15 per cent, or 18 or 20 per cent.

If the only question involved would be the ratification of some complicated amendment, it is very readily understandable that we would have only a small minority of the people voting at the election, and yet the amendment now provides that a majority of those, not a majority of the people or a majority of the electors, but a majority of those who vote on the particular amendment shall have the power of ratification. In other words, it does not make for majority rule, it seems to me, at all, but makes in that instance for rule by a very small minority. Yet that is the situation as it exists under the amendment in the form in which we must now vote upon it.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, on yesterday the Jones amendment, so called, was adopted, and because of that the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL] suggested an amendment, which was agreed to, changing the period within which amendments might be ratified from six years to eight years. It seems to me that, the Jones amendment having been eliminated, it would probably be wise to restore the original language of the amendment so as to have it in its original form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is reminded by the Secretary that the Senator from Colorado has already spoken once.

Mr. ADAMS. That is true. I was merely calling this point to the attention of the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am very much in favor of the joint resolution as it has been perfected simply referring constitutional amendments to the people of the several States. There can not be any danger in referring constitutional amendments to the people. The people are the last depositories of power, and there is no reason in the world why that should not be done. Surely it is better than submitting constitutional amendments in the haphazard way—

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall do so in just one moment.

It is infinitely better than to submit a constitutional amendment in a haphazard way, first, to the legislature, which has no power to pass upon the amendment, and then to let that legislature, by inaction either submit it or not submit it to the people. My own judgment is that the amendment as it is now written is an amendment for which we may all vote. I do not see how anyone who believes in popular rule can vote against the amendment. Now I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do believe in popular rule; but how would the Senator from Tennessee like to have an important constitutional amendment ratified in his State by 500 voters?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have known a constitutional amendment to be ratified by a majority of the 133 members of the Legislature of Tennessee.

Mr. BORAH. That is not popular government.

Mr. McKELLAR. No, sir; and I say that I should prefer that all voters in the State should vote on any constitutional amendment submitted to them for ratification; but under this amendment all of the people would have a right to vote on the question; if they should be interested enough in it to vote one way or the other they would have the right to do so.

Mr. CARAWAY. But the Senator was opposed to letting the legislature pass upon the question and then submitting it to the people.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I was opposed to letting the legislature talk about the question and then submit it to the people. I thought it was a duplicate piece of machinery.

Mr. CARAWAY. I was just going to ask the Senator a question. Yesterday afternoon by a very large majority the Senate adopted the Jones amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. It was adopted by a vote of 35 to 29.

Mr. CARAWAY. And this morning the Senate reversed that vote. So evidently in the Senate of the United States in 24 hours Senators change their minds.

Mr. McKELLAR. Everyone ought to have the right to change his mind when he knows he has made a mistake.

Mr. CARAWAY. Then I hope the Senator will have a chance to change his mind.

Mr. McKELLAR. It may be so; but I do not think I am mistaken about the proposition.

Mr. CARAWAY. But what I was intending to say was this: The Senator from Tennessee was opposed to the people having a chance to find out what the election was about, and yet the Senate fought all day yesterday and took action then, and then fought all this morning and took an entirely different action. Either Senators did not have any information on yesterday or they have not any to-day, because they have changed their minds. Is not that a very strong illustration that it would be well sometimes to consider things?

Mr. McKELLAR. There were quite a number more Senators who voted to-day than who voted on yesterday. The vote, as I recall, was then 35 to 29.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President—

Mr. McKELLAR. Just one moment. The vote on yesterday was 35 to 29. To-day at least 10 more Senators came into the Chamber, and the advocates of the legislature plan got their 35 votes just as before, while the advocates of the other plan increased their vote by nine.

Mr. CARAWAY. But I saw Senators vote on yesterday one way and to-day another way.

Mr. McKELLAR. That may be so.

Mr. CARAWAY. And yet those Senators look upon themselves as the leaders of the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Arkansas can not charge me with that.

Mr. CARAWAY. I do not.

Mr. McKELLAR. I voted against the amendment on yesterday and I voted against it to-day.

Mr. CARAWAY. I did not charge that the Senator from Tennessee changed his vote.

Mr. McKELLAR. I, of course, understand that the Senator from Arkansas does not make that charge.

Mr. President, it seems to me that we should do one thing or the other; we should either leave the question of ratification to the legislatures, where it is now under the present Constitution, or we should refer proposed amendments to the people. My judgment is that the pending proposal, so far as it has been agreed to, should prevail, and I hope that it will prevail.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I have never felt any great amount of enthusiasm for the pending proposed constitutional amendment at any time. I became interested in it because of my very great respect for the Senator who originally introduced it, but I have not been able at any time to become convinced that it was a wise move. So many things have taken place during the debate that I am convinced that the Senate itself is not by any means well informed as to just what it desires to do with reference to the amendment.

As the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY] has suggested, we have a radically different proposal this morning from that which we approved yesterday evening.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator? Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. CARAWAY. There are no two Senators who agree, apparently, about what this amendment means when it provides that in the future proposed constitutional amendments shall be referred to the people—whether it means all the people or a majority of those who vote upon the question at a given election or a majority of all of those who vote in such an election.

Mr. BORAH. Yes. Mr. President, I was very much in favor of the suggestion that proposed amendments to the Constitution should be carried directly to the people, and that as directly as possible the voice of the people should be recorded either for or against them, but I shall not vote for the proposed amendment now pending if it is left in the condition and contains such terms that a proposed constitutional amendment could be adopted in the United States as a practical proposition by voters representing possibly less than 5 per cent of the electorate of the different States of the Union. There ought to be deliberation; there ought to be the necessity of having the real voice of at least a majority of the people upon a question of this kind. We have now so amended the joint resolution that, while a proposed amendment of the Constitution will be submitted to the people, if only 500 people vote on the question in the State of New York and 300 of them vote in favor of it, the proposed amendment will be ratified by the State of New York. That is not popular government; that is not constitutional government; that is not representative government. It is dealing with a constitutional question in a way that we would not deal even with a statute.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. DILL. How does the Senator think that the joint resolution could be amended so that a majority of all the voters of the States would vote on the question of ratification?

Mr. BORAH. The amendment we adopted a little while ago is the one which renders the amendment obnoxious to me.

Mr. DILL. What I am getting at is this: There is no way to determine, unless we take a special census for that purpose, how many voters there are in a State. All such provisions with which I am familiar in reference to the people voting on amendments to State constitutions require that a certain percentage or a certain majority of the people voting at the election shall control. That is the difference between the statement in the amendment and the ordinary statement in many State constitutions.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, some years ago there was submitted to the people of my State a proposed amendment to the State constitution, and that amendment was adopted, although only a very small portion of even a majority of the voters of the State voted for it, under a decision of the Supreme Court that a majority of those who voted upon the question was sufficient to carry it. I had occasion to go into the matter at that time, and my conviction in regard to it has remained with me—that that is a very serious mistake with reference to the adoption of constitutional amendments.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator there?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. BORAH. I do.

Mr. NORRIS. There was in the constitution of my State such a provision as, from what he has said, I judge the Senator advocates, providing that the constitution could not be amended except by a majority voting for it and constituting a majority of all the electors voting at the election. The result was the other extreme from what the Senator found, namely, that it was, for all practical purposes, an impossibility to amend the constitution.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if a majority of the voters of a State are not in favor of amending this Constitution of ours, so far as that State is concerned—and, if it applies to all the States, so far as all the States are concerned—I am willing to leave the Constitution as the fathers drafted it and as it has existed for nearly 150 years, rather than to have, say, 2 per cent of the voters ratify a proposed amendment. I want to live under a Constitution which when it is finally written and finally adopted represents the judgment of at least a majority of the people of my State or the people of the different States who have to pass upon it.

I think it is a serious proposition, Mr. President, to have an amendment to the Constitution of the United States—and in the case of a State constitution it is serious enough—adopted by just any vote that may see fit to go out. In these days of organization and propaganda those who may be interested in a proposed amendment, if they only get out the members of their organization, may carry an amendment of this kind under its terms. I feel this ought to go back to the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole as amended in the Senate.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. At what time, if ever, in this proceeding before the final disposition of the measure will it be in order to take up again for consideration by an appropriate motion the amendment of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] which was adopted a little while ago?

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I take it that it will have to come under a motion to reconsider. The amendment of the Senator from Missouri was adopted by a viva voce vote. I voted against it, but I heard very few who did vote against it. There seemed to be a very strong vote in favor of it. The amendment was adopted, as I have said, by a viva voce vote, and I think the only way to reach it is by a motion to reconsider.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It can be reached by a motion to reconsider. As the Senator from Florida has stated, the amendment was adopted by a viva voce vote.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I make the motion to reconsider because I think, in the haste of the moment, we made a very bad mistake.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New York to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] was adopted.

Mr. EDGE. I ask that the amendment of the Senator from Missouri may be stated.

Mr. McKELLAR. I make the point of no quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The principal clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Dial	Jones, Wash.	Reed, Mo.
Ashurst	Dill	Kendrick	Reed, Pa.
Bayard	Edge	Keyes	Robinson
Borah	Edwards	Ladd	Sheppard
Brandegee	Hikins	Lodge	Simmons
Brookhart	Perria	McKellar	Smith
Broussard	Penn	McKinley	Smoot
Bruce	Fletcher	McLean	Stephens
Bursum	Fraser	McNary	Swann
Cameron	Gerry	Mayfield	Tamm
Capper	Glass	Moses	Underwood
Caraway	Hale	Neely	Wadsworth
Coit	Harris	Norris	Walsh, Mass.
Copeland	Harrison	Oddie	Walsh, Mont.
Coussens	Heflin	Overman	Warren
Cummings	Howell	Pittman	Watson
Curtis	Johnson, Minn.	Ralston	Weller
Dale	Jones, N. Mex.	Randall	Willis

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is upon the reconsideration of the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] was adopted.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Mr. President, if I can have the attention of the Senate for just a moment, as the text stood before the amendment was offered it was the consensus of opinion—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can speak only by unanimous consent.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Why?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is operating under a rule under which a Senator can occupy the floor but one time.

Mr. REED of Missouri. I have not occupied it at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair was told by the clerk that the Senator had.

Mr. REED of Missouri. The clerk is badly mistaken. I have done nothing here except to offer an amendment. I have not said a word in the discussion. I think perhaps the clerk was warranted in assuming that as I had been in the Chamber I probably had spoken, but he is mistaken in this instance.

It was the consensus of opinion that as the text stood it would be construed by the courts to mean that if an amendment received a majority of the votes of the people voting on the amendment it would be thereby duly adopted, and that it would not be required that it should have a majority of all the votes cast on all or any propositions which might be voted for at the same election. I think that was the correct construction. I think it can be easily demonstrated that that must be the construction; but in order to save any question, and to remove the doubts of those who had some fears, I offered this amendment.

Mr. President, when we adopt an amendment to the Constitution to-day, by the present method, it is not required that it shall have the vote of the majority of all the members of the legislative bodies, but a majority of those voting. When we adopt any proposition by a popular vote, it is not required that the particular proposition shall have a majority of all the votes cast on all questions. If it were, then it would frequently happen that a man who receives a clear plurality of the votes as between himself and a particular antagonist would not be declared elected, because some other man might have received a greater number of votes, and he might not have a plurality if his plurality were estimated according to that vote.

It has been said, I understand—I have been absent from the Chamber a few moments—that the present proposition would allow a small minority of the people to adopt an amendment to the Constitution. I know of no way to compel the people to vote. All that we can do is to offer them the opportunity to vote. If we adopt a rule that an amendment must be adopted by a majority of all the people voting at an election, then if you have a constitutional amendment submitted when there is a general election for officers you will never succeed in adopting a single amendment to the Constitution of the United States, in my opinion.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. REED of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Would it not be wise, then, to leave that matter to the States? Why attempt here to lay down a rule under which the States shall carry on their elections?

Mr. REED of Missouri. No; I do not think that answers it. We have a right to lay down here a rule that there shall be a submission to a popular vote, and say what shall constitute the necessary vote to decide the question. If it be said that only a small number of men will vote, yet the opportunity has been afforded to them to vote; and if it be said that because a small number happen to vote the amendment should not be declared adopted, what about the present rule?

The last two amendments to the Constitution were adopted, one of them, I believe, by a vote of a little over 4,000 citizens of the United States, and the other, I think, by something over 3,000. I have the exact figures in my office. That which I am now saying is from recollection.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator is speaking of members of the legislatures?

Mr. REED of Missouri. Absolutely; members of the legislatures, not one of whom was elected upon the issue that he was to vote in a particular way upon the constitutional amendment, and in several instances the members of the legislatures voted directly opposite to votes that had been cast at general elections in their States at a very recent period prior to their votes. So that you have your choice here to give all of the people a chance to vote, and count the votes of those who embrace their opportunity, letting the majority decide it, thus giving all the people of the State an opportunity to vote, or to allow the law to stand as it is now, where a few men elected to the legislature can change the fundamental law of the land.

I think the amendment ought to stand; and if it does not stand, if we adopt some rule here that deprives the people of a chance to vote, or that requires the country before it can amend its Constitution to pass over obstacles greater than now exist, then we would better not amend the Constitution at all.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I have listened to this debate for the last week. It seems to me the best thing to do in connection with this joint resolution is to refer it back to the Judiciary Committee and see if that committee can not redraft it, get it in better shape, and inform the Senate better as to what its various provisions mean.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH], providing for a direct vote of the people, has been objected to by a great many Senators, because it would not give time for discussion and consideration. Others think that it will let the Federal courts pass on the qualification of voters. There has been debate as to whether "rules and regulations" controls the qualifications of voters, or simply the method and place of voting. The matter is surrounded with so many doubts and with so much uncertainty, with such a lack of definiteness, even on the part of those who favor it, that it seems to me before a constitutional amendment is submitted to the people there ought to be more concurrence in the body proposing that the State pass upon it as to what it means and what its clear intention is. It seems to me that we could get better results, we could have a better-drawn amendment, if we should refer it back to the committee, so that with the objections that have been urged here and the amendments that have been offered and voted on the committee can act with more light. Therefore I am going to make a motion to recommit the joint resolution to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. EDGE. In other words, Mr. President, frankly admitting our inability to perfect an amendment satisfactorily on the floor of the Senate?

Mr. SWANSON. I do not admit that inability. I admit that we ought to start with a better-drawn measure than this before we proceed to amend it. We have doubt as to what the amendment of the Senator from New York means. We have a great deal of doubt as to various phases of it. I have a great deal of confidence in the Judiciary Committee. I think it is one of the ablest committees in the Senate, and when that committee draws a constitutional amendment it is very rarely amended very much here.

I should like to let the people vote directly.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. SWANSON. I have but 10 minutes. I will yield later.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. SWANSON. I feel that if the people are given an opportunity to vote directly, it ought to be on an amendment that will certainly guarantee the States, without doubt or question, that they shall control the qualifications and the election. As I listened to this debate, some question has arisen as to whether or not that is true.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Every one of you voted to take that away from them on the woman-suffrage question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia has the floor.

Mr. SWANSON. I have the floor. If the Senator from Missouri wants me to yield, I will give him an opportunity. I voted against the woman-suffrage amendment. The Senator's allusion does not apply to me.

Mr. REED of Missouri. The Senator was right then.

Mr. SWANSON. I am usually right. The Senator is wrong only when he differs with me, which is very often.

Mr. President, it does seem to me that a matter so important as this, so far-reaching as this, which will control for a long time the method of amending the Federal Constitution, should be more carefully considered; and I therefore move to refer the joint resolution back to the Judiciary Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from Virginia to recommit the joint resolution to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, on that motion I wish to be heard.

The able Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] says he would like to have the joint resolution referred back to the Judiciary Committee so that we may explain to the Senate what it means. Will the able Senator now point out those recondite and hidden phrases in this plain English that he does not understand?

Mr. SWANSON. I will.

Mr. ASHURST. I wish the Senator would do so; I yield for that purpose.

Mr. SWANSON. All right. Will the Senator tell me—

Mr. ASHURST. I will.

Mr. SWANSON. The Senator does not know yet what my question is going to be. Will the Senator tell me, when the question comes up, as to who passes on the qualification of voters and whether or not the amendment was ratified by the State? Does the Federal court pass on it, or not?

Mr. ASHURST. The judges of election in the various precincts through Virginia pass upon the qualifications of the voters as the voters present themselves. Under the law of Virginia there must first be a registration at which qualified voters must present themselves and register, and then the judges of election are the judges of the qualified voters.

Mr. SWANSON. But the question is whether or not Virginia has permitted her qualified voters to vote—

Mr. ASHURST. She has.

Mr. SWANSON. And whether, under the law, she has ratified this amendment. Who passes on that question, as to whether or not Virginia is one of the three-fourths of the States? Do the Federal courts pass on it.

Mr. ASHURST. All right; who passed upon the great and magnanimous and worthy act that Virginia performed when she sent CLAUDE A. SWANSON to the United States Senate?

Mr. SWANSON. The Senate passes on that, finally.

Mr. ASHURST. That is true.

Mr. SWANSON. It is the final judge of my election returns.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator knows that the various judges of elections certify to the proper authorities of the county, and they to the proper authorities of the State—

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. No; I do not yield. I am answering the question, and when I have finished answering the question I will yield. Then the secretary of state certifies, by direction of the governor, and that is done precisely as it is done under the constitutional amendment. What other hidden phrase, obscure phrase—

Mr. SWANSON. Then the question would be raised as to whether Virginia had passed on the amendment properly under this amendment. As I understand, the judge of election down at Sycamore precinct would be the ultimate judge as to whether the constitutional amendment was properly adopted or not; or would the Supreme Court of the United States be the judge?

Mr. ASHURST. The judge of election at Sycamore precinct—

Mr. SWANSON. Everybody knows—

Mr. ASHURST. Will the Senator not let me answer?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. ASHURST. Who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona has the floor.

Mr. ASHURST. Then I will keep it long enough to answer the question. The judge of election at that precinct is the judge of the qualified electors who present themselves in that precinct. Is that a clear answer?

Mr. SWANSON. That is clear; but then the question comes, Has Virginia as a whole ratified? Sycamore precinct can not determine whether an amendment has been passed on by the entire State or not. Is the Supreme Court of the United States to decide it? I want to know whether the Federal courts would ultimately pass on the qualifications of the voters.

Mr. ASHURST. That is a political question, not a judicial question. [Laughter.] There is no occasion for an outburst of that sort. That is a political question. The question as to whether a government is a republican form of government or not is not a judicial, but a political question. That is a political question, not to be determined by judicial procedure. When the secretary of state of Virginia sends to the Secretary of State of the United States a certificate that that State has ratified a pending amendment, you can not go behind that certificate.

Mr. SWANSON. I would like to have that stated in the proposed amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator further yield?

Mr. ASHURST. Certainly. I am handicapped. I appreciate the handicap under which I labor when I attempt to talk law with the Senator from Virginia, especially Virginia law. But it so happens that he has attacked me on my strongest point—

Mr. SWANSON. The reason why I asked the Senator the question was because I recognize that he is a great constitutional lawyer. That is the reason I interrogated him. I concede what the Senator says about his superior ability as a lawyer, and I was asking for information. As I understand the Senator, his position is that when the State of Virginia or the State of Mississippi certifies, through its secretary of state, that a majority of the qualified voters have ratified an amendment or refused to ratify it, that is final?

Mr. ASHURST. That is true.

Mr. SWANSON. Will the Senator please put that in his amendment so that there will be no doubt about it?

Mr. CARAWAY. May I ask a question of the Senator? There will be no way, then, for the court to go back and say that some people who were qualified to vote were denied the right to vote?

Mr. ASHURST. Let me just answer the Senator from Virginia. At the present time when the legislature of State "A" ratifies an amendment, the secretary of state, under the seal of the State, certifies that to the Secretary of State of the United States. That is a procedure of which all persons take judicial notice. I can call to mind instances where, had the returns been gone into, fraud and corruption would have been shown, but no one did go or could have gone beyond the returns in such a case. I appreciate, without any levity, that there might be some force in the Senator's suggestion, but no more force than the suggestion that it ought to have been there all these years. In other words—

Mr. SWANSON. If the Senator will yield—

Mr. ASHURST. Just a moment. I other words, when the Secretary of State of the United States has received from the appropriate authorities of three-fourths of the States proper certificates that an amendment duly submitted has been ratified by those States, the Secretary of State of the United States is permitted—not required, but permitted—to issue his proclamation that the amendment has been ratified. In the cases of the early amendments no proclamations at all were issued. They went by judicial notice; and I can well see that a proclamation ought to be issued, because in the case of the amendment submitted in 1810 it was stated in the schoolbooks and a great many politicians and even Congress thought that the amendment had been ratified. Therefore in 1810 the custom was inaugurated of sending out notices and proclamations that amendments had been ratified.

Mr. SWANSON. Is the Senator satisfied that no injunction could be issued against the Secretary of State or the certifying officer in any State to prevent him saying that the amendment had not been ratified by a majority?

Mr. ASHURST. I think a temporary injunction could be issued, but as soon as a judge who knew any law could reach it, he would dissolve it.

Mr. SWANSON. Does the Senator think an injunction would lie to compel an officer to say a State had not ratified a proposed amendment by a vote of its qualified voters? If such an injunction could be issued against a certifying officer of a State, who would determine as to whether the amendment had been properly ratified or not?

Mr. ASHURST. If it is determinable at all, if it is of a juridical nature at all, the State would determine it.

Mr. SWANSON. Is not the question as to whether an amendment to the Constitution has been ratified a juridical question?

Mr. ASHURST. That is a political question.

Mr. SWANSON. Does not the Supreme Court pass on questions relating to the Constitution?

Mr. ASHURST. It construes the Constitution.

Mr. SWANSON. Suppose a question arises as to whether an amendment has been properly ratified.

Mr. ASHURST. I doubt very much whether that court would pass on such a question. I think that is a political question.

Mr. SWANSON. Under the present Constitution the legislature passes an act, and the secretary of the Commonwealth certifies it.

I have an idea that you could look at the record of the general assembly and see whether a majority had voted for the ratification of the amendment or not, and if it were found that a majority had not voted for ratification, then it could properly be said that it had not been ratified. But you can not go behind the election returns of members of the legislature of a State, because it has been decided repeatedly in connection with the election of Senators that each legislative body passes on the qualifications of its own members, questions of fraud, and so on. It seems to me that when you go to the people, a serious question arises as to the extent to which Federal courts can pass on the elections, as to whether a majority voted, and as to whether they were qualified. That is the only question that has not been answered in reference to this amendment.

Mr. ASHURST. I think that is a proper question, and if I have any time left—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The question is on the motion made by the Senator from Virginia to recommit the joint resolution to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. SMITH. Is this a direct vote now as to whether the joint resolution shall be recommitted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to recommit. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DIAL (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS], and in his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. FLETCHER (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. BALL]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania (when Mr. PEPPER's name was called). On this question my colleague [Mr. PEPPER] is paired with the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD]. If present, my colleague would vote "yea" and the Senator from Minnesota would vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING], and in his absence withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCORMICK] with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]; and
The junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. ERNST] with the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY].

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I transfer my general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD] to the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], and vote "yea."

Mr. SIMMONS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. HARRELD]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. As heretofore announced, my colleague [Mr. WHEELER] is absent on account of illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 41, nays 28, as follows:

YEAS—41.

Bayard	Elkins	Ladd	Simmons
Borah	Fess	Lodge	Smoot
Broussard	Glass	McKellar	Stephens
Brace	Hale	McKinley	Swanson
Bursum	Harris	McLean	Wadsworth
Cameron	Heflin	McNary	Walsh, Mont.
Caraway	Jones, N. Mex.	Moses	Watson
Colt	Jones, Wash.	Oddie	Wills
Couzens	Kendrick	Ralston
Curtis	Keyes	Ransdell
Dale	King	Reed, Pa.

NAYS—28.

Adams	Dill	Howell	Reed, Mo.
Ashurst	Edge	Johnson, Minn.	Robinson
Brandegee	Edwards	Mayfield	Sheppard
Brookhart	Ferris	Neely	Trammell
Capper	Frazier	Norris	Underwood
Copeland	Gerry	Overman	Walsh, Mass.
Cummins	Harrison	Pittman	Weller

NOT VOTING—27.

Ball	Greene	Owen	Spencer
Dial	Harreld	Pepper	Stanfield
Ernst	Johnson, Calif.	Phipps	Stanley
Fernald	La Follette	Shields	Sterling
Fletcher	Lenroot	Shipstead	Warren
George	McCormick	Shortridge	Wheeler
Gooding	Norbeck	Smith

So the joint resolution was recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 5, the general pension bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. SMITH. What is the motion?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from New Mexico is that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill No. 5, the general pension bill.

CLARENCE C. CHASE.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I am in receipt of the following communication from the Secretary of the Treasury:

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, March 23, 1924.

Hon. THOMAS J. WALSH,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Yesterday Mr. C. C. Chase, collector of customs for collection district No. 24, headquarters at El Paso, Tex., presented to me his resignation from the service, a copy of which I inclose. As a matter of course, this resignation would have been accepted, but I notice in the afternoon papers that some action has been taken in the Senate looking toward impeachment proceedings. I do not desire to take any action which might embarrass any proceeding desired to be taken by the Senate. It will be necessary, however, to find a successor for Mr. Chase to take charge of this district. In view of the foregoing, will you be kind enough to advise me whether it will be satisfactory formally to accept his resignation.

Very truly yours,

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The inclosure is as follows:

THE NEW WILLARD,
Washington, March 24, 1924.

Hon. ANDREW W. MELLON,

Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I have to-day been called as a witness before the Senate Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, and upon being interrogated have invoked my constitutional privilege and declined to answer the questions propounded to me.

In all likelihood my action will produce unfriendly criticism, and as I am in the Government service as collector of customs for collection district No. 24, headquarters at El Paso, Tex., this criticism may react upon your department and my continued employment in the Government service therefore may be embarrassing to you.

I need not explain to you that in what I have done there is no justification for the insinuation or assertion that I have confessed to having committed any crime. I have not been guilty of any criminality or has any charge to that effect been made against me. I am, however, most anxious that my action shall not be the cause for any criticism of President Coolidge's administration or of your department, and accordingly I have the honor to tender to you my resignation of the office I now hold, this resignation to take effect at your pleasure.

I may say that my refusal to be examined by the Senate committee had nothing to do with the administration of my office as collector of customs.

As to my administration of that office, I court the strictest possible inquiry, feeling confident that such investigation will disclose that the office has been administered by me with the strictest fidelity and a high degree of efficiency.

Very much regretting the occasion for having to tender my resignation, and with deep appreciation of the courtesy that I have at all times received from you, I am, Mr. Secretary, with great respect,

Very truly yours,

C. C. CHASE.

I acknowledge the extreme courtesy of the Secretary of the Treasury in addressing this communication to me, and I am promptly replying to him that I see no reason whatever why Mr. Chase's resignation should not be promptly accepted, and that no proceedings which may be taken by either House of Congress will be in the slightest degree embarrassed by that action on his part.

What surprises me is that the President of the United States did not ignominiously dismiss Mr. Chase from the public service promptly upon the giving of the testimony by Mr. McKinney before the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys on the 11th day of March. He must have been advised of the fact, because the unofficial observer, Mr. Rush Holland, has been attending daily the sessions of the committee, and it was understood that he is there as the personal representative of the President. I think this an opportune time to tell the story in a connected way from the records.

I referred briefly the other day to the first suggestion of the likelihood of Mr. McKinney stating that Secretary Fall got the money from him. It came in what is known as the unsigned memorandum which, as I have advised the Senate, in some strange way got into the files of the secretary of the committee, no one knows from where. I can only speculate about it, and my speculation is that it was prepared as a memorandum of what Mr. Chase would tell the committee when he came before us. It is headed:

Memorandum in connection with Senator WALSH's investigation concerning purchase by Mr. Fall of ranch properties adjoining the Fall home ranch at Three Rivers, N. Mex.

It starts out this way:

It is understood that certain witnesses have been subpoenaed from New Mexico, presumably in connection with this ranch purchase, among such witnesses being one of the parties from whom the ranch was purchased, namely, Will Ed. Harris.

It is therefore apparent that the memorandum was prepared after the New Mexico witnesses were subpoenaed but before they testified. In that connection, a telegram was sent by Mr. Fall to the then chairman of the committee, the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT], which I read from the record, as follows:

THREE RIVERS, N. MEX.,
November 20, 1923—11 p. m.

Hon. REED SMOOT,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Have just wired International News, Denver, as follows: "Thanks for your wire. Mr. McGee should be an authority on tax paying and finance; however, record evidence Otero County and sixth district court will disclose that dispute arising about my assessment I refused to pay, and myself brought suit to adjust proper amount under State law, at same time disposing amount I claimed due, and that after several years decision was rendered my favor and all due taxes paid. Never threatened Mr. McGee at any time; and his complaint against me is, I presume, largely because, despite his abuse for years, I have declined publicly to mention his name. You are doubtless aware that a few months since McGee was indicted, tried by jury, and convicted of criminally libeling Chief Justice Parker, this State, and afterwards pardoned by the present governor. I am informed that he is also now under indictment for libel of ex-Chief Justice C. J. Roberts. A wire from you to Judge Meacham, presiding judge sixth district, or Hon. Mark B. Thompson, Las Cruces, N. Mex., special counsel for State tax commission, will corroborate foregoing as to tax matter." Clayton, one of WALSH witnesses, knows about tax suit, as does Stalcup Johnson, another witness there, can also testify, as well as other evidence possibly to be brought out. C. C. Chase now en route, arriving Monday. My son-in-law knows all about ranch deal and my business generally. Of course, if necessary, will go there personally after WALSH has concluded. I understood Doheny, Robison, and Bain were to testify before WALSH went any further. Think this very important.

A. B. FALL.

Then, Mr. President, followed the letter of Secretary Fall or Senator Fall of December 27, in which he again refers to this matter. In the memorandum to which I had adverted is found the following:

Knowing that the ranch property must be sold to settle the Harris estate, and desiring to acquire the same, Mr. Fall had upon more than one occasion for two or three years prior to the purchase discussed a possible purchase with Mr. Brownfield particularly. Not knowing when the purchase must be definitely made, in December, 1920, Mr. Fall made arrangements with a gentleman formerly associated with him, and as yet interested with him in business in a foreign country, for securing the money, upon immediate notice to this associate, with which to make the purchase indicated, as well as other moneys with which to complete a reorganization of his ranch business at and near Three Rivers. This gentleman referred to had and yet holds titles to properties costing a large sum of money and in which Mr. Fall has more than a 50 per cent interest. Aside from this, Mr. Fall had turned over other properties on a sale agreement to the gentleman referred to under the terms of which he was eventually to receive a minimum of $75,000 and a maximum of $125,000. This account, both in December, 1920, and in December, 1921, was still running under the same conditions. The understanding was that Mr. Fall could telegraph at any time for the money necessary for his purposes or that the same would be arranged at any time through Chicago.

Being in Washington, Mr. Fall got in touch with the gentleman named, who met him in Chicago and proceeded with him to El Paso, Tex., thence to California, returning by way of the Fall ranch some two weeks later; that is to say, about December 20. The gentleman was present in El Paso when the money was paid over to Harris and Brownfield on the original contract.

Mr. Price McKinney, of Cleveland, Ohio, actually made that trip with Secretary Fall from Chicago to El Paso and the city of Los Angeles.

In the letter of December 27 Secretary Fall repeated substantially the statement made in this unsigned memorandum concerning his ability to get the money from a gentleman with whom he had business dealings in a foreign country. It will be recalled that the telegram of date November 20, from Fall to Senator Smoot, recited that his son-in-law, C. C. Chase, was leaving for Washington, was entirely familiar with his business, and with the ranch deal in particular. That is confirmed by telegrams which I desire now to read, as follows:

NOVEMBER 28, 1923.

Hon. C. C. CHASE,
El Paso, Tex.:

Important I should see you immediately. Will want you to go to Washington. Can you come up in car at once or on night train prepared to go east from here? Can arrange by wire with department. Answer.

A. B. FALL.

Mr. Chase replied, under date of November 28, 3.39 p. m., as follows:

Hon. ALBERT B. FALL,
Three Rivers, N. Mex.:

Will be up train to-night prepared to go east.

C. C. CHASE.

Thereupon Mr. Fall wired to the Secretary of the Treasury as follows:

THREE RIVERS, November 29, 1923.

Hon. ANDREW W. MELLON,
The Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.:

Am requesting Mr. Chase, collector of customs, El Paso, to leave for Washington immediately on business important to me personally.

Kindly extend him formal leave of absence to make trip without expense to Government. He will call on you at Washington regarding matter. Mr. Chase leaving to-day.

ALBERT B. FALL.

Mr. Chase wired to Senator Fall from Chicago as follows:

CHICAGO, ILL., December 1, 1923.

Hon. A. B. FALL,

Three Rivers, N. Mex.:

Am going via Cleveland to see party there at his invitation. Advice is confined to home.

C. C. CHASE.

Thereupon Senator Fall wired to Mr. McKinney as follows:

DECEMBER 3, 1923.

Hon. PRICE MCKINNEY,

Cleveland, Ohio:

My friends on the committee ask me to come to Washington to refute statements of McGee, which you have doubtless seen. This is the same man who purchased yours and other interests in Albuquerque Journal. I am leaving here to-morrow, arriving in Washington Friday morning. Can you meet me there, bringing Lucy over for a day or two? Kindly answer, and do you know whereabouts of Chase?

A. B. FALL.

From Chicago, under date of 9.10 a. m., December 4, 1923, Mr. Chase wired to Mr. Fall as follows:

A. B. FALL,

Three Rivers, N. Mex.:

Leaving here Golden State 6.30 to-night for Kansas City. Will meet your train there and return Chicago if necessary. Blackstone Hotel here to-day.

CLARENCE.

Under the same date he wired Secretary Fall as follows—this is December 4, 1923:

A. B. FALL,

Three Rivers, N. Mex.:

Cleveland matter not satisfactory. Can possibly be worked out. Am meeting you following advice Washington friends.

CLARENCE.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, the testimony before the committee does not disclose who were those Washington friends who advised Mr. Chase immediately to get into communication with Mr. Fall.

Mr. CARAWAY. If I may interrupt the Senator, were not those Washington friends like "Principal," "Apples," "Peaches," and "Apricots," who are still undisclosed?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Possibly so. Thereupon Mr. Fall wired Mr. Chase, under date of 10.45 a. m., December 4, 1923, as follows:

C. C. CHASE,

Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, Ill.:

Your wire from Washington and to-day from Chicago very indefinite. Can't you be a little more explicit? Wire immediately. Mrs. Fall and self leaving this afternoon train.

A. B. FALL.

Mr. President, these telegrams, affording such persuasive circumstantial evidence of this effort to mislead and to deceive the committee concerning the origin of these funds, were all submitted to the committee on the 11th day of March last, two weeks ago yesterday. A week later, on the 18th day of March, Mr. McKinney came forward, under the subpoena of the committee, and told us that Mr. Chase came to see him as is indicated in these telegrams, with a view to getting him to confirm the story which Senator Fall had put up to him in a letter which he had written him in which he asked Mr. McKinney to tell the committee to the effect that he, McKinney, while on the trip from Chicago to Los Angeles, stopping off at El Paso, had loaned this $100,000 to Mr. Fall, and Mr. McKinney very promptly declined to do anything of the kind. He said he had not loaned Mr. Fall any such sum and was not going to say so.

Now bear in mind, Mr. President, it was on the 18th day of March, a week ago yesterday, that this whole affair became public property, and the President of the United States knows all about it if his unofficial observer sitting with the committee every day is discharging any duties or serving any public purpose whatever.

Mr. President, I should like to know from some one why is it that the President of the United States did not immediately demand the resignation of Mr. Chase, aye, sir, not even ask for his resignation but declare to him that he was ignominiously dismissed from the public service. I confess, Mr. President, that I am utterly unable to understand the attitude of the White House concerning this investigation.

FUEL OIL FOR THE NAVY.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, in reply to what the Senator from Montana has suggested may I say it is quite apparent that the White House is interested just now in the matter of oil? The morning newspapers carry a very interesting record of a meeting which was held in the White House a day or two ago, attended by the Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, and the new Secretary of the Navy, Judge Wilbur. As a result of this meeting and because of the anxiety the President feels regarding the alarming drain of the oil supplies of the country the President gave out a statement which I desire to read:

The President announced the appointment of a commission to study the fuel-oil needs of the Navy in the following statement:

"The purpose for which the naval oil lands were set aside was to provide reserves for the future. In order to do this in the best manner the oil should be, wherever possible, retained in the ground. Wherever this is not possible, however, it should be retained in tanks above ground. This oil is an important part of the national insurance.

"At the present rate of production there is estimated to be but 20 years of oil supply within the limits of the United States. When this is exhausted we will be dependent upon foreign sources for our supply. In time of war such supply will certainly be jeopardized and possibly cut off. Unless, therefore, the Navy has conserved in this country sufficient oil wherewith to fight a war, our national security is seriously endangered.

"The General Board of the Navy, which has made a careful study of the problem of national defense, has recommended a presidential commission to give more careful study to the fuel question, in view of present conditions. I have decided to appoint this commission now. This commission will have the same access to data and information contained within the governmental departments as was granted to the United States Coal Commission (H. R. 12377), Sixty-seventh Congress.

"This commission will have as its mission the general study of this problem, but specifically it will review the situation in each one of the Navy's reserves and endeavor to ascertain whether it will be possible by assignment of additional public land, transfers, trades, purchases, or otherwise to create larger or better protected reserves than those existing at present. This not only pertains to the United States proper but in addition to such oil lands as might exist in Alaska."

Then the President announced the appointment as members of the commission Dr. George Otis Smith, Director of the Geological Survey; Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, United States Navy, president of the General Board and ex-commander in chief of the United States Fleet; and Mr. R. D. Bush, of the bureau of mineralogy of the State of California.

I desire to call attention to the fact that this is a work of supererogation on the part of the President. It was unnecessary for him to create a new board and give it all the trouble incident to securing the information sought according to the terms of the President's statement. All the problems and all the questions suggested by the President are already matters of public record.

I wish to call the attention of Senators once more to a public document from which I have quoted heretofore on the floor of the Senate, namely, the report of the Naval Consulting Board of the United States, which is a Government document published at the Government Printing Office. It will be recalled, as I stated on a previous occasion, that Mr. Daniels, then Secretary of the Navy, when the war came on in 1915, but before we entered it, very wisely called into existence a body of great engineers. At the head of that consulting board was Thomas A. Edison, and 11 of the great engineering and chemical societies of this country were asked to furnish two members each. So there was organized a great board composed of 24 of the leading engineers of this country, and likewise the Navy itself appointed a fuel board, consisting of five officers of the Navy. This commission met in New York and called before them all the famous experts on fuel and fuel installation and the builders of tanks for containing fuel. There were numerous meetings, running through a number of months, and finally this board reached a unanimous conclusion regarding the matter of fuel oil.

I desire again to enter in the RECORD the conclusions of that board, in order that the new Secretary of the Navy, who will now begin to read the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, may know what has happened in the Navy previous to his assuming the responsibilities of office.

The board reached the following conclusions:

First. The use of fuel oil enables the Navy Department to produce war vessels of a marked superiority in type. The projected battle cruisers, for example, could not be reproduced if required to use coal, nor could they be remodeled for burning coal, even at comparatively prohibitive cost, without seriously curtailing their military value.

Second. It is the unanimous opinion, therefore, of your committee that the requirements of national defense demand that the Nation hold with unassailable title reserves of oil land within its own borders, located with reference to economical transportation, and containing sufficient oil to meet the requirements of our ever-enlarging Navy for a period of not less than 50 years.

Third. The best estimate at hand, that of the United States Geological Survey, respecting the probable remaining supply of petroleum underground within the United States is seven thousand six hundred and twenty-nine million barrels. The marketed production of petroleum within the United States in the year 1915 was 281,104,104 barrels. A simple calculation will show that should the consumption of oil remain fixed the estimated available supply will last only 28 years. While forecasts cut down can be reproduced in time, petroleum taken from the ground and consumed is forever gone.

Your committee is well aware of the fact that great quantities of fuel oil are to-day imported from Mexico for industrial uses and that the Mexican oil fields are probably the most extensive deposits of oil anywhere in the Western Hemisphere, if not in the world, but it believes that as a means of national defense such oil supply could not and should not be depended upon in the event of war. To-day Great Britain renews her supply of oil fuel from Mexico, and is assured thereof only so long as she maintains undisputed control of the seas.

For the use of our Navy it is now estimated that there will be an annual consumption in time of peace of quantities increasing from 842,000 barrels during the present fiscal year to 10,000,000 barrels annually in 1927. In time of war this consumption will be increased at least threefold. That is to say, we must face the possibility of a consumption in war time of not less than 30,000,000 barrels per annum. Nor does this take any account of oil fuel for aircraft or for industrial processes associated with national defense.

Your committee has given full consideration to the possibility of diverting from these industries sufficient oil to meet the demands of the Navy in time of war, but has reached the conclusion that this might of itself cripple industrial establishments upon which the Nation must depend for munitions of war.

Your committee, in view of the foregoing, believes that the representatives of our Nation in Congress now assembled have before them at present a question of supreme importance to the national defense in that certain legislation is pending which imperils the present oil reserves of the Navy, and therefore your committee has prepared the following resolutions, which it offers to the Naval Consulting Board with a recommendation for their adoption.

And these are the resolutions which were so adopted:

Whereas the Navy Department after years of study and consideration has definitely committed itself to the use of oil fuel on our naval vessels on account of its superior military advantages; and

Whereas the permanence and continuity of such fuel supply must be assured both for time of peace and of war; and

Whereas legislation is now pending in Congress which jeopardizes the integrity of naval petroleum reserves heretofore established for the above purpose; and

Whereas action by Congress adverse to the Navy Department's interests in these reserves will constitute a precedent for future actions and make any reserve whatever uncertain and liable to diversion: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Naval Consulting Board, the officials, civilian advisory board of the Navy, composed of members of 11 national engineering and scientific societies, is convinced that any legislation which may divert from the Navy any portions of its reserves will seriously weaken the Navy and imperil the national defense. The Naval Consulting Board therefore urges upon the Nation and its representatives in Congress to permit no steps to be taken that will impair the integrity of the existing naval petroleum reserves.

The Naval Consulting Board commends the recent action of the Secretary of the Interior in recommending the creation of additional naval reserves in Colorado, Utah, and Wyoming on lands which have prospective value for oil production.

The Naval Consulting Board, however, does not believe that these recommended reserves can be considered as substitutes for existing reserves.

That was the unanimous action of these joint boards.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President—

Mr. COPELAND. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WARREN. I desire to ask what is the business before the Senate, because I have another matter that I want to bring up.

Mr. McKELLAR. We can not hear the Senator.

Mr. WARREN. Will the Senator permit me to take up a short bill that I want to have considered?

Mr. COPELAND. If the Senator can wait four minutes, I will yield the floor.

Mr. WARREN. I wanted to inquire, however, if there was any business before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The business before the Senate is the motion of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURSUM] to proceed to the consideration of the pension bill.

Mr. WARREN. I do not wish to interfere with that motion, but I have here a bill which I wish to take up.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I am glad the President of the United States took the action which he did on yesterday. I am glad because, in the first place, it will benefit the new Secretary of the Navy. It will bring to his knowledge the fact that Admiral Griffin, the Chief of the Bureau of Engineering, two days before Mr. Denby signed the lease by which the oil reserves were turned over to private interests begged Mr. Denby that the matter of leasing the reserves should be referred to the General Board of the Navy. Mr. Denby declined to take that action. Now that the administration has given away our oil reserves, now that it has given away all the oil it had, the President of the United States appoints a board to see if they can not find some more oil. It is to be hoped and expected that the conference at the White House and this action of the President will give the new Secretary of the Navy a good start and protect him against falling into the costly errors of his immediate predecessor.

I am glad, in the second place, that this action has been taken because it will reassure the President if a board of his own selection advises him to take a forward looking stand on a matter which so far the administration has disregarded. It is reassuring that the Chief Executive is aroused to the importance of the oil-reserve policy.

In the third place, I should like to say that this action may benefit the country. It certainly will if the Republican administration reaffirms the conclusions reached by the Democratic administration during war time, a policy which was adopted and recommended at that time, as I have shown the Senate, by all the great engineering societies of this country.

So, finally, it seems that the present action of the President—and I should like to say this to the Senator from Wyoming, in reply to what he has suggested—is a symptom which is indicative of a very much belated, it must be said, but nevertheless refreshing, determination on the part of the administration at last to guard the first line of defense, the American Navy.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, before the Senator from New York takes his seat I should like to ask him a question. What naval officer was it that the President appointed on this board?

Mr. COPELAND. Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones.

Mr. HEFLIN. The Senator recalls that in the other instance, where the naval oil reserves were transferred by Mr. Denby to Mr. Fall, an admiral of the Navy was selected to act on that particular matter, Admiral Robison, and that he was the only one in the service who favored the transfer of this oil property and the granting of the leases. The Senator also recalls that Admiral Griffin opposed this transfer, and they relieved him of the duties that devolved on him and selected Admiral Robison to handle the matter, and that through Mr. Denby this property was transferred to Mr. Fall, and then the leases were granted to Mr. Doheny and to Mr. Sinclair. I believe the Senator touched on the fact that President Coolidge stated that he would not permit Mr. Denby to resign, and this was after Mr. Denby had transferred this oil property to Mr. Fall so that the Government would lose its entire oil reserves.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes, sir.

Mr. HEFLIN. I wonder if Admiral Jones agrees with Admiral Griffin's position or with that of Admiral Robison, who assisted in helping to get rid of all our oil reserves?

Mr. COPELAND. Of course I can not speak for this officer; but at least this action of the President indicates that at last he is aroused to the importance of this measure.

Mr. McKELLAR. After the oil is gone.

Mr. COPELAND. After the oil is gone.

A. W. MELLON, SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, this morning there appeared in the Washington Post an article headed as follows:

Mellon, denying tax interfering, offers all data. Returns of companies he is interested in are open, he tells Senators. Asks prompt inquiry in fairness to all. Accountants ready to explain—COUZENS produces returns.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the entire article, containing Secretary Mellon's explanation, and showing his interest in the corporations set out in his explanation, may be printed in the Record at this point as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[From the Washington Post of Wednesday, March 26, 1924.]

MELLON, DENYING TAX INTERFERING, OFFERS ALL DATA—RETURNS OF COMPANIES HE IS INTERESTED IN ARE OPEN, HE TELLS SENATORS—ASKS PROMPT INQUIRY IN FAIRNESS TO ALL—ACCOUNTANTS READY TO EXPLAIN—COUZENS PRODUCES RETURNS.

Secretary Mellon denied he had "ever interfered with the Bureau of Internal Revenue in any way in any tax matter," in a statement yesterday laid before the Senate special committee investigating the bureau.

At the same time Mr. Mellon offered the committee full information on tax matters of companies in which he is personally interested, adding that in fairness to him and to the companies, the committee should make an immediate investigation.

"In the hearing before your committee yesterday," said the statement, "what purported to be a copy of a memorandum delivered by an exemployee to a member of your committee was introduced and has been made the basis for headlines in the newspapers which might lead the public to believe I had sought to influence the Bureau of Internal Revenue in its consideration of the tax liability of certain companies in which I am interested as stockholder.

WARMLY DENIES INTERFERING.

"As I have already stated, I have never interfered in any way with the Bureau of Internal Revenue in any tax matter. Last of all would I do so in cases in which it might be charged that I was personally concerned. I feel, however, that it is due to me, and to the companies involved, that your committee make an immediate investigation in order that you may thoroughly satisfy yourself and the public whether or not these companies have received any favors from the Government.

"Three companies which have been mentioned are the Gulf Refining Co. and its subsidiaries, the Standard Steel Car Co., and the Aluminum Co. of America. Each of these companies has advised the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that it waives its right to privacy under the statute, and the commissioner is authorized to produce to your committee, without restriction of any kind, all of the tax returns and accompanying papers for each tax year.

"Messrs. Ernst and Ernst, certified public accountants, are familiar with the tax adjustments of these companies, since they handled their presentation before the bureau. They can undoubtedly be of assistance to your committee in explaining the complicated questions involved, and I am informed are ready to respond to any call of your committee.

COUZENS PRODUCES RETURNS.

"Mr. A. C. Ernst will be in Washington on the 28th, and will be available then or thereafter. If question is later raised with respect to any other companies in which I may be interested, I shall be glad to do what I can to obtain similar publicity to their returns."

Solicitor Nelson Hartson, of the bureau, at the request of Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, who is conducting the inquiry, produced the Senator's own tax returns, involving a proposed additional tax in 1919 of $2,147,000. The main question at issue was an allowance to be made as to "fair market value" of a "charitable gift" of property by Senator COUZENS, valued at the time of the gift at $1,796,905. An opinion by Hartson in 1923 in another case laid down a principle resulting in a reduction of the Couzens assessment by about $1,000,000.

Senator COUZENS said he had no knowledge of the details of the case until he heard them from Hartson. The Senator suggested that "the ruling that proposed the additional assessment against me was the fairest."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, on March 5 the Secretary of the Treasury, in writing to me, made an explanation of certain refunds, one of three million and some three hundred thousand dollars—the actual amount will appear in the letter—in the case of the Gulf Refining Co., in which the Secretary was interested. In reference to this, he said:

The actual payment of the amount refunded took place in April, 1921, shortly after I had become Secretary. I had no personal knowledge of these refunds at that time.

Then follows an explanation of the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies compromise, in which it was assumed that the Secretary was also interested as part owner. I ask that that letter be inserted in the Record at this point as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, March 5, 1924.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have your letter of February 19, in which you make inquiry as to the basis for the settlement of the taxes due from the Gulf Refining Co. in 1921, and also the settlement of taxes due and owing from the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies Steamship Co.

Section 3167 of the Revised Statutes provides as follows:

"SEC. 3167. It shall be unlawful for any collector, deputy collector, agent, clerk, or other officer or employee of the United States to divulge or to make known in any manner whatever not provided by law to any person the operations, style of work, or apparatus of any manufacturer or producer visited by him in the discharge of his official duties, or the amount or source of income, profits, losses, expenditures, or any particular thereof, set forth or disclosed in any income return, or to permit any income return or copy thereof or any book containing any abstract or particulars thereof to be seen or examined by any person except as provided by law; and it shall be unlawful for any person to print or publish in any manner whatever not provided by law any income return, or any part thereof, or source of income, profits, losses, or expenditures appearing in any income return; and any offense against the foregoing provision shall be a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court; and if the offender be an officer or employee of the United States he shall be dismissed from office or discharged from employment."

From this section it is obvious that it would be unlawful for me to give to you complete information as to the settlement of these particular cases.

The refunds to the Gulf Co. and its subsidiaries were charged against three appropriations, depending upon the year in which the taxes refunded were originally collected. The payments were $766,112.29 out of the appropriation for "Refund of taxes illegally collected, 1918, and prior years"; $1,350,884.63 from a similar appropriation for 1919; and $1,211,143.07 for 1921.

The quotation from the Washington Post inserted in a recent issue of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD appears to be a copy of portions of reports to Congress of refunds which have been on file for some months, and consequently available to anyone's inspection.

The amount of the refunds and all details in connection with the settlement of the Gulf Co. cases were determined by the Bureau of Internal Revenue before my appointment as Secretary of the Treasury, although the actual payment of the amount refunded took place in April, 1921, shortly after I had become Secretary. I had no personal knowledge of these refunds at that time.

Referring to the Atlantic Gulf & West Indies compromise, from information received by the Bureau of Internal Revenue it was believed that large additional taxes and penalties were due from this company for past years. Before an assessment of these taxes had been made it became apparent to the department that the taxpayer was insolvent, and the sole question for determination was not the amount of the tax, but the amount that the taxpayer could pay. Since almost all of the assets of the taxpayer were subject to prior lien and the general credit of the taxpayer was not good, the levying of an assessment and its attempted collection would have served only to throw the taxpayer into bankruptcy and to destroy the Government's chance of collecting anything. The department made a thorough investigation into the financial condition of the taxpayer and its available cash resources with the sole idea of obtaining for the United States the largest possible payment. A compromise of the tax liability was then entered into under section 3229 of the Revised Statutes for $1,280,000, and satisfaction of a judgment against the United States in the Court of Claims for $1,351,381.81 and interest from November 19 to December 15, 1923. That the taxpayer was in fact in a perilous financial situation is disclosed by the subsequent receivership of the Ward Line, which was one of the most important and by far the best known of its subsidiaries.

Very truly yours,

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Now, Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senate to section 243 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. It reads:

No person appointed to the office of Secretary of the Treasury, or first comptroller, or first auditor, or treasurer, or register shall, directly or indirectly, be concerned or interested in carrying on the business of trade or commerce, or be owner in whole or in part of any sea vessel, or purchase by himself, or another in trust for him, any public lands or other public property, or be concerned in the purchase or disposal of any public securities of any State or of the United States, or take or apply to his own use any emolument or gain for negotiating or transacting any business in the Treasury Department other than what shall be allowed by law; and every person who offends against any of the prohibitions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor and forfeit to the United States the penalty of $3,000, and shall upon conviction be removed from office and forever thereafter be incapable of holding any office under the United States; and if any other person than the public prosecutor shall give information of any such offense upon which a prosecution and conviction shall be had, one-half the aforesaid penalty of $3,000, when recovered, shall be for the use of the person giving such information.

Mr. President, I call attention first to the evidence submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury himself that he is a part owner of and interested in the properties that have been described in these communications. Then I call attention to the express prohibition of the statute that no person appointed to the office of Secretary of the Treasury shall, directly or indirectly, be concerned or interested in carrying on the business of trade or commerce.

I remember that when the Secretary of the Treasury was first appointed it was known that he was a man of large means, and it was reported in the papers, as I recall, that he had disposed of these properties, and that they would not make him ineligible for the position of Secretary of the Treasury. I read this at this time for the purpose of saying that, of course, if we are going to disregard the law, if the administration pays no attention to the statutes, the Secretary of the Treasury can continue in his office; but under the plain terms of this statute, which has been on the statute books since 1789, the present Secretary of the Treasury, upon his own admission, is ineligible to hold the office of Secretary of the Treasury. He may not have known it, it may be that he does not; and may be he never read it, and never knew of it; perhaps in the same way that Mr. Secretary Hughes did not know that it was against the law to witness prize-fight films where the pictures had been brought into the District of Columbia. But there can be no excuse hereafter for either of the present Cabinet ministers not knowing the law.

I have read the statute of 1789, as carried in the Revised Statutes of the United States as section 243, for the information of the Senate and of the country.

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, the pending question is the motion made by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURSUM] to take up a general pension bill.

I trust the Senate will not even consider the bill. In 1920, the year after I took my seat in the Senate, a bill was passed giving magnificent increases in pensions to soldiers of the Civil War. Just two years before that the pensions of those soldiers had been increased from $13 to $30 and from $30 to $40, just in two years. In 1920 the pensions were increased from $40 to $50, and in cases where the veterans required the regular aid of attendants the amount was to be $72 per month.

I opposed the bill in 1920, one of my first acts after coming to Congress. At that time we had just gone through the Great War in Europe, a war causing greater destruction than any war before that in history. I felt then that it was inopportune, out of place, and uncalled for to grant additional pensions to those pensioners. That bill was passed.

Last year Congress passed a bill increasing the pensions of these men, involving an expenditure of $108,000,000 per annum. That went to the President of the United States for his approval, and he vetoed it. On the floor of the Senate I said that I had never expected to live to see the time when a Republican President would veto a Civil War pension bill, but that is what President Harding did, and I felt that he was entitled to the thanks and gratitude of the American people. That bill came back and was redrafted, carrying something like $65,000,000, I think, but I am thankful to say that some others and I prevented its passage last year.

The same bill is here now, proposing to increase the amount $55,000,000 per annum. A short time ago I noticed that President Coolidge had said he did not favor an increase of pensions at the present time. I am glad to see the Executive alive to the interests of the taxpayers of this country and disapproving propositions to increase pensions.

From a record which I have before me I see that already this Government has paid out in pensions to Civil War veterans the sum of $5,772,000,000, and it is estimated that at the expiration of five years from now an additional amount of $1,277,000,000 will have been paid out, making a grand total of $7,049,000,000. That shows an average for 733,000 pensioners of over $9,000 each already drawn and to be drawn.

The maximum allowance for total disability under the workmen's compensation laws of the different States is $5,000. So these Civil War pensioners will each draw $4,000 more than will be drawn by any individual who is entitled to such an allowance under the compensation law of any State.

We have before us now many claims, claims for adjusted compensation of those who participated in the last war, and other claims, and there are innumerable bills before Congress carrying great appropriations. The taxes of the people are increasing beyond their patience to bear them, and it does seem to me to be time when we should call a halt on expenditures and consider the taxpayers of this country.

Under the bill of 1920, which was most loosely and most liberally drawn, every pensioner who claims he needs an attendant can get $22 a month additional. It has been brought to my attention that these additional pensions are granted without much consideration. I heard of one case only a few days ago where a man some 72 years old, an inmate of one of the soldiers' homes, where he was already drawing $50 a month and getting compensation from another source, though not from the Government, concluded he wanted $22 a month more. He wrapped up his left foot in some rags, got some crutches, and hopped over before the proper officer, who readily allowed him $22 a month additional. He went back to his room, dispensed with the wrappings and his crutches, and soon thereafter walked five miles and stated he had gotten what he wanted.

We should guard the interests of this country more carefully than that. While we have been in session going on four months, we have legislated but little for the good of the people. I feel that the time has come to stop making these increases, and I trust that the Senate will refuse to pass this bill, particularly in the face of the admonition of the President. If we have not manhood enough in us to refuse to pass this bill, I hope the President will have manhood enough to veto it if we do pass it, and I trust it will not get through the Senate.

I think we should take up other matters instead of this and spend our time to better purpose. I hope the Senate will not take up the bill, because I am sure no good could come from it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURNUM].

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll.

The principal clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Edwards	Keyes	Reed, Mo.
Brandagee	Fess	Ladd	Reed, Pa.
Brookhart	Fletcher	Lodge	Robinson
Bruce	Fraser	McKellar	Sheppard
Burnum	George	McKinley	Shortridge
Cameron	Glass	McNary	Smith
Capper	Gooding	Moses	Swanson
Caraway	Harrell	Neely	Trammell
Copeland	Harris	Norris	Wadsworth
Cummins	Heflin	Oddie	Walsh, Mass.
Curtis	Johnson, Minn.	Overman	Weller
Dale	Jones, N. Mex.	Pittman	Willis
Dial	Jones, Wash.	Ralston
Edge	Kendrick	Ransdell

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-four Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BURNUM].

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, there are more Senators here now than were here a while ago, and I want to call their attention to the fact that last year, 1923, there was paid out in pensions $263,012,500.18. That is the largest amount, I believe, since the Civil War, notwithstanding this great distance from the Civil War.

I stated a while ago that there had been paid out in pensions since the Civil War to Civil War veterans $5,772,000,000. I am not certain, but my recollection is that the Civil War cost about $4,000,000,000, so there has been paid out in pensions more than the whole cost of the Civil War. I call attention of the Senate again that a magnificent increase was granted these pensioners in 1918 and again in 1920, and yet now they are undertaking to increase the taxes of the people by $55,000,000 per annum for the purpose of again increasing pensions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Mexico that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill No. 5, a general pension bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 5) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil and Mexican Wars and to certain widows, former widows, minor children, and helpless children of such soldiers and sailors, and to widows of the War of 1812, and to certain Indian war veterans and their widows, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, several Senators have asked me, as a member of the Committee on Pensions, to explain the provisions of the bill S. 5, and I have prepared a very concise statement showing just what changes in the present law will be made by the passage of this bill. I know it is a subject that many Senators will have letters and inquiries about, and I think the statement which I have prepared may be helpful in making reply thereto. It will also serve the purpose of informing the beneficiaries of our pension legislation of the changes in the present law without the necessity of studying the details of this bill.

Senate bill 5, reported by the Pension Committee of the Senate, supersedes S. 3275, which passed the House and Senate during the last Congress and was vetoed by the President. It also supersedes S. 4305, a bill reported by the Pension Committee of the Senate meeting the President's objection to S. 3275, and which passed the Senate during the last session but failed in the House.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN S. 5 AND THE VETOED BILL.

There are some slight differences between the bill now before the Senate—S. 5—and the bills which previously passed the Senate but failed of enactment.

As to the Civil War soldiers, there is no change, as both bills of the last session and the present bill provides a pension of $72 per month.

As to the Civil War widows, there are several changes from the bill vetoed by the President: In that bill there was a provision that the date of marriage might be any time before the date of the passage of the act. Under the provisions contained in S. 5 the date of marriage making a widow eligible to receive the pension is the same as the existing law, namely, June 27, 1905.

President Harding vetoed the bill that was passed in the last session because it contained a provision that any woman could marry a soldier the day before his death, if it were before the passage of that act, and receive a pension, but under this bill no widow who married a soldier after June 27, 1905, can receive a widow's pension.

WIDOWS OF CIVIL WAR SOLDIERS.

The next important change is the rate of pension to be paid to widows. The bills of last session carried a flat rate of $50. The pending bill carries a graduated rate, as follows: Widows under 60 years of age will receive $30 per month; after attaining the age of 60 years, $35; and after attaining the age of 74 years, $45. The present law provides a pension of $30 irrespective of age. The graduated rates named in the bill now under consideration removes the objectionable feature of the other bills of giving young widows the same pension as widows of advanced age.

I may add, however, in this connection, that statistics do not bear out the suggestion that has often been made that a large number of young widows are benefiting as a result of the Civil War pension law. An investigation made by the Pension Committee of the Senate, through the Pension Bureau, showed that the youngest widow was 42 years of age, and that out of the total number of 218,000 Civil War widows receiving pensions only 11,000 were under the age of 60 years.

Another provision in the pending bill which was not contained in either of the two bills which failed of enactment in the last session is the increase in the rate of pensions for Spanish war soldiers.

CHANGES PROPOSED BY S. 5 IN THE PRESENT LAW.

SPANISH WAR SOLDIERS.

The present law provides a graduated rate for Spanish war veterans in accordance with the degree of disability—$12 for 25 per cent disability, $18 for 50 per cent disability, $24 for 75 per cent disability, and $30 for total disability. The pending bill, Senate bill 5, increases the minimum rate to $20 and the maximum rate to $50 on the same basis of graduation. But if the soldier is 62 years of age, he gets the minimum rate of $20 on the ground of age alone. Heretofore the age pension for Spanish war soldiers was $12 (act of June 5, 1920). It will be noted that very few Spanish war soldiers have reached the age of 62. The average age now is about 46 years.

CIVIL WAR SOLDIERS.

The present law provides a flat rate of $50 per month for Civil War soldiers, with a proviso that in case the services of an attendant are required the rate shall be $72 per month. S. 5 removes the requirement of an attendant and provides a flat rate of $72 per month. This provision has been recommended on the basis of information received from the Pension Bureau. There have been applications for the attendant's allowance received at the rate of about 1,580 per month, and about 85 per cent of this number have been granted, and the total number pensioned at $72 is 41,278 out of the total number of 158,851 Civil War soldiers receiving pensions. Therefore this bill will result in an increase of $22 per month to approximately 117,000 veterans of the Civil War. The average age of these soldiers is 80.5 years.

MINOR CHILDREN.

Senate bill 5 changes the existing law in regard to pensions for minor children and permanently helpless, idiotic, and insane children whose affliction existed before they attained the age of 16 years. Under the existing law the children of a soldier of the Regular Establishment are paid $2 per month each, the children of soldiers of the Spanish war $4, and the children of soldiers of the Civil War $6. The bill now before us provides an allowance of $8 per month for all these minor and helpless children. This would eliminate the discrimination between the children of the soldiers of the different wars. The committee came to this conclusion in view of the fact that the war risk insurance laws provide for minor children as follows: Ten dollars for the first child, $7.50 for the second child, and $5 for the third child.

SOLDIERS OF THE MEXICAN WAR.

They are treated the same in the bill now under consideration as the soldiers of the Civil War. This has been the practice for some time. They are given an increase from $50 to $72 per month.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON. What is the reason for the distinction in the allowances that are made now by law—first, with respect to children who are descendants of soldiers of the different wars; and, second, with respect to the distinction between the first, second, and third children, as the Senator has just mentioned in connection with the Bureau of War Risk Insurance?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I know of no satisfactory explanation that can be given. At least, the discrimination can not be justified. The bill which is being drafted by a subcommittee of the Committee on Finance to change the war risk insurance act will provide the same allowance for all children after the first child of soldiers of the late war, and that inconsistency in part will be corrected. Of course, there is no reason why we should provide $10 for the first child, $7.50 for the second child, and $5 for the third child. The amendment which the Finance Committee bill will propose will provide the same sum for each child, no matter how many children there are. Why the children of veterans of the Spanish War, the Civil War, and the Indian wars should be given different sums I can not understand, but the present bill provides a uniform rate for all of them.

Mr. ROBINSON. The difference might have arisen because of the fact that the subjects were treated in different legislative measures.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Yes; and the fact that the pensions of soldiers of these wars differ, and the length of service varies in order to obtain a pension status.

Mr. ROBINSON. Probably that is the explanation for it. I would like to know the basis for the distinction between the first, second, and third child under the war risk insurance act.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. There is no justification for it. It was merely a guess. However, it is to be corrected in the changes that are to be made through a bill which a subcommittee of the Finance Committee, of which the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] is chairman, is preparing.

Mr. ROBINSON. The pending bill, if I understand the Senator correctly, does remove the apparent discrimination between children of veterans of the various wars?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Yes. It makes the amount more than for children of the World War. It does give all children of soldiers of other wars the same, $8 a month.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President—

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DIAL. Why is it that we pay less to the Spanish War veteran than to the Civil War veteran?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The only reason is the age. The Civil War veterans are all very much older than the Spanish War veterans.

Mr. DIAL. It is graduated according to the age of the veterans themselves, but what of the widows?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. So far as the Spanish War veterans are concerned the committee have retained the method that has been employed in the past in all of the previous bills. The law at the present time provides a graduated rate in accordance with the degree of disability, $12 for 25 per cent disability, $18 for 50 per cent, $24 for 75 per cent, and $30 for total disability. The pending bill increases the minimum rate to $20 and the maximum rate to $50, retaining the graduated scale dependent upon disability.

Mr. DIAL. But there is no graduated scale as to the disability of veterans or pensioners of the Civil War?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. No.

Mr. ROBINSON. How many survivors are there among the soldiers of the Mexican War?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. They are very few.

Mr. DIAL. The number is 41.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I have had prepared a very interesting table. I requested the Pension Bureau to prepare it for me. It traces every pension law from the first one which was passed in 1864 up to the present time, showing just what has been paid in the way of pensions. It is the first time such a table has ever been compiled and I am going to ask permission later to have it inserted as a part of my remarks. It shows at a glance every pension act and the amounts that have been paid for pension purposes to widows and children since the beginning of our pension list in 1864.

WIDOWS OF THE MEXICAN WAR AND WAR OF 1812.

Referring to widows of the Mexican War and the War of 1812, there are only 39 of them. That shows that there can not be very many Mexican War pensioners. They now receive $30 per month. This bill increases their pension to $50 per month.

MILITIAMEN.

This bill extends the existing law to all militiamen who served 90 days during the Civil War and received an honorable discharge. While it appears on its face as granting new title to pension, as a matter of fact these militiamen were given a pensionable status by the act of Congress July 14, 1862, but if they did not prosecute their claim prior to July 4, 1874, they are barred by the terms of the act. The purpose of this bill is to remove the time limitation. It is thought by the committee that this provision may affect about 2,000 militiamen.

Mr. ROBINSON. How many are there in that category?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. There are about 2,000.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. BURSUM. I desire to say that I do not see how the number could possibly exceed 1,000 on the basis of percentage.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Possibly the Senator is correct, but the committee reports estimate 2,000.

Mr. BURSUM. There were only about 20,000 to start with who were qualified under the 90-day provision, and, taking as a basis the survivors who came out of the Civil War, there would not be to exceed a thousand now living.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Massachusetts yield to me?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. DIAL. The report states that a great many of these men served less than 20 days.

Mr. BURSUM. Those would not get a dime under this bill should it become a law.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Under this bill they must have served at least 90 days. Am I correct about that?

Mr. BURSUM. Yes, sir.

Mr. OVERMAN. Is the pending bill a House bill or a Senate bill?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The pending bill is a Senate bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. Did not the President veto a similar pension bill at the last session of Congress?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I have discussed that matter, but perhaps I did so when the Senator from North Carolina was absent.

Mr. OVERMAN. I am trying to ascertain the difference between the pending bill and the one which was vetoed.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I have shown that difference early in my remarks.

Mr. OVERMAN. I know that, for I heard the Senator; but I wish to know the reasons which actuated the President. Of course, I could examine his message; but no doubt the Senator can tell me what reasons the President gave for vetoing the former bill and how those reasons would apply to the pending measure.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The bill which the President vetoed provided that all widows of soldiers of the Civil War could receive a widow's pension even though they were married but a day before the passage of the act. The law previous to that time gave pensions only to widows who had been married prior to June 27, 1905. The President took the position that that would open the door to young widows who married soldiers in their old age receiving pensions to which they were not entitled by any service they had rendered to the soldiers. The bill before us now retains the old provision of the law, namely, the limitation that the widow must have married the soldier prior to June 27, 1905.

ARMY NURSES OF THE CIVIL WAR.

Under the present law they receive a pension of $30 per month. This bill increases the rate to $50. The number of persons affected by this provision, according to the committee report, is 73.

INDIAN WAR SOLDIERS.

The present rate of pension for Indian war veterans is $20. This bill provides an increased minimum rate of $30, and graduated as follows: Upon attaining the age of 72 years $40, and upon attaining the age of 75 years $50.

There are very few of them, less than 2,000.

WIDOWS OF INDIAN WAR SOLDIERS.

They now receive $12 per month. This bill gives them an increase to $20.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President—

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I presume, of course, that the committee considered the advisability of retaining the distinction in the amount of pensions granted to soldiers of the Mexican War, those of the Indian wars, and of the Civil War, but I can not understand why as to a citizen of the United States who has been engaged in any war and it is thought wise to grant him a pension, he should not be granted the same pension as is granted to the soldier of any other war. There are only a few of the survivors of the Mexican War and of Indian wars.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The soldiers of the Mexican War under this bill have their pensions raised to $72, the same as do soldiers of the Civil War.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Then why should not the same increase apply to those who served in Indian wars?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. It would be a tremendous increase, because those soldiers have heretofore received only $20 a month. Under this bill the soldiers of the Indian wars receive a larger percentage of increase than do those of any other class. It should be remembered that there is a difference in the length of service required of the soldiers of the different wars in order to give them a pension status under the various age and service acts. For instance, Mexican War soldiers are required to have served at least 60 days, Indian war soldiers 30 days, and Civil and Spanish War soldiers 90 days.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. If the bounty of the Government is to be extended to soldiers at all because of service in war, I do not think the proposition to grant to some a less amount of pension than to others can be defended.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. BURSUM. I desire to say that the Indian war veterans are given precisely the same rate of pension in this bill as is given to Spanish War veterans and, taking into consideration the age, the same as is given to Civil War veterans.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Then the reason for the distinction is in the age and not because of the war in which the soldier served?

Mr. BURSUM. Yes, sir; that is the distinction, age being considered an element of disability.

MAIMED SOLDIERS.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. This bill increases the present rate of $60 for the loss of one hand or one foot to $85, and increases the rate for the loss of an arm at or above the elbow from $65 to $90. It further establishes a new rate of $100 for the loss of one hand and one foot, and increases the rate for the loss of both arms or both legs or total blindness from $100 to $125.

Having increased the general scale of pensions, it is believed that the pensions for the maimed soldiers should be increased by approximately the same ratio; otherwise some Civil War veterans who are not maimed would receive greater benefits than some of the maimed soldiers. The laws heretofore have treated all maimed soldiers alike, regardless of their war service, provided they were maimed in line of duty.

I have not pointed out all the changes proposed in the present law by the pending bill, but merely what I considered the important and material changes.

COST OF SENATE BILL 5.

The Pension Bureau estimates that this legislation will cost $55,000,000 additional to the present cost of $253,000,000 (1924). The peak of appropriations for pensions was in 1923, when we appropriated $268,000,000. About $15,000,000 of this, however, was unexpended and was returned to the Treasury. It is thought that the additional cost of this bill will be about $2,000,000 more than the sum appropriated in the peak year of 1923. This sum will be gradually reduced as the number of pensioners decrease by death. If the present death rate continues (about 25,000 widows and about the same number of soldiers are estimated to die in a year), there will be a decrease of about $35,000,000 in pensions next year.

As an appendix to the foregoing remarks I desire to insert the following table, showing the pension rates fixed by the various laws since July 4, 1862, to the present time, for soldiers, widows, and children of soldiers, and Army nurses. This table is concise and very comprehensive, and shows just what changes have been made from time to time. It is, I think, the first table of its kind that has been prepared and published.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the table will be printed in the Record as requested.

[The table referred to will be found as an appendix to the remarks of Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts.]

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SMITH. I was absent from the Senate for a while and did not hear all of the discussion of the features of the bill by the Senator from Massachusetts. I should like to ask him what provision is made in the bill for the Spanish-American War veterans. The reason I ask that question is that it is my opinion that the veterans of that war have received less consideration according to their merit than any body of men who have served America.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. The Senator is quite right in what he says about the sum paid them. I will repeat my statement as to the provision made for Spanish-American War veterans. The present law provides a graduated rate to Spanish-American War veterans in accordance with the degree of disability—$12 for 25 per cent disability, $18 for 50 per cent disability, $24 for 75 per cent disability, and $30 for total disability. The rates in the first Spanish War service act of June 5, 1920, were based on the same as given the Civil War soldiers in their first service act of June 27, 1890.

Mr. SMITH. May I ask the Senator in this connection, how does that compare with the pensions paid for like degrees of disability in the case of veterans of other wars?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. It is less than one-half of the pension given to Civil War veterans and less than one-third of what is given to the veterans of the World War.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, of course, I am not now going to make a speech on the question; it is too late to do so; but when this measure comes up for final disposition I wish to call attention to the injustice, in my opinion, which has been done to the Spanish-American War veterans. Nobody ever served under worse circumstances. There was not so much of spectacular glory connected with their service, but what, with "embalmed beef" and the ravages of disease, and considering the heroic manner in which they served their country, I consider the Spanish-American War veterans equal to any body of soldiers who ever served the country.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I will yield to the Senator from New Mexico as soon as I say that I heartily agree with what the Senator from South Carolina has stated.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, I, too, entirely agree with the Senator from South Carolina, but this bill undertakes to remove that unjust discrimination, which has existed for many years. Under the provisions of this bill the Spanish War veterans will receive, taking into consideration age, exactly the same pensions as Civil War veterans have been receiving. We have undertaken to equalize the rates in the case of veterans of the various wars.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I will say to the Senator the minimum rate has been increased from $12 to $20 in the case of 25 per cent disability, and the maximum has been increased from $30 to $50. It is still very small, I think.

Mr. SMITH. I should like to state that I have not had an opportunity to study the bill, nor have I had opportunity to study the tables comparing the relief given to Spanish-American War veterans with that given the veterans of other wars, but I shall take occasion to do so, and I shall take occasion also to insist that they be given equal treatment at least with others who have served their country.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I think the committee have tried to follow some of the precedents established by Civil War pension laws, and also the age of the veterans; but I do not think there is room for argument along the lines suggested by the Senator from South Carolina that further increases should be made. I for one would be willing to go a long way further in giving pensions to these veterans. However, the legislative committee of Spanish war soldiers suggested the rates that are named in the pending bill.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. DIAL. I wish to say now that I propose, so far as I am concerned, to insist upon putting the veterans of all wars on an equitable basis, including the veterans of the Spanish-American War. If we are going to pass a pension law at all, I shall insist that all be treated alike.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, if there are no other questions, I yield the floor.

APPENDIX.

ACTS AND RATES BASED ON AGE AND SERVICE IN DIFFERENT WARS INDEPENDENT OF THE GENERAL PENSION LAW OF JULY 4, 1862, WITH ITS MANY AMENDMENTS.

SURVIVORS.		Per month.
Indian wars:
Acts July 27, 1892; June 27, 1902; and May 30, 1908		$8
Act Feb. 19, 1913		20
Act Mar. 4, 1917		20	$30
Mexican War:
Act Jan. 29, 1877		8
Acts Jan. 5, 1894, and Apr. 23, 1900, certain survivors		12
Act Mar. 3, 1903, all survivors		12
Act Feb. 6, 1907—
At 62 years		12
At 70 years		15
At 75 years		20
Act May 11, 1912		30
Act May 1, 1920		50	72
Act May 1, 1920, if requiring regular aid and attendance		72
Civil War:
Act June 27, 1890, in its original form, and also as amended by the act May 9, 1900		6-12
Act Feb. 6, 1907—
At 62 years		12
At 70 years		15
At 75 years		20
Act May 11, 1912		12-30
Act June 10, 1918		30-40
Act May 1, 1920		50	72
Act May 1, 1920, if requiring regular aid and attendance		72
War with Spain, Philippine insurrection, Boxer rebellion: Survivors, act June 5, 1920
		12-30	20-50
ARMY NURSES.
Civil War:
Act Aug. 5, 1892		12
Act May 1, 1920		30
War with Spain, Philippine insurrection, Boxer rebellion: Acts June 5, 1920, and Sept. 1, 1922 12-30
WIDOWS AND MINORS.
Revolutionary War:
Act Mar. 9, 1879, widows only		8
Act Mar. 19, 1880, widows only		12
War of 1812:
Act Mar. 9, 1878, widows only		8
Act Mar. 19, 1880, widows only		12
Act Sept. 8, 1916, widows only		20
Act May 1, 1920, widows only		30	50
Indian wars:
Acts July 27, 1892, June 27, 1902, and May 30, 1908, widows only		8
Act Apr. 19, 1908, Mar. 4, 1917, sec. 1, widows only		12	20
Mexican War:
Act Jan. 29, 1877, widows only		8
Act Apr. 19, 1908, sec. 1, widows only		12
Act Sept. 8, 1916, widows only		20
Act May 1, 1920, widows only		30	50
Civil War:
Act Mar. 19, 1880, widows and minors		12
Act June 27, 1890, in its original form, and as amended by the act of May 9, 1900, widows and minors		8
Act Apr. 19, 1908, widows and minors		12
Act Sept. 8, 1916, widows and remarried widows		20
Act Oct. 6, 1917, widows only		25
Act May 1, 1920, widows, remarried widows, and minors		30	50
War with Spain, Philippine insurrection, and Boxer rebellion—
Act July 14, 1918, widows and minors		12
Act Sept. 1, 1922, widows, remarried widows, and minors		20

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I understand that the Senator does not care to go on with the measure to-night. I had intended to move an adjournment, but I understand that the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] has a matter which he wishes to bring up.

COAST GUARD INCREASE.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, the other evening I asked unanimous consent for the consideration of House bill 6815. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. BRUCE] asked at that time that it might go over. He has since examined the bill, and told me on yesterday that it would be entirely satisfactory to him for the Senate to pass the bill.

I want to call attention just briefly to what it is. It is a bill that passed the House, and we put it on the deficiency appropriation bill. Of course, both the House and the Senate are much opposed to putting legislation on appropriation bills. If we pass the bill here, it will take it out of the conference.

Mr. ROBINSON. What is the calendar number of the bill?

Mr. JONES of Washington. It is Order of Business 307. It provides for the transfer of some vessels from the Navy to the Coast Guard for the purpose of enforcing the antismuggling law.

Mr. ROBINSON. May I ask if the bill passed the Senate in the form that is set forth in this bill?

Mr. JONES of Washington. It was put on the appropriation bill as an amendment as it was submitted by the Budget Bureau. In the House they made no material changes, but some technical ones that were necessary to make it serve the purpose desired.

Mr. ROBINSON. What I am asking is, was the language of the Senate amendment, which was first embraced in the appropriation bill, identical with the language of the bill which the Senator proposes to pass?

Mr. JONES of Washington. No; it was not identical, but it was substantially the same. As it was put on by the Senate, it was the amendment suggested in the language of the Budget Bureau; but this had been introduced as a separate bill in the House, and had been very carefully investigated by the Interstate Commerce Committee, and the language was rearranged, and about the only substantial difference is this: In the amendment which we put on the deficiency bill 13 commanders are provided for, while in the bill as it passed the House 10 are provided for.

The Appropriations Committee did not know of the passage of the bill through the House. They took the language as reported to both Houses by the Budget Bureau. The bill as it passed the House had the very careful consideration of the Interstate Commerce Committee, and the changes that are made are rather technical, and not substantial. I have examined it very carefully.

Mr. ROBINSON. This bill has not been considered by the Committee on Commerce, has it?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Yes; it has been reported from that committee, and it is on the calendar.

Mr. ROBINSON. Unanimously reported?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Unanimously reported.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well. I have no objection to its consideration.

Mr. JONES of Washington. There is only one amendment which I desire to offer, and that is to insert the word "warrant" on page 4, in line 24.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Mexico desire to have the unfinished business temporarily laid aside?

Mr. BURSUM. I do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to that course? The Chair hears none, and the unfinished business is temporarily laid aside.

The Senator from Washington now asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6815. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6815) to authorize a temporary increase of the Coast Guard for law enforcement, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to transfer to the Department of the Treasury, for the use of the Coast Guard, such vessels of the Navy, with their outfit and armaments, as can be spared by the Navy and as are adapted to the use of the Coast Guard.

Sec. 2. (a) The President is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the following temporary officers of the Coast Guard: Two captains, 10 commanders, 25 lieutenant commanders, 48 lieutenants, and 42 lieutenants (junior grade) and ensigns, of the line; and 5 commanders, 11 lieutenant commanders, 19 lieutenants, and 40 lieutenants (junior grade) and ensigns, of the Engineer Corps.

(b) Such temporary officers while in service shall receive the same pay, allowances, and benefits as permanent commissioned officers of the Coast Guard of corresponding grade and length of service, except that no such officer shall be entitled to retirement because of his temporary commission.

(c) Temporary appointments shall continue until the President otherwise directs or Congress otherwise provides.

SEC. 3. Permanent commissioned officers of the Coast Guard may be given temporary promotion, in order of seniority and without examination, to fill any such temporary grades. Notwithstanding such temporary promotion, any such officer shall continue to hold his permanent commission and shall be advanced in lineal rank, promoted, and retired in the same manner as though this act had not become law.

SEC. 4. (a) All original temporary appointments under this act shall be made in grades not above that of lieutenant, in the line or the Engineer Corps, and shall be made only after the candidate has satisfactorily passed such examinations as the President may prescribe. No person shall be given an original temporary appointment who is more than 40 years of age.

(b) Any warrant officer or enlisted man of the permanent Coast Guard may be given an original temporary appointment under this act, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, and without reduction in pay or allowances. Notwithstanding such temporary appointment, any such warrant officer or enlisted man shall be entitled to retirement in the same manner as though he had continued to hold his permanent grade or rating, and upon the termination of such temporary appointment shall be entitled to revert to such grade or rating. Service under any such temporary appointment shall be included in determining length of service as a warrant officer or enlisted man.

(c) The names of all persons appointed under this section shall be placed upon a special list of temporary officers, as distinguished from the list of permanent officers, of the Coast Guard. The President is authorized, without regard to length of service or seniority, to promote to grades not above lieutenant, in the line or Engineer Corps, or to reduce officers on such special list, within the number specified for each grade, and he may, in his discretion, call for the resignation of, or dismiss, any such officer for unfitness or misconduct.

SEC. 5. (a) Under such regulations as he may prescribe, the President is authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, 25 temporary chief warrant officers of the Coast Guard from the permanent list of warrant officers of the Coast Guard.

(b) Such chief warrant officer shall receive the same pay, allowances, and benefits as commissioned warrant officers of the Navy, except that any such officer shall continue to hold his permanent grade, and shall be retired in the same manner as though this act had not become law.

SEC. 6. (a) Under such regulations as he may prescribe, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to appoint temporary warrant officers, and to make special temporary enlistments, in the Coast Guard. No person shall be entitled to retirement because of his temporary appointment or enlistment under this section.

(b) Any enlisted man in the permanent Coast Guard may be appointed as a temporary warrant officer. Notwithstanding such temporary appointment, any such enlisted man shall be entitled to retirement in the same manner as though he had continued to hold his permanent rating, and upon the termination of such temporary appointment shall be entitled to revert to such rating. Service under any such temporary appointment shall be included in determining length of service as an enlisted man.

SEC. 7. The temporary appointment of any member of the Naval Reserve Force to an enlisted or commissioned grade in the Coast Guard shall not prejudice his status in the Naval Reserve Force when his temporary service in the Coast Guard shall have terminated. While serving with the Coast Guard members of the Naval Reserve Force shall not be entitled to retainer pay or any other special privileges by reason of their former service in the Navy or Naval Reserve Force, except that service in the Coast Guard may be counted as service in the Naval Reserve Force.

SEC. 8. Nothing contained in this act shall operate to reduce the grade, rank, pay, allowances, or benefits that any person in the Coast Guard would have been entitled to if this act had not become law.

MR. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment. On page 4, line 24, after the word "enlisted," I move to insert the word "warrant." That word was left out inadvertently.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 4, line 24, after the word "enlisted," it is proposed to insert the word "warrant," so as to read:

SEC. 7. The temporary appointment of any member of the Naval Reserve Force to an enlisted, warrant, or commissioned grade in the Coast Guard shall not prejudice his status—

And so forth.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

DETAILS OF OFFICERS OF THE UNITED STATES (S. DOC. NO. 79).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair desires to say to the Senate that he has just received from the President of the United States a communication addressed to the President of the Senate, which he now lays before the Senate. It will be read.

The reading clerk read the communication, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington.

THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE OF THE SENATE.

SIR: I herewith present for the consideration of the Congress the following measure designed to promote effectiveness in the Executive arm of the Government and recommend its enactment at the earliest practicable date of the present session:

A bill to authorize temporary Executive disposition, in the public interest, of the services of officers subject to Executive control.

Be it enacted, etc., That officers of the United States, civil and military, including retired officers consenting thereto, may at any time be specially assigned by the head of department concerned, for limited periods, to duty with or in any branch, agency, or political division of the Government of the United States, or with or in the American National Red Cross and other emergency relief organizations, whenever such assignment to temporary duty by the proper head of department shall be authorized by the President after determination that the same is required by the public interests. Any officer so assigned, without vacating his permanent commission, is hereby authorized to hold any public office the exercise or administering of which is involved in the execution of the assignment hereunder made. Sections 1222 and 1224, Revised Statutes, and the final sentence, beginning with the words "No person who holds" and ending with the words "consent of the Senate," of section 2 of the act of July 31, 1894, are hereby repealed.

In the opinion of the Attorney General rendered September 13, 1923, on the subject of the use of the naval forces in the enforcement of the national prohibition act, the constitutional provisions involved were thus expounded:

The clause of the Constitution authorizing Congress "to provide and maintain a navy" confers on it the power of determining when and for what purpose the naval forces of the United States may be used. It follows that the constitutional provision constituting the President the Commander in Chief of the Army, Navy, and Militia, would not give power to use the Navy in a manner other than as authorized by Congress.

Assuming the soundness of this view, and applying the language of the Attorney General to the Army clause of the Constitution corresponding to the Navy clause cited by him, there would result the doctrine that in time of peace the President may not, under any circumstances, put any part of the military or naval personnel to a use of even the briefest duration for which neither the Constitution nor act of Congress provides. However that may be, I find that the Comptroller General, adverting to such opinion and substantially invoking such a doctrine, has, in the absence of enabling legislation thereon, recently questioned, among others, the following special assignments of certain Army officers, and has taken the following action in their cases stated in his latest communication to the Secretary of War on the matter in this language:

This office can find no authority for the detail of aides to the civilian Governor General of the Philippines, assistants to the American Embassy in Cuba, as assistants in the Department of Justice, to the Bureau of the Budget, Treasury Department, or of other than a limited number of medical officers to the American National Red Cross. Payments to officers so acting or so detailed on the date of your letter, December 8, 1923, will be passed to the credit of the disbursing officers until the end of the current fiscal year to afford opportunity for presenting the matter to the Congress; unless statutory authority is secured on or before June 30, 1924, for the respective details, credit for all payments to Army officers while on such details after that date must be denied in the accounts of disbursing officers. (Similar notice is therein given respecting officers assigned to the Inland and Coastwise Waterways Service.)

The Comptroller General's action raises a practical question in Government administration which I deem it advisable to present to Congress for disposition by enactment of suitable legislation. The very few officers now on such special assignments are rendering highly valuable public service by reason of the nature of the duties involved and their requisite equipment of knowledge and experience; and the Executive should not be disabled from so utilizing them, for limited periods, in the public weal. As it is neither possible always to foresee the necessities of administration demanding such assignments and the Government organizations affected thereby, nor practicable to obtain legislative action, as occasion therefor arises, in time to be of avail, general legislation in the premises of the character above set forth is urgently recommended.

Respectfully,

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I ask that the communication be referred to the proper committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is unable to determine the proper committee.

Mr. CURTIS. Then I suggest that it lie on the table until disposition can be made of it to-morrow morning.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless the Senate otherwise designates, it will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, to what committee was the communication from the President referred?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It was not referred to any committee. It lies on the table. The Chair was unable to determine to what committee the communication should be referred.

Mr. SWANSON. It seems to me the portion of it that refers to the Army should go to the Military Affairs Committee, and the portion of it that refers to the Navy should go to the Naval Affairs Committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Virginia move that that be done?

Mr. CURTIS. I suggest that the matter be printed and lie on the table until to-morrow, and in the meantime we will determine what committee it shall go to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be the order unless the Senate otherwise directs.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. CURTIS. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 41 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, March 27, 1924, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, March 26, 1924.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we are grateful for the awaking of mind, soul, and body to the new activities of a new day. We bless Thee for the gracious privilege of giving them expression. O Lord, hush all desires that direct downward and give impulse to every aspiration that points upward. Humble us in our pride and may we be not ashamed to do the sweet, simple, gentle ministries which means so much to human happiness. Give us the heart of courage that crowds out fear; strengthen the weak and give pity and mercy to the transgressor. God bless every institution and every person that helps men to love one another. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE—CLARK V. MOORE.

Mr. NELSON of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Elections No. 2, submitted a privileged report in the contested-election case of Don. H. Clark v. R. Lee Moore, first congressional district of Georgia, which was referred to the House Calendar.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS—ADJUSTED COMPENSATION.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all ex-service men in the House be permitted to extend their remarks in the Record in respect to the adjusted compensation bill.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, Mr. Begg is not here, and I do not think the gentleman ought to ask that when he is not present.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. But the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Begg] was here yesterday when some one secured permission.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXPRESSIONS OF SYMPATHY ON THE DEATH OF THE LATE WOODROW WILSON.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following communications which he has received in an official capacity: The Clerk read as follows:

PARIS, February 6, 1924.

The Chamber of Deputies, deeply moved by the news of the death of President Wilson, cherishing the grateful memory of that great citizen, under whose Presidency the United States brought to France and her Allies engaged in the most cruel war an invaluable assistance and whose every effort was bent on bringing about final peace through the organization of an international understanding, addresses to the House of Representatives of the United States the homage of its sentiments of profound sorrow.

PRAGUE.

To the CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Washington:

The presidents of the two chambers of the National Assembly of the Republic of Czechoslovakia regret deeply the death of President Wilson, all of whose efforts during the Great War were directed toward the deliverance of oppressed people. The Czechoslovakian people will preserve in grateful memory this grand apostle of liberty and justice.

BRUSSELS, February 7, 1924.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Washington:

The House of Representatives of Belgium sympathize deeply with the sorrow which has just come to the great American Republic. We salute with respect the glorious memory of the statesman who strove with indomitable courage for the triumph of right and who gave to Belgium, victim of an abominable attack, the support of his ardent sympathy. The Belgian house has the honor to assure you in this day of grief of the sympathies of close friendship and unalterable gratitude which unite Belgium and the United States.

EMILE BRUNET,

The President of the Chamber of Representatives of Belgium.

SANTIAGO, CHILE, February 6, 1924.

The PRESIDENT OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Washington, D. C.:

I am honored in communicating to you a resolution of the house of the Chamber of Deputies in order to express to the body over which you preside its sincere regret for the death of the illustrious ex-President Woodrow Wilson.

PRESIDENT ERRAZURIZ.

TAX ON MOTOR VEHICLES.

Mr. ZIHLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 655) to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to all of the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 655, disagree to all of the Senate amendments thereto, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Yes; if I do not lose it.

Mr. UNDERHILL. I would say to the gentleman that this is a very important bill. It concerns the District of Columbia and the State of Maryland, and if the gentleman has no real reason for objecting, I hope that he will withdraw his objection.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. My real reason is the constant objection lodged on the Republican side of the House against granting the ex-service men of this House opportunity to speak their sentiments to the country through the Record with reference to the adjusted compensation bill. I know of no other means by which I may resent the assault upon these ex-service men, and I am going to exercise it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this gas bill is an important matter, and we should have some understanding about it.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. That is an important matter also, and my objection stands.

GERMAN RELIEF.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Speaker, I have sent an amendment to the desk proposing to increase the appropriation to $25,000,000. In view of the fate of the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEFALD] it would be vain, however, at this late hour to insist on its consideration.

The committee report sets forth the fact that there are 2,500,000 children in Germany now facing starvation. That being true—and I have no reason to doubt it—there must be approximately 5,000,000 parents in the same predicament. How far will $10,000,000 go toward purchasing food in this country for their relief, particularly at the prices which now prevail? It will amount to about $1.33 for each person. That will surely not afford more than the most temporary form of relief. In this country it might perhaps feed one adult one day and provide bread and milk for three children.

Ten million dollars may seem to be a big sum to disburse in charity, but when you consider the number among whom it must be apportioned, its magnitude diminishes and our vaunted charity fades into a mere gesture. But it is a good and wholesome gesture, and I am for it, whatever the sum awarded to this most meritorious work of mercy.

One of the most gratifying features of this debate is the proof so abundantly evinced on this floor that the animosities of the war have practically disappeared.

Magnanimity and power go hand in hand. Only the weakling cherishes hate and holds a grudge.

That spirit of chivalry has been manifested here many times and the skeptic would only be smelling for meanness in human nature who would suggest that a single vote which might be recorded against this bill could be ascribed to bitterness or vindictiveness.

I respect the judgment, the learning, and the sincerity of the Members who have regretfully, I know, announced their opposition to this measure on the ground that the Constitution forbids the Congress to make gifts of this nature even for the most worthy purpose. I am a great admirer of the founders of our Constitution, and rather a strict constructionist, but I confess I am not impressed by such arguments; especially when I look back and find so many instances in our history where the statesmen and patriots, whom posterity delights to honor, confronted similar situations without fear or quibbling and unflinchingly resolved their doubts, if they had any, in favor of humanity.

Whether it was an earthquake or holocaust, a flood or famine, our Nation has invariably and promptly come to the rescue of the unfortunate, so that the words "American mercy" have become traditionally embedded as an anchor of hope in the hearts of all the peoples of the world.

We must not fall in this, nor endanger any impairment of the confidence which our past history has done so much to establish and encourage.

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

Charity never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. (Corinthians, xii, 1.)

Let the constitutional lawyers take notice:

Whether there be knowledge, it shall pass away.

Gentlemen talk about the interpretation of texts! Is the Constitution of the United States a mere aggregation of words? Has it not a soul? The whole history of our land cries out in protest against such a challenge. Let us, on this occasion, interpret and manifest the soul of America which has ever been known, as I hope it always will be, as "The Good Samaritan among nations."

COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA—LEAVE TO SIT DURING THE SESSIONS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. ZIHLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent, by the direction of the Committee on the District of Columbia, that that committee may sit during the sessions of the House for this day only.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent that the Committee on the District of Columbia may sit during the sessions of the House to-day. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7877.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. I withdraw the point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kansas that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7877, with Mr. TRISON in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7877, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7877) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I reserve a point of order on page 9, line 4, commencing with the word "Provided," in line 4, and ending with the word "Army," in line 5.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that that comes too late, a lot of business having been transacted and numerous Members spoke after that paragraph was read. Even if a point of order could be lodged, it comes too late.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. The point of order was made on yesterday.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. I made the point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to submit the Record as to what happened. There was at least a half dozen gentlemen who spoke. I will read what the Record shows so there will not be any question about it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Texas yield for that purpose?

Mr. BLANTON. No; I do not yield. I direct the Chair's attention to page 4988; he will see where the Clerk read, as follows:

Pay of officers: For pay of officers of the line and staff, $30,338,000; Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to Maj. Charles C. Cresson, United States Army.

Then follows, immediately, Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. "Mr. Chairman, I will state that there is a tentative agreement between myself," and so forth. Then Mr. ANTHONY broke in with remarks; and then again Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky interpolated remarks; then Mr. ANTHONY did the same; then Mr. WURZBACH interjected remarks; then Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky again did so; then Mr. ANTHONY again did so; then Mr. REECE made remarks; and then Mr. BLANTON made some; and then Mr. CONNELLEY of Texas; and finally, after all this, Mr. LA GUARDIA made his point of order, but after all this talk, and it was then too late for the gentleman from New York to get up and make a point of order. If that point of order does not come too late, I do not know the rules of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair can settle this controversy very easily. All that the gentleman from Texas says is true, but it is not decisive on this point. The only thing involved in the colloquy referred to by the gentleman was an attempt to settle a matter by debate. The thing that is fatal to the contention of the gentleman from Iowa is that there was an amendment offered and submitted to the committee, which in the opinion of the Chair settles the matter.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. It is my impression that amendment was to an early part of the paragraph.

Mr. BLANTON. We are all interested in orderly procedure. Do I understand the Chair to say this colloquy did not shut out the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The colloquy was not directed to the consideration of the amendment, and so far as the colloquy was concerned the Chair would be inclined to rule that it was not a consideration of the matter at all. If the amendment was offered, however, that would seem to settle the matter.

Mr. BLANTON. They are directing the point of order to the paragraph of the bill, not to the amendment. The point of order is against the paragraph read at the bottom of the page.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands that and was attempting to rule with the gentleman from Texas, if he will only permit.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, well. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. As the Record discloses the situation it is apparent that the point of order against the paragraph in the bill comes too late.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, my amendment was pending with the point of order, as I recall it, when the committee rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. The point of order was made, if the Chair please, by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY], and appears on page 4988. The gentleman from Kansas said:

I want to make the point of order on that amendment on the ground that it is new legislation which changes existing legislation.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve the point of order that it is not germane to the paragraph.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that that comes too late, because intervening matter has occurred.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order the gentleman now makes because there can be only one point of order considered at once. Other points of order may be made or remain pending, or they may be made later when the first point of order is disposed of.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I would like to have them made if they are going to make them and consider them at one time.

Mr. BEGG. If the gentleman desires me to make the point of order, I make the point of order it is not germane to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. It is the better practice to make all points of order at once, but a Member may not be precluded from exercising his right to make a point of order so long as another point of order is pending.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Well, let them make them.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] has made a point of order, which will be pending. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] is recognized on the point of order. The point of order of the gentleman from Ohio is that it is not germane to the paragraph.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, are we discussing the point of order now on the gentleman's amendment?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. We are beginning to have discussion of the form of procedure under the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I presume the Chair has consulted the precedents and is to rule?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chairman has his view of it, but he is open to conviction upon proper argument.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I submit to the Chair that my amendment does not change existing law, because it operates only on this present appropriation, and therefore it does not change existing law. The effect of it is to provide that the Army may not use any of the funds appropriated in this section for the purpose of recruiting boys from 18 to 21 years of age without their parents' consent. Now, the statute remains just as it is, and the limitation, as I understand it, is simply a narrowing of the appropriation within the uses to which it can usually be applied.

Now, as to the point that it is not germane, I am at a loss to find in the bill an item entitled "Recruiting." From such an examination as I have made I can not find it. There may be some item devoted to recruiting, but I do not find it. Now, my amendment provides that no money under the head of "Pay of the Army" shall be devoted to the recruiting of men under certain conditions. It necessarily follows that since this item covers the pay of all the men of our Army it also covers the pay of those men who would be assigned to recruiting. If that be true, it occurs to me that my amendment is germane, because it simply provides that the Army shall not devote any pay to officers who may be assigned to recruiting under certain conditions.

Now, this same point, or practically the same point, has been before the House on former occasions. On December 16, 1922, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] being in the chair, an amendment in slightly different form was presented, and a point of order was leveled against it. What transpired will be found in volume 64, part 1, Sixty-seventh Congress, page 585.

That amendment provided that "No part of the funds herein appropriated shall be available for the pay of any enlisted man or officer who may be assigned to recruiting men or boys under 21 years of age without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor or minors. On page 587, Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair, appears this ruling:

The Chair is quite clear that the amendment is a limitation, especially in view of recent rulings by several chairmen. I recall that the first time the question was discussed in my hearing an amendment was offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FIELDS] on the Army appropriation bill, depriving certain officers of pay if they did certain acts in social relations with regard to privates and other officers, and the Speaker sustained the amendment. The point of order is overruled.

That amendment—I will be frank to say—was not identical with mine, but an amendment having the same purpose as this amendment, to limit the use of the appropriation.

When the Army appropriation bill was before the House on January 17, 1923, volume 64, part 2, page 1902, of the Record, the following amendment was offered:

Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended to pay any officer who in peace time permits a man under 21 years of age to be enlisted without the parents' knowledge and consent.

Points of order were reserved to the amendment by the gentleman from Michigan and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY]. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] addressed the Chair and said:

Mr. Chairman, it is my opinion that the amendment is a limitation—

And later withdrew the point of order.

Last week in this House, on March 20, 1924, when the naval appropriation bill was pending I offered an amendment, as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CONNALLY of Texas: At the end of the Byrnes amendment insert the following: "Provided, That no part of the funds appropriated by this act shall be utilized for the recruiting or enlistment of boys under 21 years without the written consent of the parents or guardians, if any, of such boys to their enlistment."

A point of order was made that it changed existing law, and so forth.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] was in the chair, and reviewed the decision by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH], and, as appears on page 4606 of the Record, announced his decision, concluding the same with these words:

The Chair, both on principle and following precedent, overrules the point of order.

The point of order was then made that the amendment was not germane at that particular point in the bill, and the Chair held that it was not germane at that particular point because there was a heading in that bill for recruiting by name and that amendment should have been offered to that paragraph. He held that it ought to have been offered to that paragraph of the bill where recruiting was set out.

I have not found any section in this bill particularly set apart for recruiting activities; but, since the pay of the Army is one item of recruiting activities, my contention is that it is probably more germane there than it would be to any other portion of the bill, and I submit that this, since it is not permanent law, but simply a restriction of the uses to which this appropriation may be put, is a limitation, and that it is germane to this particular section of the bill.

Following the Chair's ruling, last referred to, that the amendment was not germane to the paragraph, on Friday, March 21, 1924, the gentleman from Texas, who is now addressing the Chair, offered the following amendment:

Amendment offered by Mr. CONNALLY of Texas: Page 27, at the end of the paragraph, insert the following: "Provided, That no part of the funds appropriated by this act shall be utilized for the pay of any officer or man who may recruit or enlist any boy under the age of 21 years without the written consent of the parent or guardian, if any, of such boy for such enlistment."

The gentleman from Ohio, as appears on page 4641 of the Record, made a point of order against the amendment.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM], Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, then made the following ruling:

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair takes it there is no doubt about one proposition. The pay of the officers or the men who would do this recruiting work is included within the paragraph which has just been read. If the Chair is wrong about that, he will be glad to be corrected, but it is the judgment of the Chair that the pay of such officers and men was included in this paragraph. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] is almost exactly the same amendment offered in the Army bill, to which the Chair referred yesterday in his decision. That amendment, which was also offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], reads as follows:

"Provided, That no part of the funds herein appropriated shall be available for the pay of any enlisted man or officer who may be assigned to recruiting men or boys under 21 years of age, without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor or minors."

The language is almost identical, with just a slight change.

As the Chair called attention yesterday, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH], on that occasion held that that was a proper amendment; that it was a limitation, and overruled the point of order which was made to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The suggestions made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Bagg] are pertinent in an inquiry by the committee as to the merits of this proposition. They do not, however, go to the matter of parliamentary law involved. The Chair is not called upon, nor is the committee now, to decide just how this would be administered. The only question involved is, Is it such an amendment as the House ought to consider? The Chair thinks he should follow the precedent, the only one there is; however, if the Chair were deciding it upon the merits, as to whether it is a limitation or not, the Chair is entirely frank in saying he thinks it is a limitation and that the former ruling of Chairman LONGWORTH was correct. The Chair, in view of that opinion, feels that the point of order should be overruled.

The amendment was held in order and was adopted.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I think it will not be a difficult task to convince the Chair, and even the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON], that the amendment is not germane to the paragraph.

Now, what does the paragraph seek to do? It provides the pay for the officers. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that if I were to offer an amendment providing that no part of this appropriation shall be used for the payment of an officer that happens to buy blue Army blankets for use in the Army the gentleman from Texas would immediately hold that that would be out of order because it would not be germane. This provision does not have anything to do with the activities of the men themselves but has to do only with the payment of salaries, and the Congress is obligated to pay the salaries of the men, and the direction of their activities is under the Army officers; and the germaneness of the amendment providing for the withholding of payment, providing you were to buy blue blankets, would be just as germane as for the gentleman to offer an amendment providing that the pay shall be withheld if they enlist a boy under 21 years of age.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. Yes.

Mr. DYER. Did I understand the gentleman to indicate where he thought this amendment should go?

Mr. BEGG. I did not; but I will say that because the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] can not find that place is no reason why it should be held germane to a place where it is not germane. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER] will surely admit, if I were to offer an amendment withholding this appropriation from an officer who bought blue blankets instead of gray or drab blankets, that such an amendment would be out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The paragraph in the bill last read by the Clerk was on page 9, beginning at line 3:

Pay of officers: For pay of officers of the line and staff, $30,338,000.

With a proviso which is not important in this connection.

To this paragraph the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] offers this amendment:

Provided, That no part of the funds appropriated by this act shall be utilized for the recruiting or enlisting of boys under the age of 21 years without the written consent of the parent or guardian, if any, of such boys.

It will be noted that the amendment is made as a proviso to a certain paragraph in the bill, and it has been held through a long line of decisions that a limitation to a paragraph in the bill can not be made to relate to other provisions of the bill. This amendment, by its terms, specifically includes all provisions of the entire bill, and yet it is offered as an amendment to a particular paragraph.

It is claimed that a part of the expenses of recruiting is pay of the officers; it is also just as true that a considerable portion of the expense of recruiting is not under "Pay of officers," but is carried in some other part of the bill.

In view of the precedents, that a limitation when offered as an amendment to a particular paragraph must not relate to the entire bill, the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WURZBACH. On yesterday afternoon two amendments were offered to this section, one by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] and another by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNE]. The gentleman from New Jersey, as I understand, was recognized by the Chair and sent his amendment to the Clerk's desk. Now, the amendment offered yesterday by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] having been ruled out on a point of order, is not the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNE] entitled to recognition for the purpose of presenting the amendment which was offered by him yesterday afternoon?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey will, of course, be recognized in due time, but it does not necessarily follow that he has the right to be recognized next.

The Chair thought this entire matter brought forward by the gentleman from Texas should be cleared up at once, and therefore recognized him for the purpose of offering a modified amendment, if he so desired.

The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CONNALLY of Texas: Page 9, line 14, after the colon, insert: "Provided, That no part of the funds appropriated herein shall be utilized for the pay of any officer who may recruit or enlist any boy under the age of 21 years without the written consent of the parent or guardian, if any, of such boy for such enlistment."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the Clerk has not read that paragraph, and I want to make the further point of order that it is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. The Clerk will read.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, what is the point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. That the Clerk has not yet read the part of the bill to which the gentleman offers an amendment.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. The Clerk surely has read line 4.

The CHAIRMAN. But the gentleman's amendment refers to line 14.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. That is merely a clerical error and it should be line 4. I ask unanimous consent to make that change.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that it is not germane.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. It should be line 4, the same place to which the other amendment was offered.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk read the amendment correctly.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. But it is just a clerical error made by the stenographer. Line 4 is where it ought to be.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be modified as suggested.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that it is new legislation and a change of existing law.

Mr. BEGG. And, Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that it is not germane.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I do not care to argue the point. I think the ruling which the Chair has just made brings this clearly within the rule.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair does not think so, but the Chair will hear the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, the Chair has just ruled that the amendment previously offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] was not germane in that it sought to limit the entire appropriation in the bill. The gentleman from Texas has now changed his amendment so as to prevent any of the money appropriated in this paragraph to be used for the salaries of recruiting officers recruiting boys under 21 years of age. If an amendment were offered limiting the appropriation for salaries to Army officers detailed to do missionary work in China surely the Chair would be constrained to hold such an amendment germane.

The money appropriated in this bill for the pay of officers is for the payment of military duties assigned to such officers. Therefore, in the recruiting of the Army officers are assigned to such work, and it is quite proper, under the rulings of this House, to limit appropriations if recruiting is conducted along lines specifically prohibited or limited in the appropriation bill itself.

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Certainly.

Mr. BEGG. The only claim that can possibly be made that the amendment is in order is under the Holman rule, as a limitation, is it not?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Exactly.

Mr. BEGG. This is a matter dealing with the officers, and the amendment of the gentleman from Texas in no wise limits the officers or the pay of the officers. In order to be in order, the subject of the amendment must be germane to the subject of the paragraph to which it is offered.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Exactly.

Mr. BEGG. For instance, take my illustration of a moment ago about blankets; you would not hold that in order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Would you hold in order a limitation if officers were assigned to do missionary work in China?

Mr. BEGG. That is beside the point.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. No; it is not. That is exactly the point here. You are assigning officers to a specific duty, and we limit the appropriation, and we reduce the appropriation if such duty is performed contrary to the limitations provided in the amendment.

Mr. BEGG. With reference to the gentleman's suggestion about the assignment of officers to perform missionary work in China, his amendment, then, is dealing with the subject matter of the paragraph, namely, the officers.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Exactly.

Mr. BEGG. The subject matter of the amendment of the gentleman from Texas deals with enlisted men and not with officers.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Oh, no; that is just the point. It deals with the pay of officers and not enlisted men.

The CHAIRMAN. Upon a close examination of the amendment, the Chair thinks it can cut this discussion short by saying that, in the opinion of the Chair, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] has not cured the defect in his amendment at all, as it now reads, "provided, that no part of the funds appropriated herein."

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. "In this paragraph" is what I meant. I ask unanimous consent to change the amendment in that respect. That is certainly what was intended.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the modification of the amendment will be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I made a point of order on the amendment when it was offered, on the ground that it was new legislation, and I want to call the Chair's attention to the fact that it is not a limitation of the appropriation but it conveys a specific direction to executive officers of the Government and to Army officers as to what they shall do and what they shall not do, and is a change of existing law. I want to call the Chair's attention to the ruling which the present occupant of the chair made last year on almost the identical point, where he called the attention of the House to the fact that it was not a mere limitation on an appropriation but, in effect, was legislation. I also want to call the attention of the Chair to the ruling made by Mr. Hicks, of New York, on the District of Columbia appropriation bill last year, where Mr. Hicks made this observation:

Is the limitation accompanied or coupled with a phrase applying to official functions; and if so, does the phrase give affirmative directions in fact or in effect although not in form?

Is it accompanied by a phrase which might be construed to impose additional duties or permit an official to assume an intent to change existing law?

I submit that the language of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas does all that.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, I want to make the point of order that the amendment can not be offered at all to the paragraph. There is a difference in all dictionaries between a paragraph and a section, and we have not yet read the whole section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will have to overrule that point of order. An appropriation bill is always read by paragraphs.

Mr. BEGG. That is the point I am making, Mr. Chairman, and this amendment applies to a paragraph, and the gentleman is seeking to make it apply to a section.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. No; I am not doing any such thing, and I would like to submit some observations to the Chair in reply to the gentleman from Kansas.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman on that point.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] must have learned something about parliamentary law since last year or else has changed his mind. When an amendment was offered last year providing "That no part of this appropriation shall be expended to pay any officer who in peace time permits any man under 21 years of age to be enlisted without the parents' knowledge or consent," what did the gentleman from Kansas do?

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. No.

Mr. ANTHONY. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that the decisions I referred to were made since the time to which he refers.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. They were matters then within the gentleman's knowledge of parliamentary law, and his knowledge of parliamentary law is not any better now than it was then.

Mr. ANTHONY. I do not claim any great knowledge of parliamentary law.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Here is what the gentleman from Kansas said:

Mr. Chairman, it is my opinion that the amendment is a limitation.

I also want to call the attention of the Chair to the ruling of the Chairman, Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois, made last week. He held this identical amendment in order on the naval appropriation bill. He not only held it in order under the precedents but he said if it were an original proposition he would have to hold it was a limitation, and this amendment now is drawn so that it does not affect anything except the items in this particular paragraph, and it provides that these funds shall not be utilized for a certain purpose; and if that is not a limitation, I would like to know what a limitation is.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard a moment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. BLANTON. Of course, if the Chair has made up his mind I do not wish to waste time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas is oftentimes very persuasive and might cause the Chair to change his mind.

Mr. BLANTON. I hope the Chair is not being facetious about such an important matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Not at all; the Chair was entirely serious.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, a precedent was set in the last Army bill on just such an amendment, when it was held in order. The precedent was again set on the naval bill for this year.

This very amendment is in the present Army bill, in the act that is the law of this land until July 1. Every officer and the War Department are operating under that law now. Whenever you can show the War Department now, and until the present law is changed, that a young man has been enlisted against his parents' consent under the age of 21 they release him immediately.

This is not an interference with the discretion of an Army officer, and for this reason: The discretion of an Army officer is just what he can exercise under the authority of law that the Congress has made for his guide. That is the discretion he can exercise. If Congress says to an Army officer you shall not enlist a young man under 21 years of age without his parents' consent, that is not interfering with the discretion of an Army officer; that is giving him a law to guide him.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Certainly.

Mr. MADDEN. The law does not say that now and this proposes to change existing law.

Mr. BLANTON. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] mean to say that a legislative proposition in an appropriation bill for a fiscal year is not the law for that present fiscal year just as much as if it came from a legislative committee?

Mr. MADDEN. For this year.

Mr. BLANTON. Of course, and that is what is in the present law. It is a guide to the Army officer. He has no discretion except as the law gives it to him. I submit that this amendment ought to be held in order. I think the Chair did right in sustaining the point of order to the first amendment. I agree it was subject to a point of order, and that as to if the Chair was exactly right, but this second amendment is on all fours with other amendments that have been held in order, both on the last Army bill and the latest Navy bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. As the membership of the House knows, the present occupant of the chair during his long service here has given some attention to parliamentary precedents. The Chair wishes to state in that connection that there has not been any one parliamentary question arising in this House to which the present occupant of the chair has given so much attention as to this particular matter of limitation. The Chair should add that it is the most difficult of all the questions with which we have to deal here, even more so than germaneness itself.

The Chair wishes first to state his attitude toward rider legislation in general, which is one of distinct opposition to that form of legislation, and to state at least three reasons:

First, such legislation, hampered by parliamentary restrictions under which it must be made, is apt to be faulty. It is not the place for legislation. Legislation ought to be considered by a legislative committee and considered in the House as legislation. Therefore any consideration given to a rider on an appropriation bill must of necessity be superficial and unsatisfactory on account of such restrictions.

In the next place, rider legislation when enacted is tucked away in large appropriation bills, mostly concerning something else, and the law becomes a maze through which it is difficult for one to find his way. That of itself is one good reason why every opportunity to prevent rider legislation should be taken advantage of.

Third, and a much more important reason, is that it is antagonistic to one of the fundamental principles of constitutional government, which is that supply bills should be separated so far as possible from legislation. When supply bills are filled with matters of legislation, differences between the two Houses are apt to arise, differences difficult of settlement, oftentimes prolonging the consideration and endangering the passage of such bills which are necessary for running the Government. Another reason more important than these is that when the bill has passed the two Houses and goes to the Executive, the Executive can not exercise his constitutional right of vetoing a matter of legislation to which he may seriously object without at the same time striking down a great appropriation bill necessary for the carrying on of the functions of the Government.

These are some of the reasons that cause the Chair to be one of those ready at all times to limit, as far as can be properly done under the parliamentary procedure of the House, legislation by way of riders on appropriation bills.

The Chair has stated that he has given consideration to this subject in times past. There are literally hundreds of decisions, and the present occupant of the chair has read every one of them so far as they have been collected in the volume of precedents, trying to decide what is the proper line of parliamentary procedure through this inconsistent mass of precedents.

The precedents being as they are decisions of former Chairmen become really of little consequence on account of their conflicting character. The Chair will not attempt to bolster the ruling that he will make by any preceding ruling as such, but will simply refer to the reasoning supporting a number of such rulings.

The Chair will first ask the attention of the House to a ruling made by Speaker Cannon, found in section 3935 of Hinds' Precedents, volume 4. The Chair will read only the reasons:

The merits of the proposition are not involved in the point of order. What is the object of the motion and of the instruction? If it does not change existing law then it is not necessary. If it does change existing law then it is subject to the point of order. Much has been said about limitation, and the doctrine of limitation is sustained upon the proposition under the rule that as Congress has the power to withhold every appropriation it may withhold the appropriation upon limitation. Now, that is correct. But there is another rule, another phase of that question. If the limitation, whether it be affirmative or negative, operates to change the law or to enact a new law in effect, then it is subject to the rule that prohibits legislation upon a general appropriation bill.

A second reference I would make is to a statement of principle by Mr. Asher Hinds in his work, volume 4, section 3974:

It has generally been held that provisions giving a new construction of law or limiting the discretion which has been exercised by officers charged with the duties of administration are changes of law within the meaning of the rule.

Another statement of the same principle by Mr. Asher Hinds reads as follows, being section 3976, volume 4:

The language of limitation prescribing the conditions under which the appropriation may be used may not be such as, when fairly construed, would change existing law.

Another reference to Hinds' Precedents, volume 4, section 3973, is a decision by Mr. James S. Sherman:

The Chair is perfectly clear on the subject.

Rulings upon the subject of limitation have not been consistent by any manner of means; they have gone through something of an evolution. The later decisions have tended toward the point indicated, that where the proposed limitation might be construed by the executive or administrative officer as a modification of statute, a change of existing law, it could not be held to be a limitation. The Chair's belief is that the rulings along that line are correct, and so the Chair is constrained to sustain the point of order.

Just one more citation, and that is a statement in a ruling made by our distinguished colleague the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON]. It is to be found in section 3983, volume 4, of Hinds' Precedents.

Mr. Chairman BURTON in his ruling used the following language:

The limitation ceases to be such when by its terms, whether expressed in affirmative or negative language, it necessarily changes existing law. When there is expressed in the amendment a prohibition, as here, and details as to the manner of the performance of the duties of the office, it clearly points out the intention of the provision to impose new duties upon the Government officials. It is evident that the provision would be purposeless unless the effect was to change existing law. Now, if it is the duty of the United States district attorney to act in the line directed by this amendment, the amendment is unnecessary. If it seeks to impose upon them other and further duties, it is contrary to existing law, and that is true whether it is expressed in affirmative or negative language. The Chair, therefore, sustains the point of order.

A reference was made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] to what is the existing law. The law as carried in the current War Department appropriation act has no reference whatsoever to this point of order. The existing law with which we are dealing is as follows, and I quote from section 1560 of Barnes' Federal Code:

Who may enlist: Recruits enlisting in the Army must be effective and able-bodied men between the ages of 16 and 35 years at the time of their enlistment. This limitation as to age shall not apply to soldiers reenlisting. No person under the age of 18 years shall be enlisted or mustered into the military service of the United States without the written consent of his parents or guardians, provided that such minor has such parents or guardians entitled to his custody and control.

This is the existing law, so far as we are concerned, in dealing with this proposition. What does this amendment provide? It provides that—

No part of the funds appropriated in this paragraph shall be utilized for the pay of any officer who may recruit or enlist any boy under the age of 21 years without the written consent of the parent or guardian, if any, of such boy for such enlistment.

What is the effect of the provision? The effect is that whereas it is provided by law that the recruiting officer may recruit certain young men, and makes it his duty to enlist them, still he can not be paid under this appropriation bill with this alleged limitation if he enlists such boys or men as it is his duty to enlist. This is the effect of the proposed amendment. A recruiting officer has the right, and in fact it is his duty under the law, to recruit men over 18 years of age. This provision makes it so that he can not do it. What is the effect? The effect is to change the law so far as recruiting is concerned.

The Chair desires now to call attention to one precedent which has not been cited this morning but which is valuable here. The Chair refers to a reasoning by Mr. James R. Mann, who said that an appropriation might be restricted to red-headed men only or exclude such men only from receiving any part of an appropriation. Such a limitation relates only to the qualifications of the persons paid, and the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Mann, was correct in so stating. The amendment now under consideration, however, does not go simply to the qualifications of the persons paid. It prohibits the recruiting officer from performing a service which is legal, which it is his duty to perform, if this amendment were not inserted. Therefore, it seems to the Chair—

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit a parliamentary inquiry?

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BLANTON. Does the Chair realize that in making this decision he is wiping off the books the decision made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM]?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not wiping any decision off the books, as the Chair stated earlier.

Mr. BLANTON. That is the effect of his decision.

The CHAIRMAN. There are endless decisions, literally hundreds of decisions, and they are not all on one side by any means. According to the gentleman's contention either way the Chair decides he must wipe off the books a number of decisions. While the present occupant of the chair has very great regard for the decisions of the gentleman from Illinois, nevertheless, he has himself some convictions on the subject, having given the subject some considerable attention.

Mr. BLANTON. But the decision of the Chair is in direct conflict with that of the decision of the gentleman from Illinois.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, yes; and with a number of others. The decisions are not at all consistent with each other. They are not uniform. Therefore, the Chair must be guided by the best reasoning he can find in all of these decisions, and he is entirely clear that the best and soundest reasoning is antagonistic to this amendment. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Two gentlemen from Texas appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I claim the right to make that appeal.

Mr. BLANTON. I yield the right to my colleague.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, this is debatable under the five-minute rule, is it not?

The CHAIRMAN. It is.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I submit that according to the Chair's own words he admits that his ruling is contradictory to many precedents in this House. The present ruling overturns the ruling made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] in this House on Thursday last.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] in that decision reviewed the precedents and based his ruling not only on the precedents but on his own reasoning and held the amendment to be a limitation. I desire to submit a ruling by the present occupant of the chair, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON], which I do not think he quoted when he made his decision. This was on February 8, 1921, on an amendment by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY], the gentleman who now says every limitation except his own is out of order. Here is the limitation which the gentleman from Kansas offered. (RECORD, p. 2523.) Now listen:

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The bill makes an appropriation for aviation increase, to officers of the Air Service, $1,000,000.

If left without the proviso, this $1,000,000 could be expended for increase of pay of all officers who under the present law are qualified to receive it—that is, those who are actual fliers. The proviso as now modified provides that this appropriation shall not be available for increased pay of any officer who is not attached to an airplane squadron regularly required to fly; but this proviso shall not apply to any officer temporarily detached from such squadron.

The appropriation is already limited by existing law to officers who actually fly. This proviso, in addition to that limitation, adds another to the effect that besides being a regular flier the officer must also be attached to an airplane squadron which is required to fly.

In the opinion of the Chair this is a limitation. It is not within the province of the Chair to pass upon the wisdom or lack of wisdom of the provision, but it is the opinion of the Chair that the proviso actually limits the class now authorized to receive this increased pay under the law. Such a limitation to an appropriation is in order under the rules. The Chair therefore overrules the point of order.

The gentleman from Connecticut in the chair made that ruling in 1921. He said that it was not within the province of the Chair to pass upon the wisdom or lack of wisdom of an amendment, and yet the Chair to-day opened up his argument with the proposition that the use of limitations was not the right way to legislate, and so forth. He overruled many of the precedents established in this House in recent years by his good, strong right arm, because, he says, it is not the right way to legislate. I appeal from the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON], of 1924, who bases his ruling to-day on himself, to the TILSON of 1921, who based his decision upon the precedents of this House and the legislative power of this House. [Applause.] I ask that the Chair's decision be overruled.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this amendment ought not to be taken into consideration in the vote of whether we sustain the Chair in his decision. Now, in order that the gentleman from Texas—and I would like to have the gentleman from Texas pay attention—may know where his amendment will stick, I am going to show him—

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. The gentleman is mighty kind; will he help me place it in what he thinks is the proper place—

Mr. BEGG. Beginning line 12 and ending line 16, is a paragraph in the bill for the pay of enlisted men, and if the gentleman would offer the amendment to that paragraph providing that no part of this fund shall be applied to pay of soldiers enlisted under 21 years of age, it would be in order.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. We have not got to that.

Mr. BEGG. Because the substance of the amendment is germane to the substance of the paragraph, but in the paragraph to which this amendment is offered the substance of that paragraph has to do with the pay of officers and in no way relates to the pay of enlisted men, under 21 or over 21. And an added reason why we ought to keep the proceedings of the House orderly is this: What kind of a predicament would we be in if some officer the last half of the year, after having drawn his pay throughout, would by a mistake enlist a boy under 21 years of age and that information would not come to the Army officer, the paymaster, until after he had received the last installment of pay? Then according to the law, if this particular provision is held in order to this paragraph, that officer would not be entitled to any of his yearly salary. And in conclusion, men, I do not care whether you enlist them at 19 years old or 21 you ought to cast your ballot on this proposition at the right place and not make an incongruous condition in the law and hitch on it something in this way, and I maintain that the Chair has held according to all parliamentary procedure.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. I will.

Mr. DYER. The gentleman from Kansas in charge of the bill upon the floor stated a minute ago that he would offer a point of order, at least he did offer it thinking the amendment was at the proper place, that it was new legislation.

Mr. BEGG. That is a different point of order.

Mr. DYER. Of course great parliamentarians differ.

Mr. BEGG. Now I want to say to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], regarding the decision rendered by the gentleman from Kansas to which he refers in that amendment, if the gentleman will read it carefully, he will find that the substance of the amendment was identical with the substance of the paragraph to which it was offered, and, of course, it was in order as a limitation. But you can not limit the pay of the officers on an amount of money by limiting the duty of some other class of enlisted men.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I merely wanted to make one observation before the committee votes on this question, and I sincerely hope the committee will not take into consideration the merits one way or other of the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]. I realize very well the difficulties that surround the Chair in interpreting these limitations. I have been in the Chair myself a number of times when this particular bill, the Army bill, was before the committee. The line of demarcation is very close indeed in all these propositions, but it seems to me that now we ought to realize that it is wise on the part of the Chair to construe all these questions as strictly as possible. Most of these precedents applied before the creation of this new Committee on Appropriations, when the committees that had charge of the legislation for the Army and the Navy and various other departments also had the power of appropriating. But I think we all realize that now, when the Committee on Appropriations has taken over all of the appropriating functions of the various committees of the House, it is the part of wisdom to confine bills reported by it as closely as possible to appropriations and as little as possible to legislation.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Yes.

Mr. DYER. What does the gentleman say about the second line there, wherein they provide that no part of this fund shall be paid to a certain officer of the United States Army? Is not that going beyond purely the subject of appropriating?

Mr. LONGWORTH. That is not involved in the discussion. I am merely suggesting that it is wise for the committee, before we undertake to overrule the decision of the Chair, to consider this main proposition, that notwithstanding how close these questions may be, as to whether they are legislation or not, whether or not in the guise of limitation it is wise to follow the general proposition laid down by the Chair in this case, and that we ought to construe as strictly as possible legislative provisions in these bills.

Mr. BLANTON. May I ask how the gentleman voted the other day on the Graham decision when he held that legislation preventing the supervision of Government employees was in order under the rule?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Was that appealed from the decision of the Chair?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; I appealed, and the vote was 77 to 1. I think the gentleman from Texas was the 1. My position was with the gentleman then, but we did not get the votes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Well, the gentleman is sometimes mistaken.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas. Mr. Chairman, in view of the statement of the gentleman from Ohio that the line of demarcation is very close and very narrow in all of these amendments, and in view of the fact that the House by a decisive vote declared the policy that they did not believe that boys under the age of 21 should be enlisted either in the Army or the Navy, what better way could we settle that controversy than by voting against the decision of the Chair?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will say to the gentleman that I personally disclaim any attempt to argue the merits or demerits of this question. It may be that at some other point in the bill the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] would be clearly in order. Of course, I am slightly embarrassed when I find myself called upon to choose between the decision on the one hand of a very eminent parliamentarian, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM], and on the other hand a decision that seems to be at variance therewith, that of the eminent parliamentarian now in the chair; but all that I am trying to do now is—

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. And I may suggest another eminent parliamentarian, the gentleman from Ohio himself, who maintained that the amendment was in order.

Mr. LONGWORTH. The gentleman from Ohio was not called upon to decide upon this exact question. At any rate—and I repeat it—without consideration of the merits or demerits of this particular plan, or the question whether it may be in order at some other point in the bill, I hope gentlemen will take seriously the proposition to overrule the decision of the Chair in this case.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to make a statement, which will be very brief.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Chairman, if the Chair will permit, I would like to make a statement before the Chair makes his statement.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. CRISP. Gentlemen of the committee, in common with you all I have great respect for the ability and fairness of the present occupant of the chair. I know that he is sincere in his rulings. But it seems to me that under the rules of the House there can be no question but that the ruling of the Chair is erroneous, for this amendment is a pure limitation and as such undoubtedly it is in order as an amendment. As to whether or not the House desires to adopt it, that is a different thing. But as to whether it comes within the limitation rule, I do not see how it is open to controversy. My friend the distinguished leader [Mr. LONGWORTH] was presenting to the House, as the reason we should not adopt it, the fact that under the consolidation of appropriations in the Committee on Appropriations we should restrict the power of that committee. But the rules of the House placing all of the appropriations in the Committee on Appropriations affected only one rule of the House, and that rule was the Holman rule, and under that rule where the committee had jurisdiction of legislative matters as well as the authority to make appropriations the committee could report legislation in an appropriation bill if the legislation retrenched expenditures. The Committee on Appropriations never had that authority or power and the change of the rules in no wise affected the Committee on Appropriations so far as legislating on an appropriation bill. Now we all agree that the Committee on Appropriations is not a legislative committee. But this proposition is not suggested by the Committee on Appropriations. The Committee on Appropriations did not bring in the limitation proposed in this amendment. It is offered from the floor of the House.

But I go further, gentlemen. The Committee on Appropriations, under the decisions and precedents of the House, can bring in limitations, and the Committee on Appropriations today, in nearly every bill it reports, does contain some limitations. It has always been recognized that a committee can bring in limitations, and surely if the House committees can, then this great committee, composed of every Member of the House, is clothed with the same authority.

I can not see how gentlemen can doubt that this is a limitation.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I think the gentleman did not quite apprehend what I said. All I said was this, and I think the gentleman from Georgia will agree with me: That in construing what is a proper limitation the Chair should always err—if he errs at all—on the side of a strict construction rather than on the side of a loose construction.

Mr. CRISP. That is a question of opinion. When I had the pleasure of occupying the chair, if I ever had any doubt as to whether an amendment was in order, I always resolved that doubt in favor of the House and gave the House a chance to pass on it, overruling the point of order. [Applause.]

Mr. LONGWORTH. That would be true generally. But the gentleman agrees it is unwise to legislate on appropriation bills, does he not?

Mr. CRISP. Well, I think that is true, but I think—if my friend will permit me to say it—that is a question for the committee to determine, whether or not they will accept the amendment or adopt the legislation. That is a question as to the merits or demerits and as to whether or not you want to accept it.

I do not care to take up the time of the House any further, but I just want to read a decision—

Mr. BEGG. Before the gentleman reads that will he permit me to ask him one question?

Mr. CRISP. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BEGG. I have every respect in the world for the gentleman's judgment. I do not know whether the gentleman was present when I made some remarks a few moments ago, but suppose I were to offer an amendment providing that no part of this money should be paid to an officer or officers purchasing blue blankets—would the gentleman argue that that was a limitation?

Mr. CRISP. I would. I think that if there were a provision in this bill which provided for the purchase of black horses that the House, if it wanted to do a silly thing, could say that no part of the funds should be used for the purpose of purchasing bay horses or white horses. I think that is a limitation which would be in order under our rules.

Mr. BEGG. The gentleman is correct if the amendment were offered to a paragraph under Ordnance and Supplies.

Mr. CRISP. I will say to my friend that this amendment provides that no part of the funds in the paragraph to which it is offered shall be used for this purpose. Now, if the paragraph to which it is offered is not used to pay these salaries, then the amendment will be inoperative. As a parliamentary proposition this amendment is proposed as a limitation to a particular paragraph in the bill, saying that none of the money appropriated in that paragraph can be used for this purpose. Now, if that is not a limitation I can not conceive of one.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRISP. Yes.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I am in doubt about this question, and it seems to me the main point to be considered is whether or not the proposed amendment involves new legislation or a change of existing law. The existing law, as I understand it, is that recruiting is only permitted between the ages of 16 and 35, and this proposed amendment, which seems to me to change that law, prevents the recruiting of soldiers under the age of 21. I would be glad to have the gentleman's opinion as to that.

Mr. CRISP. This amendment, if adopted, indirectly, to a limited extent, does change existing law, but it does not permanently change existing law; in other words, this amendment can not create any affirmative permanent legislation; it can not apply to any other funds that the department may have available; it only applies to the funds appropriated in a certain paragraph of this bill; it does not create affirmative legislation, but it says that none of the money appropriated can be used in violation of the limitation. In my judgment, the amendment is in order and the decision of the Chair should be reversed.

The CHAIRMAN. Before submitting the matter to the vote of the House the Chair will make a very brief statement. In ruling that this is in effect legislation on an appropriation bill the Chair is far from having any idea of depriving the House of any of its rights. He is, in fact, simply suggesting the proper tribunal to which these matters should be submitted, which is the legislative committee having jurisdiction of the subject matter and not the Appropriations Committee.

The Chair thinks that in considering this subject we should look through the form and to the substance of the matter. As indicated by the gentleman from New York [Mr. GRIFFIN], who has just taken his seat, it has the effect of changing the law so far as the enlistment of recruits is concerned, and the Chair agrees with him that we should look through the form and consider the effect of the proposed amendment.

In so considering this matter the Chair has arrived at a conclusion which seems unescapable in the light of the reasoning in the premises regardless of what may have been decided by himself or others in the past. As the Chair has already stated, those decisions and all the precedents on this point are conflicting; but whatever they may be the Chair has arrived at the conclusion which he has stated, believing that this is not a limitation upon the appropriation but is, in effect, a limitation upon the discretion of the executive authority, and for this reason the Chair made his ruling.

The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the committee? The Chair will ask the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. LEHLBACH] to assume the chair and take the vote.

Mr. LEHLBACH took the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair be the judgment of the committee?

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BEGG) there were—ayes 76, noes 128.

So the decision of the Chair was rejected as the judgment of the committee.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas offers a substitute to the amendment of the gentleman from Texas, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANTHONY offers the following amendment by way of a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY]: "Provided, That the Secretary of War shall discharge from the Army with the form of discharge certificate and the travel and other allowances to which his service, after enlistment, shall entitle him, any enlisted man under the age of 21 on the application of either of his parents or legal guardian if such enlisted man was enlisted without the consent of one of his parents or his legal guardian."

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. ANTHONY. I ask the gentleman to make the point of order now, if he has one.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I withdraw the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas withdraws the point of order, and the gentleman from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. ANTHONY. Gentlemen of the House, I have offered this substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] with the idea of relieving the War Department from the great embarrassment which it suffers in being compelled to literally obey the legislation which was placed upon the appropriation bill for the current year. There is also a tremendous expense that is involved under the language which compels the War Department before it can enlist a man anywhere near the age of 21 to require the recruiting officers to secure the affidavits and the direct evidence from the parents or from the guardian of the recruit presenting himself before the officer dares to enlist such a man, under penalty of having his pay forfeited. This means that the Army has been compelled to secure this evidence in the case of every man presenting himself for enlistment in the case of men ranging up to the ages of 30 years or more in order that the recruiting officer can be absolutely sure he has made no mistake and thus not subject himself to the penalty of having his pay withheld. The House ought to know just what this means. It has caused an increased cost in the expenditures required for recruiting the Army, in my judgment, of not less than $400,000 or $500,000 during the current year.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. In just a second. The Adjutant General of the Army makes the statement in the hearings that he believed that the amendment placed upon the bill for the current year by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] would cost $1,000,000 more than it would if the amendment had not been placed thereon. In my judgment it has cost us, as I say, from $400,000 to $500,000. I do not believe that this House in the present desire of the country for economy in Government administration means to do such a wasteful and extravagant thing as to compel the War Department to gather all of this evidence in the case of every man who presents himself for enlistment who is anywhere near the age of 21.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman's amendment insure the discharge of a soldier wrongfully enlisted on presentation of proper proof?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think the amendment which I have offered will absolutely meet the desires of the House that men under the age of 21 shall not be enlisted without consent of parent or guardian; or, if enlisted without such consent, shall not be required to serve in the Army if their parents or their guardians desire them out.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. This will mean that in such instances they will be instantly discharged. I yield first to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DOWELL. I know the War Department is against this amendment, and I am not so sure it is against it from the standpoint of the expenditure involved, but does the gentleman know that the plan he has suggested of permitting them to take all these men into the Army in various parts of the United States and then return them home, where they have been wrongfully enlisted, would be any cheaper than it would be for the officers to go to their parents and find out how old they are before they take them in?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes. I want the House to know that there were over 16,000 instances during the current year where young men presented themselves for recruitment and were held under observation in order to secure the affidavits from their parents or guardians that they were of the age of 21, and on those 16,000 men it is a fair estimate that it cost the Government $20 apiece to take care of them during that time, so that we lost over $300,000 in trying to secure evidence about these 16,000 men alone, who subsequently left without waiting for the evidence. The purpose of my amendment is to relieve the War Department from that ridiculous and unnecessary work and expenditure.

Mr. CARTER. I take it that the purpose of the gentleman's amendment is to keep the War Department from enlisting men whom they would have to discharge.

Mr. ANTHONY. Of course.

Mr. CARTER. And I am going to assume they would not do that.

Mr. ANTHONY. If the War Department used any judgment at all, no recruiting officer would knowingly enlist a man under 21 if he had any idea he was to be discharged the next day.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman may have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks that the time of the gentleman from Kansas be extended five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CARTER. Would the gentleman object to having placed in his amendment the word "written," so that the written consent of the parent or guardian would be required?

Mr. ANTHONY. I would not.

Mr. CARTER. I think that would accomplish the purpose.

Mr. JONES. That is the question I wanted to ask the gentleman.

Mr. ANTHONY. My purpose in offering the substitute for the amendment was to make it possible for the War Department to go along and recruit men obviously of the age of 21 and over without having to go to the trouble and annoyance involved in securing absolute evidence that the man is over 21.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes; I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DYER. Could not this be straightened out without any difficulty if the recruiting officers would say to the man who applies for enlistment, "Go to your parents and bring them here or bring affidavits"?

Mr. ANTHONY. Oh, no; that would be absolutely ridiculous. It would be impossible for the parent to be brought there. The situation is just this: There were 16,000 of these boys or men—because they were not all boys, and most of them were over 21—who presented themselves for enlistment, and while they were waiting for the evidence that the department was compelled to secure many of these men went away.

Mr. SNYDER. How many of them dropped out on account of their parents or guardians not giving their consent?

Mr. ANTHONY. There were 1,400 of them, I think.

Mr. HASTINGS. Is the gentleman's amendment the same as existing law with reference to those under 18?

Mr. ANTHONY. No. The existing law, under the defense act, as I understand it, requires the written consent of the parent or guardian for those 18 years or under.

Mr. HASTINGS. This would make it apply up to 21.

Mr. ANTHONY. This would make it possible for every man enlisted under the age of 21 to immediately be discharged on the request of his parent or guardian.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to modify my amendment by adding the word "written."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment by inserting before the word "consent" the word "written." Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

The amendment of Mr. ANTHONY is modified by inserting before the word "consent" the word "written."

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. CONNALLY of Texas to the substitute amendment offered by Mr. ANTHONY: In line 1, before the words "Secretary of War," insert the word "hereafter."

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas. I do not think it is as good as mine, but since the gentleman from Kansas has changed his mind and announces that he is really in favor of the proposition at heart I am willing to compromise with the gentleman and accept his amendment. I will do that if in turn he will accept the amendment I offer to his amendment, and that is an amendment to add the word "hereafter," making this permanent law instead of a temporary law on an appropriation bill for one year and relieving us of the necessity of having to force every Committee on Appropriations each year and the Military Committee in this House to adopt it. If you will adopt my amendment to the Anthony amendment I shall be willing to agree to accept the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas, because I assume that since he has offered it he will see that it comes back from conference in the bill and will not strike it out in conference as the conferees undertook to do a year ago when the Committee on Appropriations agreed with the Senate conferees to take it out of the bill after the House had adopted it. What did the subcommittee do this year? After the House a year ago had put this amendment into the appropriation bill the subcommittee on the Army appropriation bill deliberately reported the bill to the House with that clause stricken out. Some gentlemen are not at heart in favor of this proposition. If the gentleman from Kansas will agree to my amendment by adding the word "hereafter" and make this permanent law I will agree to his amendment. The gentleman says the Army is not getting recruits. Why, here is a clipping from a newspaper quoting The Adjutant General of the Army as saying that recruiting in the Army under this very amendment is increasing, and that by the 1st of July the Army will have all the men that are authorized under the law to be recruited.

I want to read you a letter that I received from a woman about this very matter:

MARCH 22, 1924.

Representative CONNALLY,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Our daily paper, the Muncie Star, gives a paragraph to your bill which bars boys under 21 from enlisting in the Navy. I wish, as a mother who has suffered from the present law, to heartily commend your action.

Our boy was pursued, apparently, by recruiting officers for several years before he was 18, and was induced, without our knowledge, to enlist on his eighteenth birthday. He has had a home way above the average and every advantage parents of moderate means give their children, but he resented our desire to give him an education which would fit him for real independence.

The advantages and possibilities of the Navy were, to say the least, misrepresented to him, as we knew when it was too late. After a year he realizes this and is bitterly and desperately repentant. We are trying to have him released that he may finish his high-school course and go to college. But "red tape" makes it a slow and discouraging process. As he has had quite a remarkable record for several years in military leadership, he is the type they want for officers, so I question if he will be released. If not, I dare not think of what his future may be, knowing, as I do, how unhappy he is.

I am, I trust, a loyal citizen, but I can not understand the fairness which permits the Government in peace time to secretly take our boys, upon whom we parents have spent so much of care and time and money. If in manhood they make such choices, that is their own affair. But in the years when they are legally minors have we parents no rights?

Please pardon me if I have taken more of your time than seems reasonable.

Yours truly,

BOWENA N. HUFFER.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] puts his objections to my amendment on a purely money basis. I know that the Appropriation Committee becomes somewhat filled with ideas of money and figures. I know that dealing with money and appropriations so long their mental attitude looks out through the dollar, but in the name of all that is good, have we got to measure everything by the yardstick of the gold dollar? Are not the boys and their future worth anything? Are not the homes of the Nation worth anything? I submit that we ought to adopt the amendment by adding the word "hereafter" and make it permanent law. If you will do that I am willing to accept the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas. [Applause.]

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the amendment. If I had my way I would turn the amendment the other way around, so as to prohibit the enlistment of men over 21 years of age and would encourage their enlistment under 21. [Applause.] What is needed most is a law to induce men over the age of 21 years to go out and produce. Grown-up men ought to be usefully employed in producing things necessary for the country and not be engaged in boys' play. War is a boys' game. Why, during the Civil War the bulk of the armies were composed of mere boys. In the Federal Army alone there were 2,159,798 soldiers under 21 years of age. The boys have done and always will do the fighting. They are at the age of romance; they are fired with enthusiasm; they have read the lives of Washington, Napoleon, Alexander, and other great heroes, and, being in the proper mental attitude, that is just the time for them to receive military training.

I have absolutely no sympathy with this whining about the service of boys in the Army. I have had hundreds of whining letters such as that which the gentleman from Texas read and almost shed tears over. Of course, they all think their boys are led astray by some other bad boys and the parents of the "bad" boys think their sons are the ones who have been misled.

But what I object most to is that they all think that the American Army and the American Navy are not good enough for their sons. In that case their boys ought to be spanked and kicked out of the service [applause] instead of amending the law in a way which practically concedes their unfounded aspersions to be true.

SOME BOYS WHO WERE NOT SPOILED.

Many of the ablest men who have distinguished themselves in our Army and Navy, you will find, joined the service when they were under 21 years of age. I could name a hundred famous men in history who went into the service under 21 years of age. Take the case of Washington, the Father of His Country, who, after three years of service as a public surveyor, was made adjutant general of the Colony of Virginia at the age of 19. At 21 he led a dangerous expedition to explore the source of the Ohio River and took part in an arduous military reconnaissance. At 22 he led the expedition which resulted in the capture of Fort Necessity.

Under the leave to extend accorded me, I will run through a merely casual list of great men in history who began their military careers at ages which, in the present effete and decadent period which we seem to be entering, would never have had the opportunity for great service and would probably have died in obscurity. If they were living to-day they would not be able to join the American Army or Navy. Their mammas would not let them!

Commodore Stephen B. Decatur entered the Navy in 1778 at the age of 18 years; served on the United States frigate Constellation and participated in the naval combats resulting in the capture of the French frigates, l'Insurgente and La Vengeance.

Capt. James Lawrence, who, mortally wounded, gave utterance to the Spartan exclamation, "Don't give up the ship," entered the Navy in 1798 at the age of 18.

Capt. Oliver Hazard Perry, who sent the imperishable and terse report of the victory over the British fleet on Lake Erie, "We have met the enemy and they are ours," went to sea at the age of 14 and entered the United States Navy at 17.

Commodore John Barry, the first commander of the United States Navy, went to sea at 14 and commanded his own ship at 20.

Capt. John Paul Jones, the hero of many naval battles in the Revolutionary War, who when his ship, badly battered, was sinking under him was asked by the captain of the Scrapia to surrender, returned the sturdy reply, "Not by a damned sight; I've only begun to fight"—well, this hero was apprenticed on board a merchantman at the age of 12. At 17 he was made second mate, at 18 first mate, and at 21 was in command of his own ship.

Admiral Horatio Nelson, the hero of the Battle of Trafalgar, entered the British Navy at 12, accompanied Captain Phipps on his Arctic expedition at 15, fought in battles in the West Indies at 17, became a lieutenant at 19, and a captain at 21.

Commodore Edward Preble embarked as a seaman on an American fighting privateer in 1777 at the age of 16. At 19 he was made a midshipman.

Capt. David Porter went to sea on a merchantman at 14; made a midshipman at 18; and was on the United States frigate Constellation in her battle with the French frigates L'Insurgente and La Vengeance. Was wounded in a battle with the pirates on the coast of Santo Domingo at the age of 20, and took part in the war with the Barbary pirates while only 21.

Gen. Richard Montgomery, who died in the assault on Quebec during our Revolutionary War, had received, like General Gates, his training in the English Army, which he entered at the age of 18.

Gen. Daniel Morgan, the hero of the Battle of Cowpens, one of the greatest victories of the Revolutionary War, in which he defeated the redoubtable British cavalry leader General Tarleton, joined General Braddock's unfortunate expedition as a wagoner when only 19.

Gen. Andrew Jackson (Old Hickory), seventh President of the United States, joined the Revolutionary Army in 1780 at the age of 13 and fought with General Gates at Camden.

Gen. William Henry Harrison (Old Tippecanoe), ninth President of the United States, entered the Army at the age of 18 and fought under Gen. Anthony Wayne against the Indians when only 19.

Admiral David Glasgow Farragut, the hero of the naval battle at New Orleans, who, in the battle at the entrance to Mobile Bay, when he lashed himself to the mast, damned the torpedoes, and sailed triumphantly through a hail of fire, joined the Navy as a mere stripling at 9 years of age. At 12 he was intrusted with the command of a captured ship. At 18 became acting lieutenant, and took part in the naval encounter with the pirates of the West Indies at only 19.

Gen. James Wolfe, who won Canada for Great Britain by his famous defeat of Montcalm at Quebec, entered the army at the age of 15. He participated in the battles of the War of the Austrian Succession, in the Scottish rebellion of 1745, and took a brave part in the famous Battle of Culloden in 1746, when he was only 20 years old. He commanded a regiment at the age of 23.

These are only a few combings from American and English history. To go back to the Middle Ages and to ancient times would net hundreds of examples of virile and intelligent youths who owed their manhood to their early training in defense of their respective native lands.

At 16 Alexander the Great was man enough to take command of his father's army and quell a rising of the hill tribes. At 20 he succeeded to the crown of Macedonia and began the career of conquest which made his name historic.

Can you imagine any of these heroes importuning their parents to get them out of the army? They had too much stamina and grit.

MILITARY TRAINING A DUTY.

Every citizen ought to be a soldier—that is, he owes it as a duty to his country to know how to defend it against attack. That duty is just as essential as serving on a jury or acting as a witness in court to tell the truth and uphold justice. The time to learn the military responsibilities of a good citizen is just before those duties are assumed; in other words, during minority. It is then that the service of the individual can best be spared from the obligations of productive activity. He rarely has marital obligations or marital thoughts before 21; his mind and body are in the creative, formative state, and he is amenable to training, both mental and physical. Military training cultivates the habits of order, precision, regularity, and promptness, and increases efficiency in every task and in every situation with which the citizen may be confronted in civil life.

This Nation will not be worth preserving the moment the insidious poison penetrates the public mind that our Army and Navy are not fit moral fields for the training of our youth. If there is anything wrong with the system in either the Army or the Navy, the remedy is to ascertain and correct the faults. Not, as we are asked to do by this amendment, give encouragement to the slander and practically invite timid parents to draw their boys away from the service, thus choking their ambition and the longing for the sea or military glamor which have constituted the rightful heritage of every red-blooded boy from the beginning of history.

In all earnestness I say to you that if we do not stop this coddling and humoring of the youth of our country we are going to raise up a race of weaklings. We want men in this country, and we should not encourage sentiments that would take ambition and the fire of patriotism and loyalty out of boys who want to go into the Army or the Navy—aye, even against their parents' consent. That consent should not be asked. The country has the right to their service, just as it has the right to the service of their fathers for jury duty. It is a part of the responsibilities of nationhood. We have the right to protect ourselves from without as well as within our borders. We compel children to go to school up to a certain age. The Nation has the right to say when schooling should end and military training should begin; but in any event, however this may be viewed, the perfectly lawful ambition of our American boys to amount to something in the world should not be thwarted by too much solicitude or too much coddling. They ought to be encouraged to do something for their country even in the days of their youth. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words, merely to get the floor. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GRIFFIN] is awfully willing to vote somebody else's 18-year-old boy into the Army when he would not have his own boy 18 years of age enlist there in peace times for anything. Has the gentleman got any boys under 21?

Mr. OLIVER of New York. I will say to the gentleman—

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, I am not asking the gentleman from New York, Mr. OLIVER, but I am asking the other gentleman from New York, Mr. GRIFFIN, who spoke. Has he any boys under 21 years of age that in peace times he wants to put into the Army? No; he has not; but he wants to get up here and speak about forcing some other man's son under 21 years of age going into the Army. [Applause.] I ask any other gentleman on this floor: Get up here and show me how you look if you have a boy under 21 that you want to go into the Army now, in days of peace.

Mr. SPROUL of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Has the gentleman from Illinois got any?

Mr. SPROUL of Illinois. I have seven grandsons, one of them 14 years of age, and if they want to go into the Army I will help them get there.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, I am talking to fathers now relative to their own sons. I again submit the question: Is there any Congressman here who has a boy 18 years of age or under 21 that he recommends to go into the Army now, in time of peace?

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. Right here sitting by my side is my colleague the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. FREAR], who went into the Army as a boy, and it made a man out of him.

Mr. FREAR. And I am with the gentleman on the other side, Mr. CONNALLY, and am for his amendment, unless this amendment is agreed to.

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; he is.

Mr. FREAR. I know from experience.

Mr. BLANTON. The distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin knows from experience that in peace time the Army is no place for a young boy, and I want to clinch that nail right here. When I asked any Member to get up here and show himself, so that we might see how he looked, if he had a boy 18 years of age that he wanted to go into the Army in peace time, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY], nearly 7 feet high, who himself did not have any young boys of his own whom he wanted to put in, picked out the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. FREAR] as an exhibit, and said that he was a living example because he went in as a boy; and what did the gentleman from Wisconsin say? Mr. FREAR gets up and says that he does not want any other young boys to go in the Army in peace times, because he had enough when he was in there, and that he is for the Connally amendment. Does not that clinch the proposition?

The law of every State in this Union says that the contract of a boy is not good until he is 21 years of age. The laws permit him to go into the courts and get such contracts aside when he makes a contract of that kind in respect to his civil or property rights when he is under 21 years. Every State in this Union gives these boys to their parents until they become 21 years of age, and we ought not to take them away for service in the Army during peace time, and the amendment should be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, in response to the question of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], for my part I am entirely willing to accept his amendment to my proposed amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs upon the substitute offered by the gentleman from Kansas, as amended.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that it may be again reported as amended.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it will be so reported. There was no objection, and the Clerk read as follows:

Substitute offered by Mr. ANTHONY for the amendment offered by Mr. CONNALLY of Texas: "Provided, That hereafter the Secretary of War shall discharge from the Army with the formal discharge certificate and the travelling and other allowances to which his service after enlistment shall entitle him any enlisted man under the age of 21 years on the application of either of his parents or legal guardian, if such enlisted man was enlisted without the written consent of one of his parents or his legal guardian."

Mr. WEFALD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. This is one of the few days during the session of the Congress when the mothers of this Nation have a right to speak through us as their representatives, and I am in favor of this amendment. I am not going to detain you very long, but I have some letters here that I want to read into the Record because those letters will show clearer than anything that has been said why so many mothers in this country are in favor of legislation such as will be embodied in this amendment. For one, I am indeed surprised to find that the reactionaries who have been speaking to us here to-day, who want no limitation placed upon enlistments, are men who have not been men enough to raise boys of their own. It is irony to hear such men talk about enfeebling boys and spoiling them; those who have not raised boys of their own have never come in real contact with a boy's soul and can not know which are the critical years in that soul's development. A father knows but the mother knows much better.

I am not here to oppose enlistments. I have raised boys, and if my boy should want to enlist, as far as I am concerned, I shall make no objection, but I know how my wife would feel if he should run away from home before he is 18 or before he is 21 years of age. I have three letters here sent me from a constituent of mine and by the permission of the committee I should like to have the Clerk read them. They will show you why some mothers do not like to have their boys go into the Army and Navy.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read the letters.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

—, MINN., January 9, 1924.

To Congressman KNUD WEFALD,

Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Am inclosing two letters from a young fellow who ran away from home and finally joined the United States Navy. This young person was always trying to chum with one of my boys, and after I had found these letters I am determined to have his way of living reported. He coaxed my boy away from home last summer, but they missed each other and my boy got work until school opened; the other one went to Great Lakes.

I am surprised that the sailors are allowed such wild times and I am sorry that such immoral men like him and others can hide inside a naval uniform. It is no wonder that boys who come from our good homes and are clean and good will desert the Navy when they are thrown into such companionship. I knew a young man of the finest moral character who voluntarily joined the Navy but who said he would rather be shot than stay, because of the vulgar element that existed. Our country can not afford to allow such things to go on and the sooner it is stopped the better.

Whether a man wears the Army or the Navy uniform he should honor it instead of disgracing it, and that can be stopped when they stop picking up all the trash around the country.

Very sincerely yours,

Mrs. ————

—, Minn.

Mr. WEFALD. The next letter written by a young man in the Navy to the lady's son speaks for itself and shows plainly why this lady is in fear that her son may get away from her and drift into surroundings that she would abhor to think that he was in.

[The Clerk read the letter. It will not appear in the Record.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WEFALD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for two minutes more in order that the remainder of the second letter may be read.

Mr. ANTHONY. I shall not object to that, but I shall ask that all debate on the amendment and substitute therefor close at the end of that time. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate close at the end of the time requested by the gentleman.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last letter from the Record. I do not think it should go in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that must be done in the House.

Mr. MADDEN. The last letter ought not to go in the Record.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Take it out.

Mr. MADDEN. I hope the gentleman will ask unanimous consent to take it out.

Mr. WEFALD. I shall be pleased to do so, and I ask leave to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks and asks to expunge the last letter read. Is there objection?

Mr. MADDEN. I reserve the right to object to the extension until I ascertain whether the gentleman will take this letter out of the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair so stated. The Chair hears none.

Mr. MADDEN. But the gentleman did not state it. I have no objection if that is taken out.

Mr. WEFALD. The while I am a Member of this House I shall always try to conduct myself so that I never shall even violate the spirit of the rules of the House and always keep within the bounds of decency, so if this letter shocks the prudish notions of correctness of anyone here it had better not go into the records, although I am sure that in elite Washingtonian society—from what I have heard—it would cause no woman in decolette costume to blush in the least. In this letter the young man that has enlisted tells his chum at home something about the realization of the adventures that the posters advertising advantage and romance awaiting those who enlist in the Army and Navy so luridly set out.

The mother that sent me the letter has a boy that is yet in school. The Navy lad writes his friend at home, asking him how he likes school; "I hope you like it as well as I like the Navy; if you do, I am sure that you make a better success than I did in school." I am sure that even those gentlemen that are willing to let all the boys in the country, regardless of whether they are only 16 years of age and whether or not they have their parents' consent to enlist, do so, because they themselves have no boys to worry about will admit that a mother like the one that writes me shall at least feel secure that her boy may finish school before he leaves home. If we pass the amendment before us, she can feel sure that her wishes must be respected.

There certainly must be enough of adventuresome boys in this great country who can obtain their parents' consent to enlist, if the military life is such a great life to lead as many people think it is, that mothers who have scruples over their boys going into such surroundings should not be forced to make such a sacrifice in times of peace. I think that neither the Army or Navy should wish to rob the public schools of what justly belongs to them. The representatives of the people in Congress should not throw any halo around either Army or Navy that there is no just ground for. We do not maintain them for either pleasure or glory; they are maintained as fighting machines that you may have to use in time of need; but no mother can contemplate with joy or comfort the thought that her boy is taken away from school in the formative years for both soul and intellect and put into training that will train only the brutal animal fighting instinct, as is clearly shown from a paragraph of another letter from the same lad, where with boyish pride he says:

I am getting much taller and broader and I have to be able to handle me dukes much better than in civilian life; when you are in the Navy it seems as though you just want to fight all the time; some one is always fighting.

Yes; some one is always fighting. Yet I am sure that many much worthier fights in life can be fought by boys whose mothers have dreamed of greater careers for them than drinking and rushing girls that are strangers to them, enticing as that is for red-blooded boys cut loose from childhood's moorings. I maintain that the State has no right to break a mother's heart.

We have some rules governing discharge on account of minority or dependent family, also a method of discharge by purchase, but when you come to try and help to get some one out of the Army or Navy you find there are so many exceptions to the rule that it is about impossible to effect a discharge. A poor man can not buy a discharge, it can not be obtained until after one year of service—by purchase—and then it will cost all the way from $120 to $170 after one year's service, according to where a person is stationed, running down to $30 to $90 after two years' service. There is hardly a farmer in the Northwest that could afford such an outlay to-day to get a young boy, that had got into the service wrongly, out again. I have got two or three such cases on my hands and it is a hopeless task, but this amendment, if passed, may help some.

We are not now engaged in war. We should now train our young boys for peace. There is no special call for youth now away from school and good home influence. There is no fighting to do now except to clean up corruption in high places and to gather together the remnants of democracy we fought for in the late war. Now is the time that youth should take part in this and not only in the development of the animal in themselves. Let us set no snares in the path of youth.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. Before the gentleman makes his motion may I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record in favor of this amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on this bill.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. GRIFFIN] also asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks, also the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LOZIER]. Is there objection to these requests? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. Does the gentleman from Kansas desire to make a motion?

Mr. ANTHONY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment of the gentleman from Kansas offered in the way of a substitute to the original amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY].

The question was taken, and the substitute was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the original amendment as modified by the substitute.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to this paragraph in this bill. Is it in order now?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; the gentleman from New Jersey offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey: Page 9, line 4, after the figures "$30,338,000," substitute a period for the colon and strike out the word, "Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to Maj. Charles C. Cresson, United States Army."

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. NELSON of Maine, having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. CROCKETT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 7440) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and prior years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, and had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. WARREN, Mr. CURTIS, and Mr. OVERMAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

S. 225. An act to extend the benefits of the United States employees compensation act of September 7, 1916, to Edward N. McCarty.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee—

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, there will probably be time asked on this amendment, and I ask unanimous consent—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New Jersey yield; he has the floor?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. I yield.

Mr. ANTHONY. I would like to ask if the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] is on the floor; if not, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment offered by the gentleman who now has the floor be limited to one hour, half of that time to be controlled by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] and half of that time by myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent that debate on this amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey be limited to one hour, one-half of that time to be controlled by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] and half by himself. Is there objection?

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will gentlemen opposed to the proviso be granted time under that arrangement or will gentlemen both in favor of it control time.

Mr. ANTHONY. I will say that the gentleman from Kentucky is in favor of the language in the bill. If I control half of the time I shall grant time to gentlemen who are opposed to the provision in the bill.

Mr. McKEOWN. I just wanted to know if there was some one who would grant time to those who are opposed to this provision?

Mr. ANTHONY. That would be my purpose, to grant time to those opposed to it.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask if that includes time on the Hunt proviso?

Mr. ANTHONY. It does not.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. That will be taken up later.

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Kansas to state his unanimous-consent request. Does it relate to the two propositions, Cresson and Hunt?

Mr. ANTHONY. It only refers to the case of Major Cresson. One hour's debate on the amendment which is now before the committee, half of that time to be controlled by the gentleman from Kentucky in favor of the language of the bill and half to be controlled by myself, opposed to it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Then what would be the limit of debate on the matter almost similar, that of Hunt, which comes later?

Mr. ANTHONY. I propose when we reach that to ask time for debate with a similar limit of one hour.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Why not make the request now?

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. ANTHONY. I have not time—

Mr. HASTINGS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me this is too long a time. Here we have under consideration a great appropriation bill. A few days ago we had under consideration the adjusted compensation bill which affected some four million six hundred thousand or seven hundred thousand ex-service men. We were allowed 20 minutes on a side to discuss that adjusted compensation bill, yet we will be taking up the time of this House for two hours to discuss this question. It seems to me that people ought to be able to understand it without that much discussion.

A MEMBER. Regular order!

Mr. HASTINGS. Then I object. I was about through. If we can not have a little courtesy here, we will have the regular order all right.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNE] is recognized.

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that this provision in the appropriation bill is unusual, if not unique, in that it discriminates against an officer of the United States Army, against whom no charges have been preferred and who is not under indictment or upon trial for any cause.

I have known personally Maj. Charles C. Cresson for upward of 30 years; and during that time I have never heard his character assailed nor his integrity questioned. The purpose of this provision of the bill, which I ask removed, is not stated in the bill, but I am informed that it is to have this major's pay cut off on account of supposed laxity in the prosecution of a court-martial in which he was judge advocate. It would serve no purpose to discuss here the procedures in this particular court-martial; it is probable that no trial is ever conducted to the satisfaction of all parties concerned or of those who inject their interest later.

I am not sufficiently advised of the jurisdiction of the House of Representatives, but it seems to me to be a dangerous precedent for the Congress to "expropriate" the pay of a public servant, whether in the Army or Navy or any other department, because certain persons are not satisfied with a specific performance of duty.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. In a moment.

Major Cresson should either be in the Army with full pay or out of it with no pay. [Applause.] It seems to me to be a remarkable, if not an undignified, procedure for this House to acknowledge the right of this officer to remain in the Army and then attempt to render his position untenable by passing a bill specifically denying him his proper pay. [Applause.] For this reason I offer this amendment.

Mr. McKEOWN. Has any measure or any bill been introduced in the Congress to recommend some kind of a trial or to make some charge against this man?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. I have not heard of any. I have not heard that Major Cresson is charged with anything at all.

Mr. McKEOWN. Does the gentleman know whether legislation is contemplated to take action of this kind?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. No. I am sure there is not.

Mr. BOYLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. BOYLAN. I will ask the gentleman from New Jersey if he is defending Major Cresson for any personal or political reasons?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. I will say to the gentleman from New York—and I will apologize to the House in that I do not consider myself as partisan as is traditional or customary here—I do not know the political affiliations of Major Cresson, nor do I care. Of course, the matter was brought to my attention on account of my personal friendship for Major Cresson, but I am not defending him for that reason.

As a matter of fact, I am not defending him at all, because there is no charge made against him. What I am attempting to do is to prevent the House from assuming a ridiculous position in acknowledging that an officer is entitled to his commission but not to his pay.

I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. STENGLE] the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time is not in the gentleman's control. It is in the control of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DYER. Do I understand the Chair to state that there was an agreement as to the allotment of time? I understand some one objected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair stands corrected. The gentleman from New Jersey has one minute remaining.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE. We have heard a good deal this morning about legislation by limitation. Is not this an attempt to legislate by confiscation?

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. I think this is an attempt to condemn a gentleman who has not been heard, who has no accusation lodged against him, and who is not under trial.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Without a trial of any kind.

Mr. BROWNE of New Jersey. Yes. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend or curtail my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York is recognized.

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman and colleagues, the personality of Major Cresson has nothing whatever to do with what I am about to say, for I have no personal acquaintance with the gentleman and know nothing about his antecedents, and have nothing to say concerning the Army record or his connection with the Bergdoll case or any other case. But to my mind there is involved in this particular amendment and the paragraph to which it has been offered a principle that is more important than Major Cresson [applause]; a principle that is more important to this House and to the people of this country than the Bergdoll case; a principle which, if enacted into law, would open wide the door of opportunity to strike from the appropriations of this Congress any individual in any department, in any position under the Government, who happened per se not to meet with the favor of some particular committee of this House. It is for that reason largely, if not alone, that I have asked for a few minutes of your time in which to ask you to discuss among yourselves and to decide a principle for yourselves, not the guilt or innocence of Major Cresson, who, if he be guilty of any charge whatever, is amenable to a court-martial in the War Department and not amenable to this House directly. The principle involved is that we may here and now by voice and vote strike from the pay roll of the Army or the Navy or the Supreme Court—yes, or this very House—any individual who happens not to meet with our approval because of something that happened that we do not like. It is for this reason that I have risen to ask you to join with me in support of this amendment, to strike out these things, and make our appropriation bills what they ought to be, and what the chairman this morning contended so strenuously they must be, and that is the appropriation of funds for specific purposes, and not the slaughter of a major in the Army for personal reasons. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I ask permission to insert as a part of my remarks a letter which has been addressed to me by Mr. Hiram C. Todd, of New York City, who is a "buddy" of Major Cresson.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. As it seems to be the deliberate purpose of this House not to punish a betrayal of the flag of the Nation, I object.

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman, if I have the time, I will read it into the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has one minute remaining.

Mr. STENGLE (reading)—

As a friend and comrade of Maj. Charles C. Cresson I address you. We served together in the Thirteenth Division during the World War, and I write this letter with the heart-deep desire to help right a grievous wrong that has been done to my "buddy." This is not a request for political aid but an appeal for fair treatment of a soldier who has served his country so well as to deserve the praise of Congress instead of its censure.

Cresson, who is still in the service as a major—judge advocate—has been treated outrageously by a provision in the Army appropriation bill stopping his pay. I am informed that this objectionable provision was placed in the bill by Congressman BEN JOHNSON, who was the author of a majority report by the Bergdoll investigating committee. This report charges Cresson with willfully failing, as trial judge advocate, to properly conduct the prosecution of Col. J. E. Hunt before an Army court-martial, Colonel Hunt having been charged with neglect of duty in failing to take proper precautions against the escape of Bergdoll, the notorious draft evader.

And, gentlemen, without taking further time to read, attached hereto is the copy of a letter from Major General Bullard, who—

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. My point of order is that the time of the gentleman has expired.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. STENGLE. Attached to this letter is a copy of a letter from Maj. Gen. R. L. Bullard, of New York, which supports the statements contained in the letter of Hiram C. Todd. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. WURZBACH] is recognized.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend and revise my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object. If the other side of this question can not be heard, I must object to the presentation of only one side.

Mr. WURZBACH. I want to state that when I discussed this proviso last Saturday under general debate it was understood, and so stated on the floor of this House, that I would be given 20 minutes to discuss it under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman yield in order that I may explain the objection I urged. I objected a while ago because I was objected to over on the other side. I have no objection myself to any reasonable length of time, and I did not know what the matter was until a few minutes ago.

Mr. WURZBACH. I was in great hopes that I would be permitted to give Charlie Cresson—and I love to refer to him as "Charlie" rather than as Maj. Charles C. Cresson—the one opportunity which is presented to-day to give him a fair defense against the charges that were made in the report that was prepared by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON], and I think in all fairness this committee ought to permit a fair presentation of his case.

Charlie Cresson volunteered in the World War; he offered his services "to make the world safe for democracy," and the Appropriations Committee, and now this committee, proposes to take away from him—one of these volunteers, a soldier of this great Republic in the last war—the very privilege which our own democracy affords the humblest citizen in this land. You are proposing to take away from him, under this proviso, his right to the salary to which he is entitled under the law, you are proposing to put a stain upon his good name, and this without the pretense of ever having permitted him any sort of trial or hearing.

There has never been in the history of this country, from the beginning until now, so revolutionary a proposition presented as is presented in this proviso. Why, gentlemen on the Republican side, myself included, have criticized the investigations which are being held on the Senate side of the Capitol, claiming that matters are investigated that ought not to be investigated.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WURZBACH. I can not. But we find that it is being now proposed to take away from a World War volunteer, now in the service of the United States, his right to be heard in his own defense. The investigation committees of the Senate do not go so far as to deny a man the right to appear and testify in his own behalf, but in this particular case Charles C. Cresson has had no chance to appear before the congressional committees of the House in 1921, and has had no opportunity to appear before the Appropriations Committee or any subcommittee thereof.

Mr. Chairman, I wanted to supplement to-day the remarks I made on last Saturday. Of course, I know it will be impossible for me to do that if an objection is made to the unanimous-consent request I am going to make. I could not possibly go into it in the short time available under the five-minute rule, but I hope, and I think I have the right to expect, that under the peculiar circumstances surrounding this case time will be granted me to present at least a partial defense of Maj. Charles C. Cresson.

I make the statement, and I will support it if I am given as much as 20 minutes to-day, that the report which was filed in this House by the congressional committee in 1921 is not supported by the court-martial proceedings.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 20 minutes.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague may proceed for 15 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I would like to ascertain the legislative situation which prevents the coupling of the request of the gentleman from Texas with a similar request of the gentleman from Kentucky. The gentleman from Kentucky charges he has been unable to present his side, and I suggest that as much time as each of them may require be granted to them by the committee.

Mr. WURZBACH. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. GRIFFIN. Yea.

Mr. WURZBACH. The gentleman from Kentucky came over to my side of the floor a short while ago and suggested that each one of us have 20 minutes' time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. The gentleman is mistaken about that, because the agreement had been all along that I was to have an hour.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to proceed for five minutes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, I want to prefer a unanimous-consent request.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. WURZBACH] was seeking to propound a unanimous-consent request.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I understood it had been objected to.

Mr. WURZBACH. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, to proceed for five minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I ask recognition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia has been recognized.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I know nothing in the world about this case or about this officer. I do not know his name, but this is certainly one of the most remarkable propositions, I think, that ever was presented to this House. The legislative power of this Congress, Mr. Chairman, is practically unlimited, and yet there is a limitation upon it, for the Constitution declares that no bill of attainder shall be passed.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman can not be taken off of the floor in that way.

Mr. BLANTON. I am going to make a proper point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order, Mr. Chairman, that under the rules of debate which govern this committee on every proposition those both for and against the proposition are entitled to recognition. This is the fourth gentleman who has been recognized successively by the Chair, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWN], the gentleman from New York [Mr. STENGLE], the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WURZBACH], and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER].

The CHAIRMAN. That is not a proper point of order and the Chair will state that anyone seeking recognition who indicates that he wishes to speak in opposition to the preceding speaker will get the preference from the Chair.

Mr. BLANTON. There have been several of us—

The CHAIRMAN. No such person has arisen.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Chairman, I am perfectly willing to yield the floor until a later hour, because I am really anxious to know upon what ground this proposition can be maintained.

The Constitution declares specifically that no bill of attainder can be passed. What is a bill of attainder? It is a legislative act prescribing punishment without judicial trial. [Applause.] This man may be as guilty as Judas Iscariot, but he is entitled to a trial. Why, gentlemen, the hornbooks teach this doctrine so plainly and simply that I really was anxious to have this matter discussed on the other side before I appeared.

This is no new proposition. The two old cases of Ex parte Garland and Cummings against Missouri, both in fourth Wallace, United States Report, followed by innumerable cases, hold that you can not by a legislative act punish a man without a judicial trial.

Gentlemen sometimes wonder why we have a Constitution, and laugh at it. Thank God, we have written that principle in the Constitution of my country. [Applause.]

When the Civil War was over, and the passions of men ran high, Augustus H. Garland appeared before the Supreme Court to practice law, and they would not allow him because Congress in those days had passed a law that no man who would not or could not come forward and swear that he had sympathized with the Government and had taken no part in the rebellion, so called, could practice law. What did that great tribunal say? It is one of the things that gives me a great opinion of that court that in those days, when reason was dethroned by reason of passions that grew out of that war, they said, in effect, "Come along, Augustus, that is a bill of attainder; that is punishing you by taking away from you the right to make a living by practicing law. It can not be done without giving you a trial."

And a good old Baptist preacher out in Missouri named Cummings wanted to continue to convert those wicked people in Missouri, after the war, and they said he could not do it unless he could swear that he had not sympathized with the rebellion during the war. Just think of how far we had gone in those days. What did the court say? It said in effect, "When you take away from Brother Cummings the right to convert the wicked Missourians, you are punishing him, and you can not do it." [Laughter and prolonged applause.]

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. TUCKER. Yes; you are the very man he was after. I wish he had had a chance at you and we would not have had these Dyer bills up here. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I did not rise to go into this discussion but merely to call attention to a primary, fundamental principle that every boy down in Virginia knows, and if such a provision were to go through this House as this is, it would be worthy of the Fiji Islands and not of free America. [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kentucky desire recognition?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Let him go ahead.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I am opposed to the two provisions which the committee has presented to this committee and to the House to cut off the pay of two Army officers, one a man in active service to-day with an efficient record and with a superior officer ready to say that Maj. Charles C. Cresson is to-day and has been since he has been under him a very superior officer. I also wish to speak of Col. John E. Hunt, who had been for many years a prison officer of the Army. There came a time when there were charges lodged against him as to his handling of a slacker named Grover Bergdoll, and Major Cresson was the officer designated to be the prosecuting officer when the court-martial was ordered by the War Department. It was not a voluntary service by Major Cresson.

I do not know Major Cresson and have never seen him, nor have I ever seen or met Colonel Hunt, but I have made inquiries about both of those officers from the records of the War Department. The Appropriations Committee have given us nothing in the hearings as to the record of these two officers and the reason why they wrote such radical provisions. It is such an unusual procedure to have provisions cutting off the pay of these two officers, one in active service and the other on the retired list, that it is beyond comprehension. Congress passed the law where an officer has served a certain time, becomes disabled, or reaches a certain age he is retired, and Colonel Hunt was regularly retired and is drawing his pay under that law. I have not had an opportunity of giving a careful study to the entire record in the Colonel Hunt court-martial, but I take the word of General Bullard, who served with such great distinction in France as a lieutenant general of our Army, and he says that he has gone over the entire record in this case and that Major Cresson's record as a prosecutor officer was fine and that the case was properly presented and no fault was found.

I hold in my hand a letter from a friend of mine, an officer who has known Major Cresson for years, and he says that he has read every line of the court-martial record, studied it, and he is in the Judge Advocate's office, and he says that the prosecution by Major Cresson was conducted all right. He also states that Major Cresson is an efficient officer and a gentleman.

Why should these officers be punished in this way without receiving notice, by cutting off their pay which we have voted that they should receive, all without being given a hearing? It would be establishing a precedent for future Congresses which would be indefensible and deplorable. Why should you pick out two officers and disgrace them in a bill in this way, cutting off their pay without giving them an opportunity to be heard? I want to say that it is a dangerous precedent. If this procedure is accepted, other officers might be selected. I want the committee to-day to vote against and stop such a method of procedure. We have appropriated the pay for these two officers; and if they are unworthy, a court-martial can determine it. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, it was understood in advance that about 200 Members of this House who knew nothing of this question should have an opportunity to be advised about it. That tentative agreement has been violated. There is now no chance for these 200 men, called upon to vote on this question, to know about what they are to vote on. It is impossible in five minutes to tell this House of one of the ugliest betrayals of the American flag that has ever been brought upon it.

Mr. WURZBACH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. No; I will not. I heard the remarks of the gentleman from Texas, who wants to take part of my five minutes' time, and one of the letters which he has used as coming from General Bullard is a forgery. General Bullard himself is authority for the statement that he has issued but one letter. It is a statement gotten under the most peculiar circumstances, not by Major Cresson but by another whom I shall not discuss. One statement purporting to come from General Bullard is used to influence this House, and another statement pretending to come from General Bullard is used to influence the American Legion, and have them endorse this traitor to our country when he has imposed upon either the House or upon the Legion with a forgery. If men do not want to hear of one of the ugliest crimes ever committed, to say nothing of Benedict Arnold himself, then you will vote without knowledge, and when you have done it you will have acted without knowledge; you will have acted without information on this case, and you will have served not only one traitor but two.

There is no place where these traitors can be discussed, where they can receive what they are entitled to receive, except here, and here the gag rule has been applied, and from this minute I shall see that nobody undertakes to defend these traitors beyond the five-minute rule.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I do not know to what particular letter of General Bullard the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON], who has just concluded, refers. I should like to call to the attention of the House a letter from General Bullard on this very subject which has just been officially transmitted to me. The Bullard letter was written within the last 10 or 12 days. It accompanies a letter from the Secretary of War, dated March 24, in which the Secretary says:

Major Cresson was trial judge advocate of the general court-martial before which Colonel Hunt was brought to trial. As far as I have been able to ascertain, his conduct of the prosecution has never been officially criticized by any of his military superiors on the ground that he failed properly to perform his duties as trial judge advocate. On the contrary, Major General Bullard, who appointed the court and reviewed the proceedings; Maj. Allen W. Gullion, Judge Advocate General's Department, General Bullard's staff judge advocate; Lieut. Col. John L. Bond, Infantry, a spectator at Colonel Hunt's trial; and Maj. Thomas L. Heffernan, judge advocate, Officers' Reserve Corps, counsel for Colonel Hunt, are on record to the effect that Major Cresson did his full duty in the prosecution of Colonel Hunt. Copies of written statements, dated March 14, 1924, by Major Heffernan, Lieutenant Colonel Bond, Major Gullion, and General Bullard are inclosed herewith. It seems to me that before legislation of the nature of the above-mentioned provision relating to Major Cresson is enacted he should be afforded an opportunity to be heard in person before the committee charged with the duty of reporting upon the legislative project which contains that provision.

Next I want to read the inclosure from General Bullard, because it is the last word in point of time at least from the commanding general of the area in which this unfortunate occurrence took place:

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CORPS AREA,
Governors Island, N. Y., March 14, 1924.

To The ADJUTANT GENERAL,

War Department, Washington, D. C.:

1. The accompanying papers are forwarded to you for use in case the War Department desires to make before Congress any statement concerning Maj. Charles C. Cresson, Judge Advocate General's Department, whose pay has, I understand, been recommended to be held up in a bill reported from the House Military Committee to the House.

2. As commanding general of the Eastern Department at the time of the trial of Colonel Hunt, I remember Major Cresson's prosecution of the case. His duty was properly done. He was reported to me at the time as somewhat overanxious to secure a conviction.

R. L. BULLARD,
Major General, U. S. A.

Now, gentlemen, as the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER] has so very eloquently and truly said, this question is a question of principle. The question of fact is subordinate and secondary. But the farther one goes into the question of fact—and I have gone into it with thoroughness—the more convinced one becomes that Major Cresson was an efficient fighter for the cause of justice and that, if possible, he had an undue hatred of Bergdoll and all the Bergdoll tribe and associates.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. WURZBACH. There was only one letter from General Bullard inserted in the Record, which I inserted myself, and it is, in substance, the same as the letter which the gentleman from Massachusetts has just read. If that is a forgery, then the letter referred to by the gentleman from Massachusetts is also a forgery.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, if the Government had no more fairness in the trial of Hunt than has been exhibited here on the floor in this debate, I am not surprised that Hunt was acquitted, because 30 minutes have been used for the amendment, and up to this time only 5 minutes have been allowed against it; and with my 5 minutes it will make 10. Of course, neither this House nor the Congress can keep the pay from this officer ultimately. This provision is merely to force a court-martial trial. Everyone realizes that, and I would not vote to withhold his pay permanently, but I take it that this committee has used this provision just as an admonition to the War Department that they ought to do something and the Congress is expecting them to do something relative to inaugurating a court-martial proceeding. Of course, if nothing is done and no action is taken against this man, ultimately his pay will have to be given to him. Everyone realizes that.

This man, Major Cresson, prosecuted Hunt, who let Bergdoll escape, and everybody knows it; and after Major Cresson allowed Hunt to escape justice my friend from Tennessee [Mr. FISHER] puts a crown on his head and calls him not Cresson but Major Cresson. That is the reward that he gives him. I think this record is unanswerable. Everybody knows that Bergdoll did escape. Everybody knows that the Army permitted him to leave the penitentiary, where he rightly belonged, and go out hunting gold buried down here near Washington—such monkey business as that—and that his escape was premeditated, and that he escaped and perverted justice and went to Germany, and has escaped the law ever since. Major Cresson apologized for prosecuting Hunt. If you will read the beginning of his speech, you will see that he apologizes at the very outset.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I want to commend the distinguished chairman of this committee for letting this provision go into his bill.

Mr. ANTHONY. Oh, do not commend me at all. It was put in over my head.

Mr. BLANTON. Then I want to commend the gentleman for presiding over a subcommittee that had enough wisdom and enough courage to vote a matter over his head and put into the bill something that would call the attention of the War Department to a probable court-martial that ought to take place.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. I wish it had not expired, because I would like to yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. The subcommittee voted it down.

Mr. BLANTON. But the Appropriations Committee of this House forced it to go into the bill.

Mr. BOYCE. Mr. Chairman, I want to say only a word. Assuming that all that the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] has said be true, the proviso in the bill under consideration is unthinkable. [Applause.] It strikes down a vital principle which I do not believe the members of the committee will stand for.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Chairman, I have been listening to this debate with mingled emotions, first, because within the last few days the newspapers have carried the story that one Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, arch traitor to his country, had the effrontery to attempt to negotiate with the United States for his return to America. So far as he is concerned, let him come back unconditionally and submit himself to the punishment that is due him under American law as administered by American courts, or let him stay without our borders, a creature without honor, a being without sense of shame, a man without a country.

As to Major Cresson. On the 29th of September, 1921, he came before a convention of the American Legion in Nebraska, over which it was my privilege to preside, and told the service men of Nebraska the story of Bergdoll, of his trial, of his punishment, of his escape, of the trial of Colonel Hunt. You men can not go to Nebraska to those service men who know Major Cresson and tell them that he has betrayed the American flag or is a traitor to the uniform that he wears. [Applause.]

We know Major Cresson to be a brilliant lawyer. We know him to be a soldier of distinction, a citizen of America of quality, and as such he is entitled to go before a tribunal where he has the right guaranteed by the Constitution to every American citizen of a fair trial, a fair hearing, and a chance to be heard and confront his accusers. It is only right that those of us who were his comrades in the late war ask that he be granted this privilege, that he be given this right of an American citizen. There are those of us who have no fear as to the outcome, no misgivings as to what might be the result of a trial of that character, or as to Major Cresson's loyalty or patriotism in anything that has been said or anything that has been done.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. WURZBACH. Is it not a fact that Maj. J. C. Cresson as an emergency officer prosecuted and convicted Grover C. Bergdoll, then prosecuted and convicted Irvin Bergdoll in a military court, that thereafter he followed the rest of the Bergdolls, Mrs. Emma Bergdoll Brown, and in fact all of the Bergdoll clan into the Federal courts of the United States at his own time and at his own expense and helped to secure their conviction also.

Mr. SIMMONS. My understanding is that the conviction of the whole Bergdoll tribe and their accessories is largely due to the untiring efforts, the ability, the loyalty, the high standing and character of Major Cresson. [Applause.]

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I do not pose here as one knowing anything about the facts in this case, but it is my contention that this item is out of place in an appropriation bill and I am heartily in favor, as a member of the subcommittee, of the motion to strike it out of the bill. I think it is out of place here and that we should not attempt to do this sort of thing on an appropriation bill, as that is not our function.

Mr. RUBEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. I will.

Mr. RUBEY. I notice this language in the bill to which an amendment has been made to strike out. Before language can get into a bill it must be placed there by the committee?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes, sir.

Mr. RUBEY. Was this indorsed by the committee?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. The subcommittee did not indorse it, but the whole committee put this proviso in the bill.

Mr. RUBEY. And now the whole committee, except two or three, want to strike it out?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. I could not tell the gentleman except as to myself. I am against the language being in the bill.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] a question or two in order that I may know how to vote on this proposition. As a matter of fact it looks now as though Bergdoll is preparing to return to the United States. I do not know what the inducement is, but it seems to me somebody has been flagrantly negligent. I understand that about two years ago some one broke into the office of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] and stole evidence in this case.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Much of it.

Mr. RANKIN. That is, a good deal of the evidence and possibly a sufficient amount to take care of the defense when Bergdoll returns to the United States, as he no doubt will do, according to the press reports. I desire to ask the gentleman from Kentucky if Major Cresson came before the Committee on Appropriations and offered to testify; and if so, what his testimony in reference to this matter was?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Major Cresson did not come before the committee, and as I explained the other day I advocated his coming before the committee, and so did the majority of the committee, and I will say the chairman of the committee refused to execute orders of the committee in some respects, and several times he refused to put to a vote of the committee motions made by members of the committee. Now, I have in my hand an excerpt from a letter written only a few days ago by the chairman of the committee that shows where rests the responsibility for Major Cresson not appearing before the committee. Maj. John A. Peters, who was chairman of that subcommittee, wrote only a few days ago to this effect:

If I had dreamed that any action involving punishment to Major Cresson would follow the proceedings of our committee and as a result from any report from it I certainly never would have denied his repeated requests to me by telegraph to be permitted to be heard.

Who is responsible for his not coming? The very man and his followers undertaking to defend him. If he had appeared before that committee, he would have had to plead and admit his guilt.

Mr. REECE. Will the gentleman permit me to make this statement?

Mr. RANKIN. I will yield for a question if the gentleman wants to ask one, but I can not yield for a speech.

I have not taken much stock in this Bergdoll propaganda that some people have flooded the country with, but it seems to me that if Major Cresson had wanted to prove his innocence it would have been more in line with common reason to have come before this committee than before the officials of the American Legion.

Mr. WURZBACH. Will the gentleman yield? I just want to read one short sentence—

Mr. RANKIN. I must decline to yield.

Mr. WURZBACH. I merely want to put this in the form—

Mr. RANKIN. I do not care to hear matter read.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Will the gentleman yield? What tribunal would convict Major Cresson?

Mr. RANKIN. That is the very point.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Then, what power has this House to convict him?

Mr. RANKIN. This House has the same power over Major Cresson it had over Mr. Chase or any other employee of this Government who violates a trust reposed in him by the United States Government. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I have made a study of the evidence and two reports of the committee which investigated the Bergdoll escape. I am familiar with the evidence before that committee and its reports. There is one thing on which every member of that committee agreed, and that is the culpability of Maj. (now Col.) John E. Hunt; that he should have been convicted. The testimony warrants his conviction by the court-martial. It can not be reconciled with innocence. Now, in respect to the particular question of Colonel Cresson which is before us, from my examination of this record I believe that Major Cresson was thoroughly justified in everything he did and said before the court-martial. He was not as vigorous in the prosecution of Hunt as he had been in the prosecution of the Bergdolls. Why? Because General Bullard had issued an order criticizing him because of his unusual vigor and zeal in the other trials. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I have served as judge advocate and on court-martials and I have appeared for the defense, and I know something of the influence that a commanding officer exerts upon members of the court and officers who conduct trials.

I believe that General Bullard, in writing that letter, felt that he was justified because of the great zeal shown by Major Cresson in conducting the prosecution of the Bergdolls; but I do believe that Major Cresson, though he may have abated his ardor somewhat, conducted this trial of Hunt honestly for the purpose of securing his conviction, and of securing his conviction on the charge of which he was undoubtedly guilty, of gross and inexcusable negligence which permitted this man Bergdoll to escape. The offense was in disregarding the advice and warning of his superiors and in allowing these noncommissioned officers to go out with Bergdoll without a commissioned officer in charge of them and without proper instructions and by denying the handcuffs that were asked for by one of the sergeants to be put on Bergdoll. I do believe this House is justified in withholding an appropriation from every unworthy person. This House in exercising that undoubted power must act wisely and cautiously; and I can not agree that we ought in this instance to withhold the pay of Major Cresson, because I believe he was innocent. [Applause.]

Mr. FROTHINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, just a word from the other side. This is a letter from the chairman of the committee, ex-Congressman Peters, in which he says:

Major Cresson wired me repeatedly asking me to allow him to be heard before the committee; but the committee did not permit him to be heard, for the reason, as I stated, that it was no part of our duty to hear him.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That was the investigating committee, not the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. FROTHINGHAM. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. WURZBACH. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a rising vote.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I will ask for a rising vote.

The CHAIRMAN. That is unknown to the Chair.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for a division. I think I am right.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 158, noes 10.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For aviation increase to commissioned and warrant officers of the Army, $1,000,000.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I want to ask the chairman of the committee a question. Is this provision on lines 8 and 9 flying pay for men and officers?

Mr. ANTHONY. It is for aviation increase for commissioned and warrant officers. The word "increase" shows that it is flying pay—an increase over their regular salary.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment after the word "increase" by inserting the words

"for flying pay," so that there will be no mistake about it. That is on line 8.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA: Page 6, line 8, after the word "increase" insert the words "for flying pay."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I do not think that is necessary.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I remember in the Sixty-fifth Congress and Sixty-sixth Congress I had the same trouble here. We appropriated money in an appropriation bill, and it did not go to the flying officers. When we increase the pay of flying officers we should see that it is fixed specifically in the law. I do not want it to go to the Artillery or Cavalry officers.

Mr. ANTHONY. This language has been carried for several years, and I do not think the slightest question has ever come up. The item is for flying pay.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Then I have the gentleman's assurance that the intent is to increase the pay for flying officers?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For additional pay to officers for length of service, $5,374,830.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLACK of Texas: Page 9, line 11, after the figures "$5,374,830," strike out the period, insert a colon, and add the following language: "Provided, That nothing contained in section 11 of the act entitled 'An act to increase the efficiency of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service,' approved May 18, 1920, shall be construed as having repealed, amended, or modified the provision contained in the Army appropriation act approved August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 594), reading as follows: 'That hereafter the service of a cadet who may hereafter be appointed to the United States Military Academy or to the Naval Academy shall not be counted in computing for any purpose the length of service of any officer of the Army.'"

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas reserves a point of order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I make the point of order.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. What is the gentleman's point of order? I would like to know what it is.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. It is not germane, and it is legislation changing existing law.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Chairman, it is legislation in the sense that it would prevent the repeal of a law enacted by Congress in 1912 by a recent decision of the Court of Claims, but it is legislation that is in order under clause 2 of Rule XXI, known as the Holman rule.

If the Chair will permit, the purpose of this amendment is to cure a situation which has arisen by reason of a decision made by the Court of Claims with reference to Army officers' longevity pay. It is in the nature of the amendment that we adopted to the naval appropriation bill a few days ago. I do not see, in the first place, why the gentleman makes the point of order. It would certainly be illogical for Congress to apply one yardstick to naval officers and refuse to apply it to Army officers.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The point of order was not raised there?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. No; it was not raised on the naval appropriation bill. Of course it was not. The amendment is not subject to a point of order. But I will proceed to a discussion of the point of order, which the gentleman from New York insists upon. Now, what is the situation? In 1912 Congress, by a provision in the Army appropriation act of that year, provided that service in the Military Academy and the Naval Academy should not be counted as Army service for longevity pay. In 1920 Congress had what is known as the bonus bill, by which temporary salary increases were given to the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, and other branches of the service. There was a provision in that bill which the Court of Claims has construed as repealing the provision in the Army appropriation bill of 1912, and for two years—namely, 1920 and 1921—graduates of the Military Academy and graduates of the Naval Academy have had the right to include their four years' term of service in those academies as part of their military service. At least such is the construction of the Court of Claims.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And the gentleman's amendment would tend to take that right away from them?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Absolutely, and thereby reduce expenditures and thus bring the amendment within the Holman rule. That is the contention I make.

Now, let us read clause 2 of Rule XXI:

Nor shall any provision in any such bill or amendment thereto changing existing law be in order except such as being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall retrench expenditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers of the United States, by the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States, or by the reduction of amounts of money covered by the bill.

Now, as to the germaneness of this amendment, the Chair will observe that this is a provision providing appropriations for additional pay for officers on account of length of service. The very purpose of the amendment I have offered is to prevent their term of service in the Military Academy and in the Naval Academy from counting on their longevity pay. That certainly would be germane.

What is the other purpose? The other purpose is to reduce the compensation of those particular officers by preventing the counting of this period of service in the Military Academy and the Naval Academy—prohibiting the counting of that as a part of their longevity service.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Does the gentleman contend that his amendment would reduce the salaries of officers under existing law?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. It would certainly reduce the compensation paid to this particular group of officers because it would prevent the counting as a part of their service their four years' service at these academies. I can not see how there could be any question in the world as to its being in order under the Holman rule.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kansas desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. ANTHONY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. By the act of August 24, 1912, cadets of the United States Military Academy and of the Naval Academy were not permitted to count, in computing for the purpose of longevity pay, the length of service of such officers in the respective academies. It is contended that by the act approved March 18, 1920, this provision of the act of August 24, 1912, was repealed. The purpose of the amendment is to reenact the provision as contained in the act of August 24, 1912.

It is new legislation, but it necessarily tends to reduce the compensation of persons paid out of the Treasury of the United States, namely, such officers as are entitled to longevity pay and who would be prohibited from adding to the service upon which the longevity pay is based their terms of service in the respective academies at West Point and Annapolis. Therefore the amendment comes clearly within the provision of the Holman rule and is in order. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not think there should be any question at all about the merits of this amendment. It simply applies the same rule to Army officers as we have applied to officers of the Navy. It has been the uniform policy of the House since 1912 to prohibit the counting of this period of service in the Military Academy and in the Naval Academy as a period of service in the Army and in the Navy for the purpose of longevity pay. When we had the naval appropriation bill before the House recently a similar provision was adopted. While the amendment which I have offered is not in the identical language of the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina, because his amendment applied to the Navy and mine applied to the Army, yet in principle they are exactly the same. The reason for the adoption of his amendment was given by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] in such a brief and clear manner that I will ask the permission of the House to read his remarks made at the time his amendment was adopted. He said:

The result of the decision of the Court of Claims is that only those officers who were graduated between June 30, 1920, and June 30, 1922, would be affected. In 1922 we passed what is known as the service pay bill. Under that pay bill this provision was made:

"That officers appointed after July 1, 1923, should not count for purposes of pay any other than active commission service."

So that as to those officers graduating after July 1, 1922, this specific prohibition would prevent their benefiting by the decision of the Court of Claims, but as to those who were graduated prior to that time and after the passage of the bonus bill in 1920, they would receive longevity for the time served at the academy at West Point, and in addition, by reason of the provisions of the pay bill, that group of officers would benefit by having that four years computed in ascertaining the pay period to which they belong. So that for the rest of their service they would receive compensation in excess of that which the Congress intended they should receive.

Without any further argument, Mr. Chairman, I submit the amendment to the House and hope it will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLACK of Texas) there were—ayes 17, noes 21.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers, and pending that I make the point of no quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of no quorum. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and ten gentlemen are present, a quorum.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chairman appointed as tellers Mr. ANTHONY and Mr. BLACK of Texas.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 54, noes 37.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of enlisted men: For pay of enlisted men of the line and staff, not including the Philippine Scouts, $51,887,415: Provided, That the total authorized number of enlisted men, not including the Philippine Scouts, shall be 125,000.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Yesterday I said we had a one-year enlistment in the Army. At that time I stated the War Department would not accept a man for one year. This matter has been in controversy for some time. Late last night I was informed that the War Department had received a decision from the Department of Justice upholding in all points the contention I have made that they had no right to refuse to accept a man if he wanted to join the Army for one year. In my opinion this will be a great reform in Army enlistments. A boy can now join, or in a few days will be able to join, the Army if he wants to and take training for one year. At the end of one year if he wants to go out into civilian life again he can do so. If he wants to stay in the Army he can do so and enlist for three years. I rather anticipate that the Army will decry this reform and fill the newspapers with statements that it is going to destroy the Army.

Mr. SHERWOOD. I think the gentleman is right about it. I think he will get a better class of young men into the Army by enlisting them for one year.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Thank you. It will not destroy the Army. It will help to make the Army. You will always have from 75,000 to 100,000 three-year men in the Army, and that will take care of your foreign service. They will say that you can not send these one-year men to foreign service. You can not, and they should not be sent there. But they can join the Army and get one year's training and then go out, and you will always have in this country an unorganized reserve, and I presume if they will try, by regulations, they can organize and hold these men in the reserve. But what I wanted to call your attention to was that you must not be fooled by statements that the War Department will put out that this will cost a great deal more money and destroy the American Army. It will not. The principle of a short-term enlistment is older than the American Army. It has been indorsed by the best military experts in the world. It is the ideal way of making up your Army—to let a boy go in and stay one year and then if he wants to make a soldier out of himself and reenlist for three years he may do so.

Last summer I was on a boat that had some 500 to 1,000 young men who had been picked up in New York and had not been in the Army two weeks, but they were taking them to the Philippine Islands for three years. In my opinion, that is a tremendous blunder.

I simply wanted to make this statement so that you will understand that in advocating a short-term enlistment I am not trying and have not been trying to hurt the Army. I am trying to have the Army adopt modern methods of enlistment.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, for 40 years, in fact during all of my adult life, I have been a total abstainer from the use of intoxicants. I was a prohibitionist when they hunted them with hounds. Now that prohibition is popular, it is amusing to note how zealous recent converts are. Over 20 years ago, while circuit judge, I began the first systematic crusade against blind tigers and drink joints in my circuit. I began this crusade in my own town of Fayetteville against the big imposing drug stores—not against the weak little booze peddlers, the obscure joint keepers, elsewhere than in my home town—and poured the lifeblood of these bold and arrogant tigers into the dust of the street.

I made my campaign for Congress 10 years ago on a platform for nation-wide prohibition. I spoke for, voted for, and helped to pass the prohibition amendment, the Volstead Act, and the suffrage amendment.

A WARNING.

I want the American people to know that this fight has just begun, and has not just ended, as some assert. There is to-day, and has been for some time, a powerful organization backed with hundreds of millions to change the Volstead Act so as to allow the sale of wine and beer. Hundreds of bills are now pending in House and Senate for light wine and beer. This organization will have in the field in many districts a liquor man supplied with plenty of money, and will try to elect him by hook or crook. Are we in earnest about what we have been preaching and practicing for years, or will we allow crafty and insinuating wet agents to fool us?

THE WOMEN AWAKE AT LAST.

I am glad our women—God bless them—are waking up to the situation as well as others.

Below are extracts from letters of some of our worthy and watchful Woman's Christian Temperance Unions, who know what is going on secretly, cunningly, quietly. I quote brief extracts from these letters, only one sentence from the first one:

SULPHUR SPRINGS, ARK., March 20, 1924.

Congressman TILLMAN:

The women voters of Arkansas do not want light wine and beer.

Signed by—

CLARA E. SCOTT,

Local President Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and State Organizer.

Another follows:

SILCOAM SPRINGS, ARK., March 20, 1924.

DEAR MR. TILLMAN: We the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Silcoam Springs, Ark., are registering our protest against all license for light wines and beer. We are a union in one body and mind, fighting together to keep this curse from our young generation. For God's sake help us to wipe it off the face of the earth.

Sincerely yours,

Signed by—

MRS. ELLA BEASLEY,
Corresponding Secretary
(and 129 others).

These women know what is transpiring, covertly as well as in the open, and they have the courage to assert themselves and to fight as they have fought for years.

I have been doing this very thing asked, by precept and example, for many years and I certainly shall continue in the work.

Crafty, sly, and plausible individuals tell us that prohibition is a part of the Constitution; the Volstead Act is on the statute book; that the question is settled and not an issue; that they stand for law enforcement and such, but do they? Let us see whether it is settled.

All Members of the House and Senate received the letter which I print below in the last day or so, and this is one of literally hundreds like it:

[William P. Custard, president. A. L. Bixton, vice president.]

For members in every State—Help reach the 10,000,000 mark.

Dr. A. J. Sabouria, Chairman National Campaign Fund Committee.

Help Our $5,000,000 Campaign Fund.

The National Liberty League.

[Copyright.]

Don E. DeBow, National Secretary and Treasurer.
National Headquarters, Omaha, Nebr.

Omaha, Nebr., March 22, 1924.

Hon. JOHN N. TILLMAN,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. TILLMAN: You are, of course, well informed as to the change in sentiment regarding prohibition. The majority of the people believed that with the saloon eliminated the prohibition question would be settled and taken out of our State and national politics. It is our believe that the legislative and judicial branches of our State and Federal Governments have gone beyond what the people intended when they voted for prohibition.

Believing it is your desire to represent the will of the majority, the members of the National Liberty League will expect your wholehearted support and ask for your cooperation in fighting—

First. For repeal or modification of the Volstead Act, to permit the manufacture and sale of beer and light wine containing not more than 5 per cent and 20 per cent of alcohol by volume, respectively, with revenue derived therefrom to be applied to the reduction of taxes and our national debt.

Second. For the abolishment of the present restrictions placed on physicians in prescribing liquors for medicinal purposes.

Third. Against passing any more prohibition laws until the present are efficiently and impartially enforced.

Fourth. Against appropriations for unsuccessful prohibition bureaus.

Respectfully yours,

THE NATIONAL LIBERTY LEAGUE,
DON E. DEBOW, National Secretary.

This is only one of many such concerns. They want a $5,000,000 campaign fund, they say on their letterhead.

The liquor contingent has marked me for slaughter many times and is doing so now.

During the campaign of 1920, the last time I had opposition, James Perkins, of Yellville, sent me the unsigned circular printed below, the original of which I have, and which was used by those opposing my election:

TILLMAN AND PROHIBITION!

Regardless of what Congressman TILLMAN has done or not done, the people will not forget his part in securing national prohibition.

It will be remembered that when he made his first race six years ago, he gave good people to understand that if they sent him to Congress the cause of prohibition would have a champion there.

And when the national prohibition fight was on in Congress TILLMAN went over the top with the captains who made prohibition a part of the Constitution.

And after prohibition was made a part of the Constitution, TILLMAN was one of the faithful who never slept on the job until he had helped to pass the Volstead Enforcement Act, which gave the country a prohibition law with teeth in it.

And now, woe unto him who is found making liquor, beer, or wine, or selling it or giving it away or has it about his person or his home.

This law is being enforced by United States agents who are given the right to search and seizure, and many people have been run down and sent to the penitentiary, while society is getting rid of the liquor element and their sympathizers.

William J. Bryan, whose "heart is in the grave" because the Democratic Party refused to indorse national prohibition, has published in his Commemorative roll of Congressmen who made the Nation bone dry. In Bryan's roll of honor is the name of TILLMAN of Arkansas.

I am glad that I have the confidence of the prohibition and temperance forces of the State and Nation, as evidenced by two letters which I copy below:

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE OF AMERICA,

LEGAL DEPARTMENT,

Washington, D. C., January 2, 1924.

Hon. JOHN N. TILLMAN, M. C.,

House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. TILLMAN: Congratulations on your assignment to the Judiciary Committee, where you have rendered conspicuous service in the past.

Inasmuch as this committee handles all liquor legislation, it is of great importance to the prohibition cause to have recognized friends, like yourself, who have always been active, sincere, and dependable, assigned to it. Your consistent record and loyal championship whenever any prohibition legislation was pending makes your appointment doubly gratifying to the friends of the eighteenth amendment and its enforcement.

With best wishes for a happy and successful New Year, I am,

Yours cordially,

W. B. WHEELER.

[Dr. A. C. Millar, president. Paul E. Kemper, superintendent.]

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE OF AMERICA,

ARKANSAS DEPARTMENT,

Little Rock, Ark., March 13, 1924.

Hon. JOHN N. TILLMAN, M. C.,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN TILLMAN: I am writing you with reference to the Cramton bill (H. R. 6645), which is now in the hands of your Committee on the Judiciary of the House. We have quite a little anxiety concerning this particular bill.

Congressman TILLMAN, I, with the great dry constituency in your district, or the State as well, know where you stand, and fully expect that you will do nothing less than your very best in getting this bill from the committee before the House for passage. I am writing you, representing this great dry force, to let you know we are back of you in whatever you do in favor of this bill.

Accept in advance our great appreciation for your loyalty and support in all temperance measures. I am,

Most cordially yours,

PAUL E. KEMPER, Superintendent.

There are other issues pending. I introduced the following bill which I am pressing for passage and which I have reason to believe will pass.

"A bill to establish a fish hatchery" in the third district. The nearby hatcheries at Neosho and Mammoth Spring can not begin to supply fish for our streams. Northwest Arkansas is the garden spot of the Republic, a land of forest and field, orchard and mine, fertile valleys, and sun crowned hills, the Switzerland of America. Her bold springs and clear streams furnish ideal waters to breed and grow game fish. This "land of a thousand smiles" is attracting tourists from every part of the Nation. Help us to prepare for their recreation and entertainment.

I have had pending for some time bills to erect Government post-office buildings in county seats and important towns, and consider it both an economical proposition and a sane expenditure of public money.

Almost daily on this floor members with a large contingent of foreign-born constituents are speaking or voting for measures designed to help foreign nations. I have opposed by speech and vote every gift to foreign nations. I have voted against every measure to forgive or reduce debts due us from Europe. These are debts of honor and every penny, principal and interest, must be paid and now we are asked to vote for House Resolution 180, making a gift to Germany of $10,000,000 of the money of the American taxpayers for the purposes of relieving alleged distress there. This measure will pass but not by my vote. It is unconstitutional and outrageous to thus vote away money which had better be either not collected or distributed to relieve distress and suffering in our own country.

We are by far too eager, it seems, to neglect America and aid foreigners. I shall vote for the Johnson bill limiting foreign immigration. Let us stop this criminal and indiscriminate admission to our country of the scum of Europe. Keep out the foreigner and let our children and their children alone inherit and enjoy our advantages, our wonderful resources, and our superior civilization. [Applause.]

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JAMES: Page 9, line 14, after the figures "$51,887,415," insert: "Provided, That the Secretary of War is authorized in his discretion to make payment from this appropriation of the balance of $12 due as pay to Clarence J. Vaughan, Marquette, Mich."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order in order to give the gentleman from Michigan an opportunity to make a statement.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, in December, 1918, Clarence J. Vaughan, of Marquette, Mich., was discharged from the Army. Mr. Vaughan had $12 due him as pay. The paymaster, Major Durkee, sent him a registered letter inclosing the $12 in currency. It was sent to him by registered mail, but in a franked Army envelope. At the same time, Major Durkee mailed 4,000 other envelopes, all registered. The young man received the registered envelope, but no money. Mr. Vaughan took the matter up with the War Department, and was told that if he would furnish a bond and two or three bondsmen he could get his money. Mr. Vaughan furnished the necessary bond, and he was then informed by the War Department that seeing that the money was in currency and not a draft they could not pay him this money, but would try to get it from the Post Office Department, in view of the fact that the letter was registered.

When Mr. Vaughan could not get his money, he wrote me, and I took the matter up with the War Department and was told they would investigate the matter. Finally I received a letter from them stating that the Post Office Department claimed that, seeing the letter was registered in a franked envelope, they were not liable and they would not pay it unless he could get the man who stole the money to admit he stole it, and during all these five years the young man has been waiting for his money. The War Department wants to pay it, but say they have no authority, and the Post Office Department says they can not pay it.

Mr. REECE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JAMES. I yield.

Mr. REECE. The department admits the liability and admits that they owe this man the money?

Mr. JAMES. They say the Post Office Department should pay it and, as I say, the Post Office Department will not pay it unless the man who stole it admits he stole it.

The following letter from the War Department, dated February 13, 1920, and the inclosed from the Army and Navy Register of May 8, 1920, will be of interest as showing to what extreme "red tape" can go:

FEBRUARY 13, 1920.

HON. W. FRANK JAMES,

House of Representatives.

MY DEAR SIR: Receipt is acknowledged of your memorandum of the 11th instant inclosing copies of letters from the Post Office Department in regard to the loss of money from a registered letter addressed to Mr. Clarence J. Vaughan.

I will have this matter investigated, and see if there is not some way in which the Post Office Department can be forced to acknowledge their full liability in such cases.

Very respectfully,

E. B. HARTLEY,
Major, Q. M. C.

[From the Army and Navy Register, May 8, 1920.]

IN CONGRESS.

LOST, STRAYED, OR STOLEN!

Representative W. FRANK JAMES, of Michigan, on April 16, during consideration of the Army appropriation bill in the House, had the following to say regarding disbursing officers:

"There should be some change in the system by which men who are discharged from the Army are paid. I know of a case where a young man was discharged from the Army on December 12, 1918. The disbursing officer sent him a remittance of $12 by registered mail, but, as it was sent to the wrong address, it was returned to the sender, Major Durkee. Major Durkee then sent another registered letter to the soldier, Clarence J. Vaughan, at his home at Marquette, Mich. The second registered letter was duly received, but contained no money. Mr. Vaughan took the matter up with Major Durkee and the War Department and explained that the registered letter contained no money, but, receiving no satisfaction, sent all papers to me.

"After some correspondence I was given to understand that if Mr. Vaughan would furnish a bond, with two responsible bondsmen, he would be paid. I was also informed that 'he should also be cautioned that the instructions attached to the bond of indemnity must be followed absolutely, as the bond, when completed, must be approved by the Treasury Department prior to the payment of the duplicate check.'

"Instructions regarding bond were 'followed absolutely,' red tape and all, and bond was executed and forwarded to the War Department on March 1, 1919.

"On July 9, 1919, I was informed by the War Department that they had discovered that the disbursing officer, Major Durkee, had sent 'currency' to Mr. Vaughan instead of a check, and therefore they were not responsible, and stated that the matter would have to be taken up with the Post Office Department. After a good deal of correspondence and conversation with the Post Office Department I was informed that nothing could be done until Major Durkee could be located and interviewed by a post-office inspector. I was also informed that it would be necessary to get an affidavit signed and sworn to by Major Durkee that he had really sent the $12 in currency.

"Very luckily Major Durkee had not been sent to Siberia to guard some railroad, or to Silesia to oversee some election, or Mr. Vaughan's grandchildren might be paid the money some day.

"Major Durkee was finally located in Texas, and stated that he had sent out thousands of letters and did not remember anything about the one sent to Mr. Vaughan. The Post Office Department said they 'were sorry, but nothing could be done until the affidavit was secured.'

"Under date of January 8, 1920, or about 18 months after Mr. Vaughan had been discharged, I was told, in part: 'I have to state that the case is still under investigation with a view to fixing responsibility for the rifling, if possible, in the event it can be definitely determined that the letter was rifled while in the custody of the Postal Service.'

"As this was as 'clear as mud,' I asked for further information, and I gathered the additional information that about the only way that they—the Post Office Department—could or would pay was to have the man who stole the money admit that he had stolen it.

"I was also informed that: 'Inasmuch as the letter in question was mailed under cover of an official penalty envelope, without payment of postage, indemnity in this case is not applicable. However, if further investigation results in fixing responsibility for the rifling upon a postal employee, consideration will be given to the matter of attempting recovery of the amount involved from such employee in order that claimant may be reimbursed.'

"In other words, although the registry fee had been paid, the post office stated that they assumed no responsibility, because the envelope was a 'franked' one instead of carrying a 2-cent stamp.

"We then called the attention of the War Department to the matter, and was informed that they had sent out thousands of registered letters in franked envelopes, and it was their contention that the post office was responsible, and they would take the matter up with them at once and advise us.

"This was several months ago, and I presume that there is still a debate between the War Department and the Post Office Department as to whether or not money sent a soldier by registered letter and stolen should be paid to the soldier, and, if so, by what department.

"Mr. Vaughan is not so concerned about the amount as he is about the principle of the thing. I take it for granted that there are many others in the same fix.

"I sincerely hope that before the next war that the War Department will have worked out a system that will be fairer to the soldier, and one that means he will be reimbursed promptly in similar cases."

Mr. Vaughan has waited for over five years for his money. It is very evident that unless the amendment I have offered is agreed to he will never be paid, and I hope there will be no objection to it.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I will not make the point of order in view of the gentleman's explanation.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. TILSON). The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

For aviation increase to enlisted men of the Army, $250,000: Provided, That this appropriation shall not be available for increased pay on flying status to more than 700 enlisted men

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking a question. What is the service doing now in the way of training enlisted men in flying and why is it necessary to limit the number to 700?

Mr. ANTHONY. The limitation carried heretofore has been 500, as I understand, and the committee has put on a limitation because it found a few years ago that the aviation service was giving extra flying pay to men in the balloon service, and men who simply went up in a fixed balloon, anchored to the ground, for observation purposes, were getting 25 per cent extra, and we thought that was a little strong; consequently this year we limited the number.

Mr. BEGG. Last year it was 600 and this year it is 700.

Mr. ANTHONY. The department said they wanted to move a number of men in machines, and we thought for actual flying they ought to receive this pay.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I think more enlisted men should be given an opportunity to learn to fly. I think the time is past when it should be limited to officers. I think the men that go up in balloons ought to get flying pay too.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to line 16, page 9, inasmuch as I have been trying all the time to get recognition.

Mr. ANTHONY. Reserving the right to object—

Mr. KVALE. I want to offer an amendment.

Mr. BEGG. Let us have the amendment reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 9, line 16, strike out one hundred and twenty-five thousand and insert sixty-two thousand five hundred.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I shall have to object.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. Mr. Chairman, let me say to the gentleman from Kansas that after the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. JAMES] rose and presented his amendment, the gentleman from Minnesota presented his amendment immediately and sent it to the Clerk's desk. The amendment of Mr. JAMES was disposed of and thereupon the amendment proposed by the committee was taken up so the gentleman's amendment was shut out.

Mr. ANTHONY. In view of that fact, Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw objection, with the understanding that there will be not more than five minutes occupied in discussing the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to returning to line 16? There was no objection.

Mr. KVALE. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I have offered this amendment as the only effective way of entering a protest against our large Army and Navy. I spoke somewhat at length on this subject yesterday and will not repeat what I said then. I do not have much hope that there are enough Members here to-day to vote for this amendment. It would be interesting, however, to see how many would be willing to defy the machine and vote for it. But I know that two years from now—and if I am here I am going to offer a similar amendment—that then there will be more Members of this House who will vote for reducing the appropriations for a large Army, appropriations which now are two and a half times as large as they were the year before we started the war to end war.

Mr. VAILE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KVALE. In a moment when I am through. I have only five minutes. I do not believe there are enough Members of this House in favor of it to pass the Ramseyer joint resolution to take the profits out of war and conscript wealth. But two years from now there will be more in favor of that resolution, and four years from now there will be more women Members of the House, some women who are mothers. And when you put it up to the mothers of the Nation to vote on war appropriations you will find out where the large Army and the Navy will be going to. Then, my friends and gentlemen of the committee, I say you will find us going back to the time when appropriations were not half of what they are now. The mothers who have boys, like the mother of my six sons, are willing to sacrifice every one on the altar of our country if it is in danger, in real danger; but these mothers feel and know that their boys are a little bit too good to have their bodies rot and their bones bleach on foreign soil to save J. Pierpont Morgan's coupons. [Applause.]

Mr. VAILE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KVALE. Yes; I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. VAILE. Does the gentleman think that 62,500 should be the maximum number, or would he be in favor of a further reduction?

Mr. KVALE. After a while I would, but I thought 62,500 was all I could hope for now.

Mr. VAILE. Will the gentleman state what he thinks the total number of men in the Army should be, or whether there should be any Army.

Mr. KVALE. Oh, I want an Army for police purposes. I would like to have an appropriation for about what we had before we had the war to end war, $105,000,000, instead of $254,000,000 as now proposed.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 9, line 14—

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk informs the Chair that that paragraph has been passed.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. May I make this statement, Mr. Chairman, and then I will ask unanimous consent to return? I had this amendment prepared intending to offer it, and the gentleman from Minnesota was seeking prior recognition. I intended to offer my amendment after his had been voted upon. The committee proceeded to read. I do not wish to discuss it, but I ask unanimous consent that it may be offered and voted upon.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be read for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 9, line 14, strike out the figures "$51,887,415" and insert in lieu thereof "$41,887,415"; and in line 16, after the word "hundred," strike out the words "and twenty-five."

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be submitted and voted on.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I have no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. No objection being heard, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Pay of persons with retired status: For pay of the officers on the retired list, $7,032,337: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to Col. John E. Hunt, United States Army, retired.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order to the words of the proviso beginning on line 2, page 10—

Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid to Col. John E. Hunt, United States Army, retired.

I make the point of order upon the ground that the same is legislation on an appropriation bill, and is not germane.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, it seems so plain that this is a limitation that it does not seem to me to be necessary to make any argument in respect to it.

The CHAIRMAN. It seems so to the Chair, but the Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, in the opinion of the Chair rendered this morning stress was laid upon the matter of the principle of limitation. It is my contention that a limitation can not in effect repeal existing law. Under the present existing law it is the duty of the proper officials of the Government to pay to Colonel Hunt the retired pay of a colonel under the pay bill of the Army. That is entirely an executive function. In effect, this proviso repeals that law in that it deprives Colonel Hunt of his pay in this appropriation bill. It interferes with an executive function. That being the case, it is my contention that this goes beyond the scope of a proper limitation. It does not involve a policy; it goes to an individual. For that reason it is not a proper limitation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. BEGG. Suppose the provision is carried into law, can not Colonel Hunt under the law to which the gentleman refers go into the Court of Claims and get judgment for his pay?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Absolutely. He could go to the Court of Claims and have a decision rendered and receive his pay. Therefore, what we are seeking to do is simply to make him a lot of trouble with respect to receiving his pay. It is an interference with an executive function, and I do not believe it is allowable under the rules of this House. I think it is not a proper limitation on an appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman's argument were addressed to the merits of the question, what the gentleman from Iowa had said would be persuasive, but it has been pretty thoroughly established that Congress may refuse to appropriate for a perfectly legitimate purpose.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. This comes under the Holman rule.

The CHAIRMAN. In the mind of the Chair it is purely a limitation. It does not restrict the discretion of any executive officer. It simply declines to appropriate for a perfectly legal object. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment, which I have sent to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. LAGUARDIA: Page 10, line 2, after the figures "$7,032,337," strike out all of the balance of line 2 and all of lines 3 and 4, and, further, on line 2, insert a period in place of the colon.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago Major Cresson had various gentlemen here who defended him. I now rise to strike out the proviso relating to Colonel Hunt. I happen to know Colonel Hunt. He was the senior officer and the commanding officer on the ship on which I crossed in August, 1917. While it would cause Colonel Hunt a great deal of hardship if we were to defeat my amendment, I say that you have hurt Colonel Hunt more to-day than if you had taken his pension away from him, because there is no greater insult which can be heaped upon the head of an American officer than to call him a traitor. Colonel Hunt is not a traitor to his country. [Applause.] Colonel Hunt may have exercised bad judgment. It was pointed out here that he permitted this prisoner to go without handcuffs; but all gentlemen know that if Colonel Hunt or any other Army officer would put handcuffs on a prisoner while on a train or traveling, there would be 20 or 30 gentlemen on the floor of this House protesting against the brutality of that officer. We are simply making it hard for an officer of the Army to perform his duty.

I had opportunity to observe Colonel Hunt in crossing. We embarked at New York and went to Halifax and from there we crossed over to Liverpool. We had about 2,500 troops aboard. He was in command of a battalion of the Ninth Infantry. He performed his duties intelligently and well. He was raised in the American Army. His father was a graduate of West Point. He could not get his boy into West Point, but the boy enlisted and worked his way up and got his commission. After 30 years of service, I think it is not fair, it is unjust, to brand an officer as a traitor because he was guilty of using bad judgment, and in the actual desertion he had no personal contact with the prisoner at the time.

Mr. MCKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I am not here to defend Colonel Hunt at all, but I ask the gentleman from New York if Colonel Hunt was not simply a subordinate officer, carrying out the orders of his superior, so far as this prisoner was concerned?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Certainly. We have so hamstrung Army officers with laws and rules and regulations that they have to look up the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD every time they order squads right or squads left. If we would stop running the Army and legislate for them and give these officers a decent salary instead of taking four measly years from their longevity pay, as we voted to do a few moments ago, perhaps we could get somewhere.

As a former Army officer, I protest against the insinuations of disloyalty with respect to Colonel Hunt. His record up to this unfortunate incident was a good military record of a brave soldier, and I hope that the gentlemen of the House will extend to him the same fair consideration that they extended to Major Cresson, and will vote out the proviso in this paragraph which we have no right to insert, which can not permanently take the pay away from Colonel Hunt, but is simply an insult to the colonel.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I want to say to the gentleman, and I agree with everything that he has said, that I do not know whether I know Colonel Hunt or not. Until I heard the gentleman's remarks I thought I did not know Colonel Hunt, but I am inclined to think that I served with him when he was in the Ninth Infantry on the Texas border.

But that makes no difference, nor does it make any difference what Colonel Hunt or anybody else was guilty of; this House ought not to pass laws of this kind.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, the House has just been informed that it is all wrong and brutal to handcuff a man who betrayed his country and is under a sentence to the penitentiary. The further statement has been made that Colonel Hunt had a splendid war record. I have in my hand a report from the War Department which gives the court-martial trial to which reference has been made, and three other times Colonel Hunt was court-martialed. He was court-martialed for appearing upon the judicial stand while drunk and trying another man who was being court-martialed. For that offense he was found guilty, and the verdict was that he should be dismissed from the Army. Appeal was made to Mr. Taft, who was then President, and he pardoned him and reduced him 50 fives, but he pardoned him only on the promise that he would hereafter remain sober. But he violated that promise made to the good-natured President, and afterwards was court-martialed for being drunk. Five men on the committee which investigated the trial of Hunt—where beyond all sort of question he was whitewashed—the five on that committee reported him guilty. Five specifications were against him. He admitted three and the other two were proven. It is suggested that he was acting under superior orders in his dereliction. He was ordered by the War Department here at Washington to handcuff that man, Bergdoll, and when the guard started to leave the prison at Governors Island with him and asked for handcuffs Hunt refused them. Hunt was told by the War Department that Bergdoll should not be released to go on the gold-hunting journey without a commissioned officer accompanying the expedition. Hunt defied that, and Bergdoll went off without a commissioned officer. Hunt was furthermore directed from headquarters not to let that expedition start until at least one of the attorneys for Bergdoll accompanied him, because the Government had the promise of Bergdoll's attorneys that they would see that he was returned to his prison quarters.

The proof was made that this little guard of two corporals had Bergdoll in charge after he had been turned over to Bergdoll's attorney, and then to Bergdoll's foster father in Bergdoll's own residence in Philadelphia. Then they rode about the country in the afternoon in an automobile, then they went to the theater at night, and upon their return from the theater the proof is beyond dispute that they stopped at a barroom, but the prosecutor, Cresson, stopped the witness and would not let him testify to that effect and said, "Jump over that until next day."

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I hope the gentleman will not take up my time.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman can get more time—

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. We are proceeding under the gag rule.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. But the negligence and inefficiency of the soldiers should not be placed against Colonel Hunt.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. They were selected by him because of their inefficiency and because of their lack of qualifications. The whole committee of five reported this fellow guilty and the majority think that the people ought not to be taxed to pay him $10 a day for the rest of his life.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. But he is entitled to it as a matter of law.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. The minority report made by Mr. Peters and Mr. McArthur also reported him guilty. He was guilty from every standpoint. But it is apparent that whitewash is to be used once more and that this man will not receive punishment from the people whose flag he has betrayed.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I recall something of the testimony taken in the Bergdoll investigation, and the two reports which were made to the House—the majority report by the gentleman from Kentucky, as I recall it [Mr. JOHNSON], and the minority report. I also recall that from my reading of that report I did not form a very high regard for the way in which Colonel Hunt discharged the duties which were imposed upon him in reference to Bergdoll and his tour, if you care to call it that. That is one proposition, and for his conduct in reference to that Colonel Hunt was brought before the only kind of official tribunal before whom he could be brought, an Army court-martial, to ascertain if he was guilty in law of the charges preferred. That Army court-martial, after a hearing of the evidence in the case, acquitted Colonel Hunt, not of misjudgment, but of being guilty of the specifications that were charged against him. Now then, I am even willing to admit that the court-martial verdict was wrong in each and every instance where they failed to find him guilty, but I am not willing to say that because a certain court-martial or a certain tribunal made a mistake the House of Representatives ought to revolutionize its own history and violate every principle of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence and pass what is in fact a bill of attainder, as was so well pointed out by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. TUCKER]. So then, admitting for the purpose of argument everything that the gentleman from Kentucky has said, yet it seems to me that we here in this House can not countenance any such thing as to deprive an officer of his pay in this manner. I do not know Hunt. But I am not willing to commit an injustice. This man's pay is a matter of contract. We are asked to take action depriving him of it when the only tribunal which could lawfully do so has found him not guilty. The motion to strike out should be adopted.

Mr. ANTHONY. If the gentleman will yield just for a moment, I would like to prefer a unanimous-consent request, that debate on this amendment be limited to 25 minutes in addition to the time that has already been occupied.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be limited to 25 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. MAGEE of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, under the rules is the debate exhausted on the pending amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I call for the regular order.

The CHAIRMAN. The regular order is called for. We are proceeding under unanimous consent. The gentleman from New York moved to strike out the last word.

Mr. MAGEE of New York. Mr. Chairman, I want to say a word in favor of the amendment. I do not know Colonel Hunt. I have talked with persons who do know him, and uniformly they have spoken of him in the highest terms. But it seems to me that we have involved in this provision of the bill a fundamental principle, and I want to put this question to the Members of the House: What has become of the fundamental right of an American citizen charged with a crime to be presumed innocent until found guilty? [Applause.]

Are we to displace this right by the promulgation of a new doctrine, that a citizen charged with a crime shall be deemed guilty until found innocent? Or by a modification of that doctrine, as is attempted here, that an American citizen charged with a crime shall be deemed guilty even after a duly constituted tribunal has found him innocent?

It seems to me that there must be some limit here in accordance with the constitutional rights of an American citizen.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. MAGEE of New York. No. I have only two minutes, and I respectfully decline to yield. I want to speak only a word, and I am speaking it because I think there is that fundamental principle involved that we can not overlook. [Applause.]

It has been suggested here that perhaps Colonel Hunt was guilty. I say that he was not guilty. Who can say that perhaps he was guilty when he was tried by a court-martial and acquitted? I do not know what evidence was presented, but I do know General Bullard. I know that no finer officer ever wore the uniform of Uncle Sam. [Applause.] He is a man of the highest ideals. No one would think of questioning his integrity. I understand that General Bullard approved the findings, and you can bet your bottom dollar that General Bullard would not have approved them unless the findings of that court-martial were in accordance with the evidence presented.

It seems to me that we owe something to ourselves here. If an American citizen has any constitutional rights to-day, let us stand up and defend them. [Applause.] I have reached the point, I want to say to the House and to the country, when I am heartily sick and tired of the assassination of character by insinuation, by rumor, and by suspicion. Let us maintain the dignity of the House; let us maintain the great traditions of the House of Representatives; and let us not do anything that will impair the constitutional rights of an American citizen. [Applause.]

Mr. BUCHANAN rose.

Mr. ANTHONY. Regular order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN] is modest, and he has been quite a while trying to obtain the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair had not observed the gentleman from Texas on his feet.

Mr. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, when these two questions, which are alike in character, were pending, I wrote to the Secretary of War in an effort to ascertain his viewpoint as to the questions of facts and the principles involved. I have already read to the House one-half of his reply. I want now, in connection with the pending amendment, to read the other half of his letter. The Secretary of War says:

Colonel Hunt was tried in 1920 by a tribunal established by law—

Our law, gentlemen—

a general court-martial appointed by Maj. Gen. R. L. Bullard—on charges which in substance alleged carelessness and neglect of duty resulting in the escape from confinement of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, a convicted deserter from the Army. The court acquitted Colonel Hunt, and the acquittal was approved by General Bullard (G. C. M. O. 476), Eastern Department, August 4, 1920.

After that acquittal further criminal proceedings against Colonel Hunt upon the charges passed upon by the court-martial before which he was tried became legally impossible. This finality is in accord with established administrative judicial rules (sec. 1, G. O. 83, War Department, 1919), with a military judicial rule prescribed by Congress (art. 40, ch. 2, act of June 4, 1920, 41 Stat. 795), and with the principles of the Constitution (Amendment V). Colonel Hunt was tried and acquitted by a competent tribunal establishment pursuant to law—for the trial of alleged military offenders. To disregard the findings of that tribunal and to proceed to punish Colonel Hunt for alleged offenses of which he has been legally acquitted would, it seems to me, be a departure from one of the fundamental principles upon which our administration of justice is based.

Our law—

The act of June 4, 1920, by article 40, chapter 2, provides, in part—

No person shall, without his consent, be tried a second time for the same offense.

That was the viewpoint of Congress in passing that law of 1920. In effect, gentlemen, the language carried in the pending bill is, without trial, to convict this man of the same offense of which he has already been acquitted under the rules and regulations and procedure established by us. It is putting the man in jeopardy for his life and for his property a second time. The Congress of the United States, in my judgment, can not afford to take that position. I hope that the amendment of the gentleman will prevail. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN], a member of the committee, is recognized.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas moves that the debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BUCHANAN], a member of the committee, is recognized.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, you have heard my friend from New York, a member of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. MAGEE], talk about the constitutional rights and constitutional guarantees.

You have heard talk about a man being twice put in jeopardy, but talk about constitutional rights and about a man being twice put in jeopardy has absolutely no application to this case. We are not seeking to punish Colonel Hunt a second time, nor are we seeking to try him a second time for this offense. We are trying to say in a legislative way that this Government will not continue to pay him his retired annual salary when he has proved recreant to his every duty in this case.

You say he has twice been put in jeopardy. What does jeopardy mean? It means jeopardy of life and liberty and has no reference whatever to the salary a man might get in the future.

Let us look at a few of the facts. Colonel Hunt was court-martialed, and it is true he was cleared. He was cleared after acknowledging his guilt under three of the counts of the bill of particulars, and he was proven guilty under the other two.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. MAGEE] asks whether we did not have a tribunal try Colonel Hunt. Yes; the military authorities tried him by court-martial and cleared him. Then this House appointed a legally constituted tribunal to investigate him and report back to this House. That tribunal spent $5,000 or $6,000 in that investigation. That committee of five, composed of your associates—men in whom you and the Speaker, who appointed them, had confidence—sent for witnesses from all over this country. They heard the testimony; they went into it carefully, and they brought back a minority and majority report, but both reports in unmeasured terms condemned Colonel Hunt.

Has he been tried? Why did you appoint your committee if you were not going to act upon its report and if you were not going to consider it and accept it?

Let us see what some of the conditions were. Bergdoll was subject to the draft; he was 25 years old, a single man, a multimillionaire, and of robust physical stature and health. He evaded the draft and dodged the officers of our country for over a year and a half and until the war was over. After he was apprehended he was handcuffed and sent to Governor's Island and put in charge of Colonel Hunt. While he was in Colonel Hunt's charge Army officers and police authorities sent Colonel Hunt warning as to the desperate character of this man Bergdoll and stated to him that he was likely to attempt to escape. Let me read one of those warnings. This warning came from William Weigel, colonel, General Staff, and reads:

1. Attention is directed to letter from the department adjutant dated January 20, 1920, addressed to you and relating to Grover C. Bergdoll.

2. In addition to the precautions directed in the letter referred to above, the department commander directs that at all times when

Bergdoll leaves the walls of Castle William he be guarded by two armed sentinels. Whenever Bergdoll in his present status leaves the island, the commanding general directs that he be handcuffed to one sentinel and guarded by another sentinel. The dangerous character of this prisoner has been reported by the police authorities of Philadelphia, who are in a position to know the amount of force which is probably necessary for his restraint, and this direction is made because of the information gained from these experienced police officials.

That is the character of warning which Colonel Hunt had when he was in charge of Bergdoll. What was Colonel Hunt's reply to those warnings? What did he say to the committee and to the court-martial? He said that such warnings as that had about as much weight with him as a communication issued by the mayor of Timbuctoo. He refused to permit Bergdoll to be handcuffed on the gold-hunting expedition, and even refused to permit the guard to carry handcuffs with them, saying Bergdoll was a model prisoner and would not escape.

Talk about a model officer, an officer who has three times been tried for drunkenness, and on one occasion dismissed from the service.

Oh, that is not all. He appointed a guard. He was directed to appoint a suitable guard, a proper guard; but whom did he appoint? He appointed one O'Hara—

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUCHANAN. I will yield for a question.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Will the gentleman permit to go in the Record, in his remarks, the record of gallantry of this officer at El Caney and in the Philippine insurrection?

Mr. BUCHANAN. What has the gallantry of this officer in the past to do with the present situation? Benedict Arnold was a gallant officer before he betrayed his country. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky) there were—ayes 47, noes 21.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

FINANCE SERVICE.

For compensation of clerks and other employees of the Finance Department, $1,454,000: Provided, That $500,000 of this amount shall be available only for the compensation and traveling expenses of clerks and other employees engaged on work pertaining to the audit of World War contracts, and of this amount not to exceed $25,000 shall be available for personal services in the office of the Chief of Finance, War Department.

Mr. TAYLOR of West Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I do this for the purpose of asking a question of the gentleman who is in charge of this bill. It is evident that this department needs more money or less money. Its clerical force may be so limited as to cause vexatious delays in the payment of Army bills, or it may be so large that there are needless delays caused by unnecessary duplication. I am led to these observations by the fact that a coal company in my country some time last November sold about 300 tons of coal to the War Department and so far has been unable to collect the money that is justly due it. It seems that this coal company is up against all the red tape that hedges the Finance Department of the Army. This company has written numerous letters to the department and has had me to intercede for it, but as yet we have been unable to get any report as to when this company may expect its money for the coal furnished.

Mr. ANTHONY. The money with which to pay for that coal would not be carried in this paragraph; I will say to the gentleman; but I know of no reason whatever why the company of which the gentleman speaks should not have received its money long before this, if there was no trouble about the contract, because the War Department is supposed to be almost current in the payment of its obligations. That was one of the purposes for the creation of the Finance Service, namely, so that the Government could pay promptly and take advantage of the discounts which prevail in commercial sales.

Mr. TAYLOR of West Virginia. I understand, of course, that the money appropriated by this paragraph would not be used for the payment of coal bills, but it will be used to pay clerks and accountants whose duty it is to see that bills are promptly paid. I understand that quite recently one of the departments—I believe it was the Interior Department—advertised for bids on 400 tons of bituminous coal, and while there are hundreds of companies in my district that could have furnished this coal, less than 10 of them submitted bids because of the fact that they find it so difficult to collect their money, owing to red-tape requirements. In view of the fact that my district produces the finest bituminous coal in the world and sells it at a reasonable price, I think the War Department and every other governmental agency ought to pay its bills promptly so as to get bids submitted on coal of such excellent quality. If coal companies furnishing coal to the Government are compelled to wait weeks and months for the payment of their invoices, it naturally discourages such commerce and at the same time has a tendency to limit the field of legitimate bidders, and eventually compels the department to pay a higher price for coal. I submit that such dilatory payment is unfair and unjust to the coal companies that submit bids for the furnishing of coal, and in their defense I call attention to and resent such a dilatory way of doing business.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

Army transportation: For transportation of the Army and its supplies, including retired enlisted men when ordered to active duty; of authorized baggage, including that of retired officers, warrant officers, and enlisted men when ordered to active duty and upon relief therefrom, and including packing and crating; of recruits and recruiting parties; of applicants for enlistment between recruiting stations and recruiting depots; of necessary agents and other employees, including per diem allowances in lieu of subsistence, not exceeding $4 for those authorized to receive the per diem allowances; of dependents of officers and enlisted men as provided by law; of discharged prisoners, and persons discharged from St. Elizabeths Hospital after transfer thereto from the military service, to their homes (or elsewhere as they may elect); Provided, That the cost in each case shall not be greater than to the place of last enlistment; of horse equipment; and of funds for the Army; for the operation and repair of boats and other vessels; for wharfage tolls, and ferrisses; for drayage and cartage; for the purchase, hire, operation, maintenance, and repair of harness, wagons, carts, drays, other vehicles, and horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles, required for the transportation of troops and supplies and for official military and garrison purposes; for purchase and hire of draft and pack animals, including replacement of unserviceable animals; for travel allowances to officers and enlisted men on discharge; to officers of National Guard on discharge from Federal service as prescribed in the act of March 2, 1901; to enlisted men of National Guard on discharge from Federal service, as prescribed in amendatory act of September 22, 1922; and to members of the National Guard who have been mustered into Federal service and discharged on account of physical disability; in all, $16,400,000: Provided, That hereafter payment shall be made at such rates as the Secretary of War shall deem just and reasonable and shall not exceed 50 per cent of the full amount of compensation, computed on the basis of the tariff or lower special rates for like transportation performed for the public at large, for the transportation of property or troops of the United States over any railroad which under land-grant acts was aided in its construction by a grant of land on condition that said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the United States, and for which adjustment of compensation is required in accordance with decisions of the Supreme Court construing such land-grant acts, or over any railroad which was aided in its construction by a grant of land on condition that such railroad should be a post route and military road, subject to such regulations as Congress may impose restricting the charge for such Government transportation, and such payment shall be accepted as in full for all demands for such service.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REECE: Page 22, line 17, after the word "all," strike out the figures "$16,400,000" and insert: "$16,395,000: Provided, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed and authorized to transfer to the Department of Agriculture for use in improvement of highways and roads the following war materials, equipment, and machinery out of the reserve stocks, to wit, 1,500 5-ton caterpillar tractors with tools and spare parts, 5,000 motor trucks of 1 to 5 ton capacity, and 500 ordnance mobile machine-shop trucks with tools and spare parts."

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the gentleman's point of order? Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. That the same is legislation on an appropriation bill and does not come within the Holman rule.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, after submitting the amendment to a different section of the bill on yesterday and, as I understood, it was ruled out of order because of the fact that it was held that none of the disbursements in the upkeep of this material was made under the item to which the amendment was offered on yesterday, I have since then talked with the Director of Finance or with his office, and I am informed that part of this expense is paid out of this item in the bill.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. REECE. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Is the gentleman talking now about the bill or the point of order?

Mr. REECE. I am talking about the point of order.

Mr. MADDEN. I just wanted to ask the gentleman whether the War Department had declared the items surplus that he is trying to transfer.

Mr. REECE. They are holding them now in surplus or reserve.

Mr. MADDEN. They are not surplus, are they?

Mr. REECE. According to my opinion.

Mr. MADDEN. We can not declare them surplus here.

Mr. REECE. Some of them are held in surplus.

Mr. MADDEN. The items the gentleman refers to have not been declared surplus and ought not to be considered here even if the amendment was in order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, it was my understanding that in order to make a transfer of this kind you had to do it in accordance with existing legislation and under the existing law, unless an item has been declared surplus by the Army, you have to have special legislation in order to make the transfer. There is no showing here that there is any surplus of any of this equipment, so far as I know, and I was of the opinion that the testimony before the Military Affairs Committee confirmed the view that this is not surplus at the present time in the view of the Army. Unless it is surplus, if we should transfer it under this proviso of the bill, we would be transferring it in violation of the existing law, and for that reason I think a point of order would lie against the amendment. If the amendment said that the transfer should be made from surplus, then I think it might be admissible under the rule.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I gravely doubt whether the amendment would be in order under the Holman rule, because if you transfer these items from the reserve the probabilities are they would have to be replaced, and if you take a portion of these trucks or tractors from the number on hand and transfer them there is no certainty at all that that will reduce the amount of this appropriation, because the entire appropriation could be expended for some other purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman direct his attention to this point? The amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee actually reduces the appropriation covered by the bill, which is the third provision of the Holman rule. It reduces the amount covered by the bill by $5,000.

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes; it arbitrarily reduces it by that amount but practically does not reduce it.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman claim that the legislation proposed in the amendment which follows is not necessary or is not related to the reduction in the appropriation?

Mr. ANTHONY. I would hold that the language of the amendment would constitute new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. It is new legislation, of course, and the only question is whether or not it comes under the third provision of the Holman rule by reducing the amount of money covered by the bill, which, as a matter of fact, it does.

Mr. ANTHONY. It may technically reduce the amount of money covered by the bill, but if it takes material out of the reserve the probabilities are it will have to be replaced by new material which would be paid for out of the appropriation.

Mr. REECE. Not at all.

The CHAIRMAN. The difficulty with the Chair is the disposition the gentleman's amendment seeks to make of the property. If it disposed of it entirely, so that the maintenance charge would surely and necessarily be reduced, then it would be clear, but whether or not the legislation proposed by the amendment does in effect so dispose of the property or whether or not there will be the same expense to maintain it when transferred to a different department—

Mr. REECE. I should think, Mr. Chairman, there should be no difficulty about that, because it leaves the jurisdiction of the War Department, and, of course, the expense of storage and of upkeep, which must now be necessarily incurred, is going to be done away with.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I was wondering, since this amendment would reduce auctioneer's fees, whether or not it would come under the Holman rule as a reduction of expenses.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the gentleman directing a serious parliamentary inquiry to the Chair?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is not convinced that the gentleman's amendment really makes any retrenchment at all, and, of course, if the reduction in the amount covered by the bill is purely an arbitrary reduction, with no relation to the legislation carried, the Chair would not be able to hold it in order.

Mr. REECE. But, Mr. Chairman, if I may add, the trucks, for instance, referred to in this bill, some of them, are now over at Camp Holabird. Here are some photographs of them. In order to keep the motors in these trucks from jamming with rust, and becoming completely ruined, it is necessary that men be kept on the pay roll to go out and turn over the motors and take care of the trucks. They are being put to no use. When they are transferred to the Department of Agriculture and distributed to the various State highway commissions to be used in road building, then, of course, these employees can be done away with and the money that is paid for storage space for these trucks can be saved.

Mr. WINGO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE. I will.

Mr. WINGO. Does the gentleman's amendment provide for the distribution? Does not it provide for the transfer from one department to another? Will it take any less oil to grease it under the Agricultural Department than under the War Department?

Mr. REECE. I think if the gentleman will read the amendment he will find that the material is to be turned over to be used for road building.

Mr. WINGO. But if they are still to be retained, is it not the presumption that if they are used they will take still more oil than it takes to keep them now?

Mr. REECE. No; they will be distributed to the States.

Mr. WINGO. Does the amendment provide for the distribution? Does your amendment compel the distribution, or just make them available for the Agricultural Department? They are now held by the War Department as a reserve, and the gentleman's amendment transfers them to the jurisdiction of the Agricultural Department, making them available for use and distribution or keeping them, as the Agricultural Department may decide.

Mr. ROACH. I think it goes further and directs the distribution to the several States.

Mr. WINGO. I have read the amendment and I did not notice that there was any provision compelling their distribution.

Mr. REECE. There is no question as to the purpose they will be put to.

Mr. WINGO. I think they should be distributed before the spring primaries. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment seems to do no more than to transfer the property from one department to another. Therefore it does not appear on the face of it that the legislation would have the effect of reducing or retrenching expenditures, although it does reduce the amount carried in the bill. To be in order it must be such an amendment as to retrench expenditure. There is where the gentleman fails to connect up the legislation.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, in that case I ask unanimous consent to revise the amendment by adding that they are to be distributed to the various States under the Federal law for assistance in building roads.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana rose.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman from Tennessee will revise his amendment, he may do so. In the meantime the Chair will sustain the point of order. The paragraph will not be immediately passed, as the gentleman from Louisiana has asked for recognition.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman, to use a trite expression, necessity is the mother of invention. Ordinarily I would move to extend and revise my remarks and then incorporate the page that I am going to try to read into the Record, but I know that that motion would be objected to, as similar requests have been refused, and therefore I will have to try another tack and ask at the conclusion of these preliminary remarks that I be permitted to read it. It will be necessary to make a few remarks to introduce it if no objection is offered, hence the following observations. Of course, the financial size of the military bill and the naval bill demonstrates to the satisfaction of thousands of people that even in peace times war establishments are very costly and bear heavily upon the taxpayers of the country. But there are others who see life steadily and surely, and who understand that we must be prepared for the day when war's alarm will sound again throughout the world. The blast of the bugle followed by the cannon's roar may not be heard to-morrow or the next day, but Moloch will order war within the next quarter of a century at the furthest. So in all probability they that demand preparedness are right, and we should take the necessary steps to protect the country and not be found asleep when the dread summons comes again to "fall in and then fall out in the smoke of battle."

Yes, there are vast expenditures being made from a military and naval standpoint; and in all probability the best thing the naval and military authorities can do is to study new methods by which they can and should meet the propaganda that will be urged against them in the next few years, crying aloud persistently and sophistically, with a powerful appeal to big taxpayers, for a reduction of armaments and thereby reduce taxation and ease the burdens upon the people.

The professional propagandist for the reduction of taxation has come into existence. Perhaps he was born of necessity to check and curb what many believed to be a saturnalia of extravagance. But, having been born, he wants to live, and to do so he must justify his existence. Analogously to the man-eating tiger who once having tasted human blood constantly thereafter craves it, the professional propagandist, having been financially requited for his intellectual efforts, will demand more employment and will seek the means and basis to justify it. Look out, therefore, Army and Navy, for a tax-reduction attack which will require your best talent and genius to defeat.

Of course, I understand thoroughly as a desultory student of history that the days of war are not over. From the period beginning 1,500 years before the birth of Christ down to the present time there have been but 237 years of peace, and they were years devoted to the preparation of wars that followed. Historians do not go much further back than 1,500 years before Christ, because they know very well that the period that went back from thence to the sunrise of history was crimsoned with the blood of humanity that reddened the earth and the seas during the many generations that agonized during that long night of despair.

We are not going to escape wars for many centuries to come. The millenium is as far off as ever, and thoughtful men who want to see their country live after they die demand that we adopt measures that will protect our soldiers and the people that must in one way or the other participate in the wars from those things that are necessarily associated with every war and cause more deaths than the fatalities on the field of battle—disease in the lines and behind the lines—and disease can be met by medical science and be defeated by it.

Medicine and her great disciples and handmaidens, sanitation and hygiene, will decide the next great struggle, as all other things will in all probability be equal.

Now, the page that I hope you will permit me to read to you is prepared by a splendid gentleman who has lived long in New Orleans and has endeared himself to her people, Dr. George H. Tichenor by name. I am going to be very frank with you and say that his friends have asked me to put his remarkable paper, entitled "America at the Mercy of Other Nations in Case of War—Need of Standardized and Simplified Medicaments," in the Record. He is a big man from every standpoint, has worked long among our people, and has already won the reward of "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," and I hope you will indulge me and permit me to read into this preliminary address his paper. The language of it is simplicity itself and will appeal to Members. The title is appealing—"America at the Mercy of Other Nations in Case of War—Need of Standardized and Simplified Medicaments." It is an attractive alarm and calls Americans to attention.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I will interrupt the gentleman long enough to ask if he is talking to the bill.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Oh, yes. This paragraph is with reference to wagons, horses, and every imaginable thing deemed necessary for the purpose of conducting war, and before the proviso is the concluding sentence—"and to members of the National Guard who have been mustered into Federal service and discharged on account of physical disability."

I think that medicaments are related even in a parliamentary way to "discharged on account of physical disability."

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman mean medicine?

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. The word used here is "medicaments," and I have given the word the proper pronunciation. I looked in the dictionary upon the word, because I thought that somebody like the gentleman from Illinois might probably ask me, of course facetiously, if that were the correct pronunciation, as it is a word that is rarely used, I suppose, outside of medical works and conversation.

Mr. MADDEN. It seems to me that we ought to confine our debate to the bill.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. And it seems to me that I am confining it pretty closely to the bill.

Mr. MADDEN. How long is the gentleman going to talk?

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Just as long as the Chairman will permit me to do so. I hope the gentleman from Illinois will not make any objection to it. It is only one page, and I would like to get it into the Record.

Mr. MADDEN. I am going to object to anybody talking outside of the bill after this.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. But that would indicate that the gentleman thinks that my remarks are irrelevant and I do not agree with him.

Mr. MADDEN. Oh, I know the gentleman never agrees with anybody when he has his mind set on a thing.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Louisiana has expired.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Then I shall have to move to strike out something else.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the amendment which I offered some time ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. And, Mr. Chairman, in order to avoid moving to strike out something else, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to finish my remarks by incorporating this one page of matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Louisiana asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

Mr. MADDEN. I have no objection to that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, is a unanimous-consent request pending?

The CHAIRMAN. There is not.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment pending which I desire to offer.

The CHAIRMAN. An amendment is offered by the gentleman from Tennessee, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I thought I heard some one asking unanimous consent, and immediately I appealed to the Chair and he tells me that no such thing has been asked.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. I did ask unanimous consent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I thought that two gentlemen asked unanimous consent.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct, and the request was submitted to the committee, and the Chair heard no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Oh, I beg the Chair's pardon. I was on my feet clamoring for recognition in the confusion to ask if there was such a request for the purpose of objecting.

The CHAIRMAN. In the midst of the confusion the Chair did not observe the gentleman from Kentucky. If the gentleman was on his feet, the Chair will put the question again. Is there objection to the request, first, of the gentleman from Michigan to extend his remarks in the Record?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana to extend his remarks in the Record?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object.

Mr. JAMES. This was on an amendment that I offered some time ago, I would say to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REECE: Page 23, line 17, after the word "all," strike out the figures "$16,400,000" and insert "$16,395,000: Provided, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed and authorized to transfer to the Department of Agriculture, under the provisions of section 7 of the act approved February 28, 1919, entitled 'An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year 1920, and for other purposes,' and acts amendatory thereto, for use in improvement of highways and roads, the following war materials, equipment, and machinery out of the reserve stocks, to wit: One thousand five hundred 5-ton caterpillar tractors, with tools and spare parts; 5,000 motor trucks, 1 to 5 ton capacity; and 500 ordnance mobile machine shop trucks, with tools and spare parts."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment of the gentleman changes the existing law. Now, the Secretary of War alone has the power to declare articles surplus in the War Department, and the gentleman would take that power away from the Secretary of War to declare articles surplus.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman claims that it is done under the Holman rule, and it reduces expenditure. It does reduce the amount in the bill, but—

Mr. MADDEN. It does, but it does not with any logic.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a question of expenditure—

Mr. ANTHONY. As I said to the Chair before, if he offers an amendment which wipes out the Army supply of motor trucks available in reserve and we have to have more money to buy new ones, it is obviously not a retrenchment but an additional expense.

Mr. REECE. That is what it does not do.

Mr. MADDEN. It does reduce the appropriations, but it does not make the reduction apply to the activities and connect up the legislation with the activities.

Mr. REECE. I do not have the exact amount by which this proposed amendment will reduce expenditures of the War Department, but it will reduce them to a very considerable amount, but in order to be fair to the department, gentlemen of the committee, I made arbitrarily a small reduction. The reduction may be even much greater than that provided for in the bill.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman has not any figures upon which he bases his reason for it?

The CHAIRMAN. In order to make an amendment in order under the Holman rule the gentleman must comply with the requirements that it be germane to the subject matter of the bill and shall retrench expenditures in one of three ways, one of which is by a reduction of the amount of money carried in the bill. Now, the gentleman complies with the latter portion, but whether the retrenchment is an actual fact or not is a question.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I always feel sorry for a Chairman who has to pass on a point of order made under the Holman rule. It is so involved as to make it extremely difficult, probably even more difficult than to pass on the question of germaneness, because germaneness is also involved along with the Holman rule, but I have this general idea about the matter, and that is that where the legislation that is contained in an amendment proposed is offered it must be so connected with the reduction as to be germane to that reduction; and, much as I am in sympathy with the desire of my colleague from Tennessee, I question very much whether the legislation he proposes is germane to the reduction proposed.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the very point that is puzzling the Chair and the Chair has been unable to connect up the two in such a way as to make the amendment in order.

Mr. LONGWORTH. And is it not also a practice, in case an amendment of this sort is offered that apparently reduces the amount in the bill and leaves a doubt whether it is an actual saving, that the burden of proof lies upon the proponent of the amendment to show conclusively that it does effect a reduction?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; that is what the gentleman is called upon to do under the usual practice of the House.

Mr. REECE. Mr. Chairman, after the amendment was submitted on yesterday and the question was raised that the disbursement made for the upkeep of this surplus material was not made from under the item to which the amendment was offered, I conferred with the office of the Director of Finance and he informed me that disbursements were made from under this section for the upkeep of surplus material; and in conversation I inquired whether disbursements were made for the upkeep of these surplus trucks now over at Camp Holabird, to which I referred a moment ago, and he advised me that such disbursements were made from under this paragraph of the bill, and therefore it seems to me that the two propositions are connected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has tried to follow closely everything the gentleman from Tennessee has said and is still unable to so connect the proposed legislation with the reduction of the appropriation as to bring the legislation under the Holman rule, and therefore sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

MILITARY POSTS.

For the construction and enlargement at military posts of such buildings as in the judgment of the Secretary of War may be necessary, including all appurtenances thereto, $428,332, including $43,332 for improving the heating system at Fort Sill, Okla., and $385,000 toward the construction of a barrack building for one regiment of Infantry at Fort Benning, Ga.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WRIGHT: Page 25, line 19, after the word "Georgia," strike out the period and add the following: "and the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to enter into a contract or contracts or otherwise incur obligations of not to exceed $1,115,000, exclusive of the amount appropriated herein, for the completion of the said barrack building for one regiment of Infantry at Fort Benning, Ga."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that.

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this amendment is offered in the interest of economy. It happens that this Infantry School of Arms is located in my district. I am very familiar with the situation at the school, and I know the need for this construction.

Now, you will find from the hearings that it is the purpose of the War Department, in its construction program, to build at this place a barrack building which they estimate will cost a million and a half dollars, and that with this $385,000 which the bill carries it is proposed to construct one side, or simply one unit, of this building in the coming fiscal year, and from time to time they hope to secure appropriations with which the building can be completed. This matter was very thoroughly canvassed in the committee. I will read from the hearings on this subject:

Mr. ANTHONY. It really means that they intend first to embark on the construction of a regimental barrack and only build one-third or it?

Colonel CASEY. Yes; I will explain, sir. There is a well-defined study, which has been thoroughly made by the Secretary of War's office in conjunction with the Quartermaster General's office, and it is my impression that the Secretary intends to submit that as the housing program for the Army at large. This program will contain a progressive construction scheme, and in which each building to be built and each post to be improved will be provided for in this study.

The first item that the War Department desires to present and the one that is considered the most necessary is the barrack building at Fort Benning. This is to be a building, when finished, for one regiment of 2,110 men, and with the amount of money that we are allowed this year for new construction we propose to build as much of that barrack building as we can get for the money. It will provide for about 550 men. We may get a little bit more.

Further on Mr. ANTHONY says:

Mr. ANTHONY. Do you not think it would be economy to ask for bids for the entire construction rather than to ask for bids for one-third of it?

Colonel CASEY. Personally I think it would, sir; but we are only allotted $385,000.

Mr. ANTHONY. If we are going ahead on the building project there and it is made for regimental construction, why not take that under consideration?

Colonel CASEY. It would be economy to put it all up at once, undoubtedly.

Mr. JOHNSON. So that is to be a permanent camp, is it?

Colonel CASEY. Yes; it is the Infantry School.

Mr. JOHNSON. Is it advisable to take so many bites in the cherry? Why not go ahead and build the thing?

Colonel CASEY. We would gladly do it, sir.

Mr. JOHNSON. Well, Congress can do it if it can get sufficient reasons to warrant its doing so.

General BELLINGER. The Budget officer does not think we should spend so much money per year.

Mr. JOHNSON. Congress might think otherwise.

General BELLINGER. That is it. We are perfectly willing.

Colonel CASEY. Of course, we can see that it is much more economical.

Mr. JOHNSON. How much more economical do you think it would be to build the whole thing at once instead of biting at it?

Colonel CASEY. I can insert the accurate figures in the record. It will save more than the money, sir. It will save the use of the buildings, and it will afford an opportunity for the training of the men.

Mr. JOHNSON. It is your opinion, then, that it is false economy to do that building on the installment plan?

Colonel CASEY. That is my opinion; yes, sir.

Then he was asked for some figures on the estimated cost that would be saved if the entire building were let out at contract at one time. Colonel Casey says further:

ESTIMATED SAVINGS IN CONSTRUCTING BUILDING AS A WHOLE.

Colonel CASEY. He asked me to give him some information on the probable saving to the Government to construct this building as a whole the first year, rather than by increments. I have asked the estimator to give me this data. Figuring on putting up this building all under one contract, it is estimated that the contractor's overhead and other things, considered as to the desirability of getting this large contract, we ought to save about from $40,000 to $50,000 on the contract price alone. In addition to that, there will be certain incidental savings by constructing this building at one time. The cost of tentage alone is a considerable item. The report of the officer of the Inspector General's Department for one year, from April, 1921, to April, 1922, was that $200,000 was spent for tentage at this post.

Mr. ANTHONY. This tentage cost approximately $56 per man per annum?

Colonel CASEY. Per man per year; yes, sir.

Mr. ANTHONY. How long does a tent last in that climate?

Colonel CASEY. About six months, when under permanent use. There are 3,100 men in tentage, or a little over that, but taking approximately 3,000 men, and, say, approximately $60 a man per tent per year, that would make $150,000 a year for tentage. That money is gone.

There are other incidental savings in the maintenance and in the costs of the utilities. We will save something on coal and light and deliveries and that sort of thing. That is all aside from the comfort and convenience. Suppose we take the 2,110 men for which this barrack is being provided and stretch this over four years; say, we take four increments to build it—and I have deducted from this the amount that we would build each year—the savings in tentage would be $200,480. This and the estimated savings that we would get from the contractor of $50,000 would make it about $250,000, and I think a fair estimate of the savings on the utilities would be probably $5 a man, or something like $10,000; so a reasonable estimate of the savings would be $260,000.

Mr. JOHNSON. There would be that much saving on an investment of what amount? What would be the total cost of the building?

Colonel CASEY. $1,500,000, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the ground that it carries new language and new legislation and ask authority to execute contracts.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia, I suppose, will not contend that it is not legislation?

Mr. WRIGHT. No. But I contend that it will result in economy.

The CHAIRMAN. On its face that is not disclosed. The Chair will have to sustain the point of order.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HUDSPETH: Page 25, line 19, at the end of the line add the following: "Provided, That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $300,000 for the acquisition of 3,618 acres of land adjoining the Fort Bliss Military Reservation in Texas as an addition to said Fort Bliss Military Reservation for maneuvering and drill grounds and other military purposes."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that amendment.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I would like to ask the gentleman from Kansas to make his point of order, because if my amendment is not germane to this section I would like to offer it to another section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I do not think it is subject to a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would be glad to be enlightened.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I will try to illuminate the Chair to a certain extent by stating a decision by a distinguished gentleman, Mr. Towner, on an amendment similar to this.

The section, Mr. Chairman, is for the enlargement of military posts. Now, this amendment provides for the purchase of additional land adjoining a military reservation—Fort Bliss, Tex.

I want to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that in the Sixty-sixth Congress an amendment was offered by the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Bee. I can give the Chair, if he desires, the volume in which he can find that amendment. It is volume 59, part 6, of the Record, page 5739.

Mr. Towner, of Iowa, was in the Chair. I remember distinctly that the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Bee, offered an amendment for the purchase of land adjoining the Leon Springs Military Reservation. I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] made a point of order against the amendment, and after considering the question for one day the Chair held that, as it was for the purchase of land adjoining a reservation already established, it was in order, and so held.

That is what I am seeking to do. I am seeking by this amendment to provide for the purchase of additional land adjoining an established military post—Fort Bliss.

The CHAIRMAN. That is not all of the gentleman's amendment, however.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I submit it is clearly in order.

The CHAIRMAN. There is one other point the gentleman has not touched at all.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I will state to the Chair that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Bee, at the time Mr. Towner held it was in order was not to this exact section; it was offered to another section, but it did propose the purchase of additional land adjoining a military reservation.

Mr. ANTHONY. If the Chair will permit, I call attention to the fact that the amendment would not be germane to this paragraph, because the paragraph is "For the construction and enlargement at military posts of such buildings," and so forth. There is nothing in the paragraph in regard to the purchase of land.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I will state that this paragraph provides for the enlargement of military posts, and that is what I am seeking to do.

Mr. ANTHONY. But the language is "For the construction and enlargement at military posts of such buildings."

The CHAIRMAN. That is the point to which the Chair was going to direct the attention of the gentleman from Texas. It appears to the Chair that the gentleman's amendment embarks on an entirely different enterprise than that set out in the paragraph, and if that is all the illumination the gentleman from Texas can give the Chair, the Chair will be compelled to sustain the point of order.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Then I will offer the amendment at another place, and at that place I think it will be in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will cross that bridge when it is reached.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of asking the chairman a question. Fort Benning is an Artillery post, is it not?

Mr. ANTHONY. No; it is an Infantry post.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Was it not originally an Artillery post?

Mr. ANTHONY. No; it has always been an Infantry post.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Have they not sufficient barracks there at present?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. If I may be pardoned, they are living in tents.

Mr. ANTHONY. It was never contemplated at the start that Benning should be other than a camp, a field camp for Infantry maneuvers, but the tendency now is to convert it from a post of that character into a permanent post. For the most part, the buildings now there are of a temporary character.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SHOOTING GALLERIES AND RANGES.

For shelter, grounds, observation towers, shooting galleries, ranges for small-arms target practice, machine-gun practice, field, mobile, and railway artillery practice, repairs and expenses incident thereto, including flour for paste for marking targets, hire of employees, such ranges and galleries to be open as far as practicable to the National Guard and organized rifle clubs under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War, $37,400.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HUDSPETH: Page 28, line 26, at the end of the line add the following: "Provided, That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $366,000 for the acquisition of 3,613 acres of land adjoining the Fort Bliss Military Reservation in Texas, as an addition to said Fort Bliss Military Reservation, for maneuvering and drill grounds, target practice, artillery practice, and other military purposes."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, I wish the gentleman would make it, because if it is subject to a point of order, of course, I do not want to take up the time of the committee in discussing it.

Mr. ANTHONY. Then I will make the point of order that it is not germane to the paragraph.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Now, Mr. Chairman, if the Chair will hear me, here is the volume of the Record and the page on which Mr. Bee, to this very paragraph, offered an amendment for the purchase of certain land, and I will read to the Chair the language of the amendment:

Amendment offered by Mr. Bee: Page 40, line 25, at the end of line 25, add the following: "Provided, That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $88,880 for the acquisition of land as an addition to the Leon Springs Military Reservation in Texas."

It was offered to the paragraph "For shelter, grounds, shooting galleries, ranges for small-arms target practice, machine-gun practice, field artillery practice, repairs, and expenses," and so forth, and Mr. Towner, who was then in the chair, in an opinion, well considered, in which he asked that the matter go over for one day in order that he could view the parliamentary situation and study it, held that the amendment was in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The reservation of which the gentleman speaks at El Paso is one that is authorized by law?

Mr. HUDSPETH. Yes, sir; an old established post, I will state to the Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman does not happen to have the fundamental law under which that post was established?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I have looked it up in times past, Mr. Chairman. It was established, I think, way back in 1859, before the Civil War. Certainly, it was established by authority of law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Kansas wish to be heard?

Mr. ANTHONY. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that there is no purchase of land contemplated by the language of the existing paragraph. The appropriation all goes for other purposes than to buy land. I do not think there is any authority in the language of the paragraph to purchase land.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that in the Sixty-eighth Congress when the bill was under consideration there was no provision in it at that time for the purchase of land, and yet this amendment by Mr. Bee was offered to this paragraph, the identical paragraph I am offering this amendment to, and Mr. Towner held that it was in order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman claims this is an extension of a post already authorized.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Yes, sir; already authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. And that it is land necessary to the proper performance of the military function for which that post was established?

Mr. HUDSPETH. Yes, sir.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, is that under the theory that this would be a continuation of a public work?

The CHAIRMAN. As the Chair understands, that is the contention of the gentleman, that this is for an extension of a military reservation already authorized by law.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Oh, Mr. Chairman, I do not think it has ever been held that an addition of land to an existing military or any other sort of reservation is a continuation of a public work.

Mr. WINGO. That is just exactly what Mr. Towner held.

Mr. LONGWORTH. If that were true, it would then be in order to buy an unlimited amount of land anywhere, so long as it was contiguous to a military reservation. Surely that is not a continuation of a public work.

Mr. WINGO. I will say to the gentleman that that was the very ground upon which Mr. Towner overruled the point of order—that it was adjacent to the Leon Springs Reservation and was in order as a continuation of a public work. That was the ground on which Mr. Chairman Towner upheld the Leon Springs addition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arkansas correctly states what seems to the Chair, from such observation as the Chair has been able to give it, to have been the decision of Chairman Towner, but the Chair would like to look up some other decisions.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I still contend it is not germane to the paragraph because there is nothing in the paragraph that authorizes the purchase of land.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, the gentleman can meet that by inserting a new paragraph.

Mr. ANTHONY. The purpose of the language of the paragraph is not to authorize an expenditure of money for the purchase of additional land.

Mr. WINGO. I will state to the Chair that the language of the paragraph at that time, to which the amendment providing for the Leon Springs addition was offered, is identical in everything, even punctuation, except the amount was $50,000, whereas in the present bill the amount is $37,400, and Mr. Chairman Towner says:

If the purchase proposes the addition of a separate and distinct tract of land not adjoining and appurtenant to the Leon Springs Reservation, the point of order should be sustained; if the addition is adjacent to the Leon Springs Reservation it is in order as a continuation of a public work. There is no method of enlarging any public work that is situated as it must be upon land except by amendment to existing law.

I think this is identically the same question, I will say to the Chair.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINGO. Certainly.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Would the gentleman hold that it would be in every case a continuation of an existing public work if any amount of land were bought so long as it was adjacent to that particular military reservation?

Mr. WINGO. I do not quite catch the gentleman's question.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I understood the gentleman to say that under the decision of Judge Towner the mere fact that the land was contiguous to a military reservation made it necessarily a continuation of a public work.

Mr. WINGO. Yes; because the words "continuation of a public work" does not mean necessarily a constructive work. The gentleman may recall that at one time I, as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, had that question before me and rendered an opinion. This paragraph provides for shelter, ground, observation towers, shooting galleries, and so forth. Of course, the Chair will take judicial notice of the purpose for which the grounds are used, and that it is for the same purpose mentioned in the paragraph, and it does provide for shelter, grounds for shelter, and grounds for ranges, shooting galleries, and so forth. The proposition of the gentleman from Texas is to add to the reservation that is used for this purpose lands that are adjacent to it. In other words, that would be a continuation by enlargement of the plant that is already in existence under authority of law.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Does the gentleman contend that in any case a purchase of land, no matter how large or how unnecessary, provided only it is contiguous to a military reservation, would make it in order?

Mr. WINGO. I did not say that. I would not say that in any case, because it might be a case where the purchase of the land had absolutely nothing to do with the paragraph, and the question of germaneness would come in.

Mr. LONGWORTH. The gentleman did not quite understand me. Is the test of whether the amendment is in order that it provides for land contiguous to an existing military reservation?

Mr. WINGO. I think the question of adding adjacent lands to an existing Army post or plant of the Government is similar to the repairing of a building that belongs to the Government.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I want to call the Chair's attention to the fact that if all amendments were construed in the way suggested by the gentleman from Arkansas it would be in order to add at any time an indefinite amount of land to any Government post or reservation as long as it was contiguous to that particular piece of land, and the Chair, according to the gentleman, would take judicial notice of the fact that it was contiguous.

Mr. WINGO. No; the amendment provides that it is adjacent. The same distinction applies as it would if it was a separate new post-office building, which would be a different proposition, but it would be in order to provide for the repair of a building that was in course of construction.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Suppose we had a military reservation which was practically not used at all, or very little used, containing 1 square mile, would it be the contention of the gentleman that it would be in order to offer an amendment to acquire ground adjacent extending 100 square miles so long as it was adjacent?

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman means whether or not on the merits of the proposition it is wise or unwise enters into the point of order. I contend that it does not.

This amendment may be unwise, I do not know; but as long as it provides for making additions to an existing plan, it is a public work already in existence, and the words "public work" do not necessarily mean constructive work. The gentleman, I presume, is familiar with that distinction.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Decidedly.

Mr. WINGO. It does not have to be construction going on, but if it is repair or an addition to an existing plant it is a separate and distinct thing from the proposal to erect a separate and distinct building. As long as it is in the enlargement of an existing plan, whether that plant be a military reservation or a public building or a string of revetments on a river—and the question has come up on river work—then it is the continuation of a public work already in existence.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I must say that I am not familiar with any decision, unless it is the particular decision noted, that holds that the purchase of land is necessarily a continuation of a public work, provided the land is adjacent to that particular public work. It seems to me that is extending the rule beyond all reason.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that it has been held over and over again that where property is adjacent to other property—for instance, as a school property—and is in operation, the point of order does not lie. Points of order have been overruled many times where they seek to acquire property adjoining that already owned and operated. The property sought to be acquired here adjoins property that the Government already owns and is operating, and the precedents, while wrong in my judgment, thoroughly establish this right.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, if the gentlemen are finished with their arguments on this, I move that the committee do now rise, and we may have a decision of the Chair in the morning.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. TILSON, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee has had under consideration the bill H. R. 7877, the War Department appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MADDEN, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill H. R. 8233 (Rept. No. 380), making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes, which was read a first and second time and, together with the accompanying report, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered printed.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I rise to suggest that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold that for a moment until the Chair presents a request for unanimous consent?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I shall do anything that the Chair wishes.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. DENISON, for three weeks, on account of important business.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

S. 225. An act to extend the benefits of the United States employees' compensation act of September 7, 1916, to Edward N. McCarty; to the Committee on Claims.

HOUSE OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska makes the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold that for a moment until I present a request for unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock, in order to facilitate the passage of this bill?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I shall, although I do not like to. Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, if we meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow I hope the gentleman from Kansas will be liberal with us in our discussion of certain points of order that we desire to make.

Mr. ANTHONY. I always try to be liberal in that respect.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, has the gentleman consulted the minority leader in that respect?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I have not; but I am very certain that it will be agreeable to him, because I have consulted various members of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Is it expected that we shall proceed with this bill?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Oh, yes; with this bill. There is nothing before the House this week except this bill and the appropriation bill to follow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record which I made to-day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I object.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the Record as a part of my remarks a letter from the governor of the Federal Reserve Board giving some figures about the expenses of the several Federal reserve banks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I am constrained to object.

RELIEF FOR DISTRESSED AND STARVING WOMEN AND CHILDREN OF GERMANY.

Mr. THATCHER. Mr. Speaker, I have favored the joint resolution authorizing the appropriation of a sum, not exceeding $10,000,000, "or so much thereof as may be necessary," to be expended under the direction of the President "for the relief of the distressed and starving women and children of Germany." I shall state a few of the reasons why I am for the proposed relief.

First, From the best information obtainable it is clearly shown that dire distress and conditions of slow starvation among a very large number of the women and children of Germany actually exist. The testimony of conservative and well-informed witnesses is to this effect. I refer especially to the statements made by Mr. Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, and by my distinguished fellow Kentuckian, Gen. Henry T. Allen, recently in command of the American Army in the occupied German area. Surely no one can doubt the capacity of these splendid Americans to judge of the actual conditions and needs of the women and children of Germany.

Mr. Hoover's great work in administering American relief to starving Belgians and others of the war-stricken areas of Europe, eminently qualifies him as a witness; and because of the fact that General Allen is fresh from the German soil and has the advantage of several years of first-hand, intimate knowledge of the conditions in Germany, he, also, is a witness of the highest, most credible character. Both Secretary Hoover and General Allen have indicated their approval of the proposed relief.

From the testimony of Secretary Hoover given before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs when this measure of relief was being considered, the following quotations are made:

• • • There is large unemployment both in the Ruhr and in the urban areas and the cities in unoccupied Germany. The wild fluctuations in the cost of living and wages and the gradual increase of unemployment arising in the Ruhr from the passive resistance to the occupation and the shortening of raw materials to the rest of Germany have, of course, projected an enormous amount of unemployment and destitution in the working classes. That destitution has its worst results in shortening the purchasing power for those elements in the food supply that peculiarly affect children. One of the first effects of destitution is to reduce the ability to buy the more expensive foods, and thus the consumption of fats and milk of children. This reduction in foodstuffs of that character shows very plainly in German children of the poor in the manufacturing and urban areas and has become undoubtedly very acute. I think you have heard evidence of the men sent over to examine the situation on behalf of various charitable organizations that are at work upon it. But I would like to get clear that there are two quite essentially different questions. The first, the major question of imports, should solve itself in a normal fashion without calling on the American people for this large solution. That is the major problem. The secondary one is purely a question of human charity to individuals impoverished by circumstances beyond their own individual control or beyond the control of their local charities or government.

Mr. CONNALLY. Would solving the first problem solve the second?

Secretary HOOVER. Solving the first one would really in the long run solve it. In other words, if the reparations negotiations succeed, they must provide for the economic recuperation of Germany, the restoration of employment, and thereby automatically relief of destitution among unemployed. So in the long run it would settle the entire problem.

Given constructive settlement, the German Government should be able to borrow abroad; and I assume the first obligation of a government is to apply its resources to nourishment for its people, whether due to poverty or otherwise.

Mr. LANTHORN. Would it be asking too much for you to say how you feel in reference to this bill?

Secretary HOOVER. I can only feel one way about children. I have engaged a very large part of my time and energies for 10 years in remedy of famine and poverty among European children, as well as in major questions of food supply to some 23 different nations in Europe. I have felt that in the larger view the real hope of recovery in the world and rehabilitation of Europe lies in sustaining the children; that it is of primary importance that we should contribute where solution can not be found otherwise to maintain the health and welfare of their children. With a record of having engaged in the relief of somewhere upward of 20,000,000 children in these 23 different countries in Europe, I could not oppose but must support provision against the undernourishment of children anywhere. I can argue very heartily on the failures of adults and the misdoings and misdeeds of the governments that bring these situations about, but I can not apply those arguments against children. Our one hope is that the next generation will be better than this one, and there is no hope if they are to be stunted and degenerate from undernourishment. I recognize the many arguments that may be brought against charitable action either by private agencies or by our Government, but I refuse to apply these arguments to children.

I also quote the following from the testimony of General Allen, given before the same committee:

• • • My attitude toward kaiserism and the ruthlessness of those whose idea was militarism and military conquest is well known, as were my efforts to defeat such.

But, as a peace treaty has been made with Germany, there should be no desire to continue hostility toward the German people, especially the children and newly created constitutional government in that country. They are a virile people who have contributed greatly to the progress of civilization, and the world, it seems to me, needs them with their strength restored. Moreover, owing to the instability of international friendships, this gesture of humanity, such as the people of the United States are now showing, should prove a valuable asset for our Government in its future international relations. Through the opportunities which I have had and from incontrovertible direct information I am informed as to conditions now prevailing in Germany, and these conditions are of a most distressing character. Immediate relief of actual starvation is the problem to which the American Committee for Relief of German Children is devoting its energies.

It is important to realize that the present distress is not of the usual kind. It is the climax of years of development and consequently presents a much larger and more serious problem than would a temporary situation. The approach of the present crisis was indicated four years ago, when we were feeding under far less impelling conditions 11,000 undernourished children in our bridgehead and when the French were feeding German children at their soldier kitchens. Even now General De Goutie is feeding the German hungry at 122 soldier kitchens.

• • • As has been aptly said, it is always the children who are ground in the mills of international disputes. • • • We are, however, chiefly concerned about the German children. Reports pointed to so distressing a condition among them that an American committee, of which I am chairman, was formed to provide relief. That committee is cooperating with the American Friends (Quakers) Service Committee, which is charged with the purchase and distribution of all food.

• • • Among children of school age, the crisis is such that there is lack of breakfast and often of lunch for these children. There is also lack of shoes and stockings, underclothes, and winter coats, and undersized, pallid, listless, thin children seem but the natural result.

Also among these children there is a prevalence of tuberculosis not known to school physicians heretofore. Up to 20 per cent of children applying at 6 years for admission to schools have to be sent home as unfit to attend. School hours are from 8 to 1 o'clock with no afternoon session. Classes are commonly of 45 to 60 children instead of 35 to 40 as formerly. The temperature of classrooms can rarely be kept up to 60° F.

Meat once a week, no milk, bread with margarine or vegetable fat, potatoes, and turnips, meal soup, constitute the most liberal diet of an average school child.

From 1 to 24 per cent of school children in some districts are found to have open pulmonary tuberculosis. Crippling rickets, bone and joint and gland tuberculosis are common, and there is much skin infection among school children. Scurvy is less common but increasing. A form of ulceration of the eye easily leading to blindness unless quickly recognized, but speedily curable with fresh milk and suitable diet, is noticeable.

The weakness of children from hunger is a common cause of fainting, dizziness, headache, and inability to study and inability to pay attention simply because of hunger. The record of collapse cases in the schoolrooms was never before known to be so great as now.

The extent of undernourishment in the schoolroom is best expressed by the fact that practically everywhere there is a discrepancy of almost two years between the age, the height, and the weight of the children in contrast with the normal child. Photographs have shown that, and I noticed it myself before leaving Germany.

• • • During our first days on the Rhine, none of us drank cow's milk. We thought it was advisable to reserve it for the children. That was as long ago as 1919.

• • • Unemployment is intensifying the distress. The latest figures of the German ministry on labor indicate that in December there were about 3,500,000 totally unemployed persons and an equal number on part time. Several municipalities have reported that the number of destitutes is more than one-half of the population.

• • • The highest peak need will come at the end of March and early in April. Between that period and the next harvest it is predicted that over 20,000,000 people will be utterly dependent on outside charity. The most essential foodstuffs, and those which Germany herself is unable to provide, are fats, cereals, milk, and cod-liver oil, all of which are now reported almost unobtainable for children. What Germany is doing: Information obtained from various authoritative sources indicates that the German relief work is being conducted by the Federal Government, municipality governments, by banks, manufacturers, commercial organizations, by organized charity, and by private individuals. The German Government levied a special property tax, to all intents a simple capital levy, which is now being collected. The greater part has been set aside to cheapen the cost of bread and milk to the destitute, and 5,000,000 gold marks, or $1,250,000, are being used exclusively for the feeding of children. This sum is sufficient to feed 500,000 children for five months on the diminished ration. Its administration is by American Quakers, along with the food sent from the United States. The German Government supplied 47 per cent of the $12,000,000 worth of food distributed in Germany by the Quakers between the spring of 1919 and July, 1922.

• • • The Government is also caring for 1,722,000 war widows and orphans and 320,000 families of the middle and professional classes who have been reduced to poverty and 1,400,000 aged and invalid persons. Municipalities are cooperating with the Government in caring for unemployed and partial dependents and are supplying food to 100,000 or more undernourished children. Practically all German cities, in cooperation with private organizations, maintain soup kitchens for daily feeding of destitute people. They also pay for sending children to the country and contribute funds to hospitals and similar institutions. Native relief agencies are reported to be so severely handicapped by lack of funds and reduced purchasing power of money that they are able to meet only a small fraction of the need. Many hospitals and similar institutions have been forced to close their doors and others to curtail their operations because of lack of medical supplies.

As an example of assistance given by business concerns a recent cablegram received by our committee states that banks in Berlin contributed 700,000 gold marks and in Bremen 200,000 gold marks to relief work during the week of January 12. During the past summer between 300,000 and 400,000 city children were cared for in the homes of German farmers for an average of five months. Monthly shipments of 4,300 tons of foodstuffs, or enough to feed 1,250,000 people, were sent to large cities by farmers.

The situation, with respect to native relief in Germany, is that while large quantities of home commodities can be furnished, those elements vitally essential to restore undernourished German children, such as milk, fats, cereals, and cod-liver oil, are not obtainable in that country. What other countries are doing: Other countries, some of them Germany's most relentless enemies during the war, are going to the relief of the starving German children. The English people are working wholeheartedly to relieve suffering in Germany to-day. A manifesto has just been issued in England, signed by the present Prime Minister, J. Ramsay MacDonald; Mr. Asquith, Prime Minister when the war broke out and now leader of the liberal party; General Smuts, Premier of South Africa, and many other leading English citizens of all political faiths. This manifesto describes the hunger crisis among German children and urges the people of Great Britain to come to the rescue. The English Quakers have already done much in a substantial way toward relief.

Many thousands of German children have been taken to Holland and cared for in Dutch homes. The amount of this charity contributed by Holland since the armistice is estimated at $12,000,000. Switzerland and the Scandinavian countries and even impoverished Austria have recognized the distressing situation of the German children and are extending liberal aid. This is given by taking children out of Germany to rebuild their health, as well as by sending money and material relief into Germany. The American Quakers are absolutely convinced that the situation is one which calls for foreign assistance, because supplies which Germany produced in pre-war days were then only 85 per cent of her minimum food requirements.

Mr. FISH. General, do you know whether the Austrians are taking German children to their own country now?

General ALLEN. Yes; we have a report to that effect. It seems inconceivable that such conditions as exist among German children will be allowed to persist when resources for relief are abundant in the countries which are at peace with Germany. The English people, who are working for this cause, declare in their manifesto that though these starving children were our enemies, we are bidden to feed them. Now that they are our stricken neighbors, the obligation is the greater. It has been shown by investigations of our committee that 2,000,000 German children are slowly starving and that an appalling increase in disease and death will result unless outside aid is provided. The American Committee for Relief of German Children has been making strenuous efforts to raise funds throughout the United States for this humanitarian work. Many prominent people in New York, Chicago, and other large cities are devoting largely of their time and money to the cause of the starving German children and the movement is national in scope.

• • • I feel that the movement is one in which all civilization is directly and deeply concerned. It is nonpolitical and non-racial. It is not a question of Slav or Latin, Teuton, or Arab. It is a question of humanity, of civilization, of peace, and for them we make our appeal. Again, I revert to the more sordid phase of the situation, to the value that a donation by our Government to these stricken children of our conquered foe, would have as an asset of friendship in coming years. To me, gentlemen, that is one of the greatest considerations, one of the most impelling, and I can not but feel that importance must be attached to it, even though that thought is without the realm of humanity and civilization.

The testimony of other citizens of undoubted Americanism who testified before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs is to the same effect. I take it, therefore, that there can be no reasonable question raised as to the real distress and conditions of slow starvation now existent among millions of German children. In lesser degree the same situation is shown to exist as to a very large proportion of the female population of Germany.

It must be borne in mind, also, that General Allen and other prominent Americans are engaged in raising funds from individual sources in the United States for the purpose of giving relief to the women and children of Germany. The $10,000,000 proposed by the resolution under discussion will be, as must be manifest, in no wise adequate to relieve the situation, but it will prove a very substantial contribution to the relief. General Allen heads the committee so engaged.

Whatever the responsibility of the German Imperial Government or the German people themselves for these conditions may be, the fact remains that these conditions do now prevail. The question involved, therefore, seems to be one of humanity and not one of international hatred or vengeful memories. I believe that the same spirit that prompted Congress to vote $20,000,000 for relief of the Russian people should prevail in the present instance.

Second. The joint resolution providing for the suggested relief clothes the President of the United States with power, under such agencies as he may designate—to purchase in the United States and transport and distribute grain, fats, milk, and other foodstuffs for and adapted to the relief of the distressed and starving women and children of Germany—and also authorizes the appropriation of such sum as may be necessary for the purpose, not to exceed $10,000,000, to be expended under the direction of the President, with the proviso annexed that an itemized and detailed report of the expenditures and activities made and conducted through the agencies selected by the President under the joint resolution shall be submitted to Congress. Therefore the entire work proposed by the joint resolution is under the absolute control and authority of the President of the United States, and is in no sense controlled by the German Government. Manifestly the President will so direct and supervise the proposed activities as to serve the real purpose of the resolution, namely, the relief of the women and children of Germany who are in distress. As already indicated, the resolution provides in detail the kinds of food and foodstuffs and materials most needed to meet the situation. Hence there is every assurance that the money thus provided will be expended legitimately and for the purpose of relieving the graver conditions of distress involved.

Third. Much argument has been adduced in the discussion of this relief measure to show that it is unconstitutional. It appears that the constitutionality of such action by Congress has never been determined in the United States Supreme Court; but it is true that throughout all the years of our Nation's history Congress from time to time has assumed the right to enact such relief legislation, sometimes for our own people who have been stricken by flood, famine, or some other form of disaster, and sometimes for the people of foreign lands.

Thus, Congress, in the past, beginning with 1912, has voted relief funds for Venezuela, Ireland, India, Cuba, China, Martini-que, and, more recently, for Russia; and the action was not questioned. Congress certainly has some discretion under the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution to deal with such subjects; and it is fair to presume that should the case ever come to a test in our courts, they would uphold the action of Congress. I fully agree with the contention that only an extraordinary case of suffering and need can justify the voting of funds from the United States Treasury for foreign relief; but, in my judgment, the evidence before us clearly presents such a case. It can not be said, in any fairness, that the adoption of this resolution in any way condones or approves Germany's course in the great conflict; in adopting it we are doing no more than civilized nations, in one form or another, have done throughout the centuries. I do not believe that our great Nation, standing at the very apex of civilization and progress, can afford to do less.

Fourth, in recent years, and as a result of the World War, there has been maintained the most earnest advocacy for our entry into a league of nations, or a world court, or some other association or tribunal having for its purpose the promotion of international good will and peace. Conceding that there exists to-day in Germany grave and widespread suffering and distress among her women and children on account of the upheavals and tragic changes growing out of the war and its aftermath, I believe that a bona fide and most pressing claim for international charity here exists, and that our country, by extending the relief provided for in this joint resolution, will accomplish a great work in promoting such international good will. Its action in so doing would not only materially contribute to the relief of the stricken women and children of Germany, but would also serve to further emphasize the fact that our Nation, while ever willing to fight for the ideals of civilization, is always a generous foe, and knows when to assist as well as when to strike.

The amount proposed for relief in the joint resolution, compared with what was done for Russia, and with what has been done for other countries, under similar circumstances, and considered in the light of the conditions which obtain in Germany is, in my judgment, a reasonable contribution for the indicated relief. The enactment of the joint resolution into law will, I believe, fully uphold and confirm in the thought and conscience of the world at large the idea that the American people, though resolute foes in times of war, are dominated by the highest ideals of civilization and humanity in times of peace. I believe the passage of the resolution, and the expenditure of the money carried by it, will constitute an international application of the principle of the Parable of the Good Samaritan.

These are some of the reasons, Mr. Speaker, why I have favored the resolution.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I renew my point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 34 minutes p. m.), in accordance with the order heretofore made, the House adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, March 27, 1924, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

417. Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting report of the case of Dewitt & Shobe, Glasgow, Mo., under section 10 of act of March 2, 1919 (40 Stat. 1920), as to river and harbor contracts that became inequitable and unjust, was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. NELSON of Wisconsin: Committee on Elections No. 2. A report on the contested election case of Don H. Clark v. R. Lee Moore (Rept. No. 367). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. PARKS of Arkansas: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. S. 2656. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River near and above the city of New Orleans, La.; without amendment (Rept. No. 368). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. WINSLOW: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 6425. A bill to prohibit the importation and the interstate shipment of certain articles contaminated with anthrax; without amendment (Rept. No. 369). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 2665. A bill to authorize the city of Chicago to construct a temporary pontoon bridge across the Calumet River in the vicinity of One hundred and thirty-fourth Street, in the county of Cook, State of Illinois; with amendments (Rept. No. 370). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 7063. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the State of Illinois and the State of Iowa, or either of them, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River, connecting the county of Carroll, Ill., and the county of Jackson, Iowa; with an amendment (Rept. No. 371). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 7104. A bill to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Fox River in St. Charles Township, Kane County, Ill.; with amendments (Rept. No. 372). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ZIELMAN: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 114. A bill to vacate certain streets and alleys within the area known as the Walter Reed General Hospital, District of Columbia, and to authorize the extension and widening of Fourteenth Street from Montague Street to its southern terminus south of Dahlla Street, Nicholson Street from Thirteenth Street to Sixteenth Street, Colorado Avenue from Montague Street to Thirteenth Street, Concord Avenue from Sixteenth Street to its western terminus west of Eighth Street west, Thirteenth Street from Nicholson Street to Piney Branch Road, and Piney Branch Road from Thirteenth Street to Butternut Street, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 373). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BURTNESS: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. S. 2332. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Hughes County and Stanley County, S. Dak.; without amendment (Rept. No. 374). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. DENISON: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 8209. A bill to create the inland waterways corporation for the purpose of carrying out the mandate and purpose of Congress as expressed in sections 201 and 500 of the transportation act, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 375). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MADDEN: Committee on Appropriations. H. R. 8233. A bill making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 380). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. YATES: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 714. A bill to amend section 101 of the Judicial Code; without amendment (Rept. No. 377). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HUDDLESTON: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 8180. A bill to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act authorizing the counties of Alken, S. C., and Richmond, Ga., to construct a bridge across the Savannah River at or near Augusta, Ga.," approved August 7, 1919; without amendment (Rept. No. 378). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7399. A bill to amend section 4 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution," approved June 9, 1906; without amendment (Rept. No. 379). Referred to the House Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 6207) authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to transfer to the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice all that portion of the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation which lies in the State of Missouri, and for other purposes; Committee on Military Affairs reported for reference (Rept. No. 376), and said bill was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. WATKINS: A bill (H. R. 8227) to amend the act of August 9, 1921, establishing the United States Veterans' Bureau, and to establish offices of the bureau in the District of Columbia and each State of the Union to handle such business as is committed to the bureau; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. CRAMTON: A bill (H. R. 8228) to authorize the deferring of payments of reclamation charges; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

By Mr. KELLER: A bill (H. R. 8229) granting the consent of Congress to the city of St. Paul, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 8230) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon in the city of Kenosha, State of Wisconsin; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. ASWELL: A bill (H. R. 8231) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to issue certain reports relating to cotton," and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CRISP: A bill (H. R. 8232) to prohibit the collection of a surcharge for the transportation of persons or baggage in connection with the payment for parlor or sleeping car accommodations; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MADDEN: A bill (H. R. 8233) making appropriations for the Executive Office and sundry independent executive bureaus, boards, commissions, and offices, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes; to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

By Mr. GARNER of Texas: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 228) amending public resolution No. 70, approved March 2, 1913, as amended July 26, 1919, authorizing the Secretary of War to loan tents for use at encampments held by certain organizations; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, joint resolution (H. J. Res. 229) authorizing the Secretary of War to loan certain tents, cots, chairs, etc., to the president of the Alamo Council of the Boy Scouts of America for use at the annual camp of such organization; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 230) directing a census to be taken of bales of cotton now held at various places; to the Committee on the Census.

By Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania: Resolution (H. Res. 235) for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 184, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. TINKHAM: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, urging Congress to appropriate funds to carry out certain recommendations of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army made in furtherance of the national defense act of 1920; to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BURTNESS: A bill (H. R. 8234) for the relief of Fayette L. Froemke; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. EDMONDS: A bill (H. R. 8235) for the relief of Aktieselskabet Marie di Giorgio, a Norwegian corporation of Christiania, Norway; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8236) for the relief of the Government of Canada; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8237) for the relief of Bruusgaard Klostervuds Dampskibs Aktieselskab, a Norwegian corporation, of Drammen, Norway; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. EVANS of Montana: A bill (H. R. 8238) for the relief of Minor Berry; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FISH: A bill (H. R. 8239) granting an increase of pension to Emma L. Jesser; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GERAN: A bill (H. R. 8240) granting a pension to John Mundy; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HAUGEN: A bill (H. R. 8241) for the relief of Mary A. Nicklaus; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. HILL of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 8242) for the relief of Samuel T. Griffith, formerly a first lieutenant, United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McKENZIE: A bill (H. R. 8243) granting a pension to Christofa Preston; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAJOR of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 8244) granting a pension to Mollie F. Shockley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MERRITT: A bill (H. R. 8245) granting an increase of pension to Josephine M. Downes; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8246) granting an increase of pension to Catherine Lorient; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MILLS: A bill (H. R. 8247) for the relief of the estate of Carl Anderson; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. OLIVER of New York: A bill (H. R. 8248) for the relief of S. Silberstein & Son (Inc.); to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8249) for the relief of S. Silberstein & Son (Inc.); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PRALL: A bill (H. R. 8250) for the relief of Regine Porges Zimmerman; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RAINEY: A bill (H. R. 8251), granting a pension to Newton Ernest McElvahn; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ROBSON of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 8252) to correct the military record of James Brummett; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8253) granting a pension to Leander Cook; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8254) granting a pension to Litha I. Smith; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8255) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Steeley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHREVE: A bill (H. R. 8256) granting a pension to George Robinson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SNELL: A bill (H. R. 8257) granting an increase of pension to Grace F. Briggs; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TILSON: A bill (H. R. 8258) for the relief of Capt. Frank Geere; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. WAINWRIGHT: A bill (H. R. 8259) to authorize the President to reconsider the case of Frederic K. Long and to reappoint him a captain in the Regular Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WATKINS: A bill (H. R. 8260) granting a pension to Carrie F. Pierce; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEFALD: A bill (H. R. 8261) granting a pension to Eliza Prody; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2034. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of citizens of Boston, Mass., protesting against the imprisonment of Eamon de Valera; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2035. By Mr. BARBOUR: Petition of Fresno Lodge, No. 723, I. O. B. B., of Fresno, Calif., protesting against the passage of the Johnson immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2036. By Mr. CAREW: Petition of the Kossuth Ferencz Hungarian, Sick and Benevolent Association, and other societies of New York City, N. Y., opposing the Johnson immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2037. By Mr. CRAMTON: Petition of Athena, the Woman's Club of Algonac, Mich., urging favorable action on the child labor amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2038. By Mr. LEAVITT: Petition of the Masonic Lodge at Stanford, Mont., Palestine Lodge, No. 88, urging the passage of the Johnson immigration bill without amendment by June 1, 1924; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2039. By Mr. MacGREGOR: Petition of 20 Italian organizations in the city of Buffalo, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the Johnson immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2040. By Mr. RAINEY: Petition of Peoria and Tazewell County (Ill.) Wild Life Association, opposing discharge of Chicago sewage into Illinois River; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

2041. By Mr. TINKHAM: Petition of members of Boston City Club favoring release of Eamon de Valera; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2042. By Mr. VARE: Petition of Philadelphia Board of Trade, urging approval of increased appropriation to the Customs Service, included in the Treasury-Post Office appropriation bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, March 27, 1924.

The Chaplain, Rev. J. J. Muir, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father, we bless Thee for every evidence of Thy remembrance of our needs, for Thy care over us. So enable us to understand our dependence upon Thee that whatever we undertake we shall undertake for Thy glory as well as for the good of our loved country. Be very near to us in every deliberation. Guide our thoughts, influence our conduct, and so help us always to walk in paths of Thine own direction, to the glory of Thy great name. We ask in Jesus' name. Amen.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of the legislative day of Monday, March 24, 1924, when, on request of Mr. CURTIS and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. HALL-UN, one of its clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 655) to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; requested a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. ZIEHLMAN, Mr. LAMPERT, and Mr. BLANTON were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (S. 214) for the relief of The Old National Bank of Martinsburg, Martinsburg, W. Va., and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

CONDITION OF RAILROAD EQUIPMENT.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, transmitting, in compliance with the provisions of Senate Resolution 438, agreed to February 26, 1923, a report for the month of February, 1924, showing the condition of railroad equipment and related information, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

FRED A. GOSNELL AND ESTATE OF RICHARD C. LAPPIN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, transmitting draft of a proposed bill for the relief of Fred A. Gosnell, former disbursing clerk, Bureau of the Census, and the estate of Richard C. Lappin, former supervisor of the fourteenth decennial census for the Territory of Hawaii, and special disbursing agent, in the settlement of certain accounts, which the department recommends be enacted into law, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Claims.

DISPOSITION OF USELESS PAPERS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Acting Secretary of Labor, transmitting, pursuant to law, a schedule of miscellaneous papers of the Bureaus of Labor Statistics, Immigration, and Naturalization not needed in the conduct of business and having no permanent value or historic interest, and asking for action looking to their disposition, which was referred to a Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Useless Papers in the Executive Departments. The President pro tempore appointed Mr. BORAH and Mr. JONES of New Mexico members of the committee on the part of the Senate, and ordered that the Secretary notify the House of Representatives thereof.

DEFICIENCY BILL—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. WARREN. I submit a conference report on the first deficiency appropriation bill, H. R. 7449, and move that the Senate agree to the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read before the request for present consideration is submitted to the Senate.

The report was read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7449) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 14, 15, 18, 23, 30, and 37.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 12, 13, 16, 17, 19, 20, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 30, 31, 32, 34, 35, 38, 39, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, and 52; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "For payment of expenses incurred by the Sergeant at Arms on account of attendance of the committee of Senators at the funeral of the late President Warren G. Harding, $5,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"PUBLIC BUILDINGS COMMISSION.

"For expenses of the Public Buildings Commission, $10,000, to remain available until expended."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 21: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of the matter inserted by said amendment after the sum "$70,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 40: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 40, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Provided, That the headstones furnished hereunder shall be of such design and material as may be agreed upon by the Secretary of War and the American Battle Monuments Commission"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have not agreed on amendments numbered 22, 29, and 33.

F. E. WARREN,
CHARLES CURTIS,
LEE S. OVERMAN,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

MARTIN B. MADDEN,
D. R. ANTHONY,
JOSEPH W. BYRNS,

Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not object to the present consideration of the report, but I suggest to the Senator in charge of it that the reading of the report by the clerk does not give the Senate any comprehension of what the agreement is. If a statement accompanies the report that statement should be read. If not, I think the Senator from Wyoming himself should explain the principal points of difference and the agreements that have been reached. Is it a complete agreement?

Mr. WARREN. It is a complete agreement as to all but two items that have to go back to the House. They are unimportant items, but they rather trench upon the House rules and therefore have to be acted on by the House. There is an agreement so far as the conferees are concerned, and that is why I ask to have the report agreed to, so that the papers may go back to the House for action there.

Mr. ROBINSON. I make no objection to the present consideration of the report.

Mr. WARREN. I will say to the Senator that there were very few items put in upon the Senate side which were not agreed to. It is a rather remarkable report in that respect, in that the House has agreed to nearly all of the Senate amendments. We were compelled to yield one matter of legislation which was of considerable size so far as words are concerned, but which I take it will be cared for otherwise in a bill which the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] has in charge.

Mr. ROBINSON. What was that matter?

Mr. WARREN. It related to the Coast Guard.

Mr. ROBINSON. That passed yesterday in a separate bill, did it not?

Mr. WARREN. Yes; and so it went out of the deficiency appropriation bill. If there are any items that any Senator is interested in I could immediately inform him about them, but there are numerous small items on the part of the Senate for current expenses, gratuities, and so forth, which the House always leaves out, expecting us to put them in the deficiency bill when it reaches the Senate.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have no further inquiry to submit.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report? The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

DISTRICT GASOLINE TAX.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 655) to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the conference asked by the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. BALL, Mr. JONES of Washington, and Mr. KING conferees on the part of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate resolutions of Richard J. Harden Camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, Department of the District of Columbia, favoring the passage of the so-called Bursum bill (S. 5) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil and Mexican Wars and to certain widows, former widows, minor children, and helpless children of said soldiers and sailors, and to widows of the War of 1812, and to certain Indian war veterans and widows, which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate a statement in the nature of a memorial of sundry business and professional men of Boston, Mass., and vicinity, remonstrating against the administration of affairs in Ireland and praying for the immediate release of Eamon de Valera and other political prisoners under confinement, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from George M. Napier, attorney general of Georgia and secretary of the conference of attorneys general, transmitting a statement of the executive committee of the conference of attorneys general on gasoline prices and other petroleum products, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Manufactures.

He also laid before the Senate a statement signed by Mary Hankeo Atcherley, president of the Kaakaukukui Improvement Club, of the Hawaiian village, Kaakaukukui Beach, Hawaii, relative to the occupancy of certain lands in the Territory and an amendment to the Hawaiian commission act of 1920, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions.

Mr. KEYES presented a petition of sundry citizens of Belknap County, N. H., praying for the passage of legislation to repeal or reduce the so-called nuisance and war taxes, especially the tax on industrial alcohol, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CAPPER presented a telegram in the nature of a petition from a committee representing six parent-teacher associations, of Eldorado, Kans., praying for the passage of legislation creating a Federal department of education, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented memorials of sundry members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Glaseo; of members and friends of the Christian Church of Bluff City; of the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Bluff City; of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Downs; and of sundry citizens of Great Bend, all in the State of Kansas, remonstrating against making any amendment to the Federal prohibition act so as to legalize 2.75 per cent beer, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a paper and a telegram in the nature of petitions from sundry citizens of Stafford County and Lawrence, Kans., praying for the passage of legislation restricting immigration with quotas based on the census of 1890, which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. CURTIS presented a resolution adopted by the Farmers' Equity Union and the directors of the Equity Union Grain Co., a nonpool farmers' cooperative marketing association, of Kansas, protesting against the passage of the so-called McNary-Haugen bill, providing aid to agriculture, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a resolution of the Hiawatha Chamber of Commerce, of Hiawatha, Kans., favoring the passage of legislation restricting immigration with quotas based on the census of 1890, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented petitions, numerous signed, of sundry citizens of Havensville and Somerset, in the State of Kansas, praying for the passage of legislation restricting immigration with quotas based on the census of 1890, which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Washington, D. C., and vicinity, praying an amendment to the Constitution granting equal rights to women, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

INTEREST OF ARIZONA IN THE COLORADO RIVER.

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President, I present a telegram from Governor Hunt, of Arizona, relative to the so-called Colorado River compact, which I ask may be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

[Western Union telegram.]

PHOENIX, ARIZ., March 20, 1924.

Senator RALPH H. CAMERON,

Washington, D. C.:

In hearings before the Committee on Arid Lands in the House of Representatives, California lobbyists and representatives as well as power-trust officials seem to consider Arizona's interests in the Colorado River as unworthy of consideration. Secretary of the Interior Hubert Work, of Colorado, in his report to Congress urging nationalization of the Colorado River utilizes his position to further the aims of Colorado. The people of Arizona are patient, long-suffering, and tolerant, but are becoming weary of the Imperialistic designs of some neighboring States. This State comprises 42 per cent of the drainage area of the Colorado River basin. Eighty per cent of all the power developed in the Colorado River below Lee Ferry must be wholly developed within Arizona and the balance between Arizona and Nevada. California contributes only 6,000 square miles to the drainage area of the Colorado River and undertakes to claim majority portion of its benefits. Sixty-one per cent of the total area of this State is held by the Federal Government either in forest reserves, Indian reservations, or national parks. Proposal of Secretary Work, of Colorado, and California officials to nationalize the river as proposed in the Swing-Johnson bill is insulting. Arizona will not ratify the Colorado River compact as it is a proposal wholly unfair and unjust to this State. The people of Arizona who hope to see the River developed and who are opposed to the compact have been opposing it in a manner to create as little bitterness as possible. We are just beginning to fight the compact and desire as little friction between the States as is possible when the compact is dead. Attitude of Colorado, Secretary of the Department of Interior, and California representatives will not be helpful to future negotiations.

GEO. W. P. HUNT, Governor.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. HARRELD, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 368) for the relief of Nelly McCanna, residuary legatee and devisee under last will and testament of P. F. McCanna, deceased (Rep. No. 307);

A bill (H. R. 5799) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and enter judgment in any claims which the Seminole Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 309); and

A bill (H. R. 6483) amending an act entitled "An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes," approved June 28, 1906, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto (Rept. No. 310).

Mr. HARRELD also, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1707) appropriating money to purchase lands for the Challam Tribe of Indians in the State of Washington, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 308) thereon.

Mr. SMITH, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2930) reaffirming the use of the ether for radio communication or otherwise to be the inalienable possession of the people of the United States and their Government, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 311) thereon.

Mr. COLT. I report back favorably with amendments from the Committee on Immigration the bill (S. 2576) to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. COLT. I desire to give notice that at the earliest practicable time I shall ask for the consideration of the bill.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED.

Mr. WATSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on yesterday there was presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 2113) authorizing the Director of the Census to collect and publish statistics of cotton.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota:

A bill (S. 2944) granting a pension to Isabel J. Rogers; and

A bill (S. 2945) granting an increase of pension to Mary Griffith; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CURTIS:

A bill (S. 2946) granting a pension to John W. Brown (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 2947) granting a pension to Sallie Moseley (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HALE:

A bill (S. 2948) granting a pension to Carolyn P. Sherman (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WADSWORTH:

A bill (S. 2949) authorizing the Secretary of War to sell a portion of the Carlisle Barracks Reservation; and

A bill (S. 2950) to define and determine the character of the service represented by the honorable discharge issued to John McNickle of Company L, Seventh Regiment New York Volunteer Heavy Artillery, under date of September 27, 1865; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DILL:

A bill (S. 2951) to amend section 15a of the interstate commerce act, as amended; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. LODGE:

A bill (S. 2952) for the relief of Fannie C. Marden; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DILL:

A bill (S. 2953) to provide for handling and rate of pay for storage of closed-pouch mail on express and baggage cars; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

PROPOSED INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Mr. BORAH. I submit a resolution, which I ask to have read and lie on the table.

The resolution (S. Res. 196) was read and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

Resolved, That the President is authorized and requested to invite such governments as he may deem necessary or expedient to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of considering the economic problems now obtaining throughout the world with a view of arriving at such adjustments or settlements as may seem essential to the restoration of trade and to the establishment of sound financial and business conditions, and also to consider the subject of further limitation of armaments with a view of reaching an understanding or agreement upon said matter, both by land and by sea, and particularly relative to limiting the construction of all types and sizes of subsurface and surface craft of 10,000 tons standard displacement, or less, and of aircraft.

ESTABLISHMENT OF RADIO IN CAPITOL BUILDING.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, I submit a resolution and request unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. It merely asks for a report for information.

The resolution (S. Res. 197) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy be, and are hereby, directed to cooperate in the appointment of a joint commission of radio experts from the War and Navy Departments to investigate and report to the Senate upon the following problems, to wit:

1. The equipment of the Senate Chamber with electrical transmission and receiving apparatus such that, without defacing the Senate Chamber, each Senator at his desk may individually and clearly hear, without the use of a hand receiver, the proceedings of the Senate at all times in whatever tone of voice conducted.

2. The additional equipment necessary for the broadcasting by radio of the proceedings of the Senate and the House of Representatives throughout the country, utilizing the radio stations of the War and Navy Departments.

The report of said commission to include the estimated cost of installation, maintenance, and operation of the proposed systems suggested in paragraphs 1 and 2 hereof; be it further

Resolved, That such commission also be requested to recommend a limited area of the country that for experimental purposes be initially afforded such broadcasting of the proceedings of Congress to the end of determining the advisability of extending such service to cover the entire country; such report to include the cost of such experimental installation together with the expense of maintenance and operation thereof.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will not the Senator amend his resolution by providing that a radio outfit shall also be placed in the Attorney General's office as well as the White House, so that we can hear what is going on down there?

Mr. CURTIS. I think the resolution had better go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the resolution will go over under the rule.

Mr. KING. Before it goes over, may I inquire of the Senator from Nebraska if it would not be a good idea to amend his resolution—and I suggest it in perfect good faith—to have the commission inquire into the statement which is constantly made that the Radio Corporation of America is a trust and a monopoly and is doing everything possible to destroy any competition in the great field of radio activity, which is so important? I make that suggestion. Of course the resolution goes over for a day, but if the Senator thinks the suggestion a pertinent one I should be glad if he would amend his resolution in that respect.

Mr. HOWELL. I think that the inquiry suggested is pertinent at this time. However, I would suggest that it be provided for in the form of a separate resolution. The purpose of the resolution which I have submitted is to give information that the Senate may be able to determine upon the cost and feasibility of broadcasting the proceedings of Congress. It is something that will be done in the very near future, and it is something that ought to be considered at as early a date as possible. Therefore it is my notion that a question so important in itself should be treated separately, and that the inquiry suggested by the Senator from Utah should be provided for in a separate resolution.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I think this is a matter which concerns the Capitol Building itself. The establishment of radio equipment throughout this Chamber would involve alterations in the building. I believe the resolution ought to be referred to the Committee on Rules, which has charge and care of the building. I do not wish to prevent the resolution from lying on the table for the present, if the Senator so desires, but I enter a motion to refer it to the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, we sit here twice too long now. If we put in a radio equipment, I fear we never would stop talking, and we would probably be in continuous session.

Mr. HOWELL. Mr. President, this resolution merely asks for information. It does not commit the Senate to any particular course of action. Without any expense whatever, the information requested can be afforded the Senate. Then it will be for Congress to determine whether or not it wishes to take any steps in this direction. It seems to me that the greater amount of information we can have along these lines the greater the advantage will be, not merely to Congress but to the public. Therefore I suggest that the resolution should not be referred to a committee but should lie on the table and be taken up in due time.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I do not know but that it would be a good plan to arrange so that the people of the country could hear what is going on here. I think it would cause a good many Senators who now do not stay here to remain in their seats in order to hear questions discussed. Just one speech over the radio, calling Senators by name and asking why they failed to attend the sessions of the Senate would bring them speedily into their places in this Chamber.

I am going to give consideration to this matter. It might be a very good plan. We do not have enough CONGRESSIONAL RECORDS to furnish sufficient information as to exactly what happens here. It is impossible for the newspapers to carry in full all that is said here each day.

If we had this proposed radio arrangement by which the people all over the country could "listen in," it would enable us to get action here. The people would hear discussions, would form their own conclusions, and sit down and write or wire their Members just how they had been impressed by the discussion here. As a means of inducing more Republicans to attend the sessions of the Senate, I think it would be a good thing to be able to let the people back home know day by day just what Senators are here attending to their duties.

SELINA E. MARYMAN.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 198), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay out of the contingent fund of the Senate to Selina E. Maryman, widow of Samuel A. Maryman, late a conductor of elevator in the Capitol, Senate wing, one year's compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

ASSESSED VALUATION OF RAILROADS.

Mr. DILL. I submit a resolution, which I ask may be read and lie over.

The resolution (S. Res. 199) was read and ordered to lie over under the rule, as follows:

Resolved, That the Interstate Commerce Commission be, and hereby is, directed to ascertain from the proper authorities of each State of the United States the assessed valuation, on a 100 per cent basis of valuation, as used for taxation purposes, of all of the property of each of the railroads of the United States acting as common carriers, whether used for the purposes of common carriers or not, which are under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and report the said valuations used for taxation purposes to the Senate of the United States: Provided, That said report shall show, first, the total valuations for taxation purposes on a 100 per cent basis of the property of each railroad company or system, separate and apart from other railroads, and, second, the total of such valuations of all railroad properties by States, and, third, the total of such valuations for the whole United States.

THE CALENDAR.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed. Mr. CURTIS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the calendar under Rule VIII, only unobjected bills to be considered.

Mr. SMITH. May I ask the Senator from Kansas where he proposes that the consideration of the calendar shall begin?

Mr. CURTIS. I think we might as well begin at the beginning of the calendar. There were only about four or five bills which had been called at its last consideration.

Mr. SMITH. The reason I asked the question was there had been a bill reported from the Committee on Interstate Commerce looking toward providing for an amendment of the law in reference to the settlement of claims. The bill has been unanimously reported, and covers a matter which ought to be expedited, because a great many claimants have been debarred from establishing their claims or going through the necessary processes for establishing them.

Mr. CURTIS. I suggest that we go on with the calendar until about 5 or 10 minutes to 2 o'clock, and then the Senator may ask unanimous consent to call up his bill for consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The consideration of the calendar is the regular order.

Mr. CURTIS. I have asked that only unobjected bills be considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the calendar from the beginning and that unobjected cases only be considered. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

ESTATE OF ELY N. SONNENSTRAHL.

The bill (S. 1330) for the relief of the estate of Ely N. Sonnenstrahl, deceased, was announced as first in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], who, I see, introduced this bill, give an explanation of it.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this bill was passed through the Senate last year, but did not get through the other House. The Committee on Claims has examined it very carefully and has recommended its passage. I hope that the recommendation of the committee may be accepted and that the bill may be passed.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of Nina L. Sonnenstrahl, as executrix of the estate of Ely N. Sonnenstrahl, deceased, late of Brooklyn, N. Y., for such further sum as the said estate may be entitled to recover as added to the amount the said Ely N. Sonnenstrahl has already received for certain beans commandeered by the Navy Department at San Francisco, Calif., on or about February, 1918, may be sued for and submitted to the United States District Court in and for the Eastern District of New York, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for such amount and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of said estate of Ely N. Sonnenstrahl, deceased, upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases under section 10 of the Lever Act, and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That suit shall be brought and commenced within four months from the date of the passage of this act.

Mr. KING. Let the report on the bill be read, so that we may be advised as to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the report.

A. W. MELLON, SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, before the report is read, I have a short statement which I wish to make at this time.

Mr. McKELLAR proceeded to address the Senate and spoke for five minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to finish the statement which I wish to make. It is very short.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I object.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will continue the statement on a subsequent bill.

[Mr. McKELLAR's speech appears entire on page 5058.]

ESTATE OF ELY N. SONNENSTRAHL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1330) for the relief of the estate of Ely N. Sonnenstrahl.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the explanation of the bill now before the Senate is that Sonnenstrahl owned some beans, which he offered to the Navy Department at cost during the war. The Navy Department refused to take them, but later commandeered the beans. When the check in payment was sent Sonnenstrahl refused to take the check and protested that the amount was not right. There was, however, a telegram sent to him by the commandant at Mare Island advising him to accept the check and then to submit his protest to the Paymaster General of the Navy. Sonnenstrahl did that. Then it developed that under the Lever Act he was not entitled to enter a protest, and so his claim was turned down, although at one time the Navy Department did offer him over $400 in addition to the amount paid him. The purpose of the bill is to permit the estate of Sonnenstrahl to begin suit to determine whether or not it has a proper and just claim.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I inquire what is the order of business under which we are proceeding?

Mr. COPELAND. We are proceeding with the consideration of the calendar.

Mr. WARREN. Is the Senator from New York speaking to the first bill on the calendar?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes, sir; I am speaking to the first bill on the calendar.

Mr. WARREN. Very well.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask that the bill may be passed, in order that the estate of Sonnenstrahl may institute suit to ascertain whether it has a just claim against the Government.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I invite the attention of the Senator from New York—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah desire to have the report read at the desk?

Mr. COPELAND. It is a long report, Mr. President, and I thought perhaps the brief explanation I have given might be sufficient.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator from New York to the fourth page of the report and to the language which is found in a letter from Mr. Roosevelt, Acting Secretary of the Navy, to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. SPENCER], chairman of the Committee on Claims:

The department is of opinion that Mr. Sonnenstrahl has received just compensation for the beans commandeered, and as he has accepted payment of 100 per cent of the amount allowed there is some doubt that he has any further remedy at law. Inasmuch as he made protest as to the price allowed before payment and in view of the facts set out in the supply officer's report above, it is recommended that the Court of Claims be authorized to hear and determine this claim as though only 75 per cent had been paid.

I call attention to the fact that Sonnenstrahl was paid what the Secretary of the Navy said was a fair compensation, accepted it, and gave a receipt in full. It would seem that ought to conclude him in morals as well as in law.

Mr. COPELAND. But the statement made by the Senator is not correct. If the Senator will observe page 2 of the report he will find there a telegram which was sent by the commandant at Mare Island, Calif., to Sonnenstrahl, saying:

In accordance with instructions from the Paymaster General, Navy Department, am settling for commandeered beans at cost price plus reasonable profit, but in no case paying more than 7½ cents per pound for Kintoki and 11½ cents per pound for Kotenashi. Advise you accept check. Submit your protest to the Paymaster General, Navy Department, Washington.

The officer should have directed Sonnenstrahl to return the check in order that he might do this, but he advised him to accept it, and therefore Sonnenstrahl in good faith did accept the check, with the understanding that he could make protest, which he did, and then later the Navy Department recognized the justice of his protest and offered him $472.66, which Sonnenstrahl said was inadequate, claiming that the proper amount was about $4,000. The purpose of the bill is a perfectly just one, being to permit the estate of Sonnenstrahl to institute suit to determine whether or not it has claim against the Government.

Mr. KING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. KING. I have the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No; the Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. COPELAND. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have made no statement. I merely read what the Acting Secretary of the Navy said, and I read it again:

The department is of the opinion that Mr. Sonnenstrahl has received just compensation for the beans commandeered, and as he has accepted payment of 100 per cent of the amount allowed there is some doubt that he has any further remedy at law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from New York has expired.

Mr. KING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair now recognizes the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I have no knowledge other than that which is contained in the report.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. Why did not the Senator read the rest of the letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy?

Mr. KING. I read it all.

Mr. COPELAND. In which he says that—

Inasmuch as he [Mr. Sonnenstrahl] made protest as to the price allowed before payment and in view of the facts set out in the supply officer's report above, it is recommended that the Court of Claims be authorized to hear and determine this claim as though only 75 per cent had been paid.

Mr. KING. I read that when I called attention to the letter, and the Senator has merely put into the Record a repetition of what I formerly read. The point I was emphasizing was, though, that the Acting Secretary of the Navy had stated that Mr. Sonnenstrahl had received just compensation and had accepted 100 per cent.

I shall not object to the consideration of the bill, but it does seem as though the statement from the Acting Secretary of the Navy would justify the Senate in refusing to pass the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OFFICERS IN CHARGE OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (S. 1918) relative to officers in charge of public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. McKELLAR obtained the floor.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President—

Mr. McKELLAR. When I was interrupted by the end of the five minutes—

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I want to know what we are doing. Are we working on the calendar?

Mr. KING. We are; and the Senator's bill has been taken up.

Mr. WARREN. The bill that is before us—

Mr. McKELLAR. I have the floor, and I have not yielded to the Senator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is before the Senate, and the Senator from Tennessee has the floor.

Mr. WARREN. Very well.

A. W. MELLON, SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Mr. McKELLAR resumed and concluded his speech, which is, entire, as follows:

Mr. President, on yesterday I submitted to the Senate section 243 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which prohibits any man engaged in trade or commerce or in the shipping business from holding the office of Secretary of the Treasury, and pointed out that Mr. Mellon had admitted he was engaged in both trade and commerce and in the shipping business, and that the Treasury Department had had large dealings with several of these companies.

I have learned since that this is not the first time this statute has been called to Secretary Mellon's attention. It was done some two years ago on the floor of the Senate, and then disregarded by the Secretary.

I wish now to call the attention of the Senate to how differently President Grant and Alexander T. Stewart, of New York, acted in a similar case. Mr. Blaine, in his Twenty Years of Congress, volume 2, page 425, tells us that Alexander Stewart, the well-known merchant of New York, was named for Secretary of the Treasury in 1869. Says Mr. Blaine:

The President was very anxious to have Mr. Stewart in his Cabinet, and was therefore surprised and chagrined to find, after he had been nominated, that under the law he was not eligible to the office of Secretary of the Treasury. In the act establishing the Treasury Department, passed at the first session of the First Congress under the Federal Government, it was provided that no person could be appointed Secretary, Assistant Secretary, comptroller, auditor, treasurer, or register who was "directly or indirectly concerned or interested in carrying on the business of trade or commerce." It was further provided that any person violating this act should be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, fined $3,000, removed from office, and forever thereafter rendered incapable of holding any office under the Government of the United States. General Grant frankly informed the Senate that he had ascertained Mr. Stewart's disability after the nomination, and suggested that "in view of these provisions of law, and the fact that Mr. Stewart had been unanimously confirmed by the Senate, he be exempted, by joint resolution of the two Houses of Congress, from the operation of the law."

As soon as the President's message was read, Mr. Sherman, of Ohio, asked "unanimous consent to introduce a bill repealing so much of the act of September 2, 1789, as prohibits the Secretary of the Treasury from being concerned in carrying on the business of trade or commerce, and providing instead that in no case shall he act on any matter, claim, or account in which he is personally interested." Mr. Sumner objected to the introduction of the bill, suggesting that it ought to be "most profoundly considered before it is acted upon by the Senate." These proceedings were on Saturday, March 6. On Monday Mr. Sherman did not call up the bill, it having been ascertained in private conferences that the Senate was unwilling to pass it. On Tuesday General Grant withdrew the request, Mr. Stewart resigned, and Hon. George S. Boutwell was nominated and confirmed as Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. President, the very purpose of the act of 1789 was to prevent just such a situation as now exists in regard to the office of Secretary of the Treasury. The fathers of our Republic were very wise. They knew that it was better to avoid the appearance of evil, and the wisdom of this statute has never been questioned. When it came up in 1869, during Mr. Grant's administration, when he was one of the most popular men that ever lived in this country, even he, with all of his popularity, could not get the Senate of the United States to change that statute by a resolution which he suggested. It is almost incomprehensible that this Senate could have any different view about it, and it is just as incomprehensible how a Secretary of the Treasury would be willing to continue to serve in violation of this statute. It seems to me that the President of the United States should take action in reference to the situation as it now exists. He should follow the very wise and legal action of President Grant. The present Secretary should follow the very excellent example of Mr. Stewart.

When the matter was brought up before in the Senate, it was not known to what extent the personal business of the Secretary came in contact with the actions of the Treasury Department. Recent developments have shown that they come in very close and intimate contact with the Treasury Department, and that the Treasury Department has paid large sums in refunds to a company in which the Secretary is a large stockholder, and has made a tremendous abatement to another company in which the Secretary is a stockholder, the last company being a shipping company, brought particularly under the ban of the statute. Under these circumstances it would seem that the Secretary of the Treasury should resign at once and not longer violate the plain terms of the statute.

Mr. President, in this connection I desire to quote another statute of the United States referring to the Secretary of the Treasury, among others.

Section 3168 of the Revised Statutes of the United States provides as follows:

Any internal-revenue officer—

And surely the Secretary is one of the internal-revenue officers—he is the principal internal-revenue officer—who is or shall become interested, directly or indirectly, in the manufacture of tobacco, snuff, or cigars, or in the production, rectification, or redistillation of distilled spirits, shall be dismissed from office; and every officer who becomes so interested in any such manufacture or production, rectification, or redistillation, or in the production of fermented liquors, shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $5,000.

It appears that Secretary Mellon is interested in a distillery known in the records as the Overholt Distilling Co. That this company has had dealings with the Treasury Department is undisputed. Under this statute, also, Mr. Mellon is ineligible to remain as Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. President, I desire to call attention to other business concerns in which the Secretary of the Treasury is interested.

In the April, 1921, issue of Current Opinion there appeared an editorial written by Dr. Frank Crane, evidently inspired by the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon, who had been confirmed by the Senate on the 4th of March. In the editorial, which carries a picture of Mr. Mellon, and with which article we may assume he is familiar, there is this statement:

The record of the personal activities of Secretary Mellon includes 4 banks, of 1 of which he recently resigned the presidency to enter the Cabinet, 4 insurance companies, 7 educational and philanthropic institutions, and 62 other corporations. Their products—oil, aluminum, railway cars, locomotives, steel, plate glass, radiators, carborundum, bolts and rivets, motor trucks, and 100 other things—go all over the world.

Mr. President, there is doubtless none of these business activities of the Secretary of the Treasury that does not come directly in contact with the Treasury Department, over which the Secretary presides. It is in direct contravention of section 243 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. It seems to me that the Secretary of the Treasury, having to deal officially with himself in his private capacity almost constantly in the transaction of the business of the various corporations in which he is interested, looking at it from his own standpoint, ought not to be in the position constantly while acting as Secretary of the Treasury to be trying to do that thing which the Savior of mankind said nearly 2,000 years ago could not be done—that no man could serve two masters. It can not be done. The Secretary of the Treasury can not do it, and no other mortal man can do it. He must serve his own interests or the public interest. The Secretary of the Treasury, in my judgment, is violating the plain and express provisions of these two plain statutes of the country and should resign.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Tennessee has expired.

COTTON STATISTICS.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, for several months past the public has been very much dissatisfied with the reports of the Secretary of Commerce, through the Census Department, as to the quantity of cotton on hand.

This matter was brought by the southern Senators to the attention of the Secretary of Commerce, and he appointed a short time ago a most excellent committee to look into this question and to correct the error, if error there was. This committee completed its work the other day, and I fear perhaps its members rushed through their task a little too rapidly and took a little too narrow a view of the subject matter. Anyway, we noticed the next day a great diversity of opinion as to what the committee found.

The item that they had particularly in mind was 579,000 bales of cotton to balance distribution. They undertook to see whether there was error in this amount; and if so, how much. They found that there were 355,000 bales that could not be located and that they were non est. Therefore they reduced the amount in that item down to 224,000 bales. They said that in the last item was 125,000 bales, estimated, of what is known as "city crop," but which did not add at all to the pounds of cotton in the world, as the "city crop" was samples which had been taken out of the bales of cotton; so they did away with practically 500,000 bales of this cotton. A few other little items were found, and that made up the little difference. I notice in the paper to-day, however, and read in one paper of yesterday, three cotton letters—that is, letters from cotton factors—and in every one of those letters they say that the committee reduced the amount from 579,000 bales by 224,000 bales only, whereas the committee reduced it by 355,000 bales.

Mr. President, the item of 125,000 bales, known as the city crop, is very confusing to the trade. That is samples taken out of the cotton which has already been ginned. The only way to get the true figures is to take the ginning figures and the import figures of cotton, and let these other little matters alone. I never have been satisfied with the city crop. As I said before, it does not add a pound to the production, the actual quantity on hand. Not only that, but the number of bales, as estimated, is entirely too high. It is out of all reason. Taking 1 pound out of each bale of a 10,000,000-bale crop would make only 20,000 bales; so 125,000 bales would be something like 6 pounds out of each bale. Many of us know that a great deal of the cotton is sold without being sampled at all. The first part of the season it is all even-running grades, and often not sampled; but if a toll of 6 pounds is taken out of each bale to get the quality of the cotton, the producer must be robbed tremendously. That would be something like $1.80 a bale, at 30 cents a pound, to get the character of the cotton. So I am very much surprised at the misinformation that has gone out about this report, and I trust that the Secretary of Commerce will have it corrected.

Mr. President, we hope to have account taken of all the cotton on hand at an early date, and we should like also to have it graded. That would help the trade very much, indeed. Unfortunately, the people who give out the figures of the quantity of cotton on hand will mix linters with actual cotton. Some time ago I took up the different reports and there were many bales of linters added.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from South Carolina has expired.

OFFICERS IN CHARGE OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUND IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1918) relative to officers in charge of public buildings and grounds in the District of Columbia.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I am not sure that my appeal will avail anything at all, but I do appeal to the Senators who are here present to permit the Senate to proceed with this unanimous-consent calendar. If I may be pardoned the assertion, it is scarcely fair to the Senate as a body to discuss things which are not on the calendar at all. We have only until 2 o'clock. We have not had a calling of the calendar in a long time to accomplish anything; and I, for one, in my humble way, venture to express the hope that the Senate will proceed to do some of the business which it has agreed to do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, and open to amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am not satisfied with the bill that is before us without some explanation, and I shall be glad to have the Senator from Wyoming explain it.

Mr. WARREN. Is the Senator alluding now to Senate bill 1918?

Mr. KING. I am referring to Senate bill 1918, which gives $10,000 a year to an Army officer.

Mr. WARREN. It does not, as I will explain when I get an opportunity to explain it.

Mr. KING. I am speaking of the bill, and the bill does.

Mr. WARREN. I have been waiting for two days to get the bill up, and make an explanation of it before the Senate.

Mr. President, the bill under discussion was reported favorably by the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. He has been detained since that time by illness, and I may say that the bill now before the Senate is to be so amended that it is almost an entirely different bill. When the bill as it will be amended is read, I think there will be no difficulty about securing its passage.

Mr. FLETCHER. Does the Senator now offer a substitute for the bill?

Mr. WARREN. No; we simply propose to strike out certain parts of the bill.

I wish to say that the bill would simply change the title and consolidate under one title duties performed by those in charge of various buildings. The duties have all been placed under one officer, and economies have been effected by that means. This is simply to legalize the placing of the work in the hands of one body.

Mr. FLETCHER. I understand the Senator proposes that we shall strike out sections 4 and 5 entirely.

Mr. WARREN. The proposal is to strike out sections 4 and 5 and a part of sections 2 and 3.

Mr. FLETCHER. That is, the provision in sections 2 and 3 about an officer of the United States Army, and so forth.

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. FLETCHER. It merely changes the title of various offices?

Mr. WARREN. It simply throws them all under the one title. I will say to my friend, the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], that there is nothing in this regarding any salary. The salary of the officer in charge will remain the same as it is now. On behalf of the committee I move that the bill be amended, as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendments.

The READING CLERK. On page 2, line 2, it is proposed to strike out the comma and the words "and shall be an officer of the United States Corps of Engineers, assigned by the President"; on page 2, line 10, after the words "District of Columbia," to strike out the words "and shall be an officer of the United States Corps of Engineers, assigned by the President"; and on page 2 to strike out sections 4 and 5, in the following words:

SEC. 4. The officer of the United States Corps of Engineers holding the two offices of Director of Public Buildings and Director of Public Parks shall receive a compensation of $10,000 per year in lieu of his Army pay: Provided, That the excess compensation thus authorized over his Army pay shall be paid from any appropriations that may be made for expenditure under his control as Director of Public Buildings and Director of Public Parks.

SEC. 5. The assignment by the President of such officers of the United States Corps of Engineers as may be considered necessary by him to act as assistants to the Director of Public Buildings and the Director of Public Parks is hereby authorized.

And on page 3 to renumber section 6 to be section 4, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the commission known as the commission in charge of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings shall hereafter be known as the commission in charge of public buildings in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 2. That the office of the Superintendent State, War, and Navy Department buildings shall hereafter be known as the office of public buildings in the District of Columbia, and the superintendent of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings shall hereafter be known as the director of public buildings in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The office heretofore known as the office of public buildings and grounds shall hereafter be known as the director of public parks in the District of Columbia, and the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds shall hereafter be known as the director of public parks in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 4. Nothing in this act shall be held to modify existing law with respect to the assignment of space in the public buildings in the District of Columbia by the Public Buildings Commission.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, for the life of me I can not understand the necessity for this legislation. I do not understand why it is necessary to have a commission known as the commission in charge of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings, and why there must be new legislation giving it the name of the commission in charge of public buildings in the District of Columbia. Of course, the State, War, and Navy Department buildings are important. Obviously there must be some one charged with the responsibility of caring for them. Why there should be a commission for that purpose I am not quite able to determine, particularly if that commission means a considerable number of Army officers or of civilians. Although the amendments have not been printed, and are rather ambiguous to me, as I understand the bill, we have the office of Superintendent of the State, War, and Navy Buildings, and that office shall hereafter be known as the office of public buildings in the District of Columbia. For fear that I have not been accurate in my last statement, not having the amended bill before me, I repeat, having been given a copy of the amendments, that section 2 provides that the office of the Superintendent of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings shall hereafter be known as the office of public buildings in the District of Columbia, and the Superintendent of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings shall hereafter be known as the director of public buildings in the District of Columbia.

First we have a commission in charge of these buildings—

Mr. WARREN. No, Mr. President; the Senator is alluding to section 4. It is a matter of different officers serving as a group to allocate the space in the War, State, and Navy and other department buildings for the different rooms and offices for officials and employees of the several departments.

Mr. KING. That is, the first section provides for a commission to be known as the commission in charge of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings, as I understand the Senator, which commission is established for the purpose of allocating space in the various departments, or to employees of the various instrumentalities of the departments.

Mr. WARREN. No; it is to take care of what the superintendent of the building does; that is, to have the general superintendence, provide fuel, heat, light, and so forth, overlooking all those things.

Mr. KING. Then, as I understand it, there is first a commission, which will have charge of the three buildings.

Mr. WARREN. Those duties are performed by the officer now, and are not changed. The commission is not a paid commission or one that will draw upon the Treasury in any way.

Mr. KING. Then, in addition to the commission, if the Senator will pardon me, the office of superintendent of the same buildings, if it is not created, is renamed, so that it shall in the future be known as the office of public buildings in the District of Columbia.

Mr. WARREN. It is simply an accumulation of those duties which were formerly performed by a superintendent. From time to time we have covered the performance of the duties provided for in various bills under the management of one man, as superintendent, and so forth, but it is very awkward that way, and when the time comes for the reappointment of the officer there should be a name or title that would cover all.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I interrupt the Senator at that point?

Mr. KING. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. WADSWORTH. As the Senator from Wyoming has said, this is perfectly simple. There is nothing new created by the bill.

Mr. KING. The Senator refers to the bill as amended?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes; as amended. The office of the superintendent of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings is now an office under the Government, filled by Colonel Sherrill. There is also under the Government an office known as that of Public Buildings and Grounds, and that office is headed by Colonel Sherrill to-day. Those offices have been merged under one person, but the names have never been changed, in order to make them comply with the objects of the two offices themselves. The commission in charge of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings is the commission of which the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] is the chairman, and of which Colonel Sherrill is ex officio one member, whose province it is to allocate office space for all departments here in Washington. This bill simply gives it a more appropriate name, "commission in charge of public buildings in the District of Columbia," instead of "commission in charge of the State, War, and Navy Department buildings."

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator why section 4 was originally proposed?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator from New York in his time why the provision of section 4 was projected, with a salary of $10,000 a year?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I do not know why, as I am not a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; but as soon as it appeared I objected to it, among others. It was never asked for by the department, so far as I know. It was the idea of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds that an officer who had jurisdiction over 6,000,000 square feet of office space, probably the largest job of its kind in the world, should have a salary of $10,000. I think it is a mistake to give an Army officer a salary higher than that of his grade.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I want to be fair to Colonel Sherrill, and I desire to state that after this bill was introduced Colonel Sherrill came to my office and called my attention to the per diem allowance under the bill and said to me, "Senator Smoot, that is an increase in my compensation. I want you to know I have not asked for it." The Senator from

New York has stated the case exactly as the bill provides, with section 4 stricken out and with the other amendments which have been agreed to. There is nothing in the bill to change the existing conditions except as to the title of Colonel Sherrill or any other man who may hold that position.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 55) making an appropriation to pay the State of Massachusetts for expenses incurred and paid, at the request of the President, in protecting the harbors and fortifying the coast during the Civil War, in accordance with the findings of the Court of Claims and Senate Report No. 764, Sixty-sixth Congress, third session, was announced as next in order.

Mr. DIAL. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1181) naming the seat of Government of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no report accompanying the bill. Let it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

STEAMBOAT INSPECTION SERVICE.

The bill (S. 1718) to amend section 4404 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as amended by the act approved July 2, 1918, placing the supervising inspectors of the Steamboat Inspection Service under the classified civil service, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4404 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of Congress approved July 2, 1918, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 4404. The positions of supervising inspector in the Steamboat Inspection Service are hereby placed under and included in the classified civil service. There shall be 10 supervising inspectors, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of Commerce, in accordance with and under the provisions of the act of January 10, 1883, known as the civil service act. Each supervising inspector shall be entitled to a salary of $3,450 a year and his actual necessary traveling expenses while traveling on official business assigned him by competent authority, together with his actual and reasonable expenses for transportation of instruments, which shall be certified and sworn to under such instructions as shall be given by the Secretary of Commerce."

Sec. 2. That this act shall be effective on and after the date of its approval.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, this bill was read when it was reached on the calendar before and was considerably discussed. It went over at the request of the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED]. The Senator from Pennsylvania advised me yesterday that the bill was satisfactorily explained to him and that he has no objection to it; so I hope it may be passed without objection.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TAXATION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The bill (S. 1796) to amend sections 5, 6, and 7 of the act of Congress making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, approved July 1, 1902, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Washington if he thinks this bill should be taken up under the five-minute rule?

Mr. JONES of Washington. It is largely an administrative proposition. It is rather a long bill, but the provisions really relate to administrative features of the government of the District of Columbia, and it is urged by the commissioners as making it easier to administer the law.

Mr. KING. If the Senator has examined the bill—

Mr. JONES of Washington. We did examine it quite carefully. There are several provisions in it which are really restatements of existing law and they are simply to enable the commissioners better to administer the law. One provision authorizes the commissioners to assess buildings which have been constructed, and there are one or two other items, one putting a tax on dancing instructors.

Mr. KING. Are there any increases of salary or increases in the number of employees provided for?

Mr. JONES of Washington. No. The number of assessors is increased by one, but we have been carrying the additional assessor in appropriation bills heretofore.

Mr. KING. The position is made permanent by this bill? Mr. JONES of Washington. Yes; we really make it permanent.

Mr. KING. If the Senator thinks the legislation is wise— Mr. JONES of Washington. The committee went into it pretty carefully, and we thought it was not only wise but urgent.

Mr. KING. Let the bill be read in full so that we may have time to look over it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the bill.

The bill was read.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I understand we are working under a unanimous-consent agreement, which gives only five minutes for the discussion of a bill. Is that correct?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The unanimous-consent agreement modifies Rule VIII only in this respect, that a Senator is not permitted to move to take up a bill on the calendar upon objection being made to its consideration. Otherwise, Rule VIII is in full force.

Mr. McNARY. I understand the limitation of five minutes obtains, however, under Rule VIII.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is a limitation of five minutes.

Mr. McNARY. In view of that fact, I think the bill is too comprehensive and covers too many important matters involving the welfare of the District to be considered under the five-minute rule. I shall therefore object to its consideration at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the bill will be passed over.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I do not care to interrupt the ordinary consideration of the calendar, but I want to ask unanimous consent to take up out of the regular order Calendar No. 302, the bill (S. 2704) to amend paragraph (3), section 16, of the interstate commerce act. I do not think it will lead to any discussion. I would not ask it if it were not so urgent, and we may not reach it in the regular routine call to-day. It is toward the end of the calendar.

The bill provides for the equalization of time between the claims of shippers and the claims of railroads. It has been recommended by the Interstate Commerce Commission and no objection has been offered by the railroad companies; in fact, the files show that the railroad companies have desired to pay the claims where they were worthy, but under the decision of the Supreme Court in the Wolf case they are debarred from paying them after the statute of limitations has run.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered, because it is a matter of such urgent importance. I do not think it will lead to any discussion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that Senate bill 2704 be now taken up for consideration.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I think we had better proceed with the calendar in the regular order. After 2 o'clock I think the Senator will probably be able to have the bill considered.

Mr. SMITH. I think the time we have already consumed would have enabled us to pass the bill, because there was no objection from the shippers and no objection from the railroads and none from the Interstate Commerce Commission. I was afraid that other business might intervene. This is a matter of some importance, and it could be passed in a moment unless an explanation of it was desired.

Mr. JONES of Washington. There are several quite important measures on the calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I object. I do so because of the unanimous-consent agreement. It is not that I oppose the bill at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made. The next bill on the calendar will be reported.

VETERANS' BUREAU HOSPITAL AT CORPUS CHRISTI, TEX.

The bill (S. 2100) authorizing the sale of the United States Veterans' Bureau Hospital at Corpus Christi, Tex., was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, there is no report on the bill. There has not been a report in each of the other five or six cases where such bills have been reached on the calendar. Each time the bill has been postponed for that reason. I am not a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, but I have investigated the matter and I am told by representatives of the Veterans' Bureau that the hospital has never been built, that it is idle land, and that it ought to be sold because there is no prospect of a hospital building being erected on that location. It ought to be sold and the money turned into the Treasury.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will go over.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 799) for the relief of F. A. Maron was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 33) making eligible for retirement under certain conditions officers of the Army of the United States, other than officers of the Regular Army, who incurred physical disability in line of duty while in the service of the United States during the World War, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 966) for the continuance of construction work on the San Carlos Federal irrigation project in Arizona, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

AMBROSE I. MORIARTY.

The bill (S. 2090) to provide for the advancement on the retired list of the Regular Army of Second Lieut. Ambrose I. Moriarty was announced as next in order, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed its consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On a former occasion the bill was considered and the amendments of the committee were agreed to as in Committee of the Whole. If there be no further amendments as in Committee of the Whole, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. In connection with the bill just passed I should like to have printed in the Record the report of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

The report submitted by Mr. BRUCE February 9, 1924, is as follows:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2090) to provide for the advancement on the retired list of the Regular Army of Second Lieut. Ambrose I. Moriarty, having considered the same, report thereon favorably with the recommendation that the bill do pass with the following amendments:

In line 4 strike out the word "Congress" and insert the word "Senate."

In line 5 strike out the name "Moriarty" and insert "Moriarty."

In line 7 after the word "Army" strike out the period and insert a comma and the following: "with retired pay from the date of said appointment, as now prescribed by law for a major of his length of service retired prior to July 1, 1922."

Amend the title to read as follows: "A bill to provide for the advancement on the retired list of the Regular Army of Second Lieut. Ambrose I. Moriarty."

The purpose of the first two amendments is obvious. The first provides that the Senate, instead of the Congress, shall confirm the appointment, which is in accord with the law, and the second and last amendments correct the spelling of Moriarty's name. The third amendment is to make clear the intent of the Congress as to the pay Moriarty is to receive under the provisions of the bill. It is estimated that under the provisions of this measure he would receive approximately $240 per month.

A somewhat similar bill was passed by the Senate during the last Congress and reported favorably to the House. The facts in the case are contained in the report on that bill (S. 2750, 67th Cong.), which is inserted herein in part as follows:

[Senate Report No. 840, Sixty-seventh Congress.]

While it has for some time been the policy of the War Department to withhold approval from proposed legislation to advance officers on the retired list, this case is so unusual and so meritorious the Secretary of War has indicated his approval of the proposal, stating in a letter of December 1, 1921, to the chairman of the committee that, "While in general the War Department does not favor legislation singling out an individual for preferential treatment, in view of the special circumstances in this case favorable report by your committee and the enactment of the bill in reference are recommended."

The history of this officer is unique. He entered the Military Academy in July, 1883, graduated in June, 1887, and was commissioned, serving as a second lieutenant of Infantry until December 15, 1887, when he resigned. In December, 1889, he was reappointed, was commissioned in January, 1890, and served until June 6, 1894, when he was retired for disability. His circumstances are best described in a letter written by him to the chairman of your committee under date of May 17, 1922, which is as follows:

STATION HOSPITAL,
Fort Banks, Mass., May 17, 1922.

Hon. JAMES WADSWORTH,

Chairman Senate Committee on Military Affairs,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Your committee has before it Senate bill No. 2750, which was introduced November 16, 1921, by Senator BRANDEGEE.

This bill, which gives me the rank of major on the retired list of the Army, has the approval of the Secretary of War. It was presented to Congress in order to help me financially.

I have been helpless and cared for by an attendant for the past 21 years, bearing all the expense incident to my condition myself, until my resources are about exhausted and my only income is my retired pay as a second lieutenant of Infantry. The disease which has brought me to this condition is called arthritis deformans, every joint being affected, even my jaws, and all of them being virtually fixed.

This condition was brought about by exposure while on active service in the West and Southwest.

I was with the troops that were sent to Highwood, near Chicago, in 1887, in order to be of assistance in case they were needed, at the hanging of the Haymarket rioters on November 11 of that year, and spent part of that bitter winter in camp on the shores of Lake Michigan. That was the starting point of my disability, and subsequent exposure in Arizona and New Mexico increased it until my retirement became necessary.

So great has become the expense of living and being properly cared for that my retired pay is no longer adequate and I have been compelled to give up my home and take refuge in the hospital at this post, where I am receiving no medical treatment, as my case is hopeless. I pay my nurse her wages, as I have done for the past 21 years, and I also pay her board and my own in the hospital.

Under the war risk insurance act a soldier who is in my condition would draw $277.50 monthly as compensation and insurance. This is more than twice the amount which I receive as retired pay, and his annual income would be about $400 more than this bill will give me when passed.

Patients are not expected to remain permanently in post hospitals, and I respectfully ask you if your committee will not report my bill favorably at this session, so that I may again be allowed to live comfortably outside the walls of a hospital.

You may obtain a slight idea of my condition from the photographs I am inclosing.

Very respectfully,

AMBROSE I. MORIARTY,
Second Lieutenant, United States Army, Retired.

Brig. Gen. Mark L. Hersey and Brig. Gen. Edgar Russel, both classmates at West Point of Lieutenant Moriarty, describe the case in letters, which are appended herewith as explanatory of it:

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Headquarters, Camp Devens, Mass., May 27, 1921.

Hon. FRANK B. BRANDEGEE,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR BRANDEGEE: Recently I called on a classmate of mine in Putnam, Conn., Second Lieut. A. I. Moriarty. His case is one of the most pathetic that I have ever known and one most worthy of relief on the part of the United States.

Moriarty is a victim of arthritis deformans, contracted on the bleak shores of Lake Michigan in the winters of the late eighties preceding the hanging of those anarchists in Chicago. This camp was on the spot where Fort Sheridan now stands, was a canvas affair, and the exposure to which Moriarty was then subjected was the direct cause of all of his sufferings in later years. His joints have all grown together. He has hardly been able to move a muscle for 15 years. He can not even chew, and his speech is necessarily impaired as that of a man with set jaws.

He has borne his sufferings with heroism second to nothing I have ever seen on the battle fields of Spanish America, Europe, or Asia. I know of no man who has stood up to his burden so uncomplainingly for such a long period as Moriarty. His condition is such that he has had to have a trained nurse now for more than 15 years. This in itself has more than exhausted his stipend from the Government and he has now practically exhausted the modest patrimony left him by his father. His case is one absolutely without parallel in the United States Army so far as helplessness and absolutely necessary expenditure is concerned. He should be properly cared for by the United States. It can not be done on his retired pay as second lieutenant. Here is the remedy that I am suggesting and with reasonable precedents therefor: That he be given the same grade on the retired list that others of his same length of active service are now receiving at this time. I think this would mean a majority for him, as he had five or six years' active service before he was placed on the retired list; that is, five or six years' active service with the colors, not counting his cadet service. Men from the academy in these days with his same length of service have, many have, reached their majority; all certainly their captaincy. The pay of a major or even a captain would, I think, see him through.

I am presenting for your consideration the case of this very wonderful officer whose noble bearing of his sufferings from disease contracted in line of duty has not been equaled, I believe, in all the history of the Army. A very able and gallant soldier in the days of his youth who forfeited his health in the service of his country. Owing to his absolute helplessness and necessity for a nurse all the time, his retired pay is not sufficient for his absolutely necessary expenses by something like $1,100 a year. I know the details of his expenditures and say this with assurance. Just for a little personal item: He has not afforded himself any new outer garments in five years.

I bespeak your high power as United States Senator from Connecticut in the introduction of a bill to Congress recommissioning him on the retired list with the grade of officers of his length of active service now attain in the same period that he has to his credit.

Very sincerely yours,

MARE L. HERNEY,

Brigadier General, United States Army, Commanding.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, July 25, 1922.

HON. FRANK B. BRANDEGGER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR BRANDEGGER: Regarding the case of Second Lieut. Ambrose I. Moriarty, United States Army, retired, I regret that my Army duties will require my departure at once, and I shall not be able to accompany you to the hearing on his case, as you suggested in the interview July 26. I am glad, however, to present in writing to you and the committee some facts and observations regarding Lieutenant Moriarty.

He and I were classmates in the class of 1887, United States Military Academy, and I have known him intimately. His active career in the Army was cut short by his retirement for disability in 1894, due to exposure in camp, which resulted in rheumatic trouble that has gradually rendered him helpless. I understand that for over 20 years he has required the services of a special nurse. When I visited him about 10 days ago, I found him in an invalid's chair, with every joint rigid, unable to move even hand or foot, and requiring the constant attention of a special nurse. It need not be said that his retired pay ($137.50 per month) is entirely inadequate to support him and pay for the unremitting and skillful nursing his case requires. He has been obliged to add to his pay some slender private resources, but these are now exhausted, and he faces a most serious situation.

He has asked that he be promoted on the retired list to major, which, it appears, would make his retired pay $225 per month. If Lieutenant Moriarty had not been stricken with this disease as a direct result of his performance of duty, he would now be at least a colonel. His complete disability is as much the result of his devoted performance of his duties as that of the soldier receiving a disability would at the front, for which generous provision is now made.

Lieutenant Moriarty was noted as a cadet for his conscientious performance of his duty. As an officer he showed a zeal and patriotism which was marked. Lying helpless as he is now, his mind is bright, and his patience and unflinching cheerfulness are sources of inspiration to all who see him.

His case is decidedly exceptional and most deserving, and I deem it a privilege to do what I can to assist in its favorable consideration.

Sincerely yours,

EDGAR RUSSEL,

Brigadier General, United States Army.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 46) for the relief of Capt. Ramon B. Harrison was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the joint resolution go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1014) for the relief of F. J. Belcher, Jr., trustee for Ed Fletcher, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1032) to change the name of Thirty-seventh Street, between Chevy Chase Circle and Reno Road, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 60) to stimulate crop production in the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over. We can not consider it in the limited time now at our disposal.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be passed over.

ALASKA STEAMSHIP CO.

The bill (S. 732) for the relief of the Alaska Steamship Co. was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 4, after the word "pay," to insert the words "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated," and in line 7 to strike out "$9,024.27" and insert "$5,974.27," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Alaska Steamship Co., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Nevada, the sum of $5,974.27, in payment of the balance due said company for services rendered at the request of the United States deputy collector of customs at Unalaska, Alaska, and in pursuance of an agreement with him for the transportation and care of 193 survivors of the wreck of the American ship Columbia near Scotch Cap Lighthouse, Alaska, in May, 1909.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Washington [Mr. Jones] to explain the bill.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Briefly, the facts are these: There was a vessel wrecked at Arch Point, Alaska, in Alaskan waters. The deputy collector of customs had the boat Dora, owned by this company, go out to get the shipwrecked people. There were 193 of them. Under the law a collector or deputy collector has a right to contract for the transportation and care of seamen. He made a contract with the captain of this vessel to transport the 193 persons, whom he described as seamen, to Seward and for their subsistence there until a boat could be obtained to go on to Seattle.

The boat actually transported them, but it was found when they got to Seward that only 71 of them were seamen. The others were employees of another company, but they had actually been transported. Legally and from a technical legal standpoint they had no right to pay the owner of the boat for the transportation of the other persons. That is really the situation the bill is intended to relieve. In equity it was thought, as the steamship company had actually transported these people under contract with the deputy collector and had met them at Seward at an expense of $240, that that sum should be paid; and that is the purpose of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

BILLS AND RESOLUTION PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 1013) for the relief of Gordon G. MacDonald was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 703) making an adjustment of certain accounts between the United States and the District of Columbia was announced as next in order.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, that is a pretty important bill, and I object to its consideration at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The resolution (S. Res. 124) directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to secure information relative to amount of money expended for the purpose of creating public interest favorable to railroad sentiment was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Let that resolution go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1499) to promote the safety of passengers and employees upon railroads by prohibiting the use of wooden cars under certain circumstances was announced as next in order.

Mr. FLETCHER. I ask that that bill go over, the Senator from Maryland having requested that that action be taken.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 185) to promote agriculture by stabilizing the price of wheat was announced as next in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

COMPENSATION OF WARRANT OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN, ETC.

The bill (S. 2401) providing for the compensation of retired warrant officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, or any other service or department created by or under the jurisdiction of the United States Government, and warrant officers and enlisted men of the Reserve Corps of the Army and Navy was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that bill go over.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, if the Senator from Utah will withdraw his objection for a moment, I desire to say a few words about the bill. I can not conceive that there can be any opposition to it. The bill was introduced by me for the purpose of straightening out misunderstanding on the Panama Canal Zone. The bill has been recommended by the Secretary of War and has been reported by the Committee on Military Affairs without the slightest objection.

Mr. KING. I will withhold my objection until I shall have heard the Senator's explanation of the bill.

Mr. EDGE. The purpose of the bill is to permit retired enlisted men and warrant officers in any branch of the service to retain their retired pay when working in other employment on the Panama Canal Zone. I understand it has been the custom down there, so far as possible, to employ retired enlisted men and warrant officers in various governmental activities. Those men have always heretofore drawn the pay to which they were entitled on account of their service in the Army and, in addition, whatever remuneration the Canal Zone government provided for them. The question, however, has arisen whether, under a strict interpretation of the Panama Canal Zone act as set forth in the report, this can legally be done. This bill simply straightens out that situation so that those men may receive the money which they have earned through their service and still be paid the salary allowed them by the Panama Canal Zone authorities. That is all the bill proposes to do.

Mr. KING. I still insist on my objection, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 2168) for the relief of David C. Van Voorhis was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 746) providing for the development of hydroelectric energy at Great Falls was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

COMMERCIAL PACIFIC CABLE CO.

The bill (S. 709) for the relief of the Commercial Pacific Cable Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that bill be passed over.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah withhold his objection for just a moment?

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. If there was ever a case where the Government owed a citizen or group of citizens money, this is one. Certain cables, as Senators know, center at the Island of Guam. A vessel of the United States Navy in attempting to do some salvage work dragged its anchor across the commercial cable, which is owned by the Commercial Pacific Cable Co., and destroyed it so far as its being able to render any service was concerned. The cable company had to bring a cable ship from a Chinese port to Guam in order to repair the cable. The incident was investigated by the Navy Department, and the Navy Department admitted that its own personnel, through this accident, had imposed this expense upon the cable company. The amounts have all been audited and carefully examined, and the Navy Department certifies that, in its judgment, the Government should pay the cable company the sum proposed to be appropriated.

Then the bill covers a second instance of the same character, there being two incidents covered by this bill. In restoring a buoy to position at Guam a group of naval personnel under the command of an officer dropped a very heavy buoy anchor, composed of a heavy block of cement, thinking they were doing so in a place where the cable would not be injured. Unfortunately, they dropped it directly on the cable, smashed the insulation, exposed the wires, and destroyed all means of communication between the United States and Guam. The cable company was compelled to bring a cable ship from Honolulu to Guam, something like 2,000 miles, to repair the cable. That item of expenditure was carefully audited and examined by the Navy Department, and the Navy Department admits that men under it did this damage and that the company should be reimbursed. That is the bill.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator permit an inquiry?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator think that there ought to be a direct appropriation or that we ought to authorize the submission of the matter to the Court of Claims?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I think, when all the facts are admitted by everybody who has ever looked into the matter, that we might just as well pay our debts.

Mr. FLETCHER. Do I understand that the second provision of the bill is intended to take the place of another bill that covered that item?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes. The second provision of the bill was in a separate bill at one time and passed the Senate.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah assures me that he withdraws his objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments on page 1, line 5, after the word "company," to insert "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated"; and on line 10, after the date "March 21, 1923," to insert "The Secretary of the Treasury is also authorized and directed to pay to the Commercial Pacific Cable Co., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $30,490.38 to reimburse said company for the cost of repairing certain damages done by the United States naval authorities to one of said company's cables in the harbor of San Luis d'Apra, island of Guam, in September, 1907, as reported to Congress in Senate Document No. 88, Sixty-fourth Congress, first session," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Commercial Pacific Cable Co., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $16,109.94 to reimburse said company for the cost of repairing certain damages done by the United States naval authorities to one of said company's cables in the harbor of San Luis d'Apra, island of Guam, on March 21, 1923. The Secretary of the Treasury is also authorized and directed to pay to the Commercial Pacific Cable Co., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $30,490.38 to reimburse said company for the cost of repairing certain damages done by the United States naval authorities to one of said company's cables in the harbor of San Luis d'Apra, island of Guam, in September, 1907, as reported to Congress in Senate Document No. 88, Sixty-fourth Congress, first session.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM J. EWING.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 964) for the relief of William J. Ewing.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment on page 1, line 6, after the words "sum of," to strike out "$2,000" and insert "$1,560," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to William J. Ewing, or his legal representatives, the sum of $1,560, as full compensation for permanent injuries received by the said Ewing on the 18th day of December, 1901, at San Francisco, Calif., while in the performance of his duties as an employee of the United States Life Saving Service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 2357) for the relief of the Pacific Commissary Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask that that bill may go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2012) declaring an emergency in respect of certain agricultural commodities, to promote equality between agricultural commodities and other commodities, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. I ask that that bill may go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

THE MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT.

The bill (S. 1974) providing for sundry matters affecting the Military Establishment, was announced as next in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. Does the Senator from New York desire that bill to be passed during the consideration of the calendar under the five-minute rule?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is just as the Senate desires.

Mr. OVERMAN. I apprehend the bill will involve discussion; it is a long bill.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is quite a long bill, and contains a considerable number of unrelated subjects, each one of which by itself is of slight importance, but in the aggregate they are important.

Mr. McKELLAR. There is just one item in the bill about which I have received a letter, and I should like to look into it. I do not wish to delay it, but if the Senator will permit the bill to go over I think I shall have no objection to its consideration the next time it is called.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Very well, Mr. President, let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

REVENUE FROM PRIBILOF ISLANDS, ALASKA.

The bill (S. 2122) to create a Pribilof Islands fund and to provide for the disposition of surplus revenue from the Pribilof Islands, Alaska, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the proceeds received from the sale of fur-seal and fox skins, and other products from the Pribilof Islands, Alaska, be reserved and set aside as a special fund in the Treasury to be known as the "Pribilof Islands fund" to be appropriated from time to time by Congress for the expenses of the Department of Commerce in protecting and developing the fur-seal fisheries and the raising of foxes, including the furnishing of food, fuel, water, clothing, and other necessities of life to the natives of the Pribilof Islands of Alaska; transportation of supplies to and from the islands; expenses of travel of agents and other employees, and subsistence while on said islands; the purchase, hire, and maintenance of vessels; construction of buildings; construction and repair of roads; the expansion of by-products plants; construction and maintenance of cold-storage plants; the development, construction, and maintenance of adequate waterworks plant; and for all expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to protect the seal fisheries of Alaska, and for other purposes," approved April 21, 1910; and any balance, or any part thereof, remaining in that fund not needed for above purposes, shall be covered annually into the Alaska fund created by the act approved January 27, 1905, as Congress may direct.

Sec. 2. That nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the payments to Great Britain and Japan from the proceeds of sales of sealskins of any amounts due those Governments from sales of their respective shares of sealskins taken at the Pribilof Islands, or for payment from the proceeds of sales of fur-seal and for fox skins of expenses for taking, handling, curing, transporting, dressing, dyeing, and machining and selling of such skins.

Sec. 3. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after July 1, 1924.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OWNERS OF THE BARGE "ANODE."

The bill (S. 78) for the relief of the owners of the barge Anode was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the Raritan Copper Works, owner of the American barge Anode, against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by collision between said barge and the U. S. transport Buford, on the 18th day of January, 1919, between Governors Island and Bedloe Island, in New York Harbor, N. Y., may be sued for by the owner of the said barge in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court; and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages, including interest and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the owner of the said American barge Anode, or against the owner of the said American barge Anode in favor of the United States upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OWNERS OF STEAMSHIP "COMANCHE."

The bill (S. 82) for the relief of the owners of the steamship Comanche was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the Clyde Steamship Co., owner of the American steamship Comanche, against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by collision between said vessel and the United States battleship Indiana and the United States destroyer McCall on the 14th day of December, 1917, off Norton's Point, N. Y., may be sued for by the said Clyde Steamship Co. in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty, and acting under the rules governing such court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages, including interest and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the owners of the said American steamship Comanche, or against the owners of the said American steamship Comanche in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties, and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STEAMSHIP "CEYLON MARU."

The bill (S. 84) for the relief of the owners of the steamship Ceylon Maru was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of Nippon Yusen Kaisha, owner of the Japanese steamship Ceylon Maru, against the United States of America for damages alleged to have been caused by collision off Trompeloupe, France, on November 9, 1919, between the said vessel and the American steamship Jeannette Skinner, owned by the United States of America, and being then operated by the War Department in its transport service, may be sued for by the said Nippon Yusen Kaisha in the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court; and such court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damage, including interests and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of said Nippon Yusen Kaisha, or against the said Nippon Yusen Kaisha in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court; and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That in the suit authorized by this act any and all of the testimony taken in the suit of Nippon Yusen Kaisha against the steamship Jeannette Skinner begun by the filing of a libel in the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland on March 1, 1919, may be offered by or in behalf of the Government or the owner of the Ceylon Maru and shall be admissible in evidence; And provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 2691) to amend the Penal Code was announced as next in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let that go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2693) in reference to writs of error was announced as next in order.

The reading clerk read the bill.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, in the absence of a report or an explanation from the Senator who introduced the bill, I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

WILLIAM MORTESEN.

The bill (S. 148) for the relief of William Mortesen was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the words "sum of," to strike out "$20,000" and insert "$1,000," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to William Mortesen, the sum of $1,000 for assistance rendered to the United States Government in land cases in Oregon.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NEAR EAST RELIEF (INC.).

The bill (S. 87) for the relief of the Near East Relief (Inc.) was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cancel and abandon the claim in the sum of $632,669, with interest, for United States property sold in 1919 to the Near East Relief (Inc.) for use in relieving and supplying the pressing needs of the peoples of the countries involved in the late war.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], who introduced this bill, make an explanation of it?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, Senators of course are familiar with the work of the Near East Relief. It saved the lives, no doubt, of thousands and thousands of women and children in Asia Minor in the troubles which overtook that region following the end of the World War. Much of its work was in Syria and Armenia and in those regions which formerly had been under the Turkish Empire, and which were in a highly demoralized condition.

The War Department had surplus supplies on hand and entered into a contract with the Near East Relief for the sale of a considerable quantity of supplies. Many of the supplies were near at hand—that is, they were in Europe—and they were sadly needed in this region. The War Department had no right to make a gift to the Near East Relief or to any other relief organization. The supplies were handed over to the Near East Relief. They were distributed to starving women and children. I imagine it was done in the understanding that the conditions were terrible, and the Near East Relief was willing to enter into any kind of an obligation in order to get the supplies and save the lives of these people. The fact of the matter is that the Near East Relief (Inc.) has no money at all. It expended all its funds, which were raised by private subscription, in saving the lives of these people, and it simply can not pay the War Department the six hundred and odd thousand dollars. The War Department has no right to release it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, did the Near East Relief organization furnish a statement of account showing what it had done with these supplies?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Oh, yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator is satisfied that all of these supplies were used for a good purpose?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Oh, without a doubt. They were sent directly to the famine region.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection. Of course we all recognize what an awful situation that was; and so far as I am concerned I have no objection to the passage of the bill.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, there is not a chance in the world that the Government will ever get a dollar from the Near East Relief Association; and this simply straightens out an account on the books of the Government. It is a matter of bookkeeping.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is before the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 349) for the relief of sufferers in New Mexico, from the flood due to the overflow of the Rio Grande and its tributaries, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico make an explanation of this bill?

Mr. BURSUM. This is the same bill which was passed by the Senate at the last Congress. The bill is to take care of flood sufferers who suffered great damage by reason of the construction of a dam by the Reclamation Service, thereby causing a great flood of water on account of sudden, torrential rains, which destroyed practically the whole community. The Senate passed this bill at the last Congress, and this is a similar bill, introduced by my colleague [Mr. JONES].

Mr. McKELLAR. How much is appropriated?

Mr. BURSUM. Seventy-five thousand dollars.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let the bill go over.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think it had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JONES of Washington in the chair). Objection is made, and the bill will be passed over.

ERIE RAILROAD CO.

The bill (S. 935) for the relief of the Erie Railroad Co., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claims of the Erie Railroad Co. against the United States for damages alleged to have been sustained to its car float, cars, and the contents thereof in New York Harbor on July 6, 1922, may be submitted to the United States Court for the Eastern District of New York, under and in compliance with the rules of said court sitting as a court of admiralty: Provided, That the said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the whole controversy and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of the legal damages sustained by reason of said collision, if any shall be found to be due, either for or against the United States, upon the same principle and measure of liability with costs as in like cases in admiralty between private parties, with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALBERT ANDREWS.

The bill (S. 1307) for the relief of Albert Andrews for loss of personal effects while serving with the military forces of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Albert Andrews, formerly corporal, Band Company, One hundred and sixty-fourth Infantry, Forty-first Division, United States Army, the sum of $288, such sum being in full satisfaction of all claims on account of personal effects of said Albert Andrews lost in transit from Hempstead, N. Y., to Mayville, N. Dak.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 1568) for the relief of certain officers in the United States Army was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, unless there is some explanation of this bill, I suggest that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ANNIE H. MARTIN.

The bill (S. 1316) for the relief of Annie H. Martin was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Annie H. Martin, of Carson City, Nev., the sum of $545.02 to enable her to make payment of a liability incurred by her as acting assayer in charge, United States Mint, Carson City, Nev., for losses in operating on bullion.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE IN FEDERAL COURTS.

The bill (S. 624) to amend the practice and procedure in Federal courts, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to hear from the Senator who introduced the bill.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, this is a bill providing merely for the practice and procedure in Federal courts. It has a unanimous report from the Committee on the Judiciary. It passed the House of Representatives at one time without a dissenting vote. It is an effort to make the practice and procedure in the Federal courts conform to that in the State courts, and denies to a Federal judge the right to express an opinion as to the credibility of witnesses or the weight of the testimony.

Mr. McKELLAR. I indorse very heartily the bill, as far as it goes. I think it might go further, but I am not going to object to its passage at this time, hoping that hereafter we can add other restrictions upon the power of Federal judges to direct juries to bring in verdicts.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I ask that the bill go over. It seems to me it ought to be discussed.

Mr. CARAWAY. I hope the Senator will not object to the consideration of the bill. To start in with, when I was in the House I introduced the bill, and Mr. GRAHAM, a Member of the House from Philadelphia, and I worked on it and agreed upon it, and it passed the House without a dissenting vote. The same measure was introduced here, and the amendments are simply a change of language. It received the unanimous report of the Committee on the Judiciary. The subcommittee that considered the bill was composed of the Presiding Officer of this body, the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. EANSER]. It received quite a thorough going over in the committee.

Every suggestion is embodied in it. The chairman of the committee, the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGER], the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH], and others took a great deal of interest in it. I sincerely hope the Senator will not object to its consideration.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am perfectly willing to have the bill considered on its merits. It seems to me that the power of a United States judge to express his opinion, based on his long experience on the bench, to a jury which is called in, perhaps made up of men who never before have served in a court, has been a wholesome one. I think it has made for greater justice and a better administration of justice in the Federal courts. I believe that it ought to be preserved. I do not agree with my lawyer friends who would make a trial judge a mere automaton, sitting up there and allowing verdicts to go on what he feels confident is perjured testimony, without power to comment to the jury on the inconsistencies of the statements of one witness or another. Why, Mr. President, I think justice is furthered by retaining that power in the trial judges of the Federal courts, and for that reason I object to it as a matter of principle.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I presume the Senator will concede that all of us have some question of principle at stake in it. Others do not agree with him. Therefore, he ought not to insist that his individual opinion shall override the opinion of the Senate and give the Senate no chance to pass upon it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator did not understand me. I mean to say that I oppose the bill because of what seems to me to be a matter of principle. I realize that the Senator is equally entitled to his opinion, and I do not want to object to the present consideration of the bill, but I do hope the Senate will see fit not to pass the bill.

Mr. CARAWAY. I beg the Senator's pardon; I misunderstood him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Dial	Johnson, Minn.	Ralston
Ashurst	Dill	Jones, Wash.	Ransdell
Borah	Edge	Kendrick	Reed, Pa.
Brandegee	Edwards	Keyes	Sheppard
Brookhart	Elkins	Klug	Simmons
Broussard	Ferris	Ladd	Smith
Bruce	Fess	Lodge	Smoot
Bursum	Fletcher	McKellar	Spencer
Cameron	Frazier	McKinley	Stanfield
Capper	George	McLean	Swanson
Caraway	Glass	McNary	Trammell
Colt	Hale	Neely	Wadsworth
Copeland	Harrell	Norris	Walsh, Mass.
Couzens	Harris	Oddie	Walsh, Mont.
Curtis	Heflin	Overman	Weller
Dale	Howell	Pepper	Willis

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. SHIELDS] is detained on account of illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, the bill on which the Senate is now asked to pass ought to be understood, I think, by the Senators before they vote on it. It will mean that in the trial of a jury case in a Federal court the United States judge, no matter what his experience, or what the inexperience of the jury may be, no matter what the lack of credibility of a witness may be, must sit on the bench and send the case to the jury without calling attention or indicating an opinion as to the value or lack of value of any witness's testimony. The judge may express no opinion, even though he is certain that a verdict one way or the other would be against the weight of the evidence, and even though a witness has contradicted himself hopelessly the judge can not call attention to that. He must treat that witness, in his references to the testimony, exactly the same as a witness whose testimony is corroborated by a hundred circumstances.

It reduces a judge to practical impotence. I think the present system has worked very well for 135 years, and there is no occasion for changing it. I hope the Senate will not pass this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the first amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 1, line 4—

Mr. PEPPER rose.

Mr. DALE. I want to ask the junior Senator from Pennsylvania his opinion as to the requirement of the bill that the judge shall deliver his charge in writing.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That merely adds to the difficulty of the trial judge. In most courts the practice is for the judge to deliver his charge orally, and have it taken down by a stenographer. Then it is subject to a further consideration afterwards.

Mr. DALE. Is it not almost impossible for a judge to write out his opinion between the introduction of the evidence and the turning over of the case to the jury?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I have never known a court in which that practice prevailed. It would seem to me that it would necessitate a considerable recess between the closing of the evidence and the summing up of the case, if that practice were adopted. I would like to have the Senator who introduced the bill tell us what seems to him to be the advantage of having the trial judge reduce his charge to writing before delivery, and the advantage of having the charge delivered before the arguments of counsel.

Mr. CARAWAY. That is the law in very nearly every State in the Union.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I have tried cases in a good many States, and I have never seen that done.

Mr. CARAWAY. Unfortunately, I have not tried cases, then, in States where the Senator has tried them, because I have never seen the rule otherwise.

Mr. DILL. In my State that is always the rule in the trial of cases.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That the charge is written out before it is delivered?

Mr. DILL. The judge delivers his charge in writing.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Before the arguments of counsel?

Mr. DILL. Before the arguments of counsel.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I just came into the Chamber, and consequently do not know the parliamentary situation. I do not know what amendment is pending. Will the Chair advise me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary had just started to state the first amendment when the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PEPPER] rose. The Secretary will state the first amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 1, line 4, after the word "court," strike out the words "triable by jury, in which the jury has been impaneled to try the issue of facts," and insert in lieu thereof the words "tried by a jury."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. I want to discuss the proposition involved in some of the committee amendments. I believe the provision found in one of the amendments that the judge shall deliver his charge before the arguments of counsel ought to be eliminated. I do not believe that is good practice.

Mr. CARAWAY. May I interrupt the Senator right there?

Mr. NORRIS. Certainly.

Mr. CARAWAY. That provision came into the bill in this way: In most of the code States, in my State, among others, the judge is required to deliver his charge before the arguments of counsel. In other States that rule does not prevail. It was the belief of the committee that the practice ought to be uniform within a State, and therefore there is a provision on page 2 of the bill that in those States where the practice in the State courts is for the judge to charge the jury after the arguments, the same rule shall prevail in the Federal courts. The idea is to make the Federal judge sitting in the State conform to the procedure in the State courts.

Mr. NORRIS. I observe the language, which I had not before noticed. I think that it is proper to have the Federal practice conform to the State practice. I want to say just a few words about the bill.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. FLETCHER. Does not the Senator think that really the provision in section 2 as originally written is preferable to the amendment; that is, instead of striking out from line 1 to line 5, inclusive, on page 2, as reported by the committee, the original language is a better expression of the idea and a better provision than the provision that the judge shall charge in writing? Under the laws of Florida, for instance, the charge shall be in writing if requested by counsel.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, my own idea is that we ought to make it mandatory by statute, compel the judge in a jury case to reduce his instructions to writing.

Mr. CARAWAY. May I make a suggestion to the Senator as to this particular amendment? I think all in the committee finally agreed that if the case were of such minor importance that the parties did not insist on the charge being in writing, they could waive that, although the law says it shall be in writing. The attorneys in the case may waive that if the case is of such minor importance that neither side desires to have the instructions of the court in writing.

As to the other idea, that it shall be in writing, some members of the committee were of the opinion that if it was only to be put in writing at the request of one of the parties it might raise in the judge a prejudice against some litigant or his attorney who insisted upon the charge being in writing, and therefore it is so worded that the charge must be in writing; but of course we understand that if the parties do not insist upon it it may be waived.

Mr. NORRIS. I suppose most Members of this body have had experience in the trial of jury cases, a good many of them as attorneys, many of them as judges, and their experience has extended over a great many years in most cases. An attorney who had been practicing exclusively in United States courts, where the judge delivered his charge orally, and was not familiar with the practice where the judge was required to reduce his charge to writing, would be perhaps impressed very much as was the Senator from Pennsylvania. He would think that such a practice would mean delay, and too many inconveniences and hardships on the trial judge. I want to assure the Senator from Pennsylvania, from an experience of a great many years, both as an attorney at the bar trying lawsuits in both criminal and civil cases and as a judge who has been required to reduce his instructions to writing, that no such condition arises on account of that kind of a law.

It very often occurs that when a trial is finished, if the attorneys waive argument, as they do sometimes, and submit the case, so that it is submitted to the jury, or if it is for any other reason submitted to the jury abruptly, and the judge has not prepared his instructions, a stipulation may be entered into in open court that the judge shall charge orally and a stenographer take it down, and that each party can have his exceptions noted after it has been written out and after the jury returns a verdict. That can be done by agreement.

Mr. CARAWAY. Certainly, if the judge does not understand the law well enough to reduce his charge to writing, he should not be permitted to just talk about it, should he?

Mr. NORRIS. Certainly not. I have always felt that way. But, in my judgment, one of the faults I have to find with the United States courts is that the judges instruct the jury orally and express an opinion about this man and that man or this witness and that witness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill 5, the general pension bill.

Mr. NORRIS. Is there objection to finishing consideration of the bill which we have been discussing?

Mr. BURSUM. Will it take long?

Mr. NORRIS. I am sure I do not know. I was almost in the middle of a sentence and I want to finish what I have to say, anyway. I can do that no matter whether the unfinished business is laid aside or not.

I feel deeply about this practice, Mr. President, because while my experience is not worth more than anybody else's, I have had most of my life until I came to Congress devoted to this very thing. The idea of permitting a judge sitting on the bench, with all the secret power and unexpressed ability that he has, to control a jury by the simple expression of an opinion is something that is liable to turn any lawsuit one way or the other. I am not complaining that the judge occupies such an exalted position. I want him to be respected in just that way by the jury, so it is in no sense a criticism of the court, but the trial ought to be free from that influence. It is the duty of the judge to tell the jury that the jury are the judges of the credibility of the witnesses and not the presiding judge, and he never ought to express an opinion one way or the other.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NORRIS. Certainly.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Do we not get the same result exactly when we allow the judge to order a new trial if in his judgment the verdict is against the weight of the evidence? Is it not the common-sense thing to reach that result directly by letting him state what in his opinion is the weight of the evidence?

Mr. NORRIS. No; not by any means. I take it that no one will dispute the proposition of law that the credibility of a witness is an exclusive function for the jury and not the court. They have a right to judge by the appearance of a witness, by the reasonableness of his testimony and the story that he tells, by the fact that he is contradicted or corroborated by circumstances, or other evidence in the case, and the amount of weight to be given to the corroboration or denial, or any circumstances proved on the trial that tend to uphold or to overthrow a man's testimony. The weight that should be given to it is not for the judge, but for the jury.

I do not believe anybody will dispute the proposition of law that the judge ought to tell them so, and he ought to refrain from saying to the jury, "I think this man's story is rather doubtful," or "this man looks as though he was a good fellow and you ought to give his testimony a good deal of weight." That is outside of his duty, and he ought to be compelled to put in writing everything he says to the jury, and let either side except to the instructions, and the reviewing court then has the power and the jurisdiction to pass thereon.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PEPPER. I apologize to the Senator for asking a question about a matter that he passed away from in his argument. He spoke first of the second section of the bill, which is the one that deals with the requirement that the charge shall be delivered before argument of counsel, except in States where the practice is otherwise. I wanted to ask the Senator how it worked in practice to follow the procedure there indicated of allowing counsel to have the last word, as it were, before the case goes to the jury, rather than that the jury should go out with the instructions of the court ringing in their ears.

Mr. NORRIS. My own idea is that the judge ought not to be required to deliver his instructions before the argument. He ought to give his instructions after the argument.

Mr. PEPPER. As I understand it, the bill provides otherwise.

Mr. NORRIS. The bill, unless there is a different practice prevailing in the State courts, makes it conform to that practice, whichever way it may be.

Mr. FLETCHER. The amendment provides "at the conclusion of the evidence and before argument."

Mr. NORRIS. It is provided that if the State practice is, otherwise he shall follow the State practice.

Mr. PEPPER. I happen not to be familiar with the practice in accordance with which the counsel make argument after the charge has been delivered to the jury. The traditional practice in my part of the country has been the other way. I wanted information from the Senator or from any Senator who could give it to me as to what the actual operation is.

Mr. NORRIS. The actual operation under the bill, as I understand it, in the Senator's State would be to follow the practice, whatever it may be, in his State.

Mr. PEPPER. I am not thinking of it exclusively with reference to my own State. I want to vote intelligently upon the measure, which will be nation-wide in its application. I want enlightenment on the question of the practical expediency of allowing counsel to comment upon the charge of the court already delivered, and to tell the jury what counsel think of the court rather than leaving it with the court to tell the jury what the court thinks of counsel. I have often been in a position, after hearing the charge of the court, of great anxiety to rise and ventilate my views about what the judge had said for the benefit of the jury, but it has always seemed to me a wholesome restraint upon me that I was not at liberty to do so. I want to know how it works when it is the other way around.

Mr. NORRIS. I suppose that if an attorney was arguing the case following the instruction of the court to the jury, and the instruction of the court to the jury was contrary to what the attorney was advocating and perhaps believed was the law in the case, it would make it embarrassing for him. It would be just as embarrassing, however, if the attorney had told the jury what he thought about it and the judge told the jury that the law was something else.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. NORRIS. With pleasure.

Mr. CURTIS. I merely want to say a word in connection with what the Senator just said. That has been the experience of practitioners in Kansas, where we have, under the code, instruction by the judge before argument. In the United States courts in Kansas the judge does not instruct until after the argument of counsel. Of course, if counsel states the law one way and the judge states it another way, counsel may find himself embarrassed.

Mr. NORRIS. That would be true whether he said it before the judge charged the jury or afterwards. Of course, it is the duty of the jury, and the judge will tell them so if the question arises, to take their view of the law from the court and not from the attorneys.

Mr. CARAWAY. May I suggest that I do not presume there is a jurisdiction at all where the judge would not immediately stop an attorney if he would undertake to say that what the court said is the law is not the law.

Mr. NORRIS. I presume the court would stop him immediately.

Mr. CARAWAY. He must accept the law as given by the court. The only chance he has is to show, under the instructions of the court and the facts as testified to, that he is entitled to win. How much more intelligently he may adopt his argument to the facts when he knows what the court will declare the law to be than he could if first required to go ahead and say, "These are the facts and I think this is the law," and have the court then come along and say, "You are wrong about the law."

Mr. PEPPER. I would dislike to try a case under that practice against the Senator from Arkansas, because I know that without violating the rule he would manage to get across to the jury the idea that he and not the court knew the law.

Mr. CARAWAY. Of course, that is a left-handed compliment, in which the Senator undertakes to say, without quite saying it, that I am unfair.

Mr. NORRIS. The first people in the world to detect whether the attorney is unfair would be the jury.

Mr. CARAWAY. Or some other lawyer.

Mr. NORRIS. They are not numskulls and they know what is going on. They know lots of times better than the lawyer whether the lawyer is fair or whether he is trying to take advantage or trying to make a misrepresentation. But we can not cure those things. There is no attempt to cure them by this legislation.

The great evil in it is the danger that the United States judge from his exalted and dignified position will drop to the jury opinions as to the weight of the evidence, the credibility of the witnesses, and so forth, and thus control the decision of the jury in a line where he has not any business to control it. If he were compelled to submit his instructions in writing to the jury, then everything he says is a matter of record, and if it is reversible error the appellate court will reverse the case. In addition to that, the jury can take the instructions with them to the jury room. They are written. The jurors can look at them and reexamine them at their leisure if they should have a dispute as to what the law is on any point involved in the case.

I will say to my friend from Pennsylvania that it will not work out in practice like he has outlined; at least, I have not seen it work out that way in practice, and I have seen it operate for a great many years. It is very seldom if the court instructs a jury after the argument that there is ever a moment of debate. The judge will prepare his instructions during the trial of the case. Assuming it is a case that runs over several days, he will dictate the issues as they are outlined in the pleadings before half of the evidence is given, and his stenographer will write them out. During the argument to the jury he himself may write instructions. Something may arise during the argument that makes him think he ought to give another instruction on this point or that. So when the attorneys are through with the argument the judge starts in to give his instructions.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I think a great deal of this measure. I have seen the judge of a Federal court in an actual case on trial before that court sit and hear the testimony all presented and hear the arguments of counsel, with his back generally turned to counsel, and when they finished address the jury and say, "Gentlemen of the jury, you shall bring in a verdict for the plaintiff in this case. You can retire and return with your verdict." That is all the charge he made and that was simply a direction upon the facts. I submit that ought to be changed.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not want to be considered as claiming that a judge should not give a direct instruction for a verdict either for the plaintiff or the defendant if the evidence and the law warrant it in his judgment. But in a disputed case, in a contested case, the judge ought to remain entirely within his realm, and all United States judges do not do that. It is quite a common thing for some judges—not all of them of course, not half of them, but there are United States judges who, by a little remark here and a little remark there, express an opinion that they have no business to express that will influence the jury and control their verdict.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I wish to inquire of the Senator whether under the bill as drafted the trial judge would be at liberty in his opinion to direct a compulsory nonsuit in a proper case.

Mr. NORRIS. I should think so.

Mr. PEPPER. The provision is that he may direct a verdict. There is a proviso which saves that right to direct a verdict, but it seems to me if it is necessary by proviso to save the right of the court to direct a verdict, the proviso ought to cover also the right to enter a compulsory nonsuit.

Mr. NORRIS. It may be that it should. I am not trying to debate the details of the bill but the general principle. The thing in which I am particularly interested and that which I think the bill in the main seeks to serve—I mean the main object of it—is to compel a United States judge to give his instructions in writing instead of giving them orally, unless counsel in the case agree that he should give them orally.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President—

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. GEORGE. In reply to the suggestion or inquiry propounded by the Senator from Pennsylvania, it seems to me that the language of the bill preserves the right to direct or instruct a verdict, and it would necessarily follow that the court would have the right to sustain the motion, if there was in fact no issue presented by the evidence in the case.

Mr. NORRIS. I think so.

Mr. GEORGE. In one case he is dealing with a motion and in the other with the finding of the jury.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; that is true.

Mr. GEORGE. Wherever the jury is to find, either at the instruction of the court or as a result of deliberation on the part of the jury, then there should be no expression of opinion except where there is no issuable defense. But where it is simply a question of a motion—a nonsuit case—I think it would necessarily follow that that power would still remain in the court. That is a matter that always has been in the court uninfluenced by the jury.

Mr. PEPPER. Would the Senator from Nebraska be of the opinion that the language of the first section of the bill makes it unlawful for the court to comment upon the probative value of different kinds of evidence, as, for instance, to call attention to the fact that evidence less than the best evidence has been received, or to the different degrees of credibility of different kinds of documentary evidence? The provision is very sweeping, and I merely am desirous of eliciting the impression of the Senator respecting whether or not we are going a little too far in trying to accomplish a good purpose.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not see anything that might be so construed in the language, unless it would be the amendment which reads "or value of the evidence." The judge ought not to express an opinion as to the credibility of witnesses. He will instruct the jury about the credibility of witnesses, and those instructions will not be written for a particular trial, but he will have them in blank, because the instruction in regard to the credibility of witnesses would be the same in one case as in another. In criminal cases there will be always the questions as to reasonable doubt and the burden of proof; but instructions on such questions will be general. The judges always read them to the jury, and have probably prepared them in advance, in view of the pendency of the case. So the burden of preparing the instruction is not so great as it would seem.

I should like to say to the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] before I go further into the question which has been asked by the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PEPPER] that in a given State attorneys who practice in the United States courts and also in the State courts, usually prefer the practice in the State courts. In the United States court the judge is at perfect liberty to say anything he pleases and does not have to write his instructions down, but in a State court he is compelled to put in writing every word of instruction to the jury, and the State supreme court has always held that if a judge expressed an opinion to the jury as to the credibility of a witness, and so forth, it would be a reversible error. I repeat that attorneys practicing in both those courts, one day in one court and one day in the other, so far as I know in my whole experience without a single exception, prefer to practice in the State courts. There may be those who do not, but those of whom I have any recollection of ever having heard them express an opinion thought the practice in the State courts was much more preferable and much more satisfactory and resulted in a greater degree of justice in the administration of the law.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I was not venturing to differ from the Senator upon that point. I wished to direct attention to the language of the amendment as it appears in the eighth line with special reference to the words "or value of the evidence." That language gives me some concern.

Mr. NORRIS. It may be that there is some danger in that. I do not care to discuss it now, because the bill has gone over anyway. It may be that there ought to be some change in that language.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. GEORGE. If the bill is going over, I merely wish to make a suggestion.

Mr. NORRIS. I yield the floor.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator from Pennsylvania. I do not think in any case the trial judge ought to express an opinion as to the weight of the evidence. I think he ought to give the rules by which the jury are to weigh the evidence and to let them weigh the evidence. We have in my State what we know as the "dumb" act. It prevents a judge from expressing an opinion on any disputed issue of fact or as to the credibility of any witness or as to the weight of any evidence; and yet the judge can give all of the rules by which evidence is weighed; but he must leave it to the jury to determine the weight of evidence and the credibility of the witnesses, under proper instructions.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield for a question?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. In the Senator's State, is it within the power of the trial judge to order a new trial if he regards the verdict as against the weight of evidence?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Does not the Senator think it is pretty hard on litigants to expose them to two or three trials when they might just as well obtain the result in the first trial?

Mr. GEORGE. No; I do not think so, Mr. President, because there exists quite a different situation. The jury ought to be at liberty to find its own verdict, uninfluenced by expression or intimation of opinion by the judge. If, after the jury has found its verdict, the judge is not satisfied with it, if he does not believe it is supported by the evidence or it is strongly against the weight of the evidence, then he has the additional power, as a safeguard to the litigant, to exercise his authority and to grant a retrial of the case.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I agree with the Senator that the jury must find, and ought always to be, the judges of the credibility of the witnesses; but it seems to me that it is exposing the litigants to unnecessary delay and expense to force them to try their cases over and over again. I remember one case in which I was counsel where we had to try the case six times because the jury persisted in believing evidence that the court thought was unworthy of credence. We would have secured a much quicker result, at much less expense to the Government and to the litigant, if we had reached a result in the first place and then had an appeal.

Mr. GEORGE. It is quite true that does occasionally happen, of course; but the true rule, in my judgment, is—and I think this bill is worthy of our support—that the judge ought not to express or intimate an opinion on any disputed issue of fact, or on the weight of any of the evidence in the case, or on the credibility of any of the witnesses who testify in the case; but if there is a verdict which offends the conscience of the judge, after it has been rendered, he should exercise his authority and set the verdict aside.

However, I believe further that when the case comes on a review, as is provided in the laws of many of the States, the verdict should stand if it is supported by legal evidence, although the judge might think that the jury could well have found, or should have found, from his point of view the contrary verdict. In other words, a judge ought not to set his own finding of fact up against the finding of the jury, because the jury ought to determine the facts in the case.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield first to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. In further answer to the suggestion of the Senator from Pennsylvania, who says that the practice he suggests would save time and the expense of further litigation, let me say that, on the contrary, I recall a number of cases in my own practice where at the close of the testimony the trial judge would turn to the jury and say, "Gentlemen of the jury, the court instructs you to bring in a verdict for the defendant." That put it upon the plaintiff to appeal to the court of appeals; and I recall in one particular case, when the facts of the case were stated by the counsel for the plaintiff, the appellate court, sitting in Cincinnati, turned to the lawyer on the other side and asked, "Has the counsel for the plaintiff stated these facts correctly?" and the counsel said, "Yes, your honor"; and then, after a whispered conference the court said "Well, on that state of facts, we simply reverse the case right here and now." That put the plaintiff to a litigation that he ought never to have been put to, and that he would not have been put to but for the power or the exercise of that power—I do not think there is any authority in the Federal Constitution for it—but for the exercise of that power by the trial judge. I have known of other cases of like kind which put the plaintiff to the expense and the delay of appealing. While justice was finally done, it was after great expense and delay. So it makes both ways, as the Senator from Georgia so well said a few moments ago.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. In section 1 the power to direct a verdict is retained in the trial court; so that it would not affect such a case as that to which the Senator from Tennessee has referred.

Mr. GEORGE. That is right; the power to direct a verdict is retained. The power of the court to sustain a motion as to the legal sufficiency of the evidence, of course, is not affected by this bill, because that never has been a question for a jury, but it often works a hardship on litigants where the judge has erroneously sustained or erroneously overruled a motion for a nonsuit or has erroneously directed a verdict.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. Certainly.

Mr. KING. Or erroneously submitted a case to the jury when he ought to have directed a verdict.

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; when he ought to have directed a verdict. Of course, the converse of that is also true; but the clear distinction, it seems to me, is that it is the province of the jury to determine the facts of the case, the disputed issues of fact, and it is not the province of the court, and the court ought never to set aside a verdict merely because, in his opinion, the jury could have found the other way. He should set aside a verdict only when it is so strongly against the weight of the evidence as to shock his moral conscience as a judge or when there is no legal evidence to sustain it. He ought not, however, to confuse the function of the judge with that of the jury, one being to find the facts and the other being to administer the law through the medium of both the judge himself and the jury.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President—

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator from Georgia has stated very well what seems to me to be the true principle, and with that I have no quarrel whatever. Now, will the Senator answer a further question? If the testimony, being so far on one side or the other that a verdict contrary to it would shock the discretion of the trial judge, does not the Senator think that, as a matter of common sense, the judge should state the fact to the jury at the time instead of keeping it a secret that he thinks the testimony is overwhelmingly on one side? Does not the Senator think that the ends of justice would be furthered by such procedure?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not, Mr. President; because it involves a confusion of the function of the judge with that of the jury. It never is, in causes properly for a jury, the province of the court to find the facts; and if the facts, as the jury has found the facts, offend the judge, then he has the power to grant a new trial and to send the case back to another jury; but he ought not to go outside of his province as a judge and go over into the province of the jury.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I quite agree with the Senator as to that.

Mr. GEORGE. I see the Senator's point; it looks as though our courts ought to be purely business institutions and litigation ought to be handled purely as a business proposition and never as a matter of sentiment. Yet so long as we have the jury and so long as we have the judge, they should remain in their respective spheres and should not overlap one the other; but the judge has always the power to set aside a verdict, and will set it aside so long as he pleases under the usual practice and order a retrial of the case before another jury.

Mr. NORRIS. And it is not even a reversible error if he exercises that discretion.

Mr. GEORGE. It is not reversible error at all; it is discretionary with the court.

Mr. KING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does not the Senator state the proposition too broadly? Does not the Senator believe that it is the duty of the court, after the evidence is all in, if he believes a verdict ought not to be rendered for the plaintiff, if a verdict shall be granted for the plaintiff, to set it aside or direct a verdict or grant a voluntary nonsuit?

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, he could not grant an involuntary nonsuit if there was any legal evidence to sustain that verdict, whatever might be the opinion of the judge; and he ought not to direct a verdict even though he believed that a contrary verdict would be strongly against the weight of the evidence and would shock him, because it is not his duty to weigh the facts under either the English or the American system of jurisprudence.

The power of a Federal judge to express an opinion upon a disputed question of fact, or upon the credibility of a witness, is not nearly so broad as it is commonly supposed to be. As a matter of fact, a Federal judge has not any right to express an opinion upon the credibility of particular testimony; and when it comes to the final test he must say to the jury that the credibility of that witness is for the jury. He may give to the jury the benefit of his experience and of his observation and of his ability to apply rules of evidence to human testimony; but, after all, he can not invade the province of the jury.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. GEORGE. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. I indorse every statement that the distinguished Senator from Georgia has made on this subject; and now I want to ask him about the proviso:

Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prevent the court directing a verdict when the same may be required or permitted as a matter of law.

Before the Senator answers the question, may I call his attention to the provisions of the Federal Constitution under which Federal judges must act, and under which only they must act? The sixth amendment provides:

In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury—

Of course, that does not mean one where the judge sways the decision—of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation—

And so forth.

The seventh amendment is as follows:

In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed $20, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved; and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise reexamined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.

There are one or two questions that I want to ask the Senator about that.

Under the sixth amendment, does the Senator believe that a Federal judge has the right to direct a verdict in criminal prosecutions?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not—that is, not a verdict of "guilty." He may sustain what in effect at common law was a demurrer to the evidence.

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course; I understand that, but I am talking about directing a verdict. In the next place, his only authority is under this constitutional provision. There is no provision that he may comment upon the evidence; that he may weigh the evidence and direct the jury what verdict to find; so it seems to me that under the seventh amendment it was never intended that a judge should direct a verdict, and I should like to have the opinion of the Senator from Georgia on that subject.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I should not be able to agree that the judge never should direct a verdict; because if there is no legal evidence—that is, no evidence which is sufficient to sustain a verdict—then the judge should direct the verdict as a matter of right to the litigants and as a matter of relieving them of unnecessary expense of future trials.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to interrupt him again, that is to a great extent a matter of opinion. I have known cases where the judge had directed a verdict on the ground that there was no evidence, and the case went to the court of appeals, and the court of appeals reversed it and said that it did show evidence; it went to a jury again, and the jury found upon that very evidence in favor of the plaintiff, and the verdict was paid.

Mr. GEORGE. That is quite true. That is where the judge erroneously adjudged that there was not evidence which would have sustained a verdict contrary to the one directed by him.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SWANSON. It seems to me this bill is clearly right. If a man wants to take the opinion of a judge on the law and evidence, he can demur to the evidence, and if there is nothing there to sustain a verdict the demurrer to the evidence is sustained, and the judge renders his verdict, or he can move for a new trial; but of all the outrageous things that I have frequently seen in Federal courts, one of the most outrageous is the judge delivering the law at the conclusion of the argument and then taking charge of the evidence, too. In such a case he is both judge and jury.

The Anglo-Saxon idea is to let the judge administer the law and let the jury administer the facts, and let the combination of the two apply the facts to the law as propounded by the judge. That is the Virginia system. If a man is satisfied that there is no evidence to justify a verdict, he can demur to the evidence, and the court then has jurisdiction of both the evidence and the law; but a man ought not to be driven to the necessity of having a judge, without a demurrer, passing on both the law and the evidence.

Mr. GEORGE. I quite agree with the observations of the Senator from Virginia, and I have taken up quite too long on this measure. I merely rose to reply to some suggestion or inquiry made by the Senator from Pennsylvania. While I am on my feet, I may say that it often has been a debated question whether in any case a judge should direct a verdict, but it is entirely too senseless a procedure to prohibit the judge from directing a verdict when there is no legal evidence to sustain that verdict, and therefore I think he ought to have that power. I think that ought to be retained by him.

Mr. KING. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. GEORGE. Just one minute. I think, also, that the judge should have, and he does have, even under the so-called "dumb" acts, which are much more drastic than this bill, the power to summarize the evidence. He has the power to give all the rules by which evidence is weighed. He has the power to suggest what is evidence of first importance and what is evidence of second importance. In other words, he has the full power to bring to the trial of the case those concomitants that have grown up around trial by jury in the English and in the American system.

I think this bill is altogether worthy of the support of the Senate, as I have already suggested, because I think it will remove the temptation to abuse the discretion and power which Federal judges have sometimes exercised. I would not myself require the judge to put his charge in writing, though I have seen instances which appeared to justify so drastic a provision as that. I think the better practice is, as stated in this bill as originally drawn, that on the demand or request of counsel the judge should reduce his charge to writing; but I appreciate the objection to that made by the author of the bill, the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a suggestion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield; but I am perfectly willing to yield the floor, because I did not intend to occupy it so long.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It occurs to me that the principal difficulty with the bill as it now stands is that it forces a peculiar practice on some of the States in which no court at present follows that practice. For example, in Pennsylvania we have in no court, so far as I know, the practice of reducing the charge to writing before it is delivered. I quite see the force of the suggestion that in States where that is the general custom it ought to be followed in the Federal courts; and as a practical suggestion may I suggest that the bill go over now, and that such slight amendment as it needs to protect the local practice and to make it uniform can be doubtless agreed to in a few brief moments, and then we will not take so much time in debate when the bill comes up the next time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest to the Senator from Pennsylvania that the bill has gone over.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I was going to suggest that the discussion go over, as well as the bill.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside in order that we may consider Senate bill 2704, order of business 302. I do not think it will lead to any discussion. It is simply a bill for the adjustment of claims growing out of overcharges and undercharges arising from the reciprocal relation between the railroads and the shippers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2704. Is there objection?

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, with the understanding that the bill will not entail any discussion, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2704) to amend paragraph (3), section 16, of the interstate commerce act, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (3) of section 16 of the interstate commerce act be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"(3) (a) All actions at law by carriers subject to this act for recovery of their charges, or any part thereof, shall be begun within three years from the time the cause of action accrues and not after.

"(b) All complaints against carriers subject to this act for the recovery of damages not based on overcharges shall be filed with the commission within two years from the time the cause of action accrues and not after, subject to subdivision (d).

"(c) For recovery of overcharges action at law shall be begun or complaint filed with the commission against carriers subject to this act within three years from the time the cause of action accrues and not after, subject to subdivision (d), except that if claim for the overcharge has been presented in writing to the carrier within the three-year period of limitation said period shall be extended to include six months from the time notice in writing is given by the carrier to the claimant of disallowance of the claim, or any part or parts thereof, specified in the notice.

"(d) If on or before expiration of the two-year period of limitation in subdivision (b) or of the three-year period of limitation in subdivision (c) a carrier subject to this act begins action under subdivision (a) for recovery of charges in respect of the same transportation service, or, without beginning action, collects charges in respect of that service, said period of limitation shall be extended to include 90 days from the time such action is begun or such charges are collected by the carrier.

"(e) The cause of action in respect of a shipment of property shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to accrue upon delivery or tender of delivery thereof by the carrier and not after.

"(f) A petition for the enforcement of an order of the commission for the payment of money shall be filed in the district court or the State court within one year from the date of the order and not after.

"(g) The term 'overcharges' as used in this section shall be deemed to mean charges for transportation services in excess of those applicable thereto under the tariffs lawfully on file with the commission.

"(h) The provisions of this paragraph (3) shall extend to and embrace cases in which the cause of action has heretofore accrued, as well as cases in which the cause of action may hereafter accrue, except that actions at law begun or complaints filed with the commission against carriers subject to this act for the recovery of overcharges where the cause of action accrued on or after March 1, 1920, shall not be deemed to be barred under subdivision (c) if such actions shall have been begun or complaints filed prior to enactment of this paragraph or within six months thereafter."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have some explanation of the bill.

Mr. SMITH. As I stated, it is simply a bill for the purpose of adjusting the statute of limitations in reference to both the shippers and the railroads.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is a bill that ought to be passed by all means, as I believe, and I hope there will be no objection to it.

Mr. KING. I thought the Senator from South Carolina was about to offer some explanation of the bill.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, if the Senate desires I will read the report on the bill, in order that Senators may get a clear idea of just what it means.

The Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2704) to amend section 16, paragraph 3, to extend the time of filing claims for overcharge, having considered the same, report favorable thereon and recommend that the bill pass.

The proposed amendment extending the time for filing the claims of the shippers from two to three years is desirable, inasmuch as carriers are now allowed three years within which time to institute suits for the recovery of undercharges.

The Interstate Commerce Commission in a letter to the committee under date of February 25, 1924, in reference to the proposed legislation calls attention to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Kansas City Southern Railway Co. v. Wolfe et al. (261 U. S. 133), which says:

"By its decision of February 19, 1923, in that case the court held that actions begun in the courts for the recovery of charges said to be in excess of the published rates when properly applied must be filed within the two-year period of limitations provided by section 16 of the interstate commerce act, that the lapse of time had destroyed any liability by the carrier to the shipper or his assignee for the alleged overcharge and that its demurrer, because the claim accrued more than two years prior to the institution of the action, should have been sustained. In so holding the court quoted with approval from what it said in Phillips Co. v. Grand Trunk Western Railway Co. (236 U. S. 662, 667), to the effect that the lapse of time not only bars the remedy but destroys the liability whether complaint is filed with us or suit is brought in a court of competent jurisdiction, and that the carrier was bound to claim the benefit of the statute and could do so by general demurrer.

"Prior to this decision carriers paid admitted overcharges if claims were presented to them within the periods of limitations provided by the State statutes, but under the doctrine of this case they are prohibited from paying, and the majority of the carriers now decline to pay, admitted overcharges unless action at law was begun in court or complaint filed with us within the statutory period provided by section 16. It is understood that a few of the carriers are not following the decision in the Wolf case. As a consequence of the decision in the Wolf case an increasingly large number of complaints for the recovery of overcharges are being filed with us by shippers, while others are resorting to court action."

In paragraph (c) of the proposed amendment provision is made for extending said period of limitation to include six months from the time notice in writing is given by the carrier to the claimant of disallowance of the claim in which the shipper may institute suit for the recovery of the overcharge.

I will state just here that that is really one of the most important items in this, a provision that in any case where the carrier disallows a claim the shipper has the right to file suit within six months thereafter.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAVANNAH RIVER BRIDGE, SOUTH CAROLINA AND GEORGIA.

Mr. HARRIS. I understand the Senator from New Mexico will not object to my request, and I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 2538) to extend the time for the completion of the construction of a bridge across the Savannah River between the counties of Aiken, S. C., and Richmond, Ga.

Mr. BURSUM. With the understanding that the consideration of the bill will not take up any considerable time in debate, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, on page 1, line 3, after the word "the," to strike out the words "time for the completion of the construction of a bridge and approaches thereto across the Savannah River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation between the counties of Aiken, S. C., and Richmond, Ga., at or near Augusta, Ga., authorized by the act of Congress approved August 7, 1919, is hereby extended to August 7, 1925," and to insert in lieu thereof the words "act approved August 7, 1919, authorizing the counties of Aiken, S. C., and Richmond, Ga., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Savannah River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation at or near Augusta, Ga., be, and the same is hereby, revived and reenacted: Provided, That this act shall be null and void unless the actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be completed by August 7, 1925," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act approved August 7, 1919, authorizing the counties of Aiken, S. C., and Richmond, Ga., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Savannah River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation at or near Augusta, Ga., be, and the same is hereby, revived and reenacted: Provided, That this act shall be null and void unless the actual construction of the bridge herein authorized be completed by August 7, 1925.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to revive and reenact the act entitled 'An act authorizing the counties of Aiken, S. C., and Richmond, Ga., to construct a bridge across the Savannah River at or near Augusta, Ga.,' approved August 7, 1919."

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 5) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil and Mexican Wars and to certain widows, former widows, minor children, and helpless children of said soldiers and sailors, and to widows of the War of 1812, and to certain Indian-war veterans and their widows, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill has not been read. The Secretary will read the bill.

The bill was read.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I desire to make my position understood with reference to the pending bill. I am opposed to paying a pension to any able-bodied soldier. Under a law enacted a few years ago all soldiers of the Civil War were made eligible for pensions, whether they were disabled or not. I think that was an error. That bill ought not to have been passed; but having passed, I feel that the pending bill is entirely out of place and is discriminatory against the soldiers of the Spanish-American War. I yield to no man in my respect for and admiration of a true soldier, irrespective of whatever war he fought in, but I feel that Congress is going to extremes in granting pensions. It seems that under any excuse or pretense great sums of money are to be paid out in pensions.

I am told that when President McKinley was a Member of the House many years ago and reported a bill increasing pensions he stated that would be the last increase that would ever be made in pensions for Civil War veterans. Instead of that being the case, in 1918 a large increase was granted, in 1920 another increase was granted, and now in 1924 a tremendous increase is asked for.

I do not know where we are drifting if we keep on extending this sentimentality. In fact, I hardly know how to characterize the practice of paying out pensions to people who are called soldiers, not necessarily who were wounded, not necessarily who were ever in a battle or anything of that sort.

I am heartily in favor, of course, of taking care of the wounded, the disabled, and their dependents, of any war, whether it was the Civil War or the war with Spain or the last war. But I do not believe the people of the country where these pensions go favor this method of partiality. It is partisan legislation, selective legislation, and it does seem to me that the Senate is stampeded. When a bill of this sort comes in it seems there is no effort to halt it or to prevent its passage. The Congress had the liberality or lack of decision last year to try to pass a bill here for people who dug post holes during the Civil War. I shall not be surprised if after a short while an effort is made to pension everybody who lived above the Mason and Dixon line, irrespective of what was done by them.

We were told many years ago that there would be no further increase in pensions, but in 1923 we paid out $263,000,000, the largest amount that has ever been paid since the Civil War. It does seem to me that our good Committee on Pensions should stop to think about the people at home, the people who have to pay the taxes, the people who have to work, and that they should try to extend some justice and consideration to the people who pay the expenses of the Government. It is not only the soldiers and their dependents who need money with which to live, but the general population needs it. I feel that it is unwise to set up one class of our citizens who think they can live off the toil of the other classes.

Under the provisions of the pending bill the Civil War soldiers are to receive $72 a month. Under the present law they get $50 a month and in case they need an attendant, by going through a certain process $22 a month more is granted to them. From what I have read and heard I understand that it is pretty much a mere form that they have to go through, and that the increase is nearly always granted upon request. In fact, I am afraid that Congress put that provision in the law in order to invite soldiers to ask for greater pensions.

Having been raised in the country as I was and knowing how hard it is to make money, I want to say that this amount of over a quarter of a billion dollars paid out in one year for this one purpose is an excessive sum. I can not see any justification for it. It seems to me to be a short-sighted policy upon the part of Congress and particularly the Committee on Pensions to bring in any such bill at this time. We are already taking good care of the soldiers and of their widows, notwithstanding some of the widows are quite young. I will not impugn their motives for marrying these old gentlemen. That has been commented on in the public press.

Furthermore, the bill enlarges the scope of those who are to be entitled to draw pensions. It takes in the home guard or militia, or by whatever name it may be known, composed of people who did not serve in the war at all, but merely were ready to serve. I think even some of those whose names were on the muster roll for only 90 days are to draw a pension.

Furthermore, I can not see the necessity of giving a pension to the soldiers of the Philippine insurrection or the Chinese Boxer rebellion, because my recollection is that those soldiers belonged to the Regular Army. They were volunteers, as were the soldiers in the war with Spain. They are taken care of under the general law and ought not to be included in the pending bill.

Another discrepancy found in the bill is that the Spanish-American War veteran can not draw a pension unless he is disabled, either totally or partially, and then the amount is much less than it is for the Civil War veteran. To my mind, the bill is gotten up simply as a bounty for the Civil War veteran.

After a while we will have a pension roll alone that will amount to more than it cost to operate the Government a few years ago. When we stop to think about the expenses of the people, the expenses of the Government, it is enough to require us to call a halt. It will be recalled that just a few years ago, before the last war, the national debt was only $1,300,000,000. That increased to about $26,000,000,000, but has been reduced to something like $22,000,000,000. That shows, however, that it is time for the legislators of the country to be very guarded when we pass appropriation bills and increase taxes upon the taxpayers of the country. The people are already burdened beyond endurance. We just read in the paper yesterday where the ministry of France fell because of a pension bill, and that ought to be a warning to us. It is very easy for legislators to impose burdens upon the people, but when the burdens become unbearable and politics get too hot, the legislators can resign or retire, but they leave the burdens still hanging over the people. We ought to weigh all the facts very carefully before we vote away the people's money in that way.

Now, Mr. President, I want to move to amend the bill in various particulars.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DIAL. I yield.

Mr. BURSUM. I desire to ask that the committee amendments be considered first, and then if the Senator has some other amendments to propose they can be offered after the committee amendments are disposed of.

Mr. DIAL. That is all right. I do not ask for any vote on my amendments now. A good many Senators are absent this afternoon. I would just like to note in the Record what I expect to do at a later time. I shall not insist on offering them now. I shall just note them in the Record. I want to get them noted in the Record, so that if we do not vote on the bill to-day Senators can see in the Record what they are.

Mr. BURSUM. The Senator merely suggests the proposed amendments?

Mr. DIAL. Yes. I shall ask no vote at all to-day. I shall later move to strike out all of section 5, beginning with line 14, on page 6, and down to line 14, on page 7. Then I shall move to strike out, on page 8, in line 16, all after the word "Spain" down to the word "service" in line 18.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the Senator from South Carolina is merely giving notice of the amendments that he intends to offer at a later time?

Mr. DIAL. That is all. I do not see any necessity for including the soldiers of the Philippine insurrection or the Chinese Boxer rebellion, there mentioned, because I understand they were men in the Regular Army enlistment and are taken care of by the general law.

I shall also move to amend, on page 6, line 12, at the end of section 5, by adding the proviso:

Provided, That the provisions of this section shall apply to widows and dependents of those who served during the war with Spain.

Then, Mr. President, to-morrow, or when the bill shall be regularly before the Senate for consideration, I propose to move, on page 9, to change the compensation fixed for veterans of the Spanish-American War, so as to grant those veterans some increases.

As I said before, these soldiers are receiving most generous treatment and as large compensation, it seems to me, as they are entitled to or as the country can afford to pay them. A service of only 90 days is required, which is a very short time, indeed, for which to put such a burden upon the people, especially when those soldiers were not wounded or disabled in any manner.

As I said on yesterday, Mr. President, pension legislation has been a very expensive proposition for the United States. There have been paid out in Civil War pensions $5,772,000,000, nearly $2,000,000,000 more than the cost of the Civil War. I do not recall how many slaves there were in the South, but no doubt the Government could have paid the South handsomely for those slaves and have saved a great deal of money besides.

I feel that the reason for this proposed increase of pensions is somewhat sectional. I regret to say so, but I very much fear that is one of the causes why the increase is asked for. I feel that we in the South are either in the Union or that we were out of it. All sections of the Union ought to be treated fairly and equitably. When the Government needed help in the war with Spain and called for soldiers, the whole country went to its rescue. When the Government needed soldiers in the World War, there was no slacking on the part of the good people of any section. Liberty bonds were bought, and all the fair-minded and patriotic people served the country to the best of their ability. It seems to me, after the great destruction which was wrought by the World War, when we consider the debt of nations and of individuals, amounting, I believe, to something like half of the value of the property in the world, the time has certainly arrived for us to call a halt. What we need is not to encourage people to look toward Washington for help, but we need to help the people to help themselves. Let them bear their burdens, each and every one his part.

Now, I should like to ask the Senator from New Mexico, if he will allow me, what do the inmates of the old soldiers' home draw per month?

Mr. BURSUM. They draw their pensions.

Mr. DIAL. And they get their support in addition to their pensions, do they not?

Mr. BURSUM. Yes; the soldiers in the homes are taken care of in different ways.

Mr. DIAL. But the inmates of the soldiers' homes draw the same pension as they would were they outside of those homes?

Mr. BURSUM. Yes.

Mr. DIAL. That is my understanding.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President—

Mr. DIAL. I withdraw the suggestion if the Senator from New Mexico desires that I shall do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina having made the suggestion of the absence of a quorum, it can not now be withheld. The Secretary will call the roll.

The principal clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Ferris	Kendrick	Reed, Mo.
Brandegee	Fess	Keyes	Reed, Pa.
Brookhart	Fletcher	King	Robinson
Broussard	Frazier	Ladd	Sheppard
Bursum	George	McKellar	Smith
Cameron	Gerry	McKinley	Stephens
Capper	Gooding	McNary	Swanson
Caraway	Hale	Neely	Trammell
Couzens	Harris	Norris	Wadsworth
Cummins	Harrison	Oddie	Walsh, Mass.
Curtis	Heflin	Pepper	Walsh, Mont.
Dale	Howell	Pittman	Watson
Dial	Johnson, Minn.	Ralston	Weller
Edwards	Jones, Wash.	Ransdell	Willis

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifty-six Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

WORLD COURT.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, out of order I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent. I ask unanimous consent to present a petition from the Ohio League of Women Voters, containing some 12,000 signatures, in behalf of the World Court. I ask that the receipt of the petition may be noted; that the foreword may be printed in the Record, it being a short paragraph, and that the petition may be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. REED of Missouri and Mr. McKINLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Mr. President, I think this is a highly appropriate time to offer a few observations on the so-called Court of International Justice.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not know whether the Senator objects to the request of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. REED of Missouri. I have not made any objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection to the request of the Senator from Ohio.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and the foreword ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FOREWORD.

Believing that the greatest need of the world to-day is international cooperation for peace and feeling convinced that the United States should become a member of the Permanent Court of International Justice, which is an immediate and practical step toward peace, the Ohio League of Women Voters, numbering 12,000 members, herewith submits a petition of 12,000 signatures from men and women of voting age in Ohio, with the earnest hope that the President and the Senate may act at once and favorably upon the proposal that the United States become a member of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

We, the undersigned, are glad to testify that these signatures are genuine and represent the deep conviction of the signers.

JULIETTE SESSIONS,

President Ohio League of Women Voters.

FRANCES HENDERSON

(Mrs. W. E. HENDERSON),

State Chairman of the Committee on International Cooperation to Prevent War.

Mr. McKINLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. REED of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. McKINLEY. I ask unanimous consent to present a petition of sundry members and friends of the Illinois League of Women Voters, signed by some 10,000 names, praying for the entrance of the United States into the Permanent Court of International Justice.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the petition will be received, out of order, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Are there any more petitions?

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, would the Senator mind yielding for a few moments to perfect the committee amendments on this bill, so as to have the bill printed?

Mr. REED of Missouri. I shall not take the whole afternoon. I should prefer to go on with what I have to say. I want to accommodate the Senator, but I hope he will not insist on that request.

Mr. President, I am trying to find the names of the members of the Court of International Justice. There is no Member of the Senate who knows these names, and no one of the 12,000 petitioners probably knows the names of the men to whom they want to consign the vital interests of the United States. So I think, for the edification of the Senate, and possibly for the instruction of the good people who have filed these petitions, which somebody financed, that it would be well to put into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the names of the men who constitute this so-called court.

With the selection of these names the United States had nothing to do. It had neither part nor lot in the organization of this so-called judicial tribunal. It is composed exclusively of foreigners, except one man who was named by a foreign power. Yet we have the astonishing fact that petitions can be filed here containing the names of thousands of good folks who are willing to plunge the United States into a court with the personnel of which they are not acquainted, and with the rules and regulations and laws of which, if any there be, governing the court, we have no part in the making, and can have at the present time no part in changing or altering. The spectacle of people demanding that this Government shall assent to entering a tribunal of the kind I have described is, therefore, one which calls for astonishment and wonder.

Manifestly some of these people think that entering the World Court carries with it no responsibility, involves no danger, and is somewhat akin to accepting an invitation to dinner, where you are at liberty to eat and drink what you desire, and leave the rest of the victuals alone.

Who compose this World Court? I am giving the personnel as I last heard it. It may have been changed at any time by the tribunal which created it, and of which we are not a member. Unless there has been some recent change, the President is Bernard Loder, of Holland. Who among these petitioners knows anything as to Bernard Loder's views touching the international rights of the United States? Which one of these petitioners and which one of these distinguished Senators can tell us anything whatsoever with reference to the character of thought which dominates Bernard Loder? They may answer to-morrow, but, if they answer to-morrow they will in the interim have been obliged to look up Bernard Loder in Who's Who in Europe. We know in a vague way that he is a man of some prominence in his own country, but I ask which one of you would be willing to submit a matter involving a private controversy of your clients to Bernard Loder without first finding out something more about him than you know at the present time? But with a generosity that is childlike these gentlemen come forward and propose that we shall submit what may mean the life or death of this Republic to a tribunal presided over by a man about whom they know substantially nothing.

The Vice President is Charles Andre Weiss, of France. Again I inquire, can either of these distinguished Senators rise in his place and tell us what are the views and opinions of Charles Andre Weiss touching international questions? Is he a man who wants the Ruhr invaded, who has sanctioned the presence of black troops in portions of Germany, who has been willing to violate the treaty of Versailles; or is he a man whose soul regards with abhorrence the spectacle of white women being practically dragged to brothels to become the victims of black savages imported from Africa?

Members: Viscount Robert Bannatyne Finlay, of Great Britain; Dionisio Anzilotti, of Italy; Rafael Altamira, of Spain. Now, just what does Rafael stand for? Which one of you is willing to submit your own controversy to this gentleman with the aristocratic name?

D. J. Nyholm, of Denmark; Max Huber, of Switzerland; Yorozu Oda, of Japan. Just how does this gentleman regard the policies of America? To what extent is he in sympathy with democratic and republican institutions? How far would he go in the rendition of ideal justice in a controversy between the white race and the brown race?

Ruy Barbosa, of Brazil; John Bassett Moore, of the United States, who was put in there by some other country, if I recall aright. I have forgotten what it was, but manifestly he is the decoy for the United States. He is the worm on the hook that is dropped in the spring waters to attract the hungry sucker; and it was undoubtedly the dangling of this American, who sees fit to represent another country and take a job to which he is appointed by a foreign power, that attracted the two Senators who present these petitions.

Then there is Antonio Sanchez de Bustamante, of Cuba. Now, of course, we know from that very name that anybody is safe in submitting any kind of a controversy, individual or international, to Bustamante. He represents a great country to our South that produces two things we need very much in this country according to the appetites but not according to the professions or votes of the statesmen of Washington. One is sugar, and the other is the thing that makes sugar palatable in a toddy; but his country stands to-day on its feet, because it is propped in its position by the United States. Here sits a man representing this little island to our South, and it is proposed that he shall sit upon a tribunal and decide the controversies between the United States and the great powers of the earth.

There are also four deputy judges: Michailo Yovanovitch, of the Serb-Croat-Slovene State; F. V. N. Belchmann, of Norway; Demetre Negulesco, of Rumania; and Chung-Hui Wang, of China.

Mr. President, some great genius might undertake to portray the farce of world politics; but if he were to succeed it would be only necessary for him to present a picture of these 11 men filing into a room and proposing to settle a controversy between the United States and Great Britain where there was really bad blood aroused.

Are they comparable with our own Supreme Court? Are they comparable in any way with the supreme courts of our several States? Yet we hesitate to submit personal controversies to these tribunals which we have created, and there are now on file in the Senate bills proposing to limit the power of our own Supreme Court.

I assert, and I shall prove, that the only thing about this Court of International Justice that bears the slightest resemblance to a court of justice, as we understand it, is to be found in the name "court," which it has adopted. You can not change facts by changing names. It was Abraham Lincoln who once said, "If I say that a dog's tail is a leg, how many legs will the dog have?" Instantly somebody said "Five." Lincoln said, "Oh, no; he will have four. Calling a tail a leg does not make it a leg." Calling a thing a court does not make it a court.

What is a court, as we understand it? First, there must be rules of law under which the tribunal is to act, and in this country—and I shall speak of American courts only—we have, first, provided for a scheme and plan of government which is ours, and which we alone may change and we alone may alter.

Second, we have provided for a Constitution of the United States which limits the power of every court of the land, and that Constitution we alone can change and we alone can alter.

Third, we have provided in the various States constitutions, adopted by the respective peoples thereof, and these in turn limit the powers of every court, and preserve and fortify the rights of every citizen, so that the courts may not go beyond the fixed limits of the constitution in imposing penalties or exacting judgments.

Fourth, we have a written code of law adapted by our own representatives in these respective States, and those laws are alterable at our will and pleasure, but not otherwise. The rights thereunder secured can not be changed or affected by any power whatsoever outside the boundaries of the United States. Let us compare this system of laws which restrict and limit the powers of American courts, with the rules and regulations, if any there be, which govern the so-called Court of International Justice.

There is no constitution to limit its powers; there is no legislative body to regulate its procedure; there are no precedents to govern its conduct. It proceeds, if there be anything connected with it that can by any stretch of words be called law, under what is sometimes termed "international law." But what, pray, is international law? It is not law at all in the sense in which we employ that term. It is at best certain rules, which the law writers have undertaken to evolve from the general customs and habits of nations and from treaty obligations which have been recognized by some nations and disregarded by others. So that it may be said that to all intents and purposes this body of men called a court must be a law unto themselves.

Mr. President, if it were proposed to set up in the United States a tribunal called a court which made its own law as it went along, that tribunal would be at once endowed with every quality that has cursed every tyranny of earth; for when you concentrate in one body of men the right to make its own rules and to regulate its own conduct, to write its own judgments, and to enforce its own decrees, you have created an absolute monarchy with every horrible feature attendant upon a one-man government, with all of the attributes that have made the tyrannies of earth hated by humanity and that have caused them to write their history in the blood and tears of suffering men and women. It is as bad to concentrate legislative and judicial and executive powers in the same body, whether you call it a court or whether you call it a king, in the one case as in the other.

It would be intolerable to say to our own great Supreme Court that it should decide questions as it might see fit, making its own rules and laws and regulating its own conduct. If we were to do that, it would become a judicial oligarchy. We would have erected upon the ruins of this Republic another oligarchy as bad as ever was set up by the monarchs of the past. Yet this is the inescapable position in which the advocates of this court find themselves.

If it should be said that some tribunal shall make the laws governing this court, I ask, What tribunal? Will it be the League of Nations, of which we are not a member? Or will it be the kings and the presidents and the rulers of foreign lands? By whomsoever the rules may be adopted, bear in mind that the United States will have one vote out of all the assembly, whether it represents a half dozen or represents all the nations of the earth. I say that the man or the woman who is willing to bind the United States to an unknown code of laws, to be adopted by foreign nations, and in which we have only a minority vote, is willing to take a most desperate chance on behalf of this Republic. Yet we are asked to enter the court; enter it, I presume, according to these petitions, without qualification; enter it just because the door is open and we are invited to enter; enter it without rules of law, without agreements, without treaties, without knowledge as to what jurisdiction it may attempt to exercise.

I repeat, sir, you would not think of conferring that power on the courts and judges of your own land. You would not dream of conferring that power upon the supreme courts of your own States, although the judges are selected from among your own people, although they owe allegiance to your flag, and although they are tied to you by citizenship, by the brotherhood of your race, and by common tenets of a common religion. You would not dream of it.

I call attention again, now, to the further safeguards you have drawn around your own courts. To begin with, you have deprived the judges of these courts, in suits at law and in many instances in suits in equity, of the right to decide a question of fact at all. You have conferred that right upon juries; and why upon juries? Because lying at the very base of the citadel of human liberty is this great principle, that in the last analysis no American citizen shall be deprived of his life, his liberty, or his property, save on the judgment of his peers, his fellow citizens, selected from the vicinage. Why are they selected from the vicinage, and why must they be of his peers?

Because the fathers, who knew something of the philosophy of government, recognized that no great act of tyranny could ever be made consummate if before that consummation 12 men, who were the neighbors of the man accused or the man brought to the bar in a civil suit, had adjudged that his life, his liberty, or his property should stand forfeit. So if tyranny ever reared its ugly head, if it every swept the land with its bloody sword, if it ever sought to strike at the heart of our liberty, it would be arrested in the courts of justice by the iron will and the patriotic hearts of the 12 men who knew they would likewise suffer if they enforced an unjust decree or a wicked law.

Is there in this international court anything corresponding to the jury? Are the questions of fact to be decided by our peers, our fellow citizens? They are not. They are to be decided by foreigners who may hate us and who may be glad of an opportunity to injure us.

Again, having impaneled this jury to pass upon the question of fact, they are to be presided over by a judge, and who is the judge? He is, in most of the States of the Union, selected by a small body of the people from among themselves. He is known to them. His life is known to them. His environments are known to them. The character of his intellect and the quality of his soul have been exposed to them. They trust him but not without limit. They give him his term of office for only a limited period in nearly every State of the Union, and they not only thus limit him but as I have said, they have limited him by constitutional enactments and by statutory law.

Then do we trust him, this judge selected from the best of our bar? Do we trust him merely to declare the law to the jury, leaving the jury to settle the facts? We do not, sir. We provide in every case where the amount in dispute exceeds a few paltry dollars for an appeal to another judicial tribunal, and that tribunal is selected by a different constituency. It is likewise governed by rules of law.

It sits in the full calm of after life to review the decisions of the judge. It writes its decision in the solemn records that are to remain there forever. Again, the citizen can not be deprived of his life, his liberty, or his property until the majority of that tribunal have acquiesced in the decision of the 12 men comprising the jury and in the decision of the trial judge.

We do not stop there. In many States more than one appeal is permitted, and in all States, wherever the rights of the citizen under the Constitution of the United States have been invaded, or wherever he has been denied the process of law according to the law of the land, he can carry his case to the Supreme Court of the United States. Thus, before the citizen can be deprived of his life, his liberty, or of his property, there must be an acquiescence in the decision by 12 of his own fellow citizens, affirmed by a judge selected generally from his own community, reaffirmed by a supreme court in his State, and finally, in a large number of cases, reaffirmed by the Federal Supreme Court.

How does that compare, sir, with this so-called Court of International Justice? When it has written its decree, where does the appeal lie? To what tribunal does your writ of error go? There is none. Judgment is final. It may be as arbitrary as can be conceived by human brain, it may be as vicious as the spawn of perdition; it may be as deadly as the poison distilled from the crooked teeth of a serpent, but there is no appeal and there is no court of review. The decision may have been obtained corruptly. It may have been coerced. But the execution, if it has power at all, issues forthwith; and the outrage becomes consummate.

But, Mr. President, there is another distinction between this court and the judicial tribunals of America. If one of the judges of our courts shall fail to perform his duty, if he be not retired by the expiration of the term of office, which is very frequent in most of the States of the Union, there is always the right of impeachment. There always hangs over every judge's head the impeachment sword, seldom used but always potential to arrest any judge who may be disposed to wickedly trample upon the rights of the litigants who appear before him. There is no such qualification, there is no such safeguard appertaining to this international tribunal.

Mr. President, there is another great distinction. The judges of our courts and the jurors of our courts must be disinterested. They must not be prejudiced and they must be without a financial interest or an interest arising from relationship or any kind of influence calculated to swerve them from the strict performance of their duties. Even the right to challenge the judge exists, and in the upper courts the judges promptly disqualify themselves. The right to disqualify the jury likewise exists. But there is no such disqualification appertaining to the so-called international court, none whatever. Even if the direct litigants stand aside there is no way to say to one of the judges, "Your country is subordinate to the country with which we are at suit and hence you should not sit. You have expressed an opinion in this case and hence you stand disqualified. You are an enemy of the United States and hence you likewise must vacate." No such right exists. In come your 11 men headed by Bustamante or headed by the Japanese gentleman. When they sit down in this tribunal they try the case and the right of challenge does not even exist.

But, sir, that is not all. I do not intend to take much more of the time of the Senate. Indeed I am taking very little time because this afternoon there are only four or five Senators in attendance. I am talking to the country if the newspaper men will carry my message. If they do not I shall have to organize an anti-Bok peace plan, I think, and get some good people's money in large amounts to send out the argument.

There is another reason. I affirm there is no international question, big enough in itself and of itself, to really disturb the people of the world, in which every representative on this court will not represent a nation having a direct interest in the controversy—not one; and the question can not be named to me by any of the Senators present.

Let me give an illustration. We had a controversy with Great Britain touching the right of the United States to send through the Panama Canal its coastwise ships free of charge and to charge tolls for the vessels of other nations. Great Britain challenged us upon that and insisted that if our coastwise ships went through free, the vessels of all other nations must go through free. Our President at that time took the view of the British. I never took it. The majority of the Senate would never have taken it if it had spoken its heart. We built that canal with American brawn and brain and money. We must fortify it, maintain it, and defend it. It is our property, and we should have the perfect right under the treaties which we have with Great Britain to send our vessels through on such terms as we see fit. That question is certain to become a live issue in the future.

Suppose, sir, that to-morrow we were again to reenact the statute which we repealed and were to provide that American coastwise vessels could go through our canal free, but that all other vessels should pay a toll. Suppose Great Britain were then to hale us, who had entered this international court at the request of these good people, before these 11 men, what would be the interest of the nations represented by these 11 men? Holland has her fleet upon the seas. Holland's interest would be identical with the interest of Great Britain. France has her fleet on the seas, and her interest would be identical with that of Great Britain. I assume that Great Britain as a litigant would stand aside, although, to my knowledge, we have no assurance of that.

Italy has her fleet upon the seas; her interest would be identical with that of Great Britain. Spain still has some vessels upon the seas, and her interest would be identical with that of Great Britain. Denmark has many a proud ship floating upon the waters of the ocean; Denmark's interest would be identical with that of Great Britain. Japan has her fleet upon the seas, and that pushing, determined, warlike nation has even more interest in one sense than has Great Britain in the internationalization or anything approaching the internationalization of the Panama Canal. Brazilian merchants have some ships, and their interest is akin to that of Great Britain. As to Cuba, there are Cuban merchants who, I presume, own ships, although there are very few; but in so far as she has an interest, her interest would be with Great Britain. John Bassett Moore, representing somebody, somewhere, somehow, would he represent our interest or would he represents some other interest?

Thus, when this great controversy comes on for trial and the two able Senators who have presented these petitions appear to represent the United States—for I will assume them to be counsel—they go before a packed court, every member of which was appointed directly or indirectly by those respective governments, and every one of whose principals is directly interested against the United States just as is Great Britain.

Is there anybody who loves his flag and country who is willing that such a thing as that shall ever occur? If there is any considerable portion of the people in possession of the facts willing to accept such an awful chance, then I can see the day, sir, when the stars will fade from our flag, when its stripes will lose their luster, when it will become the pale flag of international surrender and float over the graves where our dead heroes lie, an insult to their valor and an offense to their memory.

I have given but one illustration. I can multiply it, taking up serially the various international problems that may come forward. In all the important ones I can show that there is an interest among the nations which would affect their judgment, which would disqualify them if it were an ordinary case at law, governed by the ordinary rules of procedure.

But somebody says, "Oh, this is going to be a court, and when these men sit down upon a court they will then do justice, regardless of interest." What a silly argument that is! We do not apply it to judges of our own courts, whom we know and love. We disqualify them because we know that God never yet made a man who could entirely dissociate his judgment from his own interest. He may try to do it, but we know that it is humanly impossible.

We have had examples. Who has forgotten the Hayes-Tilden controversy, where every judge voted according to the political party to which he belonged, if I recollect correctly? Who is it can forget that the controversies coming before an international court are invariably political? I am speaking of the great controversies. There might be petty controversies come, but we need no international court for petty controversies. Nay, which one of these judges can forget his country and his country's interest, for that pulls stronger at the heartstrings of men than does private interest or even private passion or revenge. For country men will sacrifice their estates; for country they will drain their veins of the last drop; for country they will yield even the children of their loins and the wives of their bosoms; for country they will lie behind prison walls until brown locks turn to gray and rot upon their temples; and yet, with deathless courage on their dying lips, will proclaim fidelity to flag, to race, and to country. Can these judges, whose names I have read, lay aside their love of country? Could an American placed upon this court forget his own country; forget the love he had for her soil; the devotion he bore to her flag; the worship of his heart for his Nation? If he could, then he would be unfit to decide the smallest controversy, for he would have lost every noble human attribute.

The Boks and all the other propagandists who may undertake to fasten the principle of America surrendering any part of her liberty to a permanent court of the character I am describing may proceed, but they will not succeed.

A question with more merit in it than this but involving, as the American people believed, an impairment of America's independence, was submitted less than four years ago, and a majority of 7,000,000 Americans said that America would stay at home and attend to her own business; that they adhered to the policy of George Washington. I say now that the political party that indorses a world court will go to its political death as certainly as the election day rolls round.

But it will be said the court has no power to impose its will. Then, if it has no power to impose its will, it is an impotent and foolish thing, which will be only obeyed when there is the will to obey, and where there is the will to obey there is no necessity for a tribunal to decide.

Mr. President, some day I may feel inclined really to make a speech about the World Court. I am not going to proceed further this afternoon.

I thank the Senate.

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 5) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil and Mexican Wars and to certain widows, former widows, minor children, and helpless children of said soldiers and sailors, and to widows of the War of 1812, and to certain Indian war veterans and widows.

Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, I ask that the committee amendments be first read and considered and disposed of, so as to perfect the pending bill.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I do not want to have the committee amendments voted on this afternoon. There are other Senators who want to be heard on the bill. I shall not oppose acting on them in the morning.

Mr. BURSUM. I suggest that this action will not interfere with any amendment.

Mr. DIAL. It will be passing on the committee amendments, will it not?

Mr. BURSUM. That will not interfere with any amendment that any Senator may desire to offer.

Mr. DIAL. But we want to resist the committee amendments.

Mr. BURSUM. It is merely perfecting the bill. The bill is not perfected until the committee amendments are acted upon.

Mr. DIAL. I know; but we are going to resist the committee amendments, and we want to resist them before the Senator has the bill reprinted.

Mr. BURSUM. But there is really no committee amendment for the Senator to resist.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, if there is going to be a contest I hope the Senator will lay aside his measure to-night so that we may have an executive session. It is the unfinished business.

Mr. DIAL. We could not go on with it this afternoon. I will ask to have it go over until to-morrow. I have no desire to delay the bill unnecessarily, but there are a couple of Senators who are not here who want to speak on it.

Mr. BURSUM. Of course the Senator can delay the bill.

Mr. DIAL. No; I do not want to delay it.

Mr. BURSUM. He can obstruct action on the bill perfecting it by the adoption of the committee amendments. If that is his desire, of course, it is possible for him to do it.

Mr. DIAL. No.

Mr. BURSUM. But I submit that it is very unreasonable and very unjust to object to perfecting the bill, which will in no way prevent any amendments to the bill being submitted by any Senator.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, if I could delay the bill until the end of the session or after the end of the session I would do the same thing that I did in the last session; but I realize that that would be futile, and I am not going to inflict upon the Senate my oratory along that line. We want to resist the committee amendments, however, and I ask that the measure go over until to-morrow morning. So far as I am concerned, I am not going to try to filibuster against the bill. I would defeat it if I could, but I realize that that is impossible.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CURTIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened and (at 4 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, March 28, 1924, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 27, 1924.

POSTMASTERS.

CALIFORNIA.

Anna McMichael to be postmaster at San Juan Bautista, Calif., in place of Anna McMichael. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1924.

Thomas J. Wylie to be postmaster at Cedarville, Calif., in place of N. J. Street. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1924.

Lola P. Neff to be postmaster at Biggs, Calif., in place of W. D. Parker. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1924.

Craigie S. Sharp to be postmaster at Crannell, Calif., in place of C. S. Sharp. Office became third class January 1, 1924.

FLORIDA.

Mary E. Pridgen to be postmaster at Inverness, Fla., in place of E. O. Hay, deceased.

IOWA.

Frederick W. Wodrich, jr., to be postmaster at Mount Vernon, Iowa, in place of F. W. Wodrich, jr. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1924.

Miller S. McFarland to be postmaster at Marshalltown, Iowa, in place of M. S. McFarland. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1924.

Gladdys Westrope to be postmaster at Elliott, Iowa, in place of Gladdys Westrope. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1924.

Alexander B. Clark to be postmaster at Clarinda, Iowa, in place of A. B. Robinson. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1924.

Herbert A. Harvey to be postmaster at Newell, Iowa, in place of N. A. Jensen, resigned.

Nannie Braden to be postmaster at Macedonia, Iowa, in place of Nannie Braden. Office became third class October 1, 1923.

KANSAS.

Josie B. Stewart to be postmaster at Sylvan Grove, Kans., in place of W. J. Dehler. Incumbent's commission expired January 23, 1924.

Myron Johnson to be postmaster at Oakley, Kans., in place of G. A. Millman. Incumbent's commission expired July 28, 1923.

KENTUCKY.

Ronald S. Tuttle to be postmaster at Bardstown, Ky., in place of Henry Whelan. Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1924.

LOUISIANA.

Minnie M. Baldwin to be postmaster at Bernice, La., in place of T. W. Shields, resigned.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Wilhelm O. Johnson to be postmaster at Woronoco, Mass., in place of W. C. Ring, resigned.

MINNESOTA.

James M. Patterson to be postmaster at West Concord, Minn., in place of J. M. Patterson. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1924.

Albert A. Peterson to be postmaster at Blooming Prairie, Minn., in place of Frank Plotta. Incumbent's commission expired July 28, 1923.

MISSOURI.

Oley S. Cardwell to be postmaster at St. Clair, Mo., in place of R. C. Murphy. Incumbent's commission expired July 28, 1921.

Phillip M. Beesley to be postmaster at Robertsville, Mo., in place of P. M. Beesley. Office became third class January 1, 1924.

NEW YORK.

Earl G. Fisher to be postmaster at Massena, N. Y., in place of J. B. Andrews. Incumbent's commission expired February 14, 1924.

J. Arthur Haight to be postmaster at Peekskill, N. Y., in place of James Dimond, resigned.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Edith M. Ericson to be postmaster at Underwood, N. Dak., in place of E. M. Ericson. Incumbent's commission expired April 1, 1924.

OHIO.

Oliver C. Robart to be postmaster at Wellington, Ohio, in place of J. L. Vanarnam. Incumbent's commission expired February 24, 1924.

Asher O. Earley to be postmaster at Woodsfield, Ohio, in place of A. O. Earley. Incumbent's commission expired March 22, 1924.

Austin H. Bash to be postmaster at Strasburg, Ohio, in place of P. J. Dunn. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1924.

John F. Adams to be postmaster at Lisbon, Ohio, in place of W. S. Polta. Incumbent's commission expired September 23, 1923.

Rollo J. Hopkins to be postmaster at Edgerton, Ohio, in place of R. J. Hopkins. Incumbent's commission expired February 24, 1924.

Harry R. Hebblethwaite to be postmaster at Berlin Heights, Ohio, in place of D. L. Kilbride. Incumbent's commission expired February 24, 1924.

OKLAHOMA.

Ruth J. McLane to be postmaster at Lookaba, Okla., in place of M. L. D. Bruce. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1924.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Laura P. Keith to be postmaster at Cornapolis, Pa., in place of J. T. Butler. Incumbent's commission expired August 5, 1923.

TENNESSEE.

John M. Whiteside to be postmaster at Bellbuckle, Tenn., in place of J. T. Chary. Incumbent's commission expired March 9, 1924.

VERMONT.

David P. MacKenzie to be postmaster at Island Pond, Vt., in place of D. P. MacKenzie. Incumbent's commission expired August 5, 1923.

WASHINGTON.

Rudolph R. Staub to be postmaster at Bremerton, Wash., in place of R. R. Staub. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1924.

J. Kirk Carr to be postmaster at Sequim, Wash., in place of T. F. Laurensen, declined.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 27, 1924.

POSTMASTERS.

IDAHO.

Russ H. Merriman, St. Joe.

MAINE.

Charles C. McLaughlin, Harmony.
Emily E. Pynes, Sangerville.

NEW YORK.

Vida O. Heindol, Cold Brook.
Charles A. Sandburg, Jamestown.
John Jack, Lawrence.
Charles K. Williams, Phoenix.

OHIO.

Henry Kemper, Bellefontaine.
Francis E. Cook, Galion.
Gertrude E. Lawson, Irondale.
George F. Barto, State Soldiers' Home.
Allan R. Trumbull, Swanton.
Harry L. Liebhart, Wadsworth.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

James H. McCord, Hodges.
Nettie C. Moore, Honea Path.
Henry T. E. Neuburger, Spartanburg.

WEST VIRGINIA.

George B. McNeely, Mannington.
Francis E. Ross, Power.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, March 27, 1924.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father, the God of our refuge, who is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, we would wait on the Lord. We are thus assured that nothing can separate us from Thy love and divine compassion. How we thank Thee for Thy wonderful condescension. Make us equal to all events. Ever inspire us with the conviction that our work is essential and our tasks altogether sacred. Give us the spirit that lifts us joyously and courageously to our labor. In the fullness of manly strength and character may Thy revelation of moral and spiritual power possess us. God in man is the greatest revelation of Himself. O thus bless and endow us. Amen.

THE JOURNAL.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise? Mr. JAMES. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the Army appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I do not object to the gentleman's request, but I think it ought to come after the reading of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold his request until the Journal is read? The Clerk will read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the Army appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on the Army appropriation bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, day before yesterday before opening my remarks on the Army bill I asked unanimous consent to revise my remarks. The Record does not show it, but my notes do.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the gentleman's request? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ILLUSTRATIONS IN THE RECORD.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire with reference to the Record of this morning as to whether permission was secured of the Committee on Printing to put in illustrations filling seven columns of the Record of a speech made by Hon. EMANUEL CELLER, of New York. Under date of March 14 on the immigration bill he filled seven columns with illustrations. As I understand, permission to do so can only be secured through the Committee on Printing for this sort of extension of a gentleman's remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Well, the Chair will investigate. The Chair hardly thinks that would be printed unless consent had been secured.

Mr. GARNER of Texas. The fault is probably not with the Member but with the Printing Office itself. I understand that illustrations are prohibited from being printed unless authorized.

Mr. TREADWAY. The fault seems to be with both, and it ought not to be allowed.

Mr. MADDEN. You can not put in illustrations without the consent of the Committee on Printing.

TAX ON MOTOR VEHICLES.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. ZIEGLER], who is not here now, acting chairman of the committee, I renew the request he made yesterday morning to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 655) to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, to disagree to all the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference, with the understanding, however, that what was agreed upon in the House and Senate which is not now in the bill shall go into the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill indicated, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

Mr. ORAMTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, which I do not expect to do, in addition to the tax matter the gentleman speaks about there was an amendment put on the bill on the floor of the House, which was unanimously adopted, having been accepted by the committee in charge of the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. I will say to the gentleman from Michigan that as a member of the conference committee I shall contend for this amendment and shall insist that the Cramton amendment shall be put back into the bill. It is an amendment which ought to be passed, and I would insist on bringing that amendment back to the House for a vote of the House before that should be stricken out.

Mr. ORAMTON. I very much hope that will be the attitude of all the conferees. There are three very important reasons justifying that amendment. First, it is fair, because a large part of this tax will be paid by tourists and residents of other States. Second, it will provide a fund that will result in a very speedy improvement of the streets and their lighting; and, third, if the gentleman will permit, it will make the tax itself much more satisfactory to a man who drives an automobile and knows that the money he pays for gasoline tax is going directly to street improvement.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman need not have any uneasiness about that.

Mr. CRAMTON. I am glad to hear it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER announced the following conferees: Messrs. ZIHLMAN, LAMPERT, and BLANTON.

IMMIGRATION BILL.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I present a privileged report from the Committee on Rules for printing.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

Report from the Committee on Rules for the consideration of the bill H. R. 7995, a bill to limit immigration of aliens into the United States.

The SPEAKER. Referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

LETTER FROM SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a letter received from the Secretary of the Treasury concerning a bill on the Private Calendar to which I objected the other night concerning the loss of coupons upon bonds. I think the facts stated by the department will be of interest to the Members of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD for the purpose indicated. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, under the leave granted I insert the following letter to me from the Secretary of the Treasury with reference to payment for lost detached bond coupons. While this has particular reference to H. R. 3748 now pending on the Private Calendar of the House, the general policy to be followed is involved and the statement of facts and conditions presented by the department is worthy of consideration. The letter is as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, March 25, 1924.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: I have noted a discussion which occurred on the floor of the House on March 21, 1924, in regard to H. R. 3748, "A bill for the relief of the Lebanon National Bank," providing for the relief on account of the loss, theft, or destruction for coupons detached from bonds or notes. As you objected to the consideration of the bill, I deem it advisable to furnish you with certain information in regard to the matter in view of some of the statements that were made in the course of the discussion in the House.

The committee report states that "the Secretary of the Treasury interposes no objection to the bill * * *." This statement is obviously an error for in my letter to the chairman of the committee, dated January 19, 1924, which is printed in the same report, I set forth objections and stated that the Treasury is opposed to the passage of the bill.

It would be particularly unfortunate if this bill should become a law in view of the fact that the United States would not be able to protect itself against duplicate payment. And as pointed out in my report on the bill, it would be unsafe to grant relief against bonds of indemnity. It would also let loose a flood of similar legislation, as there are thousands of cases of lost, stolen, or destroyed coupons, and many cases of presumably destroyed coupons without positive proof of destruction. The United States would thus be placed in the position of paying a portion of its debt twice without any means of protection, and there is no equitable reason why it should bear the burden, in a large number of cases, of the loss occasioned by the neglect or carelessness of the owner of the securities.

It was stated on the floor of the House that it would be the easiest thing under the sun to put in a system whereby an efficient file clerk will be able to consult the file or canceled coupons in order to determine the facts and protect the United States against a double payment. Apparently the magnitude of the coupon business is not fully appreciated. There are at the present time something over 26,000,000 pieces of bearer public-debt securities outstanding. Coupons generally mature by six months' periods; accordingly, some 52,000,000 separate coupons will be presented for payment in the course of each year. While these coupons come from the 26,000,000 pieces outstanding, as a matter of fact such coupons may pertain to any one of the very much larger number of securities originally issued—some 150,000,000 pieces. Coupons are paid by the Treasurer of the United States and by the Federal reserve banks and branches. As a matter of usual procedure practically all such coupons are cashed at the holder's own bank or post office, and thereafter are cleared through Federal reserve banks to the Treasurer of the United States. In their examination of paid coupons, Federal reserve banks and the Treasurer of the United States make no attempt to arrange them by serial numbers; they could not do so, as a practical matter. The paid coupons finally are forwarded by the Treasurer to the Register of the Treasury, where an audit is made to determine the correctness of the payments made. Thereafter the coupons are assorted to serial numbers and the fact of payment is recorded on numerical register. At this point presumably it might be possible to take account of a notation previously made. There is no certainty, however, that this could be done, for the volume of transactions is so great, the number of pieces is so enormous, the serial numbers run so high (eight digits), and so many hundred clerks are engaged on the work that errors will be made in the assortment and recordation. There are at the present time on file in the register's office approximately 550,000,000 interest coupons, and the work is not current.

The department has undertaken the assortment of coupons to serial number and recordation of the fact of payment because of the charges that have been made that the public debt has been largely duplicated. The temporary Liberty bonds, for the most part, have been retired, and the number of pieces of securities outstanding has been reduced to a more or less manageable basis. In submitting its estimates for the fiscal year 1925 the department contemplated continuing this particular coupon work. The House Appropriations Committee considered the assortment and recordation of paid coupons an unnecessary expenditure, and the Treasury Department estimates for the public-debt service were reduced in the amount of $234,000, the estimated cost of the work next year. In his report on the Treasury Department bill made in the House on January 29, 1924, the chairman of the Appropriations Committee referred to the reduction of $234,000, stating that by such elimination the committee indicates that a change should be made in the present methods of handling interest coupons. As the bill containing the reduced item has passed both Houses of Congress it will be necessary another year to discontinue these records, and, accordingly, after July 1 next a final check in the matter of separate coupons will not be possible.

It is not my intention in writing this to assert that these records should be maintained. I am merely calling the matter to your attention in order that you may know it will be absolutely impossible for the Treasury to be protected against payments if bills such as the one under consideration are enacted.

I might also add there seems to be some confusion as to the negotiability of a Government coupon. As I pointed out in my letter of January 19, 1924, United States bearer obligations pass by delivery without indorsement and without notice to the Treasury Department, so that under generally recognized principles of law an innocent purchaser for value, without notice before maturity, acquires good title thereto, even though reported lost, stolen, or destroyed. They pass from hand to hand almost like money, and contrary to the statement that was made on the floor, there is no requirement that a slip must be made out in the case of Government obligations of this character.

Very truly yours,

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

HON. LOUIS C. CRAMTON,
House of Representatives.

SALARIES OF OFFICIALS AND EMPLOYEES OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request made last night to print in the RECORD a letter from the governor of the Federal Reserve Board—some remarks relative to the salaries and expenses of the several Federal reserve banks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD for the purpose indicated. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to extend my remarks in the RECORD I insert the following:

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD,
Washington, March 19, 1924.

HON. ELMER THOMAS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. THOMAS: In response to that part of your letter of March 10 to Secretary Mellon relating to the number and salaries of officials and employees of the Federal reserve banks, I take pleasure in inclosing herewith a statement showing the number and salaries of officers and employees at each Federal reserve bank and at each Federal reserve branch as at close of business December 31, 1923.

Very truly yours,

D. R. CRISINGER, Governor.

Number and annual salaries of officers and employees of each Federal reserve bank and branch as of December 31, 1923.

Federal reserve bank or branch.	Officers.				Employees.					Total includes following reimbursable salaries, principally in fiscal agency department.
	Chairman and Federal reserve agent.	Governor.	Other officers.	Total officers.	Banking department.	Federal reserve agent's department.	Auditing department.	Fiscal agency department.	Total employees.
All Federal reserve banks combined:
Number.....	12	12	312	336	10,044.50	344	315	950.50	11,060	572.94
Salaries.....	$229,000	$309,000	$2,019,570	$2,557,570	$13,068,362	$743,574	$608,876	$1,588,486	$16,543,298	$880,122
Boston (total):
Number.....	1	1	12	15	630	31	16	58	744	17
Salaries.....	$18,000	$25,000	$99,040	$142,040	$838,110	$65,440	$32,220	$92,834	$1,028,594	$25,690
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	12	15	636	31	16	58	744	17
Salaries.....	$18,000	$25,000	$99,040	$142,040	$831,250	$65,440	$32,220	$92,834	$1,021,734	$25,690
Habana agency:
Number.....					3				3
Salaries.....					$6,800				$6,800
New York (total):
Number.....	1	1	38	40	2,374	69	72	198	2,693	64.6
Salaries.....	$30,000	$50,000	$408,560	$488,560	$3,398,013	$150,350	$159,040	$331,030	$4,088,433	$113,510
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	34	36	2,344	69	72	193	2,567	63.5
Salaries.....	$30,000	$50,000	$396,260	$466,260	$3,239,613	$150,350	$159,040	$330,130	$3,899,133	$112,610
Buffalo branch:
Number.....			4	4	180			1	181
Salaries.....			$23,300	$23,300	$158,400			$900	$180,900	$900
Philadelphia:
Number.....	1	1	12	14	683	64	33	53	822	17
Salaries.....	$15,000	$25,000	$95,300	$135,300	$900,325	$110,144	$62,550	$81,430	$1,154,049	$61,530
Cleveland (total):
Number.....	1	1	25	27	925	28	30	123	1,106	100
Salaries.....	$25,000	$30,000	$170,270	$225,270	$1,223,920	$64,500	$64,896	$302,434	$1,555,750	$144,256
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	13	15	540	28	26	84	677	68
Salaries.....	$25,000	$30,000	$101,660	$156,660	$747,914	$61,500	$57,504	$147,608	$1,017,326	$115,020
Cincinnati branch:
Number.....			6	6	145		3	20	171	13
Salaries.....			$31,070	$31,070	$171,895		$3,532	$28,410	$203,770	$19,266
Pittsburgh branch:
Number.....			6	6	237		2	10	253	19
Salaries.....			$37,000	$37,000	$304,198		$3,840	$26,616	$334,654	$19,361
Richmond (total):
Number.....	1	1	23	25	631	14	18	50	713	41
Salaries.....	$15,000	$18,000	$134,700	$167,700	$730,090	$28,560	$33,270	$67,530	$859,440	$83,210
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	16	18	441	14	14	49	518	49
Salaries.....	$15,000	$18,000	$99,800	$132,800	$509,790	$28,560	$38,910	$65,980	$631,230	$81,650
Baltimore branch:
Number.....			7	7	190		4	1	195	1
Salaries.....			$34,900	$34,900	$220,300		$6,360	$1,560	$228,220	$1,560
Atlanta (total):
Number.....	1	1	31	33	369	9	17	44	430	25
Salaries.....	$12,000	$18,000	$159,300	$189,300	$421,500	$19,580	$29,040	$64,060	$534,180	$87,969
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	14	16	219	9	14	35	277	20
Salaries.....	$12,000	$18,000	$80,500	$110,500	$237,464	$19,580	$23,940	$54,100	$335,084	$32,400
Birmingham branch:
Number.....			3	3	26				29
Salaries.....			$12,900	$12,900	$30,580				$30,580
Jacksonville branch:
Number.....			3	3	29				30
Salaries.....			$11,800	$11,800	$31,740				$31,740
Nashville branch:
Number.....			3	3	26			3	29	3
Salaries.....			$11,400	$11,400	$32,376			$1,440	$33,816	$1,440
New Orleans branch:
Number.....			5	5	64		2	6	73	2
Salaries.....			$29,500	$29,500	$80,088		$8,109	$6,580	$94,777	$1,162
Habana agency:
Number.....			1	1	4				4
Salaries.....			$6,900	$6,900	$7,060				$7,060
Savannah agency:
Number.....			2	2	1				1
Salaries.....			$4,300	$4,300	$1,020				$1,020
Chicago (total):
Number.....	1	1	41	43	1,479	61	38	106	1,683	63
Salaries.....	$24,000	$35,000	$276,650	$335,650	$2,031,630	$122,960	$70,800	$182,240	$2,407,710	$166,790
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	33	35	1,320	59	34	100	1,513	65
Salaries.....	$24,000	$35,000	$258,750	$297,750	$1,802,710	$120,040	$62,700	$173,560	$2,159,010	$166,790
Detroit branch:
Number.....			8	8	160		4	5	170
Salaries.....			$37,000	$37,000	$228,030	$3,960	$8,160	$8,460	$248,730
St. Louis (total):
Number.....	1	1	26	28	548	13	13	55	627	28
Salaries.....	$18,000	$25,000	$138,540	$176,540	$708,956	$29,700	$17,940	$69,360	$846,846	$34,730
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	14	16	338	13	9	55	415	23
Salaries.....	$18,000	$25,000	$81,000	$124,000	$439,500	$29,700	$12,480	$69,360	$576,000	$34,730
Little Rock branch:
Number.....			4	4	58		1		59
Salaries.....			$15,000	$15,000	$76,620		$3,600		$79,120
Louisville branch:
Number.....			4	4	81		1		82
Salaries.....			$13,450	$13,450	$100,910		$1,620		$102,530
Memphis branch:
Number.....			4	4	60		2		62
Salaries.....			$17,000	$17,000	$91,930		$2,940		$94,870
Minneapolis (total):
Number.....	1	1	17	19	357.5	12	12	87.5	469	71
Salaries.....	$15,000	$30,000	$99,200	$134,200	$487,600	$23,380	$21,280	$116,450	$684,530	$168,754
Head office:
Number.....	1	1	13	15	309	12	10	83	414	66
Salaries.....	$15,000	$30,000	$72,000	$107,000	$380,458	$23,380	$18,500	$109,368	$531,736	$121,664

Number and annual salaries of officers and employees of each Federal reserve bank and branch as of December 31, 1923—Continued.

Federal reserve bank or branch.	Officers.				Employees.					Total includes following reimbursable salaries, principally in fiscal agency department.
	Chairman and Federal reserve agent.	Governor.	Other officers.	Total officers.	Banking department.	Federal reserve agent's department.	Auditing department.	Fiscal agency department.	Total employees.
Minneapolis—Continued.
Helena Branch—
Number.....			4	4	48.5		2	4.5	55	5
Salaries.....			$17,200	$17,200	$57,010		$2,700	$6,090	$65,800	$8,090
Kansas City (total):
Number.....	1	1	26	28	626	18	18	73	732	107
Salaries.....	$15,000	$30,000	$133,820	$168,820	$678,040	$32,040	$30,120	$134,240	$1,074,440	$142,223
Head office—
Number.....	1	1	13	15	362	15	13	61	451	68
Salaries.....	$15,000	$30,000	$78,700	$113,700	$321,520	$32,040	$22,440	$111,920	$687,920	$113,003
Denver branch—
Number.....			4	4	77		1	4	82	3
Salaries.....			$16,200	$16,200	$104,400		$1,560	$7,080	$113,040	$4,980
Oklahoma city branch—
Number.....			4	4	94		1	4	99	3
Salaries.....			$15,600	$15,600	$116,340		$1,560	$6,720	$124,620	$4,920
Omaha branch—
Number.....			5	5	93		3	4	100	13
Salaries.....			$23,320	$23,320	$135,780		$4,560	$8,520	$148,860	$19,320
Dallas (total):
Number.....	1	1	21	23	454	15	21	43	533	18.98
Salaries.....	$18,000	$18,000	$103,350	$139,350	$628,320	$36,620	$39,420	$73,310	$775,670	$32,510
Head office—
Number.....	1	1	13	15	329	14	16	40	390	13.23
Salaries.....	$18,000	$18,000	$71,850	$107,850	$459,260	$33,620	$29,520	$98,240	$500,640	$27,020
El Paso branch—
Number.....			4	4	61		2	3	66	3.25
Salaries.....			$16,500	$16,500	$82,120		$4,140	$5,070	$91,330	$3,490
Houston branch—
Number.....			4	4	64	1	3		68
Salaries.....			$15,000	$15,000	$84,940	$3,000	$5,760		$93,700
San Francisco (total):
Number.....	1	1	39	41	964	23	25	79	1,094	24.76
Salaries.....	$24,000	$25,000	$214,900	$263,900	$1,408,460	$60,280	$49,320	$134,640	$1,652,700	$44,979
Head office—
Number.....	1	1	15	17	330	25	14	64	431	10.76
Salaries.....	$24,000	$25,000	$121,800	$170,800	$498,320	$60,280	$25,080	$107,820	$691,500	$30,319
Los Angeles branch—
Number.....			5	5	267		4	2	273	8
Salaries.....			$22,920	$22,920	$363,900		$6,660	$3,360	$373,920	$13,860
Portland branch—
Number.....			4	4	79		1	5	85
Salaries.....			$16,680	$16,680	$110,400		$1,200	$9,000	$120,600
Salt Lake City branch—
Number.....			5	5	155		5	2	162	2
Salaries.....			$23,500	$23,500	$247,680		$8,880	$3,840	$260,400	$3,840
Seattle branch—
Number.....			3	3	66		2	4	74	2
Salaries.....			$12,540	$12,540	$63,360		$3,120	$6,780	$103,260	$3,120
Spokane branch—
Number.....			4	4	65		2	2	69	2
Salaries.....			$17,460	$17,460	$94,800		$4,380	$3,840	$103,020	$3,840

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. ROSENBLUM, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

S. 214. An act for the relief of the Old National Bank of Martinsburg, Martinsburg, W. Va.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7877.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7877, with Mr. TILSON in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7877, the War Department appropriation bill, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7877) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities for the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925, and for other purposes.

The CHAIRMAN. When the committee rose yesterday there was a point of order pending against an amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH].

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to take just a minute of the House's time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman briefly.

Mr. SNELL. Under section 2 of Rule XXI the rule says:

No appropriation shall be reported in any general appropriation bill, or be in order as an amendment thereto, for any expenditure not previously authorized by law, unless in continuation of appropriations for such public works and objects as are already in progress.

Under section 821, defining what is meant by "projects already in progress," it specifically states:

The purchase of adjoining land for a work already established has been admitted under this principle.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] states that this land is adjoining to the Fort Bliss Reservation. So far as the parliamentary situation is concerned, there is absolutely no question but that the amendment is in order. But personally I think it is wrong economically to allow such a proposition to come in. But so far as the amendment is concerned, it is absolutely in order.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, may I say just a word?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I have looked up the precedents since I addressed the House last evening, and there is no question in the world but that the precedents all hold that where it is contemplated to purchase land which is in fact adjacent to any land owned by the Government it is deemed to be a continuation of a public work, and that has been the uniform line of precedents. It is noteworthy, however, that in these precedents, which appears in Hinds', fourth volume, section 3766, and following for several pages, the point of order was usually made by an eminent parliamentarian. Mr. Olmsted, of Pennsylvania, made the point of order on two or three different occasions, as did Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, and others.

What I want to suggest to the Chair is that there are times when it may be advisable to depart from the precedents, where

It is evident that the precedents are against the public interest. For instance, if the Chair should hold, following these precedents, in this particular case that it is in order to appropriate land or take land, as is contemplated by the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas, merely because it is adjacent to an existing military reservation, we find this sort of a situation: If, for instance, the Government owned an acre of land which was a reservation of some sort, it would be in order to annex the township to that land—the township in which it lay. Thereupon it would be in order to annex the entire county, after which it would be in order to annex the State. The State having been annexed, it would be in order to annex the whole United States, and even, as the gentleman from Kentucky suggested to me a moment ago, the 3-mile limit.

Now, that seems to be a perfect absurdity. It seems that the original ruling was made without due regard to its final effect. The present occupant of the chair is an extremely broad-minded man. He attempts in his rulings, whenever possible, to have the public good first in mind. I suggest to the Chair that this would be a very fine opportunity to overrule this general line of precedents, in order that we may not be faced with such an absurdity as the one now before us.

Mr. GARNER of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LONGWORTH. I will yield to the gentleman with pleasure.

Mr. GARNER of Texas. I have not been in close attendance upon the proceedings of the committee, but my recollection is that the Chair has already had one experience of that kind and the committee failed to sustain his viewpoint.

Let me ask of the Chairman and of the gentleman from Ohio, Who is to determine whether this is good public policy or not?

Who is to determine whether the precedents of 50 years past are good or bad precedents? Is the one man now sitting in the chair to revolutionize the precedents of the House of Representatives for the last 50 years because, forsooth, his judgment is not in accord with them? A very distinguished Speaker of this House has said, and very truly said, that this House is master of itself; and if we can establish the precedent here that one man can overrule the precedents of 50 years, then the House can establish another precedent and produce another revolution, as it did some years ago when it upset itself and produced what amounted to a revolution.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Let me suggest to the gentleman that the precedents do not go back 50 years. The first precedent quoted was in 1907, 16 years ago. After all, it was a very technical decision.

Of course I am not in favor of revolution, in what I said to the Chair, or suggesting that he would put himself again in a position where he would be in danger of being overruled. I would suggest, however, that the Chair submit this question to the House for its determination. I should be very glad to abide by the decision of the House.

Mr. BLANTON. Before the Chair rules on that subject, Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule, but he will hear the gentleman.

Mr. BLANTON. For a moment, in view of what the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] has said. Whenever expediency enters into a decision of the Chair gentlemen are going to find themselves meeting their decisions face to face, coming back again.

I want to remind the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] of his position that was taken here on a District bill once, when the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] was insisting on his provision in the bill to buy land adjoining a school building and erect a new school building on it in lieu of the old one. I remember very distinctly the ruling of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] on that matter, to wit: That it was a continuing operation on the part of the Government; it was a continuing business, because, having the old building, the new one contemplated was in the nature of repair work, and so on, and it even went further than that. Another question came up about buying new playgrounds entirely across the street from the existing building.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Of course, the gentleman's ruling at the time was based on a request by the Government for the purchase of the land, but there is no such request before us now.

Mr. BLANTON. I want to show how far it went. It even went to the extent of buying a new playground entirely across the street. There was a street there intervening. I stood on the floor and argued against the precedent that would be thus established. But expediency intervened and controlled.

They wanted these playgrounds across the street and they wanted the new building, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] did not hesitate to set aside precedents then.

Mr. LONGWORTH. But, as I recall, that was not an amendment offered from the floor.

Mr. BLANTON. No; it was in the bill, but it was legislation.

Mr. LONGWORTH. It was legislation reported by the committee.

Mr. BLANTON. But it has been held for 50 years that an appropriations committee has no more right to put legislation in an appropriation bill than any Member has from the floor. A committee can not do a thing in an appropriation bill legislatively which any Member from the floor can not do, so far as new legislation is concerned.

Mr. LONGWORTH. The "gentleman from Ohio" will admit that sometimes he takes the easiest way when he is in the chair.

Mr. BLANTON. I know that; but then he always meets himself coming back, as in the present instance.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Nevertheless, I should think it would be very wise to change this line of precedents.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Mississippi desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. RANKIN. In reply to the argument of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] to the effect that these points of order were made by eminent parliamentarians, and should be given great weight, even if they were overruled, I would like to call the Chair's attention to the fact that in the case reported in Hinds' Precedents, section 3769, the amendment was offered by Mr. Joseph G. Cannon, himself one of the most eminent parliamentarians, perhaps, this House has had in many years. That is one of the cases carrying out the contention of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] in opposition to this point of order.

I wish to call the Chair's attention to the fact also that the case reported in Hinds' Precedents, section 3771, was decided by possibly the ablest parliamentarian who ever presided over this body, the Hon. James R. Mann, of Illinois. Then there is another case reported in Hinds' Precedents, section 3768, which carries out the contention of the gentleman from Texas. That case also was decided by a very eminent parliamentarian, Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania.

So, if you are asked to sweep aside former decisions of the Chair and merely look to the eminence of the gentlemen who made the points of order, I submit the Chair might take into consideration also the eminent parliamentarians who offered these amendments, as well as those eminent parliamentarians who rendered these decisions, all of which, under these sections, carry out the contention of the gentleman from Texas in opposition to this point of order.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, it may be suggested, in further corroboration of what the gentleman from Mississippi has said, that on more than one occasion, as in the present instance, the Chairman, in deciding such points of order, has reserved his decision until the succeeding day, so that these opinions have not been hastily rendered but are the studied results of long deliberation by some of the ablest men who have presided over the deliberations of the committee.

I regret to have to differ somewhat from the gentleman from Ohio as to the logical reason for these decisions. The gentleman from Ohio very well suggests that we might carry the application of this doctrine to the extreme and admit an amendment providing for the annexation of a county, a State, or even the entire United States. Of course, there is no argument which can not be carried to the absurd, reductio ad absurdum. These bills provide for the purchase of ammunition. We might by the same analogy provide for the purchase of millions of rounds of unnecessary ammunition, but of course the rule has never been invoked for that purpose, and no amendment of the extreme nature suggested by the gentleman from Ohio will ever be seriously proposed.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. The case decided by Mr. Dalzell in section 3768 of Hinds' Precedents—instead of 3769, as I suggested a while ago—was decided 24 years ago, May 4, 1900. That carries us back approximately a quarter of a century.

Mr. CANNON. That is true, and there were many similar decisions prior to that time. I might say, Mr. Chairman, that it is but logical to expect increases in the area of rifle ranges. Improvements are being constantly made in the manufacture of rifles and the range of all firearms constantly increases year to year. A range which was considered phenomenal a quarter of a century ago would to-day be considered very ordinary. It may be recalled that the English, when they took over Gibraltar, demanded in addition to the fortress itself a margin of 200 yards of land adjacent to the fort in order to put the boundary line beyond the range of hostile artillery.

No doubt the diplomats who negotiated that treaty would be much surprised to know that modern artillery has developed such a range that in the recent war Paris was bombarded from a point something like 50 miles away. In the development of gunnery it is just as essential to have an adequate range as it is to have ammunition, targets, or any other accessories required for rifle practice, and it is quite possible, if not certain, that land which was considered ample for that purpose a decade ago may today be wholly inadequate.

The theory admitting such amendments is not only supported by a long and unbroken line of precedents, but is in keeping with legislative requirements and sound reasoning.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Chairman, am I right in the idea that a point of order has been made, not only that this is not a continuation of a public work but that it is not germane to this particular paragraph?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks both points of order were made.

Mr. LONGWORTH. That is what I understood.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. After wandering for a long time through the intricate maze of conflicting decisions relating to limitations, germaneness, and the Holman rule, it is really a joy to come out into the open sunshine where there is but one line of decisions and be able to follow this line. In reading the bill the Clerk had reached the item "Shooting galleries and ranges." This paragraph, among other things, provides ranges for small-arms target practice, and so on. To this paragraph the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] offers an amendment in effect providing for the acquisition of 3,600 acres of land adjoining the Fort Bliss Military Reservation in Texas as an addition to said Fort Bliss Military Reservation for maneuvering, drill ground, target practice, artillery practice, and other military purposes. It is conceded that this is a reservation established by law.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Yes; I will state to the Chair it was established March 1, 1900, by act of Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has assumed that was so. While, technically, this might not be considered a proper amendment to this particular paragraph, the Chair does not now decide as to that point. If ruled out on such a point it could be immediately offered as a new paragraph, so that there would be nothing gained by overruling a technical point of order. The Chair prefers to decide the point of order upon its parliamentary merits.

The line of decisions is not a very long one, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] has stated, but this line has been uniform and is founded upon the principle, as the Chair believes, that a great public work having been begun it should not be possible for any one individual by making a point of order to prevent the expanding of that public work. In the case of schools additional ground might be needed for playgrounds. In the case of hospitals additional ground might be needed, and in the case of target ranges, undoubtedly, as indicated by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON], year after year we have had to add to such reservations for the purpose of increasing the territory of our target ranges. The principle is that the Government having begun a work it should be able to proceed to enlarge it as the proper demands make necessary. From the parliamentary viewpoint it is immaterial whether the proposed additional land is a few feet or a million acres. It is the principle upon which the precedents are based, and the present occupant of the chair does not feel inclined to override such a principle.

Nothing would be gained, as the Chair sees it, by submitting the question to the decision of the membership of the House. There is nothing to prevent the committee from overruling the present decision of the Chair, with or without reason, as has been done in times past. Naturally, individual Members of the House oftentimes are influenced by the merits of the proposition. It is impossible to free themselves from such an influence, and no criticism is intended in referring to it here. If the membership of the House feel inclined to overrule the decision of the Chair in this particular case on account of the merits of the proposition, the present occupant of the chair is not at all sensitive about such things, because he tries to rule according to what he believes to be right and best from the parliamentary standpoint, to maintain the orderly procedure of this House as it should be for the public good. Beyond this he is not at all concerned. The merits of the proposition in all cases should stand upon their own bottom. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, owing to the fact that I have a little data that is necessary to be read to the committee, I ask unanimous consent that I may speak on the amendment for 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, it seemed to be in the mind of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] that one reason why the amendment should be held out of order was that there was too much land sought to be purchased. I want to state to the House that, of course, if we had been silly enough, or if the commanding general at Fort Bliss had been silly enough, he could have asked for the purchase of all the territory in El Paso County adjoining this post, but I want to state to the gentleman from Ohio and to the members of the committee that every acre of this land that is sought to be purchased has been used by the Federal Government for 15 years, at a cost of $1 per year to the Federal Government, up to the 24th day of January, when a portion of this land was leased, and the Government now pays an annual rental of $6,000 for a portion of it.

The Federal Government, gentlemen, has used this land for 15 years, the chamber of commerce for a number of years leasing it from the owners, and the citizens of El Paso paying the lease. The Government has used it for maneuvering purposes, has cut up this land with its artillery and has tramped over it and tramped out the grass and the turf with its cavalry horses for 15 years. I want to ask this committee if they do not think, in all fairness to the citizenship and to the people who own this land, that the Federal Government ought to pay something for it.

Let me again call to your minds, gentlemen, the fact that the Fort Bliss military post is a division post, the second largest, I believe, in the South. The old post was established, as I stated yesterday, I think, before the Civil War, the new Fort Bliss in 1890. This is a great big military post that protects the border on the west to the line of California and to the east for 600 miles along the sinuosities of the Rio Grande, and yet the Federal Government has never paid one dollar for the land on which the post is situated.

When the old post was moved from the river where it was subject to overflow, the citizens of El Paso went down in their pockets and paid $50,000 for one section of land, if my memory serves me accurately now—640 acres—and when I was a member of the State senate it was found that a part of this post had extended to a section of land owned by the State of Texas, where there were then erected many thousand dollars' worth of valuable property belonging to the Federal Government, and I introduced a bill in the State senate, which was passed by the legislature and approved by the governor, granting title in the Federal Government to this State land. So that of this 1,280 acres of land, the part comprising the present military reservation of Fort Bliss did not cost the Federal Government one dollar. They have been using the land of these citizens there for 15 years and every acre of it, so the commanding general says, is needed. The Secretary of War says it should be purchased. Secretary Baker submitted to the Congress, when he was Secretary of War, a request that this land be purchased, and yet we have been met for five years with the proposition that the Government should not purchase any additional land.

What does General Howze say? There is one tract of this land known as the Morehead tract, and I have here a map showing, in red, the land that is sought to be purchased. This is the military reservation and this is one of the hospitals [indicating].

The William Beaumont Hospital for ex-service men and for soldiers of the Regular Army is located there on the original site, and cost the Government about $5,000,000. All of that land now owned by the Government is used and occupied in buildings and other military activities. I want to call your attention to this matter as a business proposition. General Howze has something to say in regard to it in the letter addressed to The Adjutant General—a copy I hold in my hand and a copy of which I placed in the record. I was struck by the statement of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] the other day in regard to the policy that has been pursued in the last five years in curtailing appropriations that has been found to be an unwise policy—"a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy"—and he showed it. General Howze says that the Cavalry has been using for many years this ground. That is the ground marked in green on this map, and they have been paying a dollar a year. He says:

The Cavalry regiments, machine-gun squadrons, special troops, and the division Air Service have for many years been using this ground that neither belongs to nor is leased by the Government. The owner has permitted the Government to use this tract. In consequence troops may be barred from this ground at any time. This tract is known as the Morehead tract. It contains 300 acres and lies immediately adjoining and east of the southern half of the reservation. It is the only tract that can now be acquired which meets the requirements of a drill and landing field. It adjoins the Cavalry and machine-gun barracks, is in continuation of the Air Service hangars and quarters, and is in constant use by the Air Service. It is the only available situation for a landing field in the vicinity of the city of El Paso. The loss of this tract would mean that the investment of the Government in the hangars and buildings housing the Air Service will be lost, that the Air Service will lose this available field as a training ground for reserve Air Service officers, and that the transcontinental airways will lose one of their best intermediate stations.

He says that the land may be taken away at any moment, and according to figures that I placed in the Record—he does not state the amount, but some one else does—that if the owners took the land which they can do at any time, because the Government does not have any lease—the Government has buildings on it to the amount of $79,000—that would practically be an entire loss.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I will.

Mr. SNELL. Are there not other places where Army posts are using ground not belonging to the Government?

Mr. HUDSPETH. In that vicinity?

Mr. SNELL. No; at other places in the United States.

Mr. HUDSPETH. There may be; but does the gentleman think that the Government should continue to use this land, as it has for 15 years, when the owners can sell a great portion of the land for much more than is now being asked for it for residential property?

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUDSPETH. Certainly.

Mr. MADDEN. Would the gentleman be willing to have the post moved?

Mr. HUDSPETH. There is not a citizen in that part of the country who thinks it ought to be moved.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman himself would not want it moved.

Mr. HUDSPETH. No; would the gentleman from Illinois want the hospital, established recently close to Chicago, moved? The gentleman from Illinois came here and asked for a big appropriation to establish that hospital and I voted for it.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman from Illinois did not do anything of the kind.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The gentleman did.

Mr. MADDEN. The hospital was under construction.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The gentleman got the appropriation to complete it, and I voted for it. This post is as much the property of the gentleman as it is mine. It is Government property, and the gentleman from Illinois is as much interested in it as I am, or should be. I am only asking that this post be completed.

Mr. MADDEN. I thought the gentleman was complaining that it was there.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The gentleman from Illinois did not think any such thing.

Mr. MADDEN. And wanted it moved.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The gentleman did not so understand. I am simply coming here and asking the Government and Congress to pay the citizens for land that has been used for 15 years. It has got as much out of the citizens of El Paso, and more than my citizens have been benefited by this post, I will state to the gentleman from Illinois. And yet every citizen there is proud of our great military post.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUDSPETH. Yes; I yield to my friend from Illinois, Mr. McKENZIE.

Mr. McKENZIE. I wish to ask the gentleman whether he has a bill pending for this purpose before the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I have not now. I have had for a number of years, but at the present time I have no bill pending because we considered it an urgent need, and that the Appropriations Committee should take care of it at once, and the Secretary of War says it ought to be purchased. It is true that he said he had other matters he deemed greater need at this time. If my friend from Illinois will indicate that his committee will report out a bill I will have one before that committee in 24 hours.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, I will ask for 10 minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks that his time be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MADDEN. I do not think we ought to take so much time. I am willing to compromise, however.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection that the time be extended for five minutes?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I will.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] asked the gentleman from Texas if he would be willing to have the post moved. As a matter of fact the post was put there because it is on the Mexican border, and the gentleman knows that it is utterly impossible to move the Mexican border, and if this post was moved it would endanger the safety of the citizens along that border.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The gentleman from Illinois discounted my intelligence, or if serious in the question his should be discounted when he asked the question, because it is a post that has protected my home city from being sacked in the night, and citizens murdered in their sleep, in all probability if the post had not been adjacent thereto. Let me say this to the gentleman from Illinois because he does not seem to understand the situation down there. Pancho Villa took his army across the border line at Columbus, N. Mex., in the dead hours of night, 80 miles west of Fort Bliss, and if it had not been for American troops he would have shot down in cold blood and murdered all of the citizens and burned the town—he did murder quite a number of our citizens before the troops could drive him out.

This same Villa in 1919 invested the city of Juarez with his troops, and took the main portion of that town. That is just across the river from the city of El Paso, a city of 100,000 people. He made the boast at that time, because the Federal Government would not let him bring his troops across on this side from one point to another, and they had let Carranza do the same thing, that he was going to sack the city of El Paso after he had taken Juarez, and he had practically taken Juarez at that time. He had placed his guns on the hills where they could sweep the streets of the city of El Paso, and in 1911, when Madero took the town of Juarez, advancing with his army from the northwest, there were 18 citizens shot down on the streets of El Paso. In 1919 Villa said that he would go over and take the gringo town, meaning the American town, after he had taken Juarez, so I am informed, and sack it and loot the banks, but the commanding general at Fort Bliss did not wait for the gentleman to make good his boast. He took his khaki-clad boys across that bridge and he drove Villa out and chased him down the road toward the city of Chihuahua, and there was not a single dollar's worth of property destroyed in El Paso or a life lost. Those troops were taken from this post where we are asking that the land be purchased, and General Howze, in his statement, and the Secretary of War both say that it should be purchased, so that our military forces may have enough ground there for maneuvering purposes. If any gentleman thinks the amount asked is too large let him offer an amendment, but I think the amount asked is reasonable, and I placed in the Record a statement to that effect from three reputable citizens who know values. For 15 years, as I say, they have been using this valuable land. This is no real-estate scheme. When I offered a bill five years ago for the purchase of some of this land, which was asked then $160 an acre, and the committee thought it unwise or the price too high they did not purchase it, and to-day they could not buy that land, General Howze states, and there are other statements to that effect in the record, for much more than that sum. There is only one way for El Paso to grow. The river is on the south and there is a chain of mountains on the north. It can grow only to the east. In 1900 El Paso was a struggling town of 15,000 people. In 1910 the decennial census shows 39,000 and in 1920 it shows 78,000. The telephone records now show a city of over 100,000 people. The residential portion is right up against this land on the south. They will not sell that land that we offered five years ago for the price which the Government could afford to pay, because much of it has been withdrawn for city lots and is needed for residential property, but this land, the purchase of which this amendment contemplates, is valued at a reasonable price. We have a great pride in our post. Certainly we do not want it moved, nor does any citizen down there, because it has probably saved damage to my town and the sacking of many other towns along the border during the troublesome days during the various revolutions in Mexico, which have occurred frequently during the past 50 years. Now, it is contended that this price is too high by the gentlemen here, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] has read into the record a letter offering, by another gentleman in El Paso, 1,200 acres to the Government for $50 per acre. It may be worth it. But General Howze says you can buy 3,265 acres in this offer for $50 per acre. Now, I read in the hearings, presided over by the gentleman from Kansas, that at Dayton, Ohio, for a flying field of 250 acres you have been paying $60,000 per year for five or six years, as a lease. You are paying one-fourth as much lease for 250 acres per year as is asked for a title in fee to this 3,000 acres I am asking you to purchase.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, the Budget estimates this year contain no provision or recommendations for the purchase of additional land at Fort Bliss. When the Secretary of War was before our committee he was specifically asked in regard to the desirability of expending this $366,000, for this land at Fort Bliss. He said that while, in his opinion, it would be desirable, yet there were a dozen projects that he had in mind for which he would rather have the money now than this proposition at El Paso. Your committee thinks that it is a question that should be very carefully looked into before we buy such a large tract of land as this for such a large price, and especially in view of the declining real estate values. There is no question but that land values around El Paso have been high. The town has had a rapid growth. The Government has expended millions of dollars there every year ever since 1916, when the border concentration of troops was made largely there, and the town has grown in population and real estate values have gone up, but the committee has a very significant letter from a real estate firm in El Paso, written by J. E. Bowen, secretary of the El Paso Pecos Realty Co., which also makes an offer of land to the Government and offers some 1,280 acres, which are located adjoining the military reservation, to the east and to the north of it, land which has also been used by the Government during the border concentration for the National Guard and other purposes, and for which owners had asked the Government, a year or two ago, $100 an acre. Mr. Bowen concludes his letter with this very significant statement:

The Government at that time, or rather later, asked for a 10-year lease of land. We offered a 5-year lease, which for some reason was not accepted. They also asked for a price, which we made of $100 an acre, for section 11, and $75 an acre for section 10. However, at this time the stockholders of the company are prepared to make a real sacrifice, as they need the money, and we will sell the 1,280 acres for $50 an acre.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. HUDSPETH. There is a portion of this land, as the gentleman will see by the statement of General Howze, that is offered for $51 per acre, that is down in the brakes. I have not a dollar's interest in any acre of this land, and it is immaterial to me whether the Government purchases the land. The reason I present this matter is because it is land selected by the commanding general as best adapted for military purposes in sham battles, artillery practice, target range, and a portion of it is as level as this floor, suitable for drill purposes. It is immaterial to me from whom the land is purchased.

Mr. ANTHONY. There is another reason why we ought to go slowly in regard to the purchase of a large amount of land like this. The situation on the Mexican border now is not the same as it was a year or two or three years ago. We have reached a state of amicable relations with the Mexican Government. We have resumed diplomatic relations. There is no immediate danger of another large concentration of troops on the border, and I gravely doubt whether we will need all of this land at the Fort Bliss Army post.

It is true the Government has had the use of large acreages of land near Fort Bliss during the last 8 or 10 years for military purposes, but these lands have been gladly tendered to the Government by the citizens of El Paso, because the Government, as I say, has been expending millions of dollars a year there. It has not been a one-sided or jug-handled contract, and I think the citizens of El Paso have been abundantly repaid for their generosity to the Government in the use of this land. I think that a committee of Congress should have an opportunity to carefully examine into so large a purchase of this kind before the House places its approval upon it.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Texas, very properly representing his constituency, offers an amendment to this bill for the purchase of a large acreage of land adjoining Fort Bliss at a large price per acre. Who fixed the price I do not know, how it was fixed I do not know, and neither does anyone else.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I will inform the gentleman if he will yield.

Mr. MADDEN. I will yield.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The price I understand was obtained by General Howze, the commanding general, from the men who owned the land.

Mr. MADDEN. But the commanding general may not be the same commanding general to-morrow who is there to-day, and the opinion of the present commanding general may not be the opinion of the next commanding general, and besides there is no commanding general under our practice who has the authority to buy land. They have no authority to make contracts that are binding on the Government, and we have had many instances to show that contracts made by commanding generals have been repudiated because of lack of authority in these commanding generals. It may well be that the commanding general there to-day thinks that this land is an essential need for the post, but there are higher authorities than commanding generals and those high authorities have not submitted any proposal to the Congress to buy the land. We are paying $6,000 rent for this land now. The gentleman said we are using the land. We are, but we are paying for it out of the Treasury of the United States. The use of this land is not a free proposition at all, it is a business question, and there is a contract existing between the United States and the owner of the land, and I apprehend that $6,000 a year is a very large rental to pay, and $110 per acre a very large price per acre to pay if we buy the land. But there is no reason why the land should be purchased. The mere fact it is at El Paso and that that city is on the Mexican border and that the population of El Paso has increased until it is now 100,000 has nothing whatever to do with the case. Why, it is not long since that El Paso wanted the Government of the United States to drain El Paso as a great national problem, simply to take the water out of the cellars in El Paso that seeped through from the bed of the Rio Grande.

I made a full investigation of that situation at the time, and it is a fact that it was not a great national problem. There were several reasons. First, there was no navigation problem, because the Rio Grande River at that point is not navigable. There was not any international problem because in the proposal El Paso had nothing to do with Mexico and the United States combined. And, third, it was disclosed that the only thing included in the proposal specific to El Paso was that they have a 1,000-acre swamp in the center of El Paso that they wanted drained at the expense of the Federal Government, and I am opposed to the enactment of the amendment submitted by the gentleman from Texas for the purchase of this land which would cost $366,000.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MADDEN. I will.

Mr. LONGWORTH. The practical effect of this would be to make the Government pay three times for the land what it is now paying in the way of interest. That is, if we are now paying $6,000, 5 per cent on $366,000 would be practically three times the amount in interest that we are now paying.

Mr. MADDEN. Surely, if we bought the land.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Will the gentleman yield there for a moment?

Mr. RANKIN. I will.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I want to state to the gentleman from Illinois he misunderstands the proposition, misstated it by saying there was an immense amount of land on which they are paying rental. They are paying rental on a portion of this land at $6,000, whereas on the whole amount they have had the use for years and years at $1 a year.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman does not deny we are paying $6,000?

Mr. HUDSPETH. But the Government is paying $6,000 on only a portion of it.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] said that some individuals had a very large tract of land somewhere along in this location which they offer for less money. Now, as a matter of fact, I want to ask the gentleman from Texas if it is not a fact that when this drill ground, target range, and so forth, was selected the commanding officer could have got any of this land he wanted.

Mr. HUDSPETH. No; the adjoining land mentioned by the gentleman from Kansas may not be adapted for military purposes. The land may be situated where General Howze or other military officer might not wish the Government to purchase it at any price. Relative to the statement of the gentleman from Illinois that El Paso wanted so much out of the Federal Government, I want to state this to the gentleman: We asked for a survey to be made there to protect the lower part of the city, where there were also Government buildings, customhouses, and so forth, that had been inundated by over flow. That is all we wanted. The citizenship of El Paso are now draining their overflow land and not asking the Federal Government for a cent. We did not ask that any cellars be drained, and I will state to you that some of the citizens would not permit their cellars to be drained of their contents. [Applause.] We do not ask this Federal Government to drain our cellars.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman from Illinois spoke about this land needing drainage. Possibly this land the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] refers to is along the water edge and may not be adapted at all to military purposes.

Mr. HUDSPETH. It may be; but I am sure if it had been suited for all purposes and could be utilized for military purposes, and the price fixed at $50 an acre, that General Howze would have selected the 1,200 acres. It is land there where the Government has buildings erected, residential property all around it that is of great value, and the owners are asking a higher price for it, and naturally it should command a higher price. It makes no difference to me, I will state to my friend from Mississippi, what tracts of land are purchased or who owns it; all I ask and urge is that the Government purchase sufficient lands for all military purposes at that great cost, which is of so much importance not only to the people of the border but to the whole of this great Republic.

There are 800 acres. They have $79,000 worth of improvements there, as they state. Naturally that would go at a higher price, right there in the city.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BURTON.) The pro forma amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is withdrawn. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH.]

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. HUDSPETH. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 32, yeas 25.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. Tellers are demanded.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed Mr. ANTHONY and Mr. HUDSPETH to act as tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 36, yeas 36.

The CHAIRMAN. The chair casts a vote in the negative, so the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma: Page 28, line 26, after the figures "$37,400," insert: "For the purchase of a parcel of land containing forty-three and six-tenths acres more or less, lying adjacent to the north of the Canadian River in section 36, township 13 north, range 8, west of the Indian meridian in Canadian County, Okla. Said tract located directly opposite the Fort Reno pumping plant, and to be more particularly described in the instrument of conveyance. Said tract when acquired to be added to the Fort Reno Military Reservation, and to be used in an effort to straighten the course of the said North Canadian River, not to exceed $3,500."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS] is recognized.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is in the nature of a new section following the section just read. The reason for offering this amendment is as follows: The Government has a reservation in Oklahoma known as the Fort Reno Military Reservation. It is bounded on the north by the Canadian River. At one point on the northern line there is a bend in the river that is eating into the reservation, and just opposite the bend is the pumping plant for the fort on the reservation. Unless the river is straightened it will eat into and destroy this pumping plant.

There is a bill pending before the committee relating to this matter, and in the hearings on page 1163 we find a recommendation for the purchase of this particular tract of land, the War Department making the following recommendation:

The acquisition of this land is manifestly desirable, but no estimate therefor has as yet been submitted to Congress.

Preceding that, in their report they state—

The erosion along the banks of the bend of the river near the pumping plant has been giving considerable trouble during past years, and quite a large amount of land has been lost from the reservation due to this continuous erosion. Temporary methods have been tried from time to time, such as tree and shrub planting, piling, etc., none of which have been successful.

Just previous to the recent excessive high water in that vicinity this office received information from Fort Reno that the river was flooding to a dangerous stage, and an officer with engineering experience was ordered to proceed to Fort Reno immediately to take charge of the situation. Coincident with his arrival the water had reached a height beyond any that it had ever gone before, and the whole valley was covered, and a great deal of erosion was taking place. Due to the flood quickly receding and to strenuous work on the part of the local authorities the existence of the pumping plant was saved, though the bank of the river was cut away to within 60 feet of the nearest well, and it is feared that one more flood of the same magnitude will completely ruin the pumping plant, and a very few floods of a lesser nature will eventually accomplish the same results. It is now desired to take steps to permanently protect the reservation boundary and the pumping plant.

The Government has a lease of this land, but the land is owned by a farmer, Mr. Joseph D. Stephens, who in making the lease understood that the money would be made immediately available for the purchase of this tract of land.

The CHAIRMAN. On the point of order, will the gentleman from Oklahoma state if this is for a military purpose? The amendment says, "in an effort to straighten the course of the Canadian River."

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is in the nature of a repair. The military purpose, Mr. Chairman, as the matter now stands, is this: The river is destroying some valuable land between the channel and the pumping plant, and unless the river is straightened the water supply will be destroyed. This land is desired by the department to be used in an effort to divert the river away from the pumping plant and water supply for the post.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Is this land across the river from the reservation?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It joins the reservation.

Mr. SNELL. The river runs through the land, does it?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes; but the river is not a large river; it is a small stream.

Mr. SNELL. But it runs between the land you want to buy and the reservation?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. That is what I wanted to find out.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. But when this ditch is dug the river will be diverted. At the present time the land wanted is on the opposite side of the river.

Mr. SNELL. But the reservation is on the other side.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. The fact is that the ditch is being dug, and when that is completed the course of the river will be changed.

Mr. SNELL. I know; but at the present time the river is between this piece of land and the present fort?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Legally, the river would amount to no more than a public highway or a fence.

Mr. SNELL. If it is a public highway does it detach this patch of land?

Mr. LONGWORTH. Can the bed of the river be used as a road? [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. At times this river is dry, let me say to the gentleman, but when a flood comes great damage to the land now owned by the Government is done. If we have another flood like that of last fall it is feared the pumping plant will be destroyed, and there is no other water supply for the remount station. The War Department recommends that this land be purchased. Their report appears on page 1163 of the hearings, and I am acting in accordance with the recommendation of the War Department in making this request.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair feels constrained to sustain the point of order on the ground that the land proposed to be acquired is not contiguous to any land owned by the Government. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR OF HOSPITALS.

For construction and repair of hospitals at military posts already established and occupied, including all expenditures for construction and repairs required at the Army and Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., and for the construction and repair of general hospitals and expenses incident thereto, and for additions needed to meet the requirements of increased garrisons, and for temporary hospitals in standing camps and cantonments; for the alteration of permanent buildings at posts for use as hospitals, construction and repair of temporary hospital buildings at permanent posts, construction and repair of temporary general hospitals, rental or purchase of grounds, and rental and alteration of buildings for use for hospital purposes in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, including necessary temporary quarters for hospital personnel, outbuildings, heating and laundry apparatus, plumbing, water and sewers, and electric work, cooking apparatus, and roads and walks for the same, $489,500: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for the construction of new hospitals.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. TILSON). The gentleman from Maryland moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I desire to ask the chairman of the subcommittee a question. During the war certain enlisted men, privates and noncommissioned officers, were sent to officers' training camps. It was provided that those of them who were afterwards commissioned should receive $100 a month, and I desire to ask the chairman of the subcommittee whether any provision is made in this bill for the payment of those claims.

Mr. ANTHONY. I presume the gentleman refers to the ruling of the Comptroller General that any of the men in training camps during the war, who were paid as enlisted men, are entitled to the $100 a month as trainees.

Mr. BULWINKLE. The difference between the enlisted pay and the $100 a month?

Mr. ANTHONY. I can say to the gentleman that this morning the conferees on the deficiency bill held a meeting, and I find there is included in that bill an item of eight hundred and some odd thousand dollars for pay of the Army, which I was informed covers items such as the gentleman has just described, because it refers to pay previous to 1921. So I am quite sure it covers the claims the gentleman refers to.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Then the matter is very fully covered by legislation which the Appropriations Committee has initiated?

Mr. ANTHONY. That is the impression I got this morning.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Yes.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will this take care of all those cases or does it take care of only a few?

Mr. ANTHONY. How many of them I do not know. All I know is that that sum of money is carried in the deficiency bill and it is to be used for that purpose.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I desire to ask the chairman of the subcommittee a question which I desired to ask in connection with the paragraph "Barracks and quarters," immediately preceding. What is the plan of the Army and of the Appropriation Committee as to the continuance and maintenance of Army posts? I have in mind, of course, Camp Lewis in the district which I have the honor to represent.

Mr. ANTHONY. I suppose the gentleman refers to some plan of permanent construction to replace the temporary buildings which are fast reaching a stage where they can not be used much longer?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That, and the maintenance of conveniences generally at these posts.

Mr. ANTHONY. There are several items for new construction, but none for Camp Lewis. However, it is our understanding that the Secretary of War intends to come to Congress very soon with a construction program which will embrace a policy of permanent construction at military posts in order to properly house the Army and replace the temporary structures which the Army is now compelled to use in many places, and which are fast deteriorating, and which should be replaced. That will be a large program and we ought to spend all the way from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 in that work. It is my understanding that the Secretary of War intends to embrace the whole project in one program and ask its approval at some future time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Then I am justified in believing that items which were originally proposed providing for certain improvements at certain posts, and which do not appear in this bill, will appear in that program.

Mr. ANTHONY. The only projects specifically mentioned in the bill are those relating to entirely new construction, but the appropriation for barracks and quarters takes care of needed repairs.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The War Department is authorized, then, under certain provisions in this bill to take care of the engagements they have entered into or are proposing to enter into in the nature of repairs and betterments?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think they will carry out any necessary contracts in connection with that work.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

OFFICE OF THE QUARTERMASTER GENERAL.

Salaries: For personal services in the District of Columbia in accordance with "the classification act of 1923," $586,280.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer a pro forma amendment to strike out the four words in line 18, "Salaries: For personal services."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLANTON: Page 30, line 18, strike out the words "Salaries: For personal services."

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I wish that in all these salary matters the spirit of Washington could prevail just a little here in the District of Columbia. On June 15, 1775, when the Continental Congress at Philadelphia chose Colonel Washington as Commander in Chief of the American forces, in his speech of acceptance General Washington said:

As to pay, sir, I beg leave to assure the Congress that, as no pecuniary consideration could have tempted me to accept this arduous employment at the expense of my domestic ease and happiness, I do not wish to make any profit from it. I will keep an exact account of my expenses. Those, I doubt not, Congress will discharge; and that is all I desire.

Of course, the employees of the Government, including the Army and the Navy, are not in a position to do altogether as General Washington did. They must have adequate pay, but they ought to have that same "Washington" spirit of service for the country.

I just want to take up this minute to call attention to the fact that we have at the head of one of the departments here in the District—which is partly paid for by the Government—an insurance commissioner, who has a bill reported favorably right now to increase his salary $1,700 a year, which would give him more than any one of 28 governors are now receiving in 28 States.

I printed in the RECORD of March 24 some facts and figures and information I gathered concerning that insurance bill and that insurance department, and I am using this moment now to ask my colleagues to please turn to the RECORD of that date and read carefully those facts and figures in my report which I am there giving you. I am sure you will find them instructive. I am sure you will find them beneficial, and I predict that when you read them, there is not a man in this House who will vote for that bill which has already been favorably reported and is now on the calendar ready for passage. And I hope every Senator will take time to read this report.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Just one moment and then I am through because I do not want to take up the time of the committee. We must pass this Army bill, but I want to say that this "Washington" idea of service should prevail right in the incipency of the life of Army men at West Point and of Navy men at Annapolis. I received a letter a few days ago from a good woman down in one of the east coast States, who said that her boy at West Point was interested in a little bill here to increase the pay of the cadets at West Point and she hoped I would not offer any objection to the matter because the boys at West Point were needing more money there. I wrote back to the good woman and told her that I was sorry the Government was not doing more for the cadets at West Point and Annapolis than it was doing, that it was treating the boys badly and was not considerate enough of the boys that it sent to Annapolis and West Point. I had to regret, of course, that all that the Government did for these boys was to pay their way from their homes to West Point; all it did was to furnish them their full equipment there except clothing; it gave them their complete education and training free; it gave them their food free; it gave them their lodging free; and it gave them everything they needed with the one exception of clothing, absolutely free. It just paid them also a little mensley sum of $900 a year during their four years while there, and most of them had a little cash surplus saved up when they went out, and the stingy Government does not do anything for them afterwards except to commission them in the United States Army and Navy as commissioned officers for life. That is all this parsimonious Government does for these boys at West Point and Annapolis, and I was sorry the Government could not do more. These specially favored young men should remember the "Spirit of Washington's service," and also that there are millions of other American boys who get nothing.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the amendment is withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

In addition to the foregoing employees appropriated for in the office of the Quartermaster General, the services of technical experts and such other services as the Secretary of War may deem necessary may be employed in the office of the Quartermaster General, to be paid from the appropriation for "Incidental expenses of the Army": Provided, That the entire expenditures for this purpose for the fiscal year 1925 shall not exceed $16,300, and there shall be included in the Budget for each fiscal year a statement of the number of persons so employed, their duties, and the amount paid to each.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word simply for the purpose of correcting the record. The gentleman from Texas is in error when he says that the Government pays these boys at West Point and Annapolis $900 in addition to their clothing and to their maintenance and their food. That is not the fact, and the gentleman from Texas should inform himself as to the situation and under what conditions the cadets at Annapolis and West Point are being paid before making any such statement.

Mr. MADDEN. They pay all of their expenses out of that fund.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Absolutely. I just wanted to make the record clear in that respect.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

SIGNAL CORPS.

SIGNAL SERVICE OF THE ARMY.

Telegraph and telephone systems: Purchase, equipment, operation, and repair of military telegraph, telephone, radio, cable, and signaling systems; signal equipment and stores, holographs, signal lanterns, flags, and other necessary instruments; wind vane, barometers, anemometers, thermometers, and other meteorological instruments; photographic and cinematographic work performed for the Army by the Signal Corps; motor cycles, motor-driven and other vehicles for technical and official purposes in connection with the construction, operation, and maintenance of communication or signaling systems, and supplies for their operation and maintenance; professional and scientific books of reference, pamphlets, periodicals, newspapers, and maps for use in the office of the Chief Signal Officer and the Signal Corps School, Camp Alfred Vail, N. J.; telephone apparatus, including rental and payment for commercial, exchange, message, trunk-line, long-distance, and leased-line telephone service at or connecting any post, camp, cantonment, depot, arsenal, headquarters, hospital, aviation station, or other office or station of the Army excepting local telephone service for the various bureaus of the War Department in the District of Columbia, and toll messages pertaining to the office of the Secretary of War; electric time service; the rental of commercial telegraph lines and equipment and their operation at or connecting any post, camp, cantonment, depot, arsenal, headquarters, hospital, aviation station, or other office or station of the Army, including payment for official individual telegraph messages transmitted over commercial lines; electrical installations and maintenance thereof at military posts, cantonments, camps, and stations of the Army, fire control and direction apparatus and material for Field Artillery; salaries of civilian employees, including those necessary as instructors at vocational schools; supplies, general repairs, reserve supplies, and other expenses connected with the collecting and transmitting of information for the Army by telegraph or otherwise; experimental investigation, research, purchase and development or improvements in apparatus, and maintenance of signaling and accessories thereto, including patent rights and other rights thereto, including machines, instruments, and other equipment for laboratory and repair purposes; tuition, laboratory fees, etc., for Signal Corps officers detailed to civilian technical schools for the purpose of pursuing technical courses of instruction along Signal Corps lines; lease, alteration, and repair of such buildings required for storing or guarding Signal Corps supplies, equipment, and personnel when not otherwise provided for, including the land therefor, the introduction of water, electric light and power, sewerage, grading roads and walks, and other equipment required, $1,845,970.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

This paragraph has to do with the Signal Service of the Army and there has arisen a serious question in reference to the Navy, the Army, and the Department of Commerce in the matter of radio service. It is the contention of the business world that the Army transgresses on the rights of the civilian in the use of their radio instruments and the same contention is made with reference to the Navy.

This matter of the control of the air by radio is one of the most vital questions before the American people to-day. It should be given attention. There is an effort being made on the part of some to absolutely take control of the air for communication purposes. Gentlemen, we have let our natural resources, in many instances, be taken away from us, and we should start now, in time, to save for the people of this country the use of the air for communication purposes. [Applause].

The War Department has developed and is developing many discoveries and so is the Navy. It is going to be necessary to do something to avoid any unnecessary interference on the part of the War Department or upon the part of the Navy Department, but there are times and there are periods when the Army ought to have a free hand, and so ought the Navy, in trying out the new inventions and discoveries, and there ought to be periods of time fixed when they may try out this system of communication without any interference from the Department of Commerce.

I hope this Congress at an early date will fix some rule by law, or give to some department by law, the power to regulate and control communications by radio. I do not want to trespass further on your time, but I wanted to call the attention of the House to this very important matter of radio communication. There are no limits to it. We have been told by these experts that it is only a matter of time until power itself will be communicated by use of the radio without any wires.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. Is there not now a law, either proposed or on the statute books, limiting the control of companies in the operation of radio to two years?

Mr. McKEOWN. There is an old law that was passed in 1912. There is a proposition now before one of the committees to regulate this matter and I hope that Congress will give attention to it when it comes up. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEACOAST DEFENSES, UNITED STATES.

For operation and maintenance of fire-control installations at seacoast defenses, $140,000.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I want to call the attention of the committee to the proposed expenditures for coast-defense purposes. In a few pages from this point there will appear a very innocent looking appropriation which is simply the starter of an appropriation which eventually will amount to many millions. For some reason the Army seems to be stubborn in its insistence upon spending millions of dollars on antiquated, obsolete, useless coast defenses. The permanent coast-defense fort is absolutely useless in modern warfare, and why at this late date, in the light of experience during the last war, any attempt should be made to continue the old practice of dumping millions into forts along the coast, into guns which can not reach the range of an approaching enemy fleet, and are absolutely defenseless against an air attack, is beyond the understanding of any intelligent person.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Certainly.

Mr. BLANTON. I was busy, but my attention has just been called to the fact that the gentleman from New York stated that the boys at Annapolis and West Point received less than I indicated.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. But I am talking now about coast defense.

Mr. BLANTON. Yes, but I want to get the record straight.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I understood the gentleman from Texas to say that the cadets at West Point and Annapolis received their annual pay in addition to the clothing and maintenance.

Mr. BLANTON. I never mentioned clothing. They do pay for their clothing, but everything else is paid for by the Government.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Well, will the gentleman follow me in this matter of coast defense?

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. BARBOUR. Has the gentleman from New York given the War Department the benefit of his opinion?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. When we come to the Panama items of coast defense, I am going to give the House some startling information. Many years ago we believed we had developed something remarkable when we had the so-called disappearing gun. The disappearing gun was never adopted by any other country in the world, and within a few years it was as useless as a popgun for coast defense purposes. If the War Department wants to keep abreast of the times, we should appropriate for a mobile coast defense system, so to have large guns mounted on trains that could be rapidly moved and brought into position where needed. How ridiculous it is to expect that an attacking fleet is going to come exactly where you have your fort, come within range of your guns, and then say "Now, please shoot at us, we are here."

For some reason the coast defense appropriations were taken from the Committee on Military Affairs many years ago and put into the Committee on Appropriations. Any cannon over 0.3 was not a matter for the Military Affairs Committee, but was sent to the Committee on Appropriations, with the result that we squandered hundreds of millions of dollars. A glaring example was the mistake you made at Corregidor, in the Philippines. You started out to appropriate money for Corregidor, believing that you were going to establish a Gibraltar in the Philippines. It was hardly finished when it was admitted and conceded by military authorities that it could not withstand a siege of six weeks. And yet you went on squandering money at Corregidor. Now you are going to make the same mistake at Panama. These items will be found on page 48 of the bill, and I hope that we will have a full and thorough discussion of it so that the mistakes and waste of the past will not be repeated in the future. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEACOAST DEFENSES, UNITED STATES.

For operation and maintenance of fire-control installations at sea-coast defenses, $140,000.

SEACOAST DEFENSES, INSULAR POSSESSIONS.

For operation and maintenance of fire-control installations at sea-coast defenses, insular possessions, $25,000.

SEACOAST DEFENSES, PANAMA CANAL.

For operation and maintenance of fire-control installations at sea-coast defenses, Panama Canal, $10,000.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER.

Salaries: For personal services in the District of Columbia in accordance with "the classification act of 1923," $57,540.

The services of skilled draftsmen and such other services as the Secretary of War may deem necessary may be employed only in the Signal Office to carry into effect the various appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the Signal Service of the Army, to be paid from such appropriations, in addition to the foregoing employees appropriated for in the Signal Office: Provided, That the entire expenditures for this purpose for the fiscal year 1925 shall not exceed $40,000, and the Secretary of War shall each year in the Budget report to Congress the number of persons so employed, their duties, and the amount paid to each.

AIR SERVICE.

AIR SERVICE, ARMY.

For creating, maintaining, and operating at established flying schools and balloon schools courses of instruction for officers, students, and enlisted men, including cost of equipment and supplies necessary for instruction, purchase of tools, equipment, materials, machines, textbooks, books of reference, scientific and professional papers, instruments and materials for theoretical and practical instruction; for maintenance, repair, storage, and operation of airships, war balloons, and other aerial machines, including instruments, materials, gas plants, hangars, and repair shops, and appliances of every sort and description necessary for the operation, construction, or equipment of all types of aircraft, and all necessary spare parts and equipment connected therewith and the establishment of landing and take-off runways; for purchase of supplies for securing, developing, printing, and reproducing photographs in connection with aerial photography; improvement, equipment, maintenance, and operation of plants for testing and experimental work, and procuring and introducing water, electric light and power, gas and sewerage, including maintenance, operation, and repair of such utilities at such plants; for the acquisition of land or interest in land by purchase, lease, or condemnation where necessary to explore for, procure, or reserve helium gas, and also for the purchase, manufacture, construction, maintenance, and operation of plants for the production thereof and experimentation therewith; salaries and wages of civilian employees as may be necessary, and payment of their traveling and other necessary expenses as authorized by existing law; transportation of materials in connection with consolidation of Air Service activities; experimental investigation and purchase and development of new types of aircraft, accessories thereto, and aviation engines, including licenses for patents and design rights thereto, and plans, drawings, and specifications thereof; for the purchase, manufacture, and construction of airships, balloons, and other aerial machines, including instruments, gas plants, hangars, and repair shops, and appliances of every sort and description necessary for the operation, construction, or equipment of all types of aircraft, and all necessary spare parts and equipment connected therewith; for the marking of military airways where the purchase of land is not involved; for the purchase, manufacture, and issue of special clothing, wearing apparel, and similar equipment for aviation purposes; for all necessary expenses connected with the sale or disposal of surplus or obsolete aeronautical equipment, and the rental of buildings, and other facilities for the handling or storage of such equipment; for the services of such consulting engineers at experimental stations of the Air Service as the Secretary of War may deem necessary, including necessary traveling expenses; purchase of special apparatus and appliances, repairs and replacements of same used in connection with special scientific medical research in the Air Service; for maintenance and operation of such Air Service printing plants outside of the District of Columbia as may be authorized in accordance with law; for publications, station libraries, special furniture, supplies and equipment for offices, shops, and laboratories; for special services, including the salvaging of wrecked aircraft, $12,435,000: Provided, That not to exceed $2,500,000 from this appropriation may be expended for pay any expenses of civilian employees other than those employed in experimental and research work; not exceeding $500,000 may be expended for experimentation, conservation, and production of helium; not exceeding $2,850,000 may be expended for experimental and research work with airplanes or lighter-than-air craft and their equipment, including the pay of necessary civilian employees; not exceeding $500,000 may be expended for the production of lighter-than-air equipment; not exceeding $300,000 may be expended for improvement of stations, hangars, and gas plants for the Regular Army and for such other markings and fuel supply stations and temporary shelter as may be necessary; not less than $2,646,000 shall be expended for the production and purchase of new airplanes and their equipment, spare parts, and accessories; not more than $4,000 may be expended for settlement of claims (not exceeding $250 each) for damages to persons and private property resulting from the operation of aircraft at home and abroad when each claim is substantiated by a survey report of a board of officers appointed by the commanding officer of the nearest aviation post and approved by the Chief of Air Service and the Secretary of War; and not exceeding $50,000 may be used for all contingent expenses in connection with an aerial flight around the world, for such purposes as may be approved or authorized by the Secretary of War, to be immediately available: Provided further, That section 3648, Revised Statutes, shall not apply to subscriptions for foreign and professional newspapers and periodicals to be paid for from this appropriation: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under this title shall be used for the purpose of giving exhibition flights to the public other than those under the control and direction of the War Department; and if such flights are given by Army personnel upon other than Government fields, a bond of indemnity, in such sum as the Secretary of War may require for damages to person or property, shall be furnished the Government by the parties desiring the exhibition.

The sum of $1,399,001.65 of the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the Air Service for the fiscal year 1922 contained in the "act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1921, shall remain available until June 30, 1925, $399,001.65 of this amount to be used for the payment of obligations incurred under contracts executed prior to June 30, 1922, and the balance for the purchase of new airplanes and their equipment, spare parts, and accessories, in addition to the amount expended for the latter purpose from the above appropriation of $12,435,000.

AVIATION, SEACOAST DEFENSES, PANAMA CANAL.

For the improvement of landing field, France Field, to remain available until expended, $145,000.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF AIR SERVICE.

Salaries: For personal services in the District of Columbia in accordance with "the classification act of 1923," $218,576.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I happen to know that it is seriously contemplated to offer an amendment at this place. In fact, I know that one amendment, if not more, has been prepared. I wish to address the House before anybody else does, for the purpose of undertaking to show that the contemplated amendment should not be offered, because it would be ruinous in effect to the whole Air Service if it should be adopted. I have a copy of an amendment which it is proposed to be offered. It reads as follows:

Page 38, line 5, insert: "Provided no part of the money herein appropriated shall be paid to any person, firm, or corporation indebted to the United States until such claim shall have been settled."

Mr. Chairman, if that amendment should be adopted, every piece of work and part of construction or repair of an airplane would be stopped. A great many Members of this body know that a most industrious lobby is at work here for the introduction and passage of such an amendment. As I said, if that amendment should be adopted, the further construction of airplanes and the repair of airplanes would have to be stopped immediately. Nothing whatever could thereafter be done, for the reason that the Government is in dispute with every aircraft manufacturing concern from which necessary parts must be gotten. These disputes are in course of settlement. How long they are going to continue in dispute, or when they will be settled, no man knows. Therefore if this amendment should be adopted—and I am hoping that those who contemplate introducing it may be prevailed upon not to present it—an airplane part could not be gotten; consequently the airplanes could not be repaired and could not be built, for the reason that the parts with which to build them, if built by the Government, must be gotten from those concerns now in litigation with the United States Government.

I think that the House should understand that if such an amendment be adopted, instantly the flying service of the United States must be closed down.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Would not the gentleman better save his ammunition until the amendment is offered? I do not believe any such amendment will be offered.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Perhaps the gentleman knows more than I do about it. I am hoping to forestall it. If the gentleman objects to my making this statement—

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Oh, not at all.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Apparently he does. I believe that no Member of this House with the knowledge of the facts that I have stated should offer the amendment. For the information of the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA], who just rose, I invite his attention to the fact that I read a copy of a proposed amendment to be introduced at this very point. Fortunately I do not see the gentleman upon the floor at this moment who contemplates offering it. If I had more time I would endeavor to throw some light on the active lobby just referred to. In any event, I shall do so later.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I do so for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee if there is any money appropriated in this bill for the purchase or acquirement of lighter-than-air machines?

Mr. ANTHONY. There is a limitation on the amount which can be expended for lighter-than-air craft of $500,000. Our information is that they contemplate the purchase of a very few of the lighter-than-air craft. They are used only for observation purposes, or for spotting artillery fire.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. How large are they to be?

Mr. ANTHONY. They are not to be large. They are going to buy two small ships of the semirigid type. I do not know the exact dimensions, but they are comparatively small ones, very much smaller than the Shenandoah or the type that we usually read about.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. They can not be very large if they have only $500,000.

Mr. ANTHONY. They are very small.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. When did we appropriate the money by which the Navy bought the Shenandoah, or by which the Army has purchased the machine which they are to receive from Germany?

Mr. ANTHONY. I can not give the gentleman any information with regard to the naval purchase, but the ship that is to be received from Germany comes to us as a part of the reparations agreement, and it is a disputed question whether the ship will go to the Army or to the Navy. I sincerely hope it will not go to the Army, because I would regard it as an incubus, and it will be simply a useless expense and a drain upon our appropriations.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. If it is from the reparations, how did the Army ever get hold of it?

Mr. ANTHONY. It has not been assigned to either the Army or the Navy as yet.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. How did the Army or the Navy have any right at all to pay for it out of the reparations?

Mr. ANTHONY. There is no money from this appropriation that can be used for such a ship. If it was presented to the Army, the money in this item could be used to operate it, undoubtedly.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I quite agree with the chairman of the committee that it is a waste of money to invest any money at all in these large blimps or lighter-than-air machines. I might say that I think that we are making a tremendous mistake in our entire airplane development. We are at present expending, I presume, some $40,000,000 a year for airplanes, and when we have spent the money, at the end of the year we have practically nothing to show for it.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think the gentleman ought to know that the Army has been very conservative in regard to the money that we have appropriated for new construction of airplanes. In the last year or two we find that the Air Service of the Army has not expended all the money that we have appropriated for new construction because they are trying to develop more efficient types. They are going slow in regard to going into the manufacture of planes because they realize that we have not yet reached the point of development where we are safe in going into large production. In this bill we reappropriate $1,300,000 that would lapse on July 1, because the Air Service has purposely refrained from spending it until they are sure they have a type that they could safely go into production on, and this year we authorize the reappropriation of that amount in addition to the sum carried in the bill.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I am glad to hear that this is true.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro forma amendment. I hope my colleagues will give me a few moments' attention on this subject. I recall that when the naval appropriation bill was before us in the first session of the Sixty-sixth Congress I opposed the appropriation for the purchase of the R-34 from England. I was criticized at the time on the floor of the House, and the unfortunate result of that purchase is still vivid in our memories. I pointed out at the time that we were purchasing a type of rigid ship which had already become obsolete. As the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] pointed out, we appropriate about $40,000,000 a year, in round figures, in the Army and the Navy for the Air Service, and yet the other day when we were trying to get an appropriation for $1,500,000 for the Post Office the point of order was made and the item stricken from the bill. I sincerely hope that this will be the last time in an appropriation bill that we appropriate for the Air Service of the Army and the Navy separately. If you want to develop the United States air defense or air offense and create an industry in this country for the manufacture of airplanes and flying machines, you simply have to stop this wild waste and duplication of work that we are now carrying on with the Army and the Navy. You are trying to conduct a new industry, a new weapon of warfare, and you are using the same method that you used in appropriating for small military posts in the days of the Indian frontier. You can not do it and be successful. I do not know what the Special Committee of Investigation of the Air Industry is going to bring out; but I do hope that they will have the courage to withstand the pressure of the politicians of the Navy Department and the War Department and come here with a constructive program and unite all of the air activities of the Government in one department and let the United States take its place among the nations of the world in an adequate, up-to-date Air Service.

Now, I do not see, gentlemen, why you are so willing to appropriate millions of dollars for the Army and for the Navy, duplicating on each other, and yet when we come here and ask you for an appropriation to carry on a really useful experiment you weigh the letters and figure the cost for a few planes that the Post Office Department are now operating. I defy the gentleman in charge of this bill or the gentleman in charge of the naval bill to define the line where the activities of the Army Air Service cease and the activities of the Navy Air Service commence. We had recently a spectacular, interesting, exciting demonstration of the Shenandoah, and I will tell you gentlemen that the experience of the Shenandoah was of no scientific use to air science. Why, we have already seen an airship cross the ocean and back; we have had the German Zeppelins many years ago, and here you come with the Shenandoah which made a short trip and you got all excited about it. Why, the only man who knows anything about the Shenandoah is the German commander who came over here to build it, and when he goes back home to Germany he is going to take everything he knows back home with him.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The Clerk read as follows:

AVIATION, SEACOAST DEFENSES, PANAMA CANAL

For the improvement of landing field, France Field, to remain available until expended, $145,000.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to ask the chairman of the committee with regard to this year's expenditures. Will this complete the France Field, or only partially? As I understand, this is only a partial appropriation.

Mr. ANTHONY. The War Department asked for money sufficient to complete the filling in of the entire field. We appropriated enough to fill in area A. The gentleman will see on the map here, included within red lines, there are two areas. Area A requires 282,000 cubic yards of filling in order to make a suitable landing field. Area B requires 270,000 cubic yards of filling. We have appropriated sufficient money to fill in area A, which will probably take a year to accomplish, and we hope in the next bill to give them enough to fill in area B.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will it cost any more money by making the appropriation in two parts?

Mr. ANTHONY. No. It is work that will be done by Panama Canal dredges or by the Quartermaster Department of the Government. The Government itself will do the work.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I am very glad to hear that. I want to say of all the money you are appropriating for seacoast defense at Panama the appropriation you make for the landing field for airplanes is the best appropriation that you are making. It is permanent and will last and is a real defense, whereas much that you are appropriating is a waste of money. The landing-field appropriation is justified. I withdraw the pro forma amendment.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of asking the chairman a question I rise in opposition to the amendment. I want to ask the chairman if the General Staff objected to this item in the bill?

Mr. ANTHONY. With reference to France Field, no; they approved it. They asked for the entire appropriation.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. They realized that air defense is absolutely necessary at Panama?

Mr. ANTHONY. Oh, yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. They have admitted as much, have they?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think so.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the protection, preservation, repairs, and maintenance of historical fortifications at Fort Niagara, N. Y., Fort Marion, Fla., and San Juan, P. R., $25,000.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. SEARS of Florida: Page 40, line 22, after the figures "$25,000" strike out the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following: "Provided, That the Secretary of War is authorized to detail not exceeding six noncommissioned officers or privates for duty at Fort Marion to act as custodians and guides, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of War may make."

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, it is a question in my mind whether it is subject to the point of order or not as it does not add to the expense of the bill. But, to be absolutely frank with my colleague, perhaps it is subject to the point of order. Fort Marion, as my colleagues know, is the oldest fort in the country. From a historical viewpoint there is no place that is more interesting to the people who come to Florida than is Fort Marion. Sergeant Black for a number of years was there, and for a number of years they had a company detailed there which performed the purpose I hope the Secretary of War will adopt if my amendment is passed by the House. Under the present system civilian guides are located at Fort Marion. I hope my friend will not insist upon the point of order. It does not add to the cost of the bill. I believe the people from Ohio and from the other States coming down to St. Augustine and going to this old fort, as thousands and thousands of them do every year, that they should have either a noncommissioned officer or a private, if a non-commissioned officer can not be secured without additional expense, to show them through this historical place.

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. I know the gentleman realizes that the amendment he proposes is really an act of administration?

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. And also the gentleman understands the committee has set up an entirely new item in the bill in order to take care of the situation that was so ably presented to our committee by the gentleman. We realized that Fort Marion was a wonderful example of Spanish military architecture, erected several hundred years ago, and also that the gentleman from Florida desired a small appropriation, so that it could be preserved. We placed Fort Marion in the bill because we agreed with him. It was our understanding—at least the Secretary of War so informed us—that a local society there was furnishing guides looking after the old fort. Is that the case?

Mr. SEARS of Florida. That is the case, but the citizens of St. Augustine are objecting to that, because they believe that the Government should, as in the case of the Washington Monument, furnish these guides if it does not cost the Government any additional money.

Mr. ANTHONY. Of course the gentleman realizes that no military object is to be subserved by stationing troops there.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. I know; but every visitor to St. Augustine goes through this fort. The citizens there feel that the Government should take that work over if it does not cause additional expense. This would not interfere with the wonderful work the historical society has done there. I believe, though, the Government should maintain and preserve these valuable historical places.

Mr. ANTHONY. Would it not be a fine idea for the State of Florida to take over Fort Marion?

Mr. SEARS of Florida. It would; but let me suggest we might soon be in the position of the society that is interested in the acquisition of Monticello and whose members are asking people to subscribe in order that the place may be preserved. I thank the committee for the recognition they gave me as to Fort Marion.

Mr. ANTHONY. I understand that the society pays the Government $500 for the administration of Fort Marion and also maintains the land surrounding, grounds and property.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. Does the gentleman think that the mere pittance of $500 at Fort Marion should be charged to anybody? Does the gentleman believe that $500 should be charged for the use and preservation of Fort Marion?

Mr. ANTHONY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair holds that this amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida would be legislation, and the point of order is sustained.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. I am sorry my friend from Iowa saw fit to make a point of order on the amendment. I know, however, that he would not have done so had he not thought it his duty to make the point of order. When the bill comes up again next year I trust he will find that this amendment is a good one and that, therefore, he will not make a point of order. That does not reflect on my colleague who made the point of order.

I want to ask the gentleman from Kansas a question. My attention this morning was called to the fact that the report which the committee had before it called for $60,000 for Fort Niagara, N. Y. I notice that this appropriation carries only $25,000; and if $60,000 was necessary for Fort Niagara, I was wondering where Fort Marion came in under a $25,000 proposition.

Mr. ANTHONY. As I stated to the gentleman a moment ago, this is a new item, set up in the bill with the idea that the Government should exercise proper care in the administration of this post. Previous to 1922 the Government expended $1,500 at Fort Marion for preservation. Under this appropriation they have spent that much or more.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. I am not complaining, but it does not show it. If the Chairman will recall my request, it was for not less than $2,500, and possibly it would require $5,000. That is a small amount. I hope the committee had that in view when they recognized Fort Marion now for the first time. It has never been in the bill before.

Mr. ANTHONY. The committee felt that the gentleman from Florida with his well-known powers of persuasion could probably influence the War Department.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. If I could be as successful with the War Department as I have been with the committee I would not have any doubt, but I have not been as successful with some of the departments as I have been with the committee, and I thank the gentleman for stating the committee did so out of regard for my statement.

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes. The committee was influenced by the gentleman from Florida to decide on putting Fort Marion in a reasonable state of repair.

Mr. SEARS of Florida. I shall not press the point. I wish to again thank the gentlemen for the consideration which they gave me when I presented the case to them.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEACOAST DEFENSES, PANAMA CANAL.

For preparation of plans for fortifications and other works of defense, including surveys for roads, Canal Zone, $3,000.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, here we have the first item on a new program for the fortification of the Panama Canal.

Now, gentlemen, I wanted to come before this committee prepared with actual information and with official data from the War Department. I stated to you a few moments ago, in reply to the inquiry made by the gentleman, that I would give him information that would be startling. If the gentleman will give me his attention, I want to tell him that this committee can not get information from the War Department. First, I asked the Chief of the Air Service to prepare for me a chart for use before this committee when we were considering this bill, showing the range of the new guns contemplated in the new fortifications, to show their effectiveness against an attack from the air, and to show the value of defense at Panama with sufficient air force if these fortifications were not constructed. The Chief of the Air Service sent an officer to my office asking me to make the request of the Secretary of War. I made the request to the Secretary of War, and got the usual stereotyped reply—that it was referred to the proper bureau. Then an official from the Air Service came to me and talked informally, but not officially, and I again demanded information from the Secretary of War. I have been unable to obtain it, and I will say right here on the floor of the House that the Air Service is not permitted to give this House the accurate information.

Now, why is it, gentlemen, when we are asked to commence an appropriation in this seemingly innocent and innocuous and inexpensive manner for plans at a cost of $3,000 and construction of seacoast batteries of $252,000, which is only the beginning of a large project there that is going to cost you millions—why is it that we can not get the technical information, so that we may know what we are doing?

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I will.

Mr. BARBOUR. Does the gentleman agree that we should have some seacoast defenses in the Panama Canal?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Not unless it is mobile.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman tell us what, in his opinion, we should have there?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Does not the gentleman believe we ought to get that information from the War Department?

Mr. BARBOUR. But the gentleman says this is all wrong in the bill. Now, for the information of the House, will the gentleman tell us what he thinks ought to be there? It will, at least, be informing to us.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I believe we ought to have there an air base.

Mr. BARBOUR. I agree with that.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. With sufficient planes, and that we ought to have mobile artillery of large caliber.

Mr. BARBOUR. What caliber?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I am not an expert on artillery.

Mr. BARBOUR. But the gentleman says this plan is all wrong.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I say it is. I say it is startling that the War Department will not permit the air branch of the service to give us information, and I want to say to the gentleman that the information which I obtained from the Navy Department was simply ridiculous.

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. Just what information does the gentleman want? The committee felt the War Department was very free in giving information.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. All right. Then I will ask the gentleman—

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. ANTHONY. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks that the gentleman from New York may proceed for five additional minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I want to get and I want my colleagues to get—and not from me but from the War Department—a comparative chart showing the range of the guns which the department intends putting at Panama, and then showing the carrying capacity of bombing planes and the range of those planes.

Mr. ANTHONY. We can tell the gentleman the range of the 16-inch guns that will be installed under the provisions of the bill. The maximum range is 50,000 yards, which is a far greater range than it is possible for any foreign battleship to maintain against them.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. If your foreign battleship fleet carries with it a carrier vessel with bombing planes then what are you going to do?

Mr. ANTHONY. We have naval and Army air bases in Panama with sufficient planes to repel any naval air attack which can be brought against them.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. If so, why expend $100,000,000 in Panama?

Mr. ANTHONY. We are not.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. How much are you going to expend?

Mr. ANTHONY. The estimated expense of installing the four guns at the Pacific end is $1,200,000, and the same amount will be expended to emplace four 16-inch guns at the Atlantic end. This $200,000 is just for the emplacement and starting of the work. We have the guns on hand.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Will this pay for all the emplacements?

Mr. ANTHONY. It will start the work.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Exactly.

Mr. ANTHONY. We have to build a railroad and we have to excavate.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. What will that cost before you are through?

Mr. ANTHONY. This provides for the construction of the railroad and for the excavation, and the placing of the foundations.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Then how much more will you have to spend?

Mr. ANTHONY. As I stated, the total cost of the battery is $1,200,000.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. And that is the complete expense at Panama?

Mr. ANTHONY. At one end; that is the expense at each end.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. That is not the information I get from the War Department, and the gentleman will find himself greatly embarrassed in one or two years from now, when he comes for more money.

Mr. WINGO. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman interests me. He said he thought the War Department ought to give us certain scientific and technical information.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. WINGO. What is it?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Why, I just explained it to the gentleman from Kansas. We ought to know—I know it, but it ought to come from the War Department—just how many planes we are to have there.

Mr. WINGO. I think you ought to tell me; I would like to know it.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I will tell the gentleman now. If we put a proper air base there we can carry more explosives a greater distance than any artillery you can maintain at that point. And I will tell the gentleman that if we ever have the misfortune to be attacked at that point, we are not going to be attacked by a fleet in the water but by an air fleet.

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman complains because certain technical information is not furnished the Congress, but he says he has it. Now, there is no law to prohibit the gentleman from telling the House, if the gentleman has it.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I say that I am now telling the gentleman, and I want the War Department to admit it.

Mr. WINGO. But that is not technical information which the gentleman has given us. That is his argument.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Why can we not get the technical information from the War Department?

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman says he has it; why not tell the House?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I am just telling you generally what the conditions are and what every man knows.

Mr. WINGO. If everybody knows it, why call on the War Department to tell us?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. In order to convince the gentleman from Arkansas and the other gentlemen who are going to vote for this appropriation.

Mr. WINGO. Well, how?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I can not convince the gentleman, seemingly.

Mr. WINGO. How would you convince us? You have not given us any technical information and yet you say that everybody knows it.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman knows I can not get that information and that is my complaint.

Mr. WINGO. But the gentleman said a while ago that he had it.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I said I knew generally that we were spending money on this kind of coast defense, and anything that may be said upon the floor of this House is simply said because we have not the accurate information from the War Department.

Mr. BARBOUR. I will state to the gentleman that the War Department furnished the committee with all the information it sought on these matters.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Why was it not furnished to other Members?

Mr. BARBOUR. The gentleman can get it from the hearings.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. For the purpose of the record I want to ask the gentleman a question, because it will not be long before the next appropriation bill is before the House. It will not cost over $2,000,000 to complete the four guns on the Pacific end?

Mr. BARBOUR. It is estimated at $1,200,000.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And $1,200,000 for the other side?

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. That is $2,400,000, and you are not going to ask for any more money for that purpose. Then we will have some fun on the next appropriation.

Mr. BARBOUR. That is the estimate.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I will say it is an estimate.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, I am not an expert but I believe I am as good an expert as the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA]. Let us see what he is raising all this fuss about. I was listening to him, and I thought we were running into something and that the War Department was trying to keep something from the public that it ought to give us. The gentleman complained for five minutes that he had asked for certain information and somebody from the department had come down to see him and had told him to ask for it from the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of War gave him a stereotyped answer and referred him to somebody else, and somebody else came down, and then I was on tiptoe because I thought I was going to get something, and then directly he said it was technical information. He said he had the technical information, and I asked him then, "Why do you not give it to us?"

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman is in error. I said I could not get it.

Mr. WINGO. The gentleman said he had it. Oh, if you do not correct your remarks the Record will show that you said,

"I have got it," and I said, "Why do you not tell us?" Everybody present knows that that is true.

Now, what is the matter with the gentleman? I like the gentleman, but do you know what I thought, and I say this in all kindness to the gentleman. I remarked to some of the gentlemen sitting back here when the gentleman was talking about this information that the gentleman reminded me of the story of the dog that was chasing the train and an old farmer said, "What the hell would he do with it if he caught it?" [Applause.] Now, what would the gentleman from New York do with the technical information, if he got it?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. May I state that perhaps I could convince the gentleman from Arkansas if I had the information?

Mr. WINGO. No; the gentleman could not convince me because with all due respect to the gentleman I know that however great his experience and knowledge may be, we have some gentlemen in the War Department and in the Navy Department, whatever may be their faults and however extravagant they may be, who are just as patriotic as the gentleman from New York or myself. If they are not, God save the country, because in the last analysis on these technical questions we have got to let them waste some money because that is the only way by which you can experiment in a new industry and find out what to do. [Applause.] Oh, as long as they are spending it honestly, although wastefully, in trying to solve the evolutionary problem of airplane defense and offense, why should you and I sit around and like fice dogs yow-yow-yow at them; and, bless you, they are hampered now with suspicion and charges of graft. I feel sorry for these good men down in the War Department and in the Navy Department. As long as they are spending the money honestly and not greasing somebody's itching palm, we should not complain. As long as they are going out and spending the money, although perhaps wastefully, groping in the dark, trying to keep this Nation abreast of the developments in the Air Service, oh, the least we can do, gentlemen, is not to insinuate they are trying to mislead the House and cover up something. God be with these men. May they be successful in maintaining the supremacy of the United States, and may Congress have the courage to vote them the necessary money to carry on the needed experiments to develop our Air Service so that we can be invincible in time of war. [Applause.]

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WINGO. I yield to the gentleman because I know he is going to give me some information.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman has missed the point entirely.

Mr. WINGO. I know I have, and I want you to give it to me.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. They are not experimenting with air defense and air offense. That is what I want them to do. They are sinking the money in old, antiquated, obsolete forts.

Mr. WINGO. Who knows that? With all respect to the gentleman, I do not think he knows a bit more about the Air Service than I do. Now, that may be a broad statement, but certainly I am not going to accept the gentleman's statement on his experience when it contradicts and challenges the united judgment of men in the War Department that he has not given any facts to show we should distrust either their intelligence, their integrity, or their patriotism.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WINGO. And I have got all the information I want.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to say just a word about the appropriation which has just been made for the repair of historic buildings, including those at Fort Niagara, N. Y. Fort Niagara is at the foot of the Niagara River. It is one of the historic rivers, perhaps the most historic and in many respects the most important river in the United States. The fort at the foot of that river is one of the oldest buildings in the United States. It is an historic building. It was the center of many conflicts in the Revolution. It changed hands again and again, not once but repeatedly. It passed into the British hands and back into our hands and finally became a part of the territory of the United States as a result of conflicts and victories.

We send every year thousands and thousands of visitors abroad to look upon the monuments of past achievements in Europe. This is a new country and we have only a few historic buildings that have come down to us from the past, and these few we should cherish. Not only is this appropriation important from an historic standpoint but from a practical standpoint as well. This Government owns a valuable domain at the mouth of the Niagara River, where it empties into Lake Ontario.

The land itself is of enormous value. It is being swept by the storms into the lake. It is a question of preserving valuable property by rebuilding the sea wall. That is the purpose of this appropriation.

Years ago the map shows that there was an orchard existing north of what is now the end of the fort domain. That has been swept into Lake Ontario. The amount appropriated here is wholly inadequate; it will not rebuild the sea wall but it will start the work. The amount necessary is $57,000. We only obtain $7,500 through this appropriation, but, strange and absurd as it may seem, this seems to have been the first appropriation in this country for the purpose of preserving historic buildings. It is the first time that we have started to preserve in this way the glorious history of the Revolution. It is the first time we have made an effort in that direction, and the committee felt on that account that the appropriation, even of this amount, might be challenged, and so they brought in only a fraction, a small percentage, of what is needed. But the work will begin and there is no question that it will be continued and appropriations adequate in amount will be granted in the future.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. HAWLEY having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 6815) to authorize a temporary increase of the Coast Guard for law enforcement, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7449) making appropriations to supply deficiencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and prior years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the construction of seacoast batteries on the Canal Zone for defense of the Panama Canal, $272,460.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment of Mr. HULL of Iowa: Page 48, lines 1 and 2, strike out the paragraph.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I do not do this with any idea of making carping criticism of the War Department. I believe in expert advice. I do believe, however, that it is the duty of a Congressman, no matter how hard it may seem, to call attention of the country by even placing his opinion against the opinion of experts and let the future judge. I have not hesitated to do this in the past and I shall not hesitate to do it in the future. This item is but the start of an expenditure of money that will run into many millions, and every bit of it is obsolete before you start on it.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I will.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman tell us what he would have done?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I will before I get through.

Mr. BARBOUR. Why not now?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I will now. I would construct mobile artillery. You are going to have a fort, and you would have it so you would not conceal the gun and place it on a fixed fortification where the enemy knows before the trouble comes where it is and where they can pound it to pieces.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Why can not you use mobile artillery as supplemental to the other?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. A fixed fortification is absolutely useless if you use mobile artillery. There is no place in the world where mobile artillery could be worked so satisfactorily as at the Panama Canal. If you take one gun and place it properly you can use it on either side of the canal. You double the effectiveness. You place a piece of artillery in a fixed position, as you are proposing to do there out on Bruja Point, and every war department in the world knows it, knows where it is, and if they can get within 15 miles they will pound it to pieces. It was obsolete before the late war, which demonstrated beyond all question that you must not have fixed fortifications. Take, as an illustration, the Germans when they went through Belgium, and that was on the land.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. What is the elevation above sea level at Panama where these guns will be placed?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Bruja Point is not very high. The gun could be concealed, but they will have to build a railroad out there.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE. I think the gentleman from Iowa is correct, and I agree with him with respect to railroad artillery, but let me put this question to him about the blowing up of fixed fortifications. Suppose they dropped a bomb on the railroad track, about midway between the two coasts of the Panama Canal, what would happen?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Why the injury would not last 48 hours. They could repair the railroad track; but let them drop a bomb on your fixed fortifications, and they are all gone, and with them expenditures of millions of dollars.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. What does the gentleman think that the 16-inch gun would be doing while they were dropping a bomb upon it? Would it not be working, protecting itself?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Why, you could not put a 16-inch gun on an airplane.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I do not think anybody ever proposed to do that.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. From the gentleman's question I thought he did.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. They would be very serviceable on airplane carriers, would they not?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I want to be fair with the gentleman. I am not objecting to 16-inch guns, but I would put the guns on railroad cars that can be concealed.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Is the gentleman in favor of 275 guns?

Mr. BLANTON. We understand the gentleman from Iowa correctly, and I think he is making a good argument. He could not possibly put on an airplane the kind of 16-inch gun they send here from Baltimore.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I say that you are making a mistake in Panama and that it is a mistake to do as you propose to do. I call this to the attention of the chairman of the committee. He was down there at Panama last summer, and when we were there it was not the plan of the War Department to have these fixed fortifications at Bruja Point. They changed their plan.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I want first to carry out one other point. I criticized their plans, and so did the gentleman from Kansas, at that time, and they have changed them, but they are still proposing to put a fixed battery without any fortification there. That is what I am protesting against.

In this day and age you ought not to spend the people's money for fixed batteries on the seacoast without any protection. They can protect them if they will. It is a makeshift, and it is proven absolutely to be the fact that they changed their plans after they wanted Taboga Island fortified, and the committee wisely struck that out. Then they said to give them some money for a fixed fortification on the mainland.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman says that this fixed fortification would be so fixed in the mind of an enemy that the enemy could destroy it from the air, and at the same time he recommends that we use railroad artillery. As a matter of fact, the railroad track would be just as fixed in the mind of the enemy as a fixed fortification, and the enemy could fly across the Isthmus right over this track and destroy it much more easily than he could a fixed fortification, could he not?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. No; because a railroad track can be repaired. Then I say another thing. I have not recommended this. I say that if you are going to fortify the Panama Canal with batteries, you want them to be mobile, you want them to be protected, you want them so that you can conceal them. That is all I do say. It is perfectly apparent.

Mr. RANKIN. Did the gentleman ever see any 16-inch railway artillery or motor artillery that worked successfully?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I admit that they have not designed as yet a 16-inch motor field artillery truck, but it is not impossible. They have a 14-inch gun on such a truck, and the reason they have not designed a 16-inch mobile truck is because the railroads can not be made to carry them. That fact can be answered at the Panama Canal, because you would not have to run them on the railroad except for a very short distance. You could use the canal as far as that goes.

Mr. MCKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. MCKENZIE. Is it not a fact that the experts on artillery testified before the Committee on Military Affairs that there is very great advantage with the guns placed on shore in a combat with warships at sea, and that the number of hits that can be made from a fixed fortification is far in excess of any hits that can be made from ships shooting at artillery on shore which is placed below the level of the land?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes; but at the very same time they asked for money for mobile artillery, and to-day they are protecting the Atlantic seaboard with mobile artillery, and they should be. They are using mobile artillery in the field and they used it in France, and the only artillery that this country was able to use on the front in France was mobile artillery.

Mr. MCKENZIE. Is it not also a fact that the reason for that is that we can not afford to have fixed fortifications all along our extended coast, and therefore it is necessary to have mobile artillery?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. That is a very good reason, and that is one reason why I appeal to you to fix it down at Panama, because you can do it for 50 per cent and do it much better and more efficiently than you can if you try to place fixed fortifications there.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has again expired.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. If you are going to place fixed fortifications there, then for Heaven's sake place them so that they are protected. That is what modern people are doing.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I am trying to make the point that we should not abolish all of our fixed fortifications simply because mobile artillery on railroad cars is a very good plan.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I am not asking you to do that. I am only asking this committee to not appropriate a great sum of money to start on fixed fortifications at the Panama Canal on the west side.

Now, I am not attempting to abolish anything. I am trying to save the money. This will call attention of the War Department to the need of going down there and studying the question, and then if they will come with a constructive plan to Congress I will vote for it; but I want to tell you that I can not vote for a makeshift plan such as proposed in this bill, and I am not trying to say this in any way of criticism of the committee or criticism of the War Department; I am just trying to get a constructive program that will protect us in case we have to meet an enemy.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, this question seems to be one of a difference of opinion between experts. On the one hand we have the experts of the War Department. They have been studying the question of national defense over a period of years and came before our committee and recommended, among other things necessary for our national security, a 4-gun battery of 16-inch guns at the Pacific entrance of the Panama Canal. On the other hand, we have a board of experts, composed of my friend from Iowa and the gentleman from New York, who disagree with the experts of the War Department, and, so far as I have been able to observe, have disagreed to practically every item in the bill.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. Gladly.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. You also have a number of experts, and there were several of them who proposed to fortify Taboga Island.

Mr. BARBOUR. As the gentleman from Iowa stated a few moments ago, that plan has been abandoned. It was realized there were certain disadvantages in fortifying Taboga Island. It is a comparatively small island that lifts up out of the sea 1,000 feet. It is almost solid rock. If they place a battery there, the guns would have to be concentrated and placed close together. It would then be necessary to defend this battery by supplemental batteries stationed at various points. It would be necessary to build roads leading to the guns. There is not room for the necessary buildings to house the troops required to man the guns. Taboga Island can be seen for miles at sea, an object easy to hit, and it would be particularly disastrous if it should be hit, because the guns would have to be concentrated because of lack of space. Now, the War Department has adopted a plan of placing this 4-gun battery on the mainland. It is not necessary to have mobile guns stationed there. This battery is for the purpose of defending the entrance of the canal. It is not necessary to move up and down the coast. No naval attack would contemplate the dropping of bombs on the Republic of Panama. An attacking enemy is going to concentrate on the canal works and at the entrances.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will the entrance of the canal be protected by fortifications on Flamenco Island and these other islands?

Mr. BARBOUR. The fortifications on Flamenco Island consist of 14-inch guns. It was demonstrated at the maneuvers last spring that a modern battleship armed with 16-inch guns can stand outside the range of the 14-inch guns at Flamenco Island and absolutely destroy the Miraflores Locks and the defensive works at the entrance to the canal without coming within range of the present canal defenses.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. I will.

Mr. RANKIN. As I understand, the object of these batteries is to defend the entrance to the canal from the bombardment of a vessel at sea.

Mr. BARBOUR. Entirely; yes, sir.

Mr. RANKIN. Now, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] was discussing these land fortifications, and stated that these 16-inch gun batteries can be destroyed by airplanes. As a matter of fact, any bomb which is dropped from an airplane would put one of these land batteries out of business, and would if dropped in the canal be sufficient to put the canal itself out of commission.

Mr. BARBOUR. It is planned not to place these guns together. That is the idea of placing them on the mainland, so that they will be able to concentrate their fire on the enemy and yet be located far enough apart that the enemy can not concentrate on these guns. It is also necessary to have an air defense for the Panama Canal. It is the most effective defense from an attack by the air. The gentleman from New York is an authority on aviation, but we happen to have on this matter even a higher authority than the gentleman from New York, General Patrick, Chief of the Army Air Service, in discussing the defense of the Panama Canal against air attacks, testified before our committee that a sufficient number of airplanes would be necessary. Those are in addition to the 16-inch guns which would be used against naval attack. General Patrick stated that it is necessary to have both types of defense.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BARBOUR. I ask for five minutes additional.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BARBOUR. General Patrick said there are times along the Canal Zone when airplanes would not be effective on account of fog or other weather conditions, but these guns can be used on such occasions and be effective against an enemy at sea.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. I will.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Now, the gentleman is saying we should depend absolutely on airplanes and also we ought to have the fortifications. You are going to have to build a railroad there all along the coast to Blucher Point; why not use a mobile fortification or mobile artillery which is easily concealed, which protects itself and which you can use on both sides of the canal as well as anywhere else?

Mr. BARBOUR. If it is necessary for the complete defense of the Panama Canal that we also have mobile guns then let us by all means have mobile guns, but to put this battery of four 16-inch guns at the Pacific entrance of the canal is the best plan according to the view of the experts of the War Department.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. It would be impossible, as I understand it, to get railway artillery that would shoot as far as these land batteries?

Mr. BARBOUR. That is my understanding.

Mr. RANKIN. The object of the land batteries is to keep a foreign fleet out?

Mr. BARBOUR. That is true.

Mr. RANKIN. If these railway guns would not meet that want, they would be practically useless?

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes. I will say to the gentleman from Mississippi and the other members of the committee that with an effective 4-gun battery of 16-inch guns no battleship will dare to come within range. That was demonstrated in the World War.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. It has not been demonstrated, however, and the gentleman knows it, that the 16-inch guns on the railroad fortifications shoot at a less distance or at a less range than on a fixed emplacement. It shoots just as far, and everybody knows it.

Mr. BARBOUR. The gentleman from Iowa himself stated a moment ago that an effective 16-inch railroad gun had not yet been perfected.

And the gentleman from Iowa also stated that permanently established batteries are obsolete and ineffective. Gentlemen, I have but to call your attention to the island of Heligoland, of which we heard so much during the World War.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. BARBOUR. In a moment. No enemy vessel of the allied fleets dared to get within range of the guns on Heligoland. And that will be the same situation on the Panama Canal. If we have proper batteries defending the entrances there will not be an enemy vessel dare to get within range. Why speculate on this? We have the experts of the War Department on the one hand, and against their opinion we have the opinion of the two experts of the House of Representatives, the gentleman from Iowa and the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. The gentleman will admit this, that every gun placed by the Germans at Heligoland was protected, just the same as they are at Gibraltar. None of them are placed where they have no protection.

Mr. BARBOUR. Where the gentleman gets the idea that these guns are going to be exposed, and that there will be nothing to protect them, I do not know.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. All of them are exposed. They built at Flamenco, on Flamenco Island, and I called their attention to it. They have no protection to the guns. They have their ammunition protected. It is the most wonderful place in the world if they had properly placed it where nothing could destroy it; but they placed it just as high as they could, where everybody can shoot it and everybody can shoot at it. It is like a bird on a fence post, where every boy can hit it.

Mr. BLANTON. We need these "House experts." We have learned a lesson from these "House experts." We did so when the Navy experts told us about the necessity of raising the turrets of our naval guns, and then it was left for the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] to find out otherwise, and he prevented the expenditure of an appropriation of $6,000,000.

Mr. BARBOUR. That was on the naval bill. I hope the committee will not strike this item out of the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, the Panama Canal is conceded by everybody to be the keystone of our national defense. Our experts of the Army and the Navy, with the lesson of the recent World War before them, have had under study for several years the best way to defend this Nation by protecting the Panama Canal from invasion or destruction. Experts who are real experts have advised as to what should be done there. It is folly, and nothing short of folly, for this House to undertake to do anything except that which we are told by them to do. If misfortune should happen to the Panama Canal, how welcome it would be to the experts of the Army and Navy to be able to say, "I told you so, and instead of following our advice you took that of somebody who did not know a confounded thing about it," any more than I do, and I do not know anything about it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. No; I decline for the reason that I have only five minutes.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I will get you five minutes more.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. The longer this thing is discussed by somebody who does not know any more about it than I do—and that is full in evidence here [laughter]—the more apparent it becomes that at last we are compelled to take the advice of those officers in the Army and Navy who, through long years, we have educated up to the point of giving us advice. There is nothing else to do now, in my humble judgment, than to take it and appropriate more than we are now doing. Because they asked for more, let us not give less; but every time let us give enough to make the country safe from invasion. [Applause and cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I ask for one minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to proceed for one minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. The gentleman is in favor of taking the advice of experts. Did the gentleman object in the war when the War Department told us we had to take in boys under 21 to win the war? Did not the gentleman question that advice and come on the floor of Congress and vote to defeat the War Department? The gentleman from Kentucky voted that way.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. If a question had arisen as to the question of placing those boys either here, there, or yonder, I would have yielded to the expert testimony of the officers of our Army. [Applause.]

Mr. HULL of Iowa. But you did not yield at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. FITZGERALD rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Ohio rise?

Mr. FITZGERALD. To discuss this portion of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman move to strike out the last word?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I move to strike out the last three words.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I am intensely interested in the fortifications of the Panama Canal, not only because I have been there and inspected them and returned to make a complaint to the Secretary of War about the defenseless condition of the canal, but also because I have conversed with those Army and Navy officers who are equally cognizant of the lack of proper defense of that property in which we have invested $500,000,000.

You realize that not only has this canal commercial advantages, but it enables us to maintain a single fleet. Today it is not necessary for us to have a Pacific Squadron and an Atlantic Squadron to our fleet, and in that way the canal is of great value. A ship may pass from ocean to ocean through the canal in eight hours.

Every time we have had strategic problems in mimic warfare by the Navy—last year and the year before—the hostile forces have captured and destroyed the Panama Canal because it is inadequately defended.

I know there are two schools of thought. I belong to the school of thought headed by Gen. William Mitchell, and I am convinced that the Panama Canal can not be adequately defended except through the air and with airplane bases in Hawaii and airplane bases in the West Indies.

I am in favor of the appropriation now under consideration—why? Because we can not get the aircraft appropriations sufficient to defend our island possessions and the canal at this time; we can not get the appropriations at this time to defend them in the way they ought to be defended; that is, in the most sure and economical way.

When I complained to the Secretary of War about the inadequate landing places—La France Field on the Atlantic side and the very imperfect field which faces up against the hills on the Pacific side—he called my attention, very properly, to the lack of appropriations from Congress with which to defend this great possession of ours, which is so valuable an asset commercially and to the national defense.

The only landing field we have on the Atlantic side is so restricted that modern planes loaded, as they must be loaded, with bombs can not safely rise into the air. On the Pacific side the field is so restricted and so located, facing Ancon Hill or Balboa Heights, that the large bombing planes can not take off safely.

I think the proposition made by my friend from Iowa is eminently sound. This late war showed a revolution in military affairs. There is not a fort in the world—think of Namur or any of the other great fortifications of the world—not even the Rock of Gibraltar, which can now be considered impregnable or of great practical value against modern artillery and aircraft. There is not a fixed fortification in existence now which can not be easily and readily demolished by the modern methods of warfare. The days of fixed fortifications are gone. The lessons of the late war taught the great value of mobile artillery; and I believe, with General Mitchell, that every dollar we put into fixed batteries, shore batteries, and coast artillery is money wasted.

But I am for this appropriation because we can not substitute at this time, apparently, that protection which the United States needs, and this is a great deal better than nothing.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. BARBOUR. There is a difference of opinion as to the effectiveness of airplane defense, and there are two schools of thought on that subject.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I realize that.

Mr. BARBOUR. Now, why take any chances? Why not make the best use of that which we have?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am in accord with the gentleman. I would not ask the House to follow me on this proposition, but I do advance the proposition—and I believe it is worthy of the study of every man who is loyal to his country—that the aircraft we now have can destroy any ship that can be built, whether it operates on the water or under the water, and that everything afloat is vulnerable from the air, not only from the terrific bombs which have exploded with 2,000 pounds of high-power explosive, T. N. T., and destroyed the German unsinkable ship, the Ostfriesland, but with the great bombing planes now being produced, such as the Barling, which can carry 10,000 pounds of bombs or a single 10,000 bomb.

Mr. CONNERY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. With pleasure.

Mr. CONNERY. Is there any provision in this bill which takes care of the protection of the Panama Canal by aircraft?

Mr. FITZGERALD. There is, but it is limited in extent. There has been a cut in the appropriation as asked by the War Department of $85,000. I believe it is the intention of this committee to divide the expense of providing for aircraft defense of the canal over a period of two years, and I want to follow this committee because I have great respect for it.

Mr. CONNERY. Would the gentleman submit an amendment to raise that appropriation?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I would like to; but I can not because we have passed that part of the bill and can not return to it now, except by unanimous consent.

Now, General Mitchell is out of the country and he was not heard by this committee, but I hope that some day, as the result of the investigations which will be made by the committee which has just recently been authorized by the House, or by special committee on the national defense, and that such a committee will take up this most important question, hear all the experts, get the different schools of thought and come to some conclusion as to the most economical and efficient method of defending this country, which I assert will be chiefly by aircraft.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last four words.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I just wish to add a word of observation to the observations made with reference to my own experience and also the lessons of history.

The gentleman who last spoke is undoubtedly aware that so far as experience in past wars is concerned, no navy ever successfully went up against even a second-class land fortification, and in the last great war they never ventured within reach of the guns of any of the modern fortifications. Floating battleships and floating fortifications can not compete with stationary ones.

Now, as to the destruction of battleships by means of bombs dropped from the air. I was present at the last experiments which were made when two of our old battleships were destroyed by airplanes. The gentleman from Illinois who sits in front of me [Mr. WILLIAM E. HULL] was there. Without having conversed with him on the subject I think I can safely say that neither he nor myself nor most of those who were there were satisfied that there was any very great danger to battleships that were moving under high speed from bombs being dropped upon them from airplanes. It took several hours to destroy a couple of battleships that were at anchor and were not attempting to fire on the airplanes. The airplanes moved without any impediment; they came as close to the battleships as they wished, and notwithstanding that I think it was about—

Mr. WILLIAM E. HULL. It took all day on one of them.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I believe it took all day on one of them before it was finally destroyed, and as a result we were not strongly impressed with the effectiveness of that experiment.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield just a moment?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I wonder if the gentleman knows that it is the claim of General Mitchell and others that these experiments were purposely held back in order to preserve as long as possible the targets for these bombs, and I will venture the suggestion that if General Mitchell is offered the chance he will demonstrate to even the skeptical opinion of the gentleman from Iowa that there is not a ship, modern as it can be made now, that can not be sunk in 20 minutes by a bomb, and I will give you for that ship all the antiaircraft you can put on it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman from Ohio is quite right in saying that if you drop one of these large bombs at just exactly the proper distance upon a battleship the battleship undoubtedly will be destroyed; but the impression I got, and others who were around there, from these experiments was that those who were in the airplanes were doing the best they could to get the bombs at the proper point on the battleship and failed.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Does the gentleman know that in moving to strike this out I do not object to a battery on the shore. I only object to the fact they are not protecting the battery when they could do so. They could use railroad artillery or they could do as the other nations do and conceal it. I do object to the placing of a fixed battery on top of the land, and that is all.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that all debate has been exhausted on the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained. Debate is exhausted. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For contingent expenses incident to the construction of seacoast fortifications and their accessories, under the Engineer Department, $20,000.

Mr. THATCHER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I just want to say a few words in approval of these items of appropriation for the defense of the Panama Canal. I am sure it is the spirit and the purpose of the House to vote for these items in the bill. The fact that our Government has spent so large a sum of money in the construction of this great enterprise, and the further fact that the time is soon coming when the capacity of the canal must be doubled, or else a canal at some other point must be provided—and the logic of the situation seems to be that the doubling of the capacity of the present canal should be carried out—these facts, I would submit, make it the part of national wisdom and statesmanship to provide all reasonable appropriations for the purpose of protecting the canal. So far as the modes of protection may be concerned, there are different schools of thought. As a layman I am in favor of accepting the best composite thought of the military and naval experts who deal with this situation. If we fail to do our duty in making provisions in the making of appropriations for the defense of the canal when great international emergencies may arise we may be caught unawares and this great agency designed for the protection of our Government and for the advantage of the peace and commerce of the world may be proven vulnerable at a moment's notice and placed in the process of destruction.

I only wish to add—and I speak somewhat from first-hand knowledge of conditions which obtain there—that it is our duty as Members of Congress to take no chances whatsoever but to vote all reasonable appropriations for the proper protection of this great waterway. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

OFFICE OF CHIEF OF ENGINEERS.

Salaries: For personal services in the District of Columbia in accordance with "the classification act of 1923," $120,593.

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

For about the thirty-fifth time since January 9 I have read in our appropriation bills the words "in accordance with the classification act of the year 1923." I think that possibly right here and now it might be well for me to make a few observations and to express a fond hope. On January 9 of this year, under the leadership of that splendid chairman of the Appropriations Committee [Mr. MADDER of Illinois], we began to assemble and pass our annual appropriation bills. At that time, for one hour, the distinguished Representative from the State of Illinois described in detail and with considerable ability what was going to happen to the vast army of civilian employees throughout the United States. Naturally, I was interested because of my past experiences, and I began to make some inquiries and to make some observations, and on the following day attempted to make what at that time was my maiden speech in this House. I at that time argued, and have many times since argued, that the classification act of 1923, while it was fair and honest and intended to be just to the employees of the United States, was, at that time and is now, being improperly and illegally administered by the Personnel Classification Board. I tried my best, without any desire to seek partisan advantage, to secure the attention of this body, and through this body the attention of the proper authorities to the need of having a fair adjudication of the salaries of the employees of our Government in accordance with the law that had been enacted by Congress in the Sixty-seventh session. Finally, about the middle of February, some of my friends on the Republican side of this House introduced a bill to abolish the Personnel Classification Board and to put in its place the Civil Service Commission, the proper and the right board to adjudicate and allocate the salaries. Hearings were held and I attended these hearings, and paradoxical as it may seem, peculiar as it may appear to you, each and every member of the Personnel Classification Board, when sworn before that committee, admitted that their board ought to be abolished by Congress.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STENGLE. I have only a couple of minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. I know that, but we are going to have to thresh this matter out a little later when both sides can be heard, so why take it up now in connection with this bill. There are some things I agree with the gentleman about and some other things I am going to be opposed to the gentleman about.

Mr. STENGLE. I can not yield any more. I do not care whether you agree with me or not. I want to get this statement into the Record.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, unless there is going to be some opportunity to answer this matter on the floor, I do not think it ought to come up now.

Mr. STENGLE. If the gentleman wants to object, let him object.

Mr. BLANTON. I am not going to object, but the gentleman may bring in some matters here concerning this board that I would like to answer him on.

Mr. STENGLE. I have no objection to the gentleman answering me all he wants to at the proper time.

Mr. OLIVER of New York. Did the gentleman from New York ever object to the extension of time for the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. BLANTON. I am not going to object.

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman, I ask five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks that his time be extended five minutes. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. STENGLE. That Committee on Civil Service made a unanimous report and recommendation to this body signed by every member of that committee, Republicans and Democrats, recommending the abolishment of the board and the transfer of its functions to the Civil Service Commission. In addition to that the chairman of that board made a written application to our Committee on Rules asking for a special rule in order that this House might speedily dispose of the matter that is creating consternation not only in the District but throughout the entire Nation.

These are observations I wanted to make, and now I want to express the fond hope that the Committee on Rules will at an early hour report out a special rule to this House on the recommendation of that committee. I believe the people of this country desire that their employees should be dealt with honestly, squarely, and fairly, and I know of no better evidence of that fact than a letter I received to-day in reference to another section of employment, from the justices of the appellate division of the Supreme Court, second judicial district of the State of New York, in which, without regard to politics, without regard to partisanship, they ask, through me, of this House that we deal fairly with the postal employees of the Union. And so it is all down the line. I want to warn you gentlemen now—and I say it without reflection upon any Member of this House—that unless there is some speedy action taken upon the report of the Committee on the Civil Service looking toward the abolition of the Personnel Classification Board and the transfer of its functions to the Civil Service Commission the entire field service of the United States will get not what they were promised, but will get practically nothing.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the motion of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, we ought to make some progress with this bill, and I hope gentlemen will confine their remarks to the bill. I think that I shall have to object to anyone else speaking outside of the bill, although I am not going to object to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. I only want three minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman from Texas speaking three minutes?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, when we passed the reclassification bill and the present reclassification board was created we thought that was going to be the end of the matter legislatively. We were led at that time to believe that it was not going to cost much, but now we are told that it will cost several million dollars extra each year in increased salaries.

Who composes this reclassification board that the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. STENGLE] objects to so strenuously? One is a member of the Budget, another is a member of the Civil Service Commission, and another is the Chief of the Bureau of Efficiency. The member of the Budget is chairman of the board. Is not that a fair board? What fairer board can you have. I ask our good friend, the gentleman from New York. And yet, forsooth, because this board has not pleased everybody in fixing their salary under the reclassification act, there has been a continual fight upon it for the last two or three months. And now we are going to have another bill in a few days again opening up this question and be forced to fight the matter all over again, when this effort is made to try to abolish the board because there are some employees of the Government not satisfied with the increases they are to get.

I want to say to my friend from New York [Mr. STENGLE], who is a valuable man here, that when the time comes I hope there will be enough men on this floor to stand up and say to the gentleman, and to all others who are seeking to abolish this board, that we have done our duty, we have passed a reclassification bill, we have created a fair board, and now we are going to let them function and not let the disgruntled ones get behind them and try to destroy the good work.

Mr. STENGLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I will.

Mr. STENGLE. Would the gentleman oppose the abolishment of a board every member of which asked to be abolished?

Mr. BLANTON. If I worked for the Government in their capacity as members of a board, and if I had these fellows continually hounding me in newspapers and on the floor of Congress and I did not have to do that work, I might seek some other employment and be willing for the board to be abolished. But you can not get a more impartial board than to take one man from the Budget, one from the Civil Service Commission, and the Chief of the Bureau of Efficiency, and I am telling the gentleman from New York that I am one Member here who is going to back that board 100 per cent.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. ANDREW. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by inserting a page from the latest report from the Agricultural Bureau concerning crops, which shows that the German supplies are increasing and that the German millers are demanding a tariff to protect themselves against importation of food from the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

TANKS.

For purchase, manufacture, test, maintenance, and repair of tanks and other self-propelled armored vehicles, to remain available until June 30, 1926, $176,000.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Record, as an extension of my remarks, a letter from The Adjutant General transmitting the decision of the Department of Justice in regard to the one-year enlistment. I think it will be very interesting.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. STENGLE. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, has this to do with this bill?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Certainly; it has to do with the enlistment of men in the Regular Army.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted to extend my remarks I insert a letter from The Adjutant General respecting one-year enlistments.

The letter is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
THE ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, March 26, 1924.

Hon. HARRY E. HULL,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. HULL: With reference to your telephonic request, I inclose herewith a copy of the opinion of the Attorney General regarding the question of enlisting men for one and three year periods.

In view of the fact that the Attorney General holds that the War Department is without authority to restrict original enlistments to the three-year period, instructions are being issued to the recruiting service directing that applicants for original enlistment be given the option of the one or three year period.

Very respectfully,

ROBERT C. DAVIS,
The Adjutant General.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, March 26, 1924.

SIR: I have your letter of March 5, 1924, requesting my opinion on the question "whether or not, under the wording of section 27 of the national defense act, the War Department is authorized to restrict original enlistments to a three-year period."

You state that the policy of restricting original enlistments in the Regular Army to three years, which has been effective since January, 1922, is based on an opinion by the Acting Judge Advocate General approved October 26, 1921; that a recent opinion of the Judge Advocate General reverses the former one; and that, while you acted in good faith in restricting enlistments to a period of three years, if your action in that regard is erroneous you desire to at once authorize enlistments for a period of one year.

The national defense act of June 2, 1916 (ch. 134, 39 Stat. 166), provides specifically for the composition, organization, enlistment, and general administration of the forces composing the Army of the United States. It is comprehensive and provides that all laws and parts of laws, in so far as they are inconsistent with the act, are repealed.

Section 27 of the act of 1916 relates to the enlistment of recruits in the Regular Army and reads, in part, as follows:

"SEC. 27. Enlistments in the Regular Army: On and after the 1st day of November, 1916, all enlistments in the Regular Army shall be for a term of seven years, the first three years to be in the active service with the organizations of which those enlisted form a part and, except as otherwise provided herein, the last four years in the Regular Army reserve, hereinafter provided for: Provided, That at the expiration of three years' continuous service with such organization, either under a first or any subsequent enlistments, any soldier may be reenlisted for another period of seven years, as above provided for, in which event he shall receive his final discharge from his prior enlistment: Provided further, That after the expiration of one year's honorable service any enlisted man serving within the continental limits of the United States whose company, troop, battery, or detachment commander shall report him as proficient and sufficiently trained may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be furloughed to the Regular Army reserve under such regulations as the Secretary of War may prescribe, but no man furloughed to the reserve shall be eligible to reenlist in the service until the expiration of his term of seven years: Provided further, That in all enlistments hereafter accomplished under the provisions of this act three years shall be counted as an enlistment period in computing continuous-service pay." * * *

As the foregoing provisions are specific and cover the entire subject of enlistments, all prior inconsistent laws are, by the express terms of the statute, repealed. We may, therefore, consider the provisions of section 27 of the act of 1916 as expressing the law relating to enlistments in the Regular Army on and after November 1, 1916.

The act provided that enlistments in the Regular Army must be for a period of seven years, three years of which shall be in active service and four years in the Regular Army Reserve, with a provision that a soldier could continue in active service by reenlistment at the end of his three-year period of active service. The act contained a further provision that after one year of active service a soldier could, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be transferred by furlough to the Regular Army Reserve. This act did not permit the soldier any option or discretion as to the period of his enlistment.

Section 27 of the act of 1916, supra, was amended by section 27 of the act of June 4, 1920 (c. 227, 41 Stat. 775), in so far as the period of enlistment is concerned, as follows:

"SEC. 27. That section 27 of said act be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out all up to and including the third proviso, and also the proviso relating to the utilization of the service of postmasters, and inserting the following in lieu thereof:

"SEC. 27. Enlistments: Hereafter original enlistments in the Regular Army shall be for a period of one or three years at the option of the soldier, and reenlistments shall be for a period of three years * * *."

Section 27 of the act of 1920 plainly permits the soldier to choose between a one-year and a three-year period of enlistment. This right is to be exercised by him at the time of enlistment. There can, I think, be no doubt as to the intent of Congress in this respect.

In construing a statute the meaning of the legislature is first to be determined by the words used. Brewer v. Blough (14 Pet. 178, 198); Aldridge v. Williams (3 How. 9, 24); Coffin v. Ogden (18 Wall. 120, 124). As stated by the Supreme Court in Lewis, Trustee, v. United States (92 U. S. 618, 621): "Where the language of a statute is transparent and its meaning clear there is no room for the office of construction. There should be no construction where there is nothing to construe." And, again, in Folsom v. United States (160 U. S. 121, 127): "* * * where the intention is plain it is the duty of the court to expound the statute as it stands."

If there existed any doubt of the intent of Congress to permit the soldier to choose between a one-year and a three-year period at the time of his original enlistment that doubt would be immediately removed by reference to the reports of the committee having the bill in charge.

In the Report No. 680 of the Committee on Military Affairs, House of Representatives, Sixty-sixth Congress, second session, accompanying bill H. R. 12775, which afterwards became the act of June 4, 1920, supra, it is stated:

"SEC. 26. A shorter enlistment period for men not yet familiar with Army life will tend to stimulate enlistments. It is proposed to allow new recruits to choose between a one-year and a three-year period, reenlistments to be for three years only."

The bill was sent to conference, and in its final report the conferees made the following statement in regard to enlistments:

"The period of enlistment in the Regular Army was fixed at one or three years, at the option of the soldier, for original enlistment, while reenlistments are to be for three-year periods. Enlistments and reenlistments for three years are encouraged by offering an allowance equivalent to three months' pay of a private for any such enlistment. This is a slight extension of the privilege granted by existing law." (Rept. No. 1049, 66th Cong., 2d sess.)

In view of the evident intent of Congress to permit a soldier upon his original enlistment the option of enlistment for a period of one year instead of three years, it is my opinion that the Secretary of War is not authorized to restrict such enlistment to a period of three years.

Respectfully,

H. M. DAUGHERTY,
Attorney General.

The honorable the SECRETARY OF WAR.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEACOAST DEFENSES, INSULAR POSSESSIONS.

For purchase, manufacture, and test of ammunition for seacoast cannon, including the necessary experiments in connection therewith, and the machinery necessary for its manufacture, $500,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FITZGERALD: Page 54, line 5, strike out the figures "$500,000," and insert the figures "$676,375."

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment because of the responsibility which rests on this House. When I visited the Panama Canal and found it was defenseless, and it was agreed by authorities both military and naval to be defenseless, I wrote a letter of complaint about certain features of it to the Secretary of War. He replied that the lack of defense of the Panama Canal was due to the inadequate appropriations of Congress. When this appropriation bill was reported, the Secretary of War saw fit to address me a personal letter, and possibly rebuking me for my criticizing the War Department for maintaining this immensely valuable possession and item of our national defense in a defenseless condition when the fault was that of Congress. He showed that in this item this bill proposes a reduction of $176,275 from the amount which the War Department asked. The necessity for this amount of money is shown in the hearings and I can cite the pages where it is testified to by experts, and so far as I know there is no dispute about this amount of money, which I now have asked to be substituted in the bill, being necessary for this purpose. I believe it is the duty of those Members who have a chance to observe these matters which they believe and find to be wrong, and which all the experts agree are wrong, to call the attention of the House to them. This committee's duty is discharged when it weighs the evidence and decides between the Budget Bureau and the amount asked, or on its own initiation makes a reduction. It is always under the constant pressure of economy, often realizing that the Members of the House do not understand all of the details of the mass of matters on which they have to pass, and feeling that they must show their watchfulness and zeal by continually making cuts from the estimates prepared by those charged with the direct responsibility for the defense of the country. I would rather we would take a little chance on the expenditure of an extra hundred thousand dollars or two in the defense of the Panama Canal than follow out the course of paring down parsimoniously the few dollars that are asked for to make the defenses adequate, because, as has often been said on the floor of this House, it is just as well to be second in war as to hold the second best hand in poker.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FITZGERALD] is mistaken in referring to this appropriation as being available for the Panama Canal. The ammunition that would be manufactured under it all goes to Hawaii and the Philippine Islands. None of it is to be used for the Panama Canal. The estimates called for the manufacture of 23,750 rounds of antiaircraft ammunition, to cost $475,000, and for the manufacture of 10,600 rounds of 155-millimeter gun ammunition, to cost $201,000, a total of $676,000. The committee allowed $500,000 for the manufacture of this ammunition upon the theory that we already had a large supply of antiaircraft gun ammunition in Hawaii and the Philippine Islands, and that there was no real necessity for the manufacture of the full amount.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The chairman of the committee is right as he usually is—I might say always is—I must acknowledge, but the committee did make a reduction of $147,985 on the appropriation for the manufacture of the antiaircraft gun ammunition, or rather for the bombs for the insular possessions on the Panama Canal on page 50, and on page 54 I find this further cut. When the Panama Canal appropriation is cut to the tune of $145,000 and then this request for the defense of the island possessions is cut by $178,000, I felt that a protest ought to be made to the House so that the House might hear the matter discussed.

Mr. ANTHONY. There was a slight cut in both instances, due to the fact that the committee has doubt about the effectiveness of our defense by means of antiaircraft guns. We do not believe it is wise to pile up a tremendous amount of ammunition at those places for the use of these antiaircraft guns that may never be used or, if used, will not be effective. We would rather put the money into the construction of airplanes, which is the proper defense against similar craft.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But the committee does not do that.

Mr. ANTHONY. Oh, we did give the department all that it asked for for the construction of airplanes.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. May I say that the defenses of the island of Oahu are just as important in the defense of the Panama Canal as the defenses of the Panama Canal itself, and I for one should hesitate to in any way cut down or lend my vote to in any way reduce any measure that the War Department deems necessary for the defense of that vital outpost of our possessions.

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman does not believe that we have a reasonably sufficient supply of ammunition in Oahu at the present time? Our information is that we have an abundant supply of it.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I think I would prefer to take the judgment of the War Department and the General Staff on that subject than the judgment of the committee.

Mr. ANTHONY. We prefer to exercise some judgment of our own, because the War Department is not always perfect in its estimates.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

SEACOAST DEFENSES, PANAMA CANAL.

For purchase, manufacture, and test of seacoast cannon for coast defense, including their carriages, sights, implements, equipments, and the machinery necessary for their manufacture, $150,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. At the end of line 14, in place of the figures "$150,000," which should be stricken out, insert the figures "$300,000," because that amount is the reduction suggested by the committee over the request made by the War Department and the experts. I want this House and this committee to realize its responsibility if these amounts are cut down, which sums I believe to be necessary for the national defense. I offer this amendment, hoping that this or some of these amendments may be carried and that this committee here will be encouraged to be a little bit wiser possibly toward the necessities of defending the great material resources of this great Nation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 54, line 14, strike out "$150,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$300,000."

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, under this item the War Department asks an appropriation of $300,000 to begin the manufacture of thirty 3-inch antiaircraft guns which would cost, when completed, $900,000. The committee went very carefully into the matter of the antiaircraft defense of the Panama Canal, and we found under previous appropriations 35 of these guns had been already installed and mounted and are in position now. We felt 15 additional guns would provide for other reasonable antiaircraft defense of the vulnerable points on the Panama Canal, and that it was not wise to go into this large expenditure of $900,000 for that purpose. We do, however, embark on a program which will ultimately cost $450,000 when the guns we commence under authorization here are completed, and we believe that $450,000 is as much as we ought to expend for this purpose at this time.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FITZGERALD], that we can not be parsimonious in defending the Panama Canal. I think if the War Department wants $300,000 for the defense of the Panama Canal the least we can do is to give them that amount. I believe when we undertake to economize at the expense of the defense of our country we are putting ourselves in a dangerous position.

Mr. ANTHONY. To show the gentleman the necessity of scrutinizing the estimates that come from the War Department very carefully I want to call attention to the fact that the original plan for the installation of the 16-inch guns by the War Department was that they wanted to place them on Taboga Island. If we had gone ahead on that program, it would have entailed a possible expenditure of $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 more for auxiliary fortifications and posts to protect the guns, and in time the War Department saw that situation and reversed its recommendation and placed the guns on the mainland, with which decision we concur heartily. So the War Department is not always right.

Mr. CONNERY. I agree with the gentleman that the War Department makes mistakes sometimes.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. Does the gentleman admit that?

Mr. CONNERY. But when they want $150,000 for antiaircraft defense for the Panama Canal I think if we do not give it we—

Mr. ANTHONY. They have already 35 now in position.

Mr. CONNERY. That is not much of a defense.

Mr. ANTHONY. We are making an appropriation and by the time these guns are completed they may have some new development and—

Mr. CONNERY. In the Argonne when these Germans came flying over we had more than 35 antiaircraft guns, and it did not stop them.

Mr. ANTHONY. I agree with the gentleman they are ineffective against airplanes. Do not the records show there is one-half of 1 per cent hits from antiaircraft?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The records show an expenditure of 15,000 shells from antiaircraft to get one hit.

Mr. ANTHONY. One effective hit.

Mr. LA GUARDIA. While it is true the percentage of bringing down a plane is very small, it is very disconcerting to the fellow who is bombing when they keep it up.

Mr. CONNERY. And he went considerably higher in the air.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. If the gentleman will permit, I saw antiaircraft guns in action, and I do not believe there is anybody who saw that that would not be in favor of a large expenditure of antiaircraft guns.

Mr. CONNERY. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I saw three planes brought down by antiaircraft guns in six weeks.

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman from Ohio quoted General Mitchell as his authority. General Mitchell told our committee last year he would not take into consideration at all any defense against aircraft from the ground or a ship.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I would like to ask the gentleman from Maryland if these are not the facts, that we never had enough antiaircraft guns and we did just what this committee is seeking to do; that is, to render the appropriation for antiaircraft guns more or less worthless, because we must defend in numbers by antiaircraft guns or we might just as well have none at all.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to the gentleman that I agree with him as to the need of an ample supply of antiaircraft guns.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The best antiaircraft protection you can have is airplanes.

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FITZGERALD].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 7, yeas 26.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For purchase, manufacture, and test of ammunition for seacoast and land defense cannon, including the necessary experiments in connection therewith, and the machinery necessary for its manufacture, $200,000.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, to strike out the figures "$200,000" at the end of line 18 and substitute therefor the figures "$398,625," in order to restore the figures requested by the War Department.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 54, line 18, strike out the figures "$200,000" and substitute therefor the figures "$398,625."

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to take up further time of the committee. This is along the line of the reply of the Secretary of War to my criticism of lack of protection of the Panama Canal. I believe this to be necessary, and I offer the amendment for that purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For procurement of forage, bedding, etc., for animals used by the National Guard, $1,807,842.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I do so for the purpose of asking the chairman of the subcommittee a question. There was some question last year as to the allowance for horses for the Army and the National Guard. It is my understanding that there is no reduction in this bill but rather an increase in the allowance for these animals this year.

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes. I think this bill carries money to buy 600 mules for the Army and 5,000 horses.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I want to congratulate the committee on their liberality and to withdraw the pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For compensation of help for care of material, animals, and equipment, $2,250,000.

Mr. SPEAKS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the chairman of the committee a question. I notice a cut of $255,298 in the item, "Equipment, animals, and material." Will this reduction in appropriations necessitate the discharge of any of the caretakers now in the service of any of the States?

Mr. ANTHONY. I will say to the gentleman that it is an increase over the current appropriation for the current year of $150,000. The National Guard has only grown 3,000 last year. It will undoubtedly require more caretakers than at present.

Mr. SPEAKS. Does the gentleman state that this item will be sufficient to pay the salaries and allowances for all the employees required to properly care for the 10,000 animals and the great quantity of material and stores now in possession of the caretakers of the National Guard throughout the entire country and for which the officers of the guard are responsible?

Mr. ANTHONY. Of course, I do not know whether that is sufficient or not. The number assigned to care for the property of a company is left with the authorities. You can not give any organization all the labor they want.

Mr. SPEAKS. Well, there usually is some standard established in matters of this nature. It is not dependent upon the mere whim of some unauthorized person, but is fixed by regulations. The Budget carries $2,500,000 to meet this contingency, while the gentleman's committee fixes it at $2,250,000, a very material reduction. Information coming to me from official National Guard sources is to the effect that this action will not be in the best interests of the guard and may become embarrassing to the organization. The figure contained in the bill is far less than the official estimate. I feel that it will be insufficient for actual necessities.

Mr. ANTHONY. The estimates are based on a larger amount than at present.

Mr. SPEAKS. This is the period of the year when the guard may be expected to increase in strength very rapidly. As the season for the annual encampments and other field activities approaches interest in the organization is always apparent and reflected in a largely increased enlisted personnel. The guard has more than doubled in size during the past four years, and there is every reason for anticipating a continual enlargement of the citizen army. While appropriations are far more liberal than formerly, every care should be exercised to avoid the discouragements caused by insufficient allowances. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to occupy more time than may be necessary to emphasize the situation, and I therefore move to strike out the figures "$2,250,000," appearing in line 14, and substitute therefor the amount fixed by the Budget, viz., "$2,505,298."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

For compensation, for help, for care of materials, animals, and equipment, $2,250,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SPEAKS: Page 68, line 24, strike out "$2,250,000" and insert "$2,505,298."

Mr. MCKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I do so for the purpose of asking the chairman of the subcommittee a question. I desire to ask the gentleman from Kansas if, when the committee was considering this item, they were advised of the fact that there was pending before the Committee on Military Affairs an amendment to the national defense law, increasing or giving permission at least to increase the number of civilian employees for this particular work?

Mr. ANTHONY. I do not think the committee had any knowledge of that legislation pending.

Mr. MCKENZIE. I will state to the gentleman from Kansas that the hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs disclosed the fact that in certain cities where these particular organizations are located they found they were short of help and that perhaps the authority should be widened in order to give them a little more authority to employ civilian caretakers to take care of the animals.

Mr. ANTHONY. If the gentleman will permit, I think the present law permits the assignment of five civilian caretakers to each National Guard organization. That is the maximum, but there has always been considerably less than that number assigned on the average all over the country. It has been found that it is possible, in many cases, to get along with less than the maximum, so that it is optional with the Militia Bureau as to the number of caretakers it assigns to each organization. This appropriation as made up is an increase of $150,000 over the current year, in spite of the fact that the growth of the National Guard this year has been practically negligible and will not be anywhere near as large as the department figures would make it appear.

Mr. McKENZIE. Did the testimony before your subcommittee on this particular item convince you that the former appropriation was not large enough to take care of the present number of civilian employees, and therefore there should be an increase?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think it was large enough with an economical expenditure of the money. As I stated a moment ago, every organization wants all the civilian help it can get. There is no soldier, whether in the Regular Army or in the National Guard, who likes to work, and if he can get his duties performed by civilian help and have that help paid for out of the Treasury of the United States he will gladly wear the uniform and appear on drill nights, but it becomes a little irksome when he has to do a little work.

Mr. McKENZIE. May I ask the gentleman this question: Suppose he lived in the city of Philadelphia and a clerk in one of the banks, as a patriotic citizen, is willing to join—

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SNYDER). The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois have five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois may proceed for five additional minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. McKENZIE. As I was saying, this bank clerk is patriotic enough to join the Pennsylvania National Guard, and becomes a member of Troop A, we will say, of the Cavalry, or of one of the Artillery units. Now, does the gentleman feel that it is quite in keeping with the service that is being rendered by the young men who go into these various units from a patriotic motive that they should be required to put on their old overalls or an old shirt and go down and curry the horses before breakfast, and then take care of them and bed them after supper, the same as though they were working on the farm for so much a month?

Mr. ANTHONY. In answer to the gentleman, I will say that a little of that would be fine exercise. [Laughter.] And a little bit would not hurt them.

Mr. SPEAKS. Suppose an organization has 100 animals that must be cared for and such organization now has five men employed for that particular purpose; does the gentleman mean to say that if this allowance would necessitate the discharge of four of those men and the entire duty were thrown upon one man that it would be all right?

Mr. ANTHONY. No organization has as many as 100 animals. In many cases—although the maximum authorized by law is five—it has been found that three men are ample to do the work.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SPEAKS].

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have recognition. The amendment striking out the last word has not been withdrawn and I would like to speak in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I want to say that this is really a matter of considerable concern. The preservation of the property of the National Government and the States intrusted to these National Guard units is a matter of importance. I know that the captains of these National Guard companies are charged with all this property; I know they have not sufficient help to properly look after it; I know that a great deal of it disappears and that the popular idea of the boys and their associates is that they can carry it off. I know that many of these captains have to make good these losses. I know of instances where thousands of dollars worth of the property has disappeared. I know that one of the good captains we had at Camp Sherman, at the opening of the war, lost his company and was sent to the brigade because as a National Guard officer he had been compelled to make good $2,000 for property that had been lost without fault on his part at all, but under the regulations of the War Department he was absolutely responsible for it. It had been stolen or otherwise disappeared and he had to make it good. Over at Camp Sherman it was impossible for the captains in charge of these companies to sit around and watch thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of property and at the same time to attend to their duties in the training of their commands. This particular captain tried to keep up with his responsibility and was unable to properly perform his military duties, so that he was relieved of his command.

I say to this House that is a very poor proposition in economy to cut down the necessary personnel to take care of the property of the Government.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Kansas rise?

Mr. TINCHER. I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Chairman, I claim to be a friend of the National Guard and would not want to do anything in the world to injure that organization, but if we are going to appropriate an additional quarter of a million dollars just because some man says he is afraid this will not be enough money, I think we are getting a little reckless with the funds. I understand the committee has worked this out on a basis which will be adequate for the guard, and I think we should be careful about appropriating money for civilian employees around the armories. There has been, according to my understanding of the matter, some complaint in the past of the number of civilian employees who are required to take care of a soldier. [Laughter.] I would not want to impose upon these civilian employees at all; but four of them or five of them ought to be able, with the proper equipment, to properly feed 100 horses. I expect there are a good many men to-day in the United States who are feeding more horses than that, and I am told there is no place where they require five of them to feed and care for more than 100 horses.

Mr. ANTHONY. Not more than 34.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield? The gentleman, however, will admit that there is a very wide distinction on this proposition between civilian employees in the Regular Army and civilian employees in the National Guard. In the Regular Army, I would be willing to go right along with the gentleman.

Mr. TINCHER. If some witness testified before this committee or made any showing at all that we ought to appropriate this quarter of a million dollars, I would be a good enough friend of the National Guard to advocate doing that, but if we are just going to get up on the floor of the House and say, "I think that the boys might want this and we had better appropriate it," then I do not think it is proper. It is not for them, it is for civilian employees, and I think it would be a reckless way to handle the money of the Government.

Mr. SPEAKS. Will the gentleman yield just a moment? Would the statement of the officer in command of the Militia Bureau of the War Department that this is absolutely necessary satisfy the gentleman?

Mr. TINCHER. Well, as I understand, the officer you are talking about—

Mr. SPEAKS. The Chief of the Bureau of Militia in the War Department.

Mr. TINCHER. They have had this question up with the subcommittee and they have arrived at an understanding that they could get along with this amount of money. It is well known that no civilian employees will ever be satisfied with the amount of a Federal appropriation. I do not doubt but what the gentleman can read some statement like that, but my understanding is that they have come to a practical agreement on this amount of money and think it will be sufficient. Does the gentleman think there ought to be more than five men to care for 40 or 50 horses?

Mr. SPEAKS. That question is not even involved and neither have the civilian employees had a word to say about this matter. This is the report of the officer appointed by the President, who has his office in the War Department, to determine these very questions, and this officer says the amount is insufficient. Of course, there might be better authorities but I scarcely know where you would find them. The Budget officer also has recommended it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SPEAKS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

For expenses, camps of instruction, $10,200,000.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, if I may have the attention of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY]. In general debate the other day, in discussing the appropriation for the National Guard and the Organized Reserve, the gentleman made what I think was a suggestion worthy of consideration. It was that in connection with the training of the National Guard men and the officers in the Organized Reserve. He suggested that the officers in the Organized Reserve might very well be trained with National Guard and Regular Army troops so that they would not only get the theoretical training which they now receive but the practical experience of actually commanding troops in combat exercises and maneuvers. It seemed to me the suggestion was worthy of real consideration, especially as to training camps where regular troops are available. I am wondering whether the suggestion has been considered by Army officers.

Mr. ANTHONY. I will say to the gentleman that I have heard the matter discussed by officers of the Regular Army and the only objection to training reserve officers with the National Guard during the period of the National Guard training appears to come from officers of the guard itself, some of whom did not like the idea of taking on the training of reserves at that time; but the Army officers with whom I have talked say it is entirely a practical idea and that the reserve officer gets a far greater value from training with troops of his branch of the service than in any other way, but our Regular Army is so widely scattered and is so small that we have not enough troops of the regular branches to take on the training of a large number of reserve officers, but we have a large National Guard. There will be between 160,000 and 180,000 of them in camp this summer, and they state that it would be perfectly feasible to attach several thousand officers of the reserves to the guard for training purposes.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Of course, the suggestion of the gentleman was simply a suggestion, but it seems to me that it at least has the semblance of real value to it, and while it might not be possible this year to put it into full force and effect, it seems to me it could be put into experimental effect at some place where the whole problem could be worked out to see whether it would be satisfactory both to the guard and to the Organized Reserves. I certainly think it ought to be applied to our regular troops so that these officers could be trained with regular troops.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FITZGERALD. In regard to this very matter, I would like to ask the Member from Minnesota if he has in mind the conditions which now surround these camps where the reserves and the National Guard have to go? I am referring particularly to the head of our corps area, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Indiana, and Camp Knox in Kentucky. There are not enough soldiers there to even skeletonize the Infantry companies or any of the other companies there, and I understand the condition of the Regular Army is such in regard to the duties which they must perform that it can not now assemble a whole company scarcely anywhere in the United States, and we find there that they have not enough officers or enough equipment, unless they assemble them from different points like Leavenworth and other places, to give the instructions necessary for those taking training there as reserve officers, National Guard officers, or members of the citizens' military training camp, or the school for the National Guard itself. I have attended there two years, once as a teacher in a citizens' military training camp and last year as an officer of the reserve, so I know something about conditions, and I was going to ask the Member if he knew of these conditions and had matched up what had been suggested here with the conditions which to-day surround these camps, to know whether we could feasibly do this.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I do not know the conditions that prevail throughout the country. I do know the conditions in my particular corps area. At Fort Snelling, for example, there is both Infantry and Artillery. Furthermore the Third Infantry there under Colonel Bjornstad developed into the finest Infantry outfit that the Regular Army has ever had.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I ask for one minute more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. It occurred to me that it might be very well to adopt this suggestion in part and see just how it will work.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I am thoroughly in favor of it if it can be done, but I simply want to call the attention of the committee to the conditions.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. There are some difficulties that may accompany it, and that was why I suggested that we test it for this year because it might be only an experiment, but really test out the worth of what I deem to be an excellent idea.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think it would be most useful to bring in contact the different elements of the national defense—the Regular Army, the National Guard, and the Organized Reserve.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I think that is a valuable suggestion.

Mr. Chairman, while I am on my feet let me also refer to the Organized Reserves. We have now approximately 85,000 reserve officers. So far as possible these men who are willing to devote their time to this excellent service should be permitted to train every summer if they so desire. Certainly funds should be provided so that every officer can attend at least once every third year. The amount appropriated this year still falls short of that. It will figure out about every fifth or sixth year. I should like to see the amount increased so as to carry out the recommendations of the reserve officers and the Army, so as to enable training for every officer at least once during every three-year period. Furthermore, it is highly essential that adequate provision be made for divisional headquarters for the reserve divisions.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of National Guard (armory drills), $10,200,000.

Mr. SPEAKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the gentleman whether he considers the money appropriated for armory drills sufficient.

Mr. ANTHONY. The amount recommended by the department and by the Budget was $10,600,000. The amount appropriated is $10,200,000. The amount was based on the National Guard strength of 190,000, but, as I said a while ago, the strength of the guard to-day is only 163,000. The committee does not believe that the guard will attain a strength of 27,000 additional between now and June. But grant that it will have 190,000 men, based on the last recorded cost for this training, which is $54.05 per man which it cost in the year 1902, it will bring the total cost of this item to $10,269,000. The Militia Bureau says it will cost $56 a man, but they did not show any figures to sustain it, and so we took the last recorded figures.

Let me say this to the gentleman: It is only within the last year that the committee has been able to get any figures at all of what has been the cost or the pay of the guard. They have not had them tabulated in the War Department so that they can give the definite pay cost for any one year until this year, and we find now that we have been overappropriating for it right along.

Mr. SPEAKS. Unexpended appropriations revert to the Treasury; there is no money wasted.

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes; but the gentleman knows from experience that the guard never reports 100 per cent for drills, and so the maximum amount is never claimed. We think the amount is entirely sufficient. There is no purpose on the part of the committee to keep one dollar from the guard.

Mr. SPEAKS. It is true that 90 per cent of the guard in attendance at drills, encampments, and other activities is a very creditable showing.

Mr. ANTHONY. If the strength of the guard was 200,000, you deduct 10 per cent and you have 180,000.

Mr. SPEAKS. My object in bringing up the question was to impress Members with the fact that we are maintaining a very efficient and cheap military force in the National Guard. When you consider that at the present time we have approximately 165,000 men in the National Guard, maintained at a cost of about $29,000,000, ready and available for any service, there should be no doubts concerning the practicability and effectiveness of this form of military preparedness. While disclaiming any intention of making invidious comparisons or in any manner reflecting on the Regular Establishment, it does seem proper, for the purpose of illustration, to call attention to the many times larger appropriations required for a Regular Army much smaller in strength than is the guard. As a further proof of the efficacy of the system under which our volunteer citizen army is created and maintained it is only necessary to recall that in the World War all the National Guard organizations were in France, and that almost half the American divisions reaching the firing line were National Guard units.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. SPEAKS. Mr. Chairman, I ask to proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPEAKS. I yield to my friend from North Carolina.

Mr. BULWINKLE. I want to say to the gentleman that all of the National Guard divisions were in France—14 of them reaching the front lines.

Mr. SPEAKS. Yes. Now, in view of the fact that any appropriations remaining unexpended revert to the Treasury, I can see no objection at all to increasing this allowance. It would encourage officers and men to know that their efficiency and worth are being recognized and that there is no tendency on the part of Congress to cut necessary appropriations. I dislike to see a cut made on such an important item as this. I know from official military sources that they consider this amount insufficient. However, I desire to express the belief that the very earnest and efficient chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the bill has given the subject careful and conscientious consideration.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPEAKS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Is the gentleman aware that there were more men killed and wounded in the ranks of the National Guard than any other one element of the Army during the World War?

Mr. DYER. There were more of them.

Mr. SPEAKS. There were 11 National Guard divisions, 11 National Army divisions, and 7 Regular divisions.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to ask the chairman of the committee whether he does not think if the rule were made more flexible in regard to the technical organizations in the National Guard the National Guard would grow a little faster?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think the gentleman's conclusion is correct. I think one reason for the failure of the guard to grow is that the War Department's regulations are too arbitrary—too drastic. There are many States that would expand their guard if they could expand it along the lines they desire; but if they are required, for instance, to maintain a wagon train, or a sanitary train, or a medical regiment in which men dislike to serve in time of peace, the State can not organize a unit of that kind, and the growth of the guard stops.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Who promulgates these rules? Is it the Militia Bureau or is it the General Staff of the Regular Army?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think the General Staff of the Regular Army.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I thought we had it fixed so that the National Guard was to be controlled by the Militia Bureau, and that we put at the head of the Militia Bureau a National Guardman, so that this very thing could be controlled by the National Guard itself. I am wondering if the present general who commands the Militia Bureau has become somewhat inoculated with the virus of the General Staff of the Regular Army.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit an interruption right there?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE. I think there is a good deal of force in what both the gentleman from Iowa and the gentleman from Kansas have said. However, it would not be perhaps wise to permit some man in the Militia Bureau to decide that in the National Guard the units should be all of one particular character. For instance, you might have some pigeon enthusiast who would want them all put into pigeon brigades, and another who would want them all in the Infantry, and another, all in the Cavalry.

Mr. HULL of Maryland. You might say that they all ought to be on mobile artillery and not on fixed defenses.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I am earnest in what I say in regard to National Guard. I think it is the cheapest protection that we get for the money that we expend. I believe we ought to think very seriously in regard to the future expansion of the National Guard. We are now maintaining a force of something like 160,000 or 165,000 men in the National Guard for very much less than $30,000,000, which is very much less again than it costs us for 125,000 men in the Regular Army, and they are properly distributed to preserve order throughout the country. I might say that this is a very good illustration of the fact that you can not rely on expert advice in the Army.

Mr. HULL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. I am reminded that for several years in our committee, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] at that time was a member of that committee, we had to fight to preserve in any form even a relic of the National Guard, and there was not a Regular Army man or expert who pretended to know anything about the Army who did not tell us that we could not make an effective military organization out of the National Guard.

Mr. BULWINKLE. They changed their opinion.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Oh, yes; they said "We did it." I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Oh, the gentleman has answered the question that I had in mind.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

The Clerk read as follows:

ARMS, UNIFORMS, EQUIPMENT, ETC., FOR FIELD SERVICE, NATIONAL GUARD.

To procure by purchase or manufacture and issue from time to time to the National Guard, upon requisition of the governors of the several States and Territories or the commanding general National Guard of the District of Columbia, such military equipment and stores of all kinds and a reserve supply thereof as are necessary to arm, uniform, and equip for field service the National Guard of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, and to repair such of the aforementioned articles of equipage and military stores as are or may become damaged when, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War, such repair may be determined to be an economical measure and as necessary for their proper preservation and use, $2,700,000: Provided, That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to issue from surplus or reserve stores and material on hand and purchased for the United States Army such articles of clothing and equipment and Field Artillery, Engineer, and Signal matériel and ammunition as may be needed by the National Guard organized under the provisions of the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act approved June 4, 1920. This issue shall be made without charge against militia appropriations except for actual expenses incident to such issue.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend in the RECORD my remarks already made this afternoon.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the same request.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPEAKS. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Committee on Appropriations to a reduction of $400,000 in the item "Arms, uniforms, equipment, etc., for field service, National Guard." As I understand, the vast stores and stocks of military supplies, embracing equipment, matériel, and military stores of every character, remaining after the war are becoming exhausted in many particulars, and it will now be necessary to charge to the National Guard appropriations for supplies formerly taken from that source. I assume the gentleman has had that in mind and under consideration in fixing this item. It should be remembered that this situation applies to uniforms, shoes, ammunition, and articles most essential to the soldiers' complete equipment.

Mr. ANTHONY. That is true. This is one item that the Militia Bureau was unable to satisfactorily substantiate. Last year they did not make any argument to the committee whatever for the appropriation they asked for, and this year they gave very little more. For instance, to cite one particular item, they stated they wanted to use $360,000 in this appropriation for tentage. We know that the Regular Army has a large supply of tentage on hand, and we thought it was unwise to buy tentage for the National Guard when they could borrow it or get it from the Regular Army. It was along those lines that we reduced the appropriation.

Mr. SPEAKS. I do not care to take the time of the committee, but my desire is to keep before the membership the necessity for making the most liberal appropriations for the National Guard consistent with good business judgment. It has required almost a half century of effort and sacrifice on the part of the patriotic citizens responsible for its continuance and improvement, and nothing should occur to dampen the ardor of its membership. It must and will be the great reliance upon which our Government will rest in time of stress and emergency in State or Nation.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

ORGANIZED RESERVES.

Officers' Reserve Corps: For pay and allowances of members of the Officers' Reserve Corps on active duty for not exceeding 15 days' training, $1,533,600; for pay and allowances of members of the Officers' Reserve Corps on active duty for more than 15 days in accordance with law, $400,406; for mileage, reimbursement of actual traveling expenses, or per diem allowances in lieu thereof as authorized by law, $335,594: Provided, That the mileage allowance to members of the Officers' Reserve Corps when called into active service for training for 15 days or less shall not exceed 4 cents per mile; in all, $2,374,660.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, this paragraph deals with the training of the Organized Reserve Corps for a period of 15 days in the summer. This item was the occasion of considerable contest during the last session of Congress.

There has been very careful consideration given by the subcommittee to this item and I think there should be consideration by this committee as to certain matters in reference to it. The special item for your consideration is the appropriation for compensation and allowances for training of the officers of the Organized Reserve Corps for the 15-day period. Last year the appropriation was $1,150,000. The Budget estimate this year was $2,030,066, which amount was recommended by the subcommittee and is carried in this bill, being an increase of $889,066 this year.

I invite the attention of the committee to page 754 of the hearings. Colonel Dickinson is a reserve officer, serving on the General Staff as a member of the operations and training section. He is in charge of the Organized Reserves. He represented the War Department as a reserve officer and in that capacity made a very full statement before the subcommittee. I think the gist of the statements on this question, which the committee should have in mind, are very well summed up in that portion of page 784 from the middle of the page to the top of the next page. I will read that portion for the information of the committee. In response to a question by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. JOHNSON] Colonel Dickinson said:

The War Department's original program provided for 14,151 officers and 1,500 enlisted men.

Mr. JOHNSON. So, then, everything looking toward preparation for the national defense was sacrificed at the probable expense of a few dollars?

Colonel DICKINSON. Sacrificed to the needs of economy, sir.

Mr. ANTHONY. And with some thought of the taxpayer?

Colonel DICKINSON. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON. I did not know he was ever considered.

Mr. BARBOUR. You are not going to be able to train one-third of the officers each year for three years unless the appropriation is increased?

Colonel DICKINSON. No, sir.

Mr. BARBOUR. Is that contemplated by the War Department?

Colonel DICKINSON. The War Department would like to train a third; but, of course, under the present system of the operation of the Budget, the War Department is limited to the total prescribed under which they must bring all of the various activities and, therefore, it is divided up and distributed in this way.

Mr. BARBOUR. You will train about a fifth of the attached officers, as I understand it?

Colonel DICKINSON. Under the present estimate, 12,615 out of 80,000.

Mr. BARBOUR. Some of those are not attached, or it is not intended to train all of the 80,000?

Colonel DICKINSON. There is a question, of course, of priority in training; I mean, officers who belong to the combat arms, who have no facilities in their civil occupations to learn anything about their duties in time of war. Officers who are actually going to command men in battle should be trained as much as possible, because they have nothing in connection with their civil occupations to give them tactical training. They must be put on active duty frequently in order to supplement their theoretical work on an inactive status by practical training in the field. Other officers of the technical and administrative branches get a certain amount of training in their war-time duties in connection with their civil pursuits.

Now, out of a total of about 80,000 reserve officers 63,000 of those officers are assigned to various tactical units—regiments, divisions, and various separate nondivisional groups—making up the necessary organization of six field armies which would furnish 2,000,000 men in case of an emergency. I think one reason why there is such a smoothness in the consideration of this bill is the very obvious spirit on the part of the Subcommittee on Appropriations to give every possible consideration to the question of an adequate expansion of the reserves. Quite a number of Members of the House appeared before the subcommittee to make suggestions on behalf of a theory underlying the reserves which should prevail, that is the theory that of the 63,000 reserve officers attached to tactical units, such as regiments of Infantry or Cavalry or Field Artillery, of these 63,000 so attached, who will be necessary officers in time of emergency, there should be accorded each year training to at least one-third of them. That would make an annual training of about 21,000 officers. Now, it appeared from the testimony of General Delafield, president of the Reserve Officers' Association, and also from the hearings of the subcommittee which appear very fully in this examination of Colonel Dickinson by the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. ANTHONY] and other members of the subcommittee, that last year there were 20,000 reserve officers who desired training. Last year the appropriation was an appropriation which provided for the training of about 6,000 officers, a few more than 6,000 officers, in the 15-day summer period. This year, due to the increase recommended by the committee, there is provision made for the training of about 12,000. That is a very substantial and proper increase, and I think that the House should recollect that the Reserve Corps and the National Guard are very wise provisions establishing a plan of defense that has come out of our experience in the recent war. The reserve organizations provide throughout the Nation skeleton organizations. Now, I am glad to see in the bill this year the committee has appropriated an increase in the enlisted personnel in the Reserve Corps and enlisted corps.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. HILL of Maryland. May I ask for two additional minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. WATKINS. In an extension of the gentleman's remarks will he put in the table on page 749 showing the number of officers trained at the various camps in 1923 in order that the people getting the Record may have that data?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks, and by including certain brief extracts from the hearings, including the one which the gentleman suggests.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record in the manner indicated. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. The extract is as follows:

Organized Reserve encampments, summer of 1923.

	Number of officers trained.
First Corps Area camps:
Deyens	504
Mitchell Field	61
Fort Wright	55
Fort Constitution	6
Dix	391
Vail	14
Carlisle Barracks	56
Madison Barracks	67
Langley Field	5
Mitchell Field	82
Camp Hamilton	29
Fort Hancock	29
Porto Rico	29
Third Corps Area camps:
Camp Meade	605
Fort Monroe	54
Langley Field	32
Fourth Corps Area camps:
Camp McClellan	450
Fort Bragg	136
Maxwell Field	43
Fort Barrancas	51
Fifth Corps Area camps:
Camp Knox	504
Wilbur Wright Field	81
Fort Monroe	27
Sixth Corps Area camps:
Camp Custer	511
Selfridge Field	51
Chanute Field	37
Scott Field	43
Seventh Corps Area camps:
Fort Snelling	213
Fort Des Moines	210
Fort Leavenworth	208
Richards Field	29
Eighth Corps Area camps:
Fort Sam Houston	249
Fort Logan	127
Fort Sill	180
Fort Bliss	13
Brooks Field	23
Ninth Corps Area camps:
Del Monte	137
Camp Lewis	182
Fort Douglas	113
Crissey Field	51
Fort W. Scott	25
Fort Worden	15

Total number trained..... 5,701

[NOTE.—The total number of officers trained to date is 5,910; 209 have received training, as follows: 98 administrative and technical officers at posts, arsenals, and depots in connection with industrial mobilization activities under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Secretary of War; 111 by assignment to units of the Regular Army, including 48 in the Hawaiian Department. Approximately 700 officers will be trained, as above stated, during the remainder of the current fiscal year, with funds held in reserve for the purpose.]

Mr. JEFFERS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will.

Mr. JEFFERS. I want to get this into the Record right here. The gentleman says the committee has provided in this bill that 12,000 be trained this year?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Yes; that means—when I say this year, I mean the coming fiscal year—this summer.

Mr. JEFFERS. The coming summer. And there are about 63,000 reservists attached to tactical units?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I will say to the gentleman there are 63,323 out of a total of 80,000.

Mr. JEFFERS. I do not mean those not attached to tactical units.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. There are in all about 86,000 reserve officers. Five thousand of them are also National Guard officers.

On Monday, January 21, 1924, Colonel Dickinson appeared before the subcommittee. I ask that you note what he said as to the War Department training plans, which was as follows:

Mr. ANTHONY. Colonel Dickinson, will you give your full name and status at the War Department for the record?

Colonel Dickinson. Lieut. Col. Howard C. Dickinson, General Staff, member of the training branch of the operations and training division in charge of Organized Reserves.

Mr. ANTHONY. Colonel Dickinson, we will be glad if you would give us a general statement of the work you have done during the last year in the way of training. Give us the present status of the officers of the Reserve Corps and what was done in the last year in the way of training.

TRAINING OF RESERVE OFFICERS.

Colonel Dickinson. The appropriation for the current fiscal year amounted to $1,755,000, with which the War Department is now engaged in the training and instruction of reserve officers along the following lines: Active duty training at camps during the past summer provided training for approximately 5,910 reserve officers. These were trained in each corps area in a series of Organized Reserve camps during periods of 15 days. It is proposed to train an additional number of reserve officers, approximately 700, during the remainder of the current fiscal year.

Mr. ANTHONY. That is in the Northwest where you train them?

Colonel Dickinson. That will be in all the corps areas.

As to the training projects for the reserves, we are trying to develop a continuing program; that is to say, not confined to any one period of the year. The War Department's idea is a continuing program so that reserve officers will be trained during the entire year. There are certain times of the year, in certain corps areas, more favorable to training than other periods, and, furthermore, the convenience of the reserve officer does not always permit of his receiving training at a definite, stated time during the year. Some officers can train, for instance, more conveniently in the spring, others in the summer, and some in the autumn; so that, looking to the future, when we hope we will have more money to train more officers, we want to establish the policy of a continuing training cycle throughout the year.

NUMBER OF OFFICERS IN RESERVE CORPS.

The Adjutant General reports that on the 1st of January we had 84,500 reserve officers, of which approximately 4,900 are National Guard officers; so we might say that the reserves consist at present of approximately 80,000 officers of various grades from major general down to second lieutenant.

Mr. ANTHONY. Do those reserve officers who hold National Guard commissions undergo outside training periods during the summer?

Colonel Dickinson. No, sir; they train entirely with the National Guard. The reason that they take reserve commissions is for the purpose of giving them a war status solely.

Mr. ANTHONY. There is no duplication of training, then?

Colonel Dickinson. No, sir.

Mr. ANTHONY. You stated that 5,910 have been called out so far during the current year?

Colonel Dickinson. Yes, sir.

Last year 20,000 reserve officers applied for training. About 6,000 were able to get it. The situation this year appears from the following:

Mr. ANTHONY. Has any estimate been arrived at as to the number of officers who have expressed a willingness to attend training camps during the coming season?

Colonel Dickinson. No, sir; no definite or accurate figure. I have no estimate other than the general impression that prevails not only in the War Department but in the field, and the reports that we get from the corps area commanders and the Regular Army officers on duty with the reserves, that the reserve officers are extremely anxious for opportunities to train.

Mr. ANTHONY. What percentage of those ordered on duty for training last year failed to show up or were released from orders to train?

Colonel Dickinson. The percentage was very small, indeed. There were a few who at the last moment were unable to attend, and a few were relieved on account of physical disability.

The appropriation for the needed Enlisted Reserve Corps is of equal importance as part of the gradually developing plan of national defense.

Note the following statements on this subject:

Mr. ANTHONY. The Enlisted Reserve Corps: "For pay, transportation, subsistence, clothing, other supplies and incidentals," $50,000 is the Budget estimate for the next fiscal year. You had $5,000 for the current year. Did you expend the $5,000 for the current year?

Colonel Dickinson. Yes, sir.

Mr. ANTHONY. There was no appropriation asked for by the War Department or the Budget for the current year, but the committee appropriated $5,000.

Colonel Dickinson. Yes, sir.

Mr. ANTHONY. That has been expended?

Colonel Dickinson. Yes, sir, with the exception of a small balance.

Mr. ANTHONY. What is the status of the Enlisted Reserve at this time?

Colonel Dickinson. There are at present 2,352 enlisted reservists, constituting an increase of about 1,500 over this time last year.

Mr. ANTHONY. How do you enlist those men; how do you grade them?

Colonel Dickinson. Under the War Department policy it is desired ultimately to provide the key noncommissioned officers and enlisted men in all reserve units. The idea would ultimately be to have 25 enlisted men, including noncommissioned officers and specialists for each company or corresponding unit of the reserve, in order to establish these training cadres ready to absorb the man power of the country as procured by the selective draft or such other measures as Congress may enact in time of a national emergency.

Mr. ANTHONY. How many of your 2,000 reservists are noncommissioned officers?

Colonel Dickinson. Practically all of them.

Mr. ANTHONY. Practically all of them?

Colonel Dickinson. They are either noncommissioned officers or have been enlisted with a view to their development as such. When the project of enlistment was first conceived, it was thought that we would enlist solely noncommissioned officers, but it seems advisable to enlist such good material as is available, with a view to development into noncommissioned officers, and subsequently into commissioned officers.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. MACE], the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS], the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. JEFFERS], and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HILL] and many other Members appeared before the subcommittee urging adequate appropriations for the Reserve Corps. I also appeared on January 21, 1924, and what I said then applies equally to-day. Because of certain matters I then took up I will invite your attention to what I then said.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think there is any man in the country who is more deeply interested, earnestly and from a practical point of view, in the development and the proper development of the Reserve Corps than the chairman of this subcommittee, Mr. Anthony. I am here to-day to say only a word, and I come before the committee with a great deal of diffidence, because I feel the committee is working on this matter from a point of view that we are all interested in. I only come to present for the consideration of the committee the question of the amount of field training for the reserve organizations and officers, and I venture to do this because of some practical personal experience in reference to some of the reserve units and reserve problems.

There are at the present time 84,500 reserve officers. Of these officers 63,000 are either attached or assigned to various units, which units are component parts of the six field armies, providing for 2,000,000 men to be immediately trained in case of emergency.

Experience in the last war showed that if we had a training organization or a more or less definite regimental organization, or other unitary organization, it was a very simple matter to train the men in a comparatively short time.

During the past war, in one division, 5,000 drafted men were poured into this division two weeks before it sailed for France, and those men were in defensive trenches within three weeks after they reached France. Therefore it is extremely important that the reserve officers and the reserve organizations be kept in as efficient a condition as possible, ready at any moment of need to receive, train, conserve the health of, and command in action the troops that would be drafted. I venture to suggest to the committee that, there being 63,000 reserve officers attached or assigned to existing necessary tactical and other units, they should be trained at least once in every three years.

Most reserve officers are officers of no large personal means. It is very difficult to get officers to consent to come into the Reserve Corps, when we consider the large number of officers who were in the World War. There are a great many men who can be counted on in an emergency, but who will not assume the obligations of the Reserve Corps in time of peace. The reserve officers and reserve units throughout the winter are given specific forms of instruction. I know of a reserve regiment which has two definite meetings a month, in which the problems of troop handling are taken up by each officer in order, under the supervision of the commanding officer of the regiment and of the Regular Army executive officer of the regiment. They also have the correspondence schools throughout the year.

These officers, if they knew sufficiently far in advance that they could go to summer camp, would make arrangements to go, but the uncertainty of their being able to go prevents them from doing so.

Therefore, as I said, with some diffidence but having great confidence in this subcommittee, I wish to suggest to you the advisability of arranging for the training each year of one-third of the 63,000 officers who are attached or assigned. That leaves 21,500 not attached or assigned. Some of those officers would probably be necessary for field training once in three years, or it would be advisable to let them have field training. A number of those nonunit officers, however, are officers who do not require field training. Take, for instance, the officers of the Judge Advocate General's Department. It is advisable that they should have knowledge or previous contact with troops, because the point of view of a military lawyer is totally different from the point of view of the civilian lawyer. There is a decidedly different element required. It would be advisable that they have training, but I respectfully submit that it is absolutely necessary that the officers who are expected to be company or battalion or regimental officers, or other independent unit officers, should know that once every three years they will be in the field for actual maneuvers and training.

Mr. Chairman, I am very much obliged to the committee for having had this opportunity to present this view to you, as a necessity for the national defense under the present defense act.

Without any pay or other monetary compensation, all through the winter the reserve officers of organized units are working for the national defense.

As an indication of the work of the reserve organizations you may be interested to see the following schedule of work for the month of February of a reserve Cavalry regiment.

HEADQUARTERS THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTH CAVALRY,
HOWARD STREET ARMOY,
Baltimore, Md., January 14, 1924.

Subject: References to be looked up for February meeting.

To: All officers assigned or attached, First Squadron and Headquarters Troop, Three hundred and sixth Cavalry.

The following is a list of references to be used in connection with the February meeting of the officers of the First Squadron, Three hundred and sixth Cavalry. This list was prepared by Capt. George F. Eppey, Three hundred and sixth Cavalry, who is to conduct the conference at the February meeting.

The reference marked with red pencil is the one to be looked up by you. It is expected that you will come to the meeting prepared to discuss the point or points covered in the reference checked to you.

Subject of reference.

Reference No.

General consideration of the troop, troop formations, and echelonings of platoons. (Para. 1, 2, and 3 of Training Regulations 425-445 and addenda.)	1
Position of troop headquarters and its individuals, and the formation of the troop. (Para. 4 and 5.)	2
General rules for movements executed by the troop. (Para. 6.)	3
Line formations. (Para. 7, 8, 9, 10.)	4
Column formations. (Para. 11, 12, 13.)	5
The oblique march, march to the rear, and route order. (Para. 14, 15, 16.)	6
Extended order and extended-order formations. (Para. 17, 18, 19, 20.)	7
Extended order formations, continued. (Para. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26.)	8
Mounted action. (Para. 27, 28, 29.)	9
To dismount to fight on foot and dismounted combat. (Para. 30, 31.)	10

All required information may be found in Training Regulations No. 425-445 and addenda thereto in the paragraphs as above numbered.

By order of Colonel H—

G. H. BARR, Executive Officer.

HEADQUARTERS THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTH CAVALRY,
HOWARD STREET ARMOY,
Baltimore, Md., January 15, 1924.

Subject: February meeting.

To: All officers assigned or attached, Second Squadron.

As announced in the report of the October meeting, the subject for the February meeting will be "The school of the troop." The meeting will be conducted by Capt. William J. Yetton, Cavalry, Officers' Reserve Corps, who has announced the following list of references. It is expected that you will come to the February meeting of the Second Squadron prepared to discuss the point or points covered in the reference checked to you below:

Subject of reference (to be found in Training Regulations 425-445 and addenda).

Reference No.

To form the troop (close order—mounted).....	1
To form the troop (dismounted).....	2
Positions of officers and noncommissioned officers out of ranks.....	3
Movements executed by the troop (extended order).....	4
Mounted attack (the troop acting alone).....	5
Mounted action and dismounted action.....	6
Supports and reserves.....	7
Fire and fire direction.....	8
Reconnaissance before combat.....	9
Rally.....	10

By order of Colonel H—

G. H. BARR, Executive Officer.

NOTE: The report of the October meeting gave the schedule of monthly meetings and work for the winter.

All this study and work in the office should be supplemented by practical field work, certainly not less than once every three years.

In conclusion, let me quote part of the testimony before the subcommittee of Gen. John Ross Delafield, president of the Reserve Officers' Association:

Mr. ANTHONY. General Delafield, we will be glad to hear from you. General DELAFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate, and I know all of the officers here appreciate, the privilege of being able to address you. We are here from different parts of the country for the purpose of attending this hearing, and I would like at this time to introduce to you in a general way the officers who are here, just naming them. They are: Lieut. Col. James Barnes, New Jersey; Capt. Harry C. Lear, Michigan; Lieut. Col. M. E. Borden, Vermont; Lieut. Col. Jenks B. Jenkins, Maryland; Col. John S. Sawell, Alabama; Lieut. Col. Joseph C. DeVries, New York; Maj. Edward E. McKelghan, Missouri; Col. Wm. Donahue, Minnesota; Lieut. Col. A. J. Sichter, Ohio; Maj. J. Ed. C. Fisher, Nebraska; Col. John Stewart, District of Columbia; Maj. R. E. B. McKenney, Pennsylvania; Lieut. Col. G. G. Reiniger, North Carolina; Brig. Gen. Roy Hoffman, Oklahoma; Lieut. Col. Phelps Newberry, Michigan; Brig. Gen. John Ross Delafield, New York; Col. Robert H. Murray, New Hampshire; Lieut. Col. Henry J. Dickinson, Tennessee; Capt. J. Monroe Stick, Maryland; and Capt. Hart G. Foster, Kentucky.

Mr. Chairman, we have come here in order to do all we can to assist your committee. For this purpose, we have come from various parts of the country, and we will be very happy if you will permit us to sit in at the hearings and listen to Colonel Dickinson's testimony, and then may I conclude with perhaps a supplemental statement?

Mr. ANTHONY. All right, sir; we will be very glad to have you make that statement at that time.

General DELAFIELD. I introduced to you officers from a number of different States awhile ago and failed to add that a great many others had intended to be here, but were detained in one way or another. While I was sitting here, this telegram was just handed to me:

"Eight hundred Louisiana reserve officers wish you success in effort for strongest but least expensive component national defense system. Effectiveness demands strengthening divisional organizations and field training for 30,000 officers annually."

That is signed by Colonel Morrill.

The statement I want to make is really a statement from the reserve officer's point of view. I want to tell you the story as the citizen soldier, the reserve officer, sees this whole problem. If you will be good enough to allow me to read parts of correspondence incidental to it, I will take only a short time.

As we see it, what we are here for is to do what we can to secure adequate and ample defense for our country. That is our whole object and our whole purpose. We are volunteers in that plan, ready to sacrifice part of our time and our skill and our ability for that purpose. And that is all we are here for. We expect no reward other than the privilege to serve our country in that way. We know this, that adequate national defense requires that we shall be ready on time to meet the attack of any first-class power and to repel it, and we have to be there on time; we have to be ready on time. We know from the last war that modern war has to be fought by the citizen; that modern wars are on such an immense scale that no standing army, no regular army, could ever hope to cope successfully against the enemy. For instance, in our own case, we have approximately 120,000 officers and men in the Regular Army; approximately 160,000 officers and men of the National Guard. That makes approximately 280,000 officers and men. Now, they are a drop in the bucket that do not count (in numbers) alongside of the fighting organization of any first-class power. In the last war we had 4,000,000 officers and men, and we, together with our allies, had the inconceivable number of 42,000,000 officers and men.

Mr. ANTHONY. General, does it not all depend on whether we are going to go across the water looking for first-class power to fight, or whether we are going to wait for them to come over here and attack us? In other words, it is not possible for any first-class power to bring any considerable number of men to our shores, is it?

General DELAFIELD. That is a strategic question. If we could bring that number of men to France and, while we may not think it, it may be quite possible for a first-class power to bring that number of men to our shores.

Now, the national defense act, as we see it, was framed with that very object in view, namely, to fit the country to meet these conditions. To analyze it rapidly, we see it in this way: The Regular Army itself is a body of experts. It is their business to know and to teach us all the latest implements and the greatest skill in warfare. Incidentally, they have the job of policing the Philippines, the border, and other work of that sort. They are a great body of skilled technicians for the benefit of the Nation in this scheme, as we see it. The National Guard is a section of the volunteer citizens who can give more time than the rest of us and who are ready to go in the first line along with the main elements of the Regular Army, and would be supposed to hold the enemy until the large citizens' army can go in and fight and win the war. In other words, they are preparing themselves to hold the pass of Thermopylae. That is what it amounts to.

The Organized Reserves, of course, represent the great fighting strength and mass of the Nation. At the present time they are made up of a Reserve Corps of 80,000 officers and the Enlisted Reserve Corps of somewhere about 2,300 enlisted men, I believe. It is this great body that we belong to and that we are thinking of and that we are satisfied constitutes the real fighting strength of the Nation.

Now, the object is to get this body into a condition of readiness that will enable us to do this work effectively and rapidly. With regard to the organization of the reserves under this system of the national defense act, it is worked out for the purpose of efficiency and the rapidity in getting it into the conflict. In the first place, the officers are distributed in a territorial system; that is to say, the trained officers are distributed throughout the country and placed so as to receive these drafted and enlisted men, commence training them at once, even while they live at home, and go right into it and begin mobilization and so get ready for actual conflict. Others are trained to go with the Regular Army and National Guard and to complete their units; others are trained for supply work and procurement.

* * * The reserve officers themselves as a body have given this thing a great deal of thought, as well as the individual reserve officers. It has come up at various meetings, at various times, and they have made declarations. At their convention in October, at Detroit, they passed this resolution:

"Be it further resolved, That appropriations for the support of the Army should include sufficient sums to cover the following needs: An adequate amount to cover the pay and training of at least 33 1/3 per cent of the enrolled Officers' Reserve Corps each year and all of the Enlisted Reserve Corps enrolled for the coming year; to provide adequate transportation for use of the various headquarters of reserve divisions; to permit and facilitate the organization of such divisions."

That this demand of the reserve officers themselves is entirely reasonable is so obvious as not to need much comment. If you can not get training at least once in three years, you get very rusty and your efficiency soon goes and your enthusiasm goes and the United States loses the officer. "But," it may be said, "they get their correspondence courses; their Regular Army officers at headquarters give them a certain amount of theoretical instruction and they read books." But they know, as we all of us know, that theoretical training won't make a soldier, much less a skilled officer, and won't keep him skilled. The almost universal demand for this training, for the practical actual camp training, is evidenced by the fact that last year more than 20,000 reserve officers requested this training. Only 6,000 so far have had it; about 700 or 800 more will get it before the end of the fiscal year. But over 20,000 demanded it.

Finally, gentlemen, the national defense needs a well-trained and ready reserve. We do not want war. Nobody wants war less than the trained reserve officer, who is a citizen first of all and wants to remain one. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has again expired.

Mr. JEFFERS. Mr. Chairman, I ask recognition on the gentleman's pro forma amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. JEFFERS. Mr. Chairman, I desire, if the gentleman from Maryland will give me his attention right here, to continue along that same line and get this into the record straight. If there are about 12,000 reserve officers to be trained out of about 63,000 reserve officers who are attached to tactical arms of the service, then that means only about 20 per cent, or less than one out of five. That means that only once out of every five years a man who holds a reserve commission can attend a training camp for 15 days. That is the net result, is it not?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Yes.

Mr. JEFFERS. Well, that illustrates the point that we should increase the number to be trained each year just as fast as the Committee on Appropriations or this Congress can possibly accomplish it—and I think that more of them should be trained during this coming summer—we should materially increase the number to be trained each year, because only two weeks of field training in five years is not sufficient training experience to keep up the interest of the men who hold these reserve commissions.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JEFFERS. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. The gentleman has had experience in the recent war, and I read with the greatest interest the gentleman's remarks when he appeared before the subcommittee, where the gentleman advocated an absolutely and essentially sound system underlying the Reserve Corps, and that is that of the 63,000 officers attached or assigned to the tactical units at least one-third of them should be trained every summer.

Mr. JEFFERS. Yes; so that each one could go to the training camp at least once every three years. We certainly should provide them at least that much opportunity to keep up.

Mr. VAILE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JEFFERS. Yes.

Mr. VAILE. The reserve officer's commission only lasts five years, does it not?

Mr. HILL of Maryland. That is all.

Mr. VAILE. Then on this basis he would be trained only one summer during the period of his commission?

Mr. JEFFERS. Yes; and that is not sufficient to keep the interest up to the mark and thereby avail the Nation of this splendid material which was developed during the war. If this material can be kept available, and if we can give these reserve officers sufficient training to keep them interested and well posted in their work, it will be well worth while, and it will mean a great deal to this highly important branch of our present plan of national defense.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JEFFERS. Yes.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I am preparing an amendment which I think will result in that very thing which has been referred to by the gentleman from Maryland and the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. JEFFERS. Mr. Chairman, in the moment I have remaining I wish to address myself to the members of the subcommittee who handled this bill, and I will appreciate the attention of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] while I ask him this question: What is the idea in limiting the allowance for members of the Officers' Reserve Corps when they are called into active service for training for the 15-day period to 4 cents per mile when other officers traveling to the same sort of duty get 8 cents per mile? And when this same reserve officer when called in for duty for more than 15 days would get 8 cents per mile but gets only 4 cents per mile when called in for active duty for the 15-day period of training. Why that discrimination?

Mr. VAILE. And the enlisted man gets 5 cents a mile.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. The reason for that is that when the reserve officer goes to camp he has not the hotel expenses and incidental expenses of his trip that the other officer has. He is provided with a place for lodging and mess tent, and so forth.

Mr. JEFFERS. But the same reserve officer, if called to the same camp during the same summer to instruct troops, for example, for 30 days, gets the 8 cents per mile, as I understand it.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. He is on an entirely different basis and is not allowed the rations and other allowances in the Army, and for that reason he must have that additional compensation.

Mr. JEFFERS. Now, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will allow me, just one further observation—

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. The 4 cents was put in by the Senate.

Mr. JEFFERS. A reserve officer goes to a summer camp for his 15-day training period. If he goes home at the end of the 15 days his traveling allowance is only 4 cents per mile; but if the same officer is kept in that camp after his 15-day training period to train other troops, he gets 8 cents per mile, and

It strikes me that they should all receive the same regular allowance of 8 cents per mile, and it should apply when one is called in for the 15-day training period just the same as when one is called in for duty for 30 days, for example. They should all be on the same basis as to this mileage allowance.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. If there is any discrepancy here, it has not been called to the attention of the committee, and if it should be corrected I suggest to the gentleman that he take it before the Senate committee.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska: Page 70, line 22, after the word "training," strike out the figures "$1,638,600" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,638,600."

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, here we have an opportunity to determine among ourselves whether this Congress is a militaristic body or whether it is a body—I was just on the point of using a bad word—a body of believers in the Republic. I do not believe in a large standing Army. I voted for the amendment presented by the gentleman from Minnesota to reduce by 50 per cent our own standing Army.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Yes.

Mr. WATKINS. Is it not a fact that $2,638,600 is the sum the War Department estimated?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Yes; I am adding a million dollars.

Mr. WATKINS. Is that the sum the War Department wanted for this purpose? Is it not?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I do not know. I am just increasing these figures in the bill by $1,000,000.

Mr. ANTHONY. Did the gentleman inquire what the War Department asked for?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Yes. That is what I asked about.

Mr. ANTHONY. The estimate of the War Department was $1,087,000, and the approved estimate of the Budget was $1,638,600.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I have asked for $2,638,600 because, as I said, I do not believe in large standing armies. But I do believe in citizen soldiery. We can not have a citizen soldiery that may be quickly trained and brought into soldiery shape without educated Army officers. Now, we can not have enough of them out of the Regular Army, which we are to reduce pretty soon, so I am in favor of manufacturing a great many new ones by the proposal that I have offered.

Who will constitute this Officers' Reserve Corps, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen? Why, it will be very largely made up of the young and magnificent fellows who served in an official capacity during the late World War.

I am offering the amendment only for the purpose of expressing my sentiments and for the purpose of giving you an opportunity to join me if you want to. I do not desire to harass the committee in its progress with the bill. I have several amendments in line with this, but I shall not ask time to further discuss them other than to say that I believe this is the best course for those of us to pursue who are opposed to the spirit of militarism in our Republic.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Yes.

Mr. McKENZIE. I think we all agree on the matter of a large standing Army, but I want to call this to the attention of the gentleman from Nebraska: I am a believer in the Officers' Reserve Corps, and I have always been a staunch friend of the National Guard, but I have always had this thought in mind, that whenever we reach a point that the burden of taxation becomes noticeable then I fear the men who have been opposing the Regular Army will turn against the National Guard and the Officers' Reserve Corps because it is such a burden to the people of the country. Therefore, is it not wise to move rather slowly?

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Well, I am moving rather slowly. I am asking only for a couple of million dollars here, whereas we are appropriating great sums—$8,000,000, $10,000,000, and $100,000,000. I noticed a little while ago that an item went through of $150,000 for stud horses. I do not know what earthly use our Army has for anything of that kind.

Mr. McKENZIE. I would refer the gentleman to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. HARRISON].

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I would be glad to hear from him.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. But these fellows took up all of my time.

Mr. VAILE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. VAILE. Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman who has just spoken in regard to the necessity of an adequate Officers' Reserve Corps and in regard to the merits of the National Guard and amply adequate appropriations for both. These bodies, at least, are bodies of trained officers who will not be withdrawn from civilian life except in time of war, and, consequently, they can not furnish arguments to those who are fond of howling that any preparation for the national defense is militaristic. I am going to vote against the gentleman's amendment, however, because it seems to me the committee has done wisely to adhere to the Budget.

But I want to get out of my system a few remarks on this subject of militarism and the opposition to reasonable preparations for the national defense.

In 1920 we voted an army of 500,000. We have kept whittling that down and down, until it is now 125,000, and that is slightly more than 1 soldier to every 1,000 of population. It does not seem to me, with the thunder of cannon of the World War hardly gone from our ears, that that is an unreasonable standing Army—I soldier to 1,000 of population.

This country has been at war one year out of six throughout its entire national history. As trustees for the welfare of the Nation, we are not entitled to assume that we shall never have another war. If war should come, we shall require an army. Now, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KVALK] rose yesterday and proposed to cut our Army in half. I asked him what minimum Army he would like. He said he proposed to cut it to 62,500 now and to make a further cut as soon as there were more ladies in the House, which, he thought, would be in about four years. I hope it will be sooner than that. His assumption seemed to be that when there are more ladies in the House we would ultimately abolish the Army altogether. I have not talked with the one lady Member of the House on the subject of abolishing the Army, but I think the inference to be drawn from his remarks is a very serious and unjustified reflection on the patriotism of the women of the United States.

I well remember when I enlisted at the outbreak of the Spanish War and wired my mother I had enlisted that she sent back a telegram, "Hope your organization will not be called, but I am with you." [Applause.] And speaking of women, my great-great-grandmother ran the family pewter spoons through a bullet mold in order to help her husband establish a country which would be good enough for the parents of the gentleman from Minnesota to live in, and I expect to be one of those who are going to hand down that same kind of a country to his children, in spite of his efforts and the efforts of others similarly disposed. In other words, I believe in maintaining an army not particularly for police purposes—the States should be able to take care of that—but for the national defense.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAILE. I will.

Mr. BLANTON. From the literature we have been getting lately with the gentleman's picture on it, I have been rather inclined to the belief that the gentleman is now influenced by some female sentiment in the country that would be against manning the Army. [Laughter.]

Mr. VAILE. I do not think there will be any difficulty in manning the Army when the time comes. But I want some trained men in it at that time. Since the gentleman has risen, I would like to answer a question which he has been propounding to Members with a great rhetorical flourish. It came up during the debate on the enlistment of young men under 21 years of age. The gentleman several times rose and said, "Would any of you want your sons to enlist in the Army under the age of 21?"

Mr. BLANTON. In peace time.

Mr. VAILE. In peace time. And because he does not get 435 men to jump up and say they would, he thinks he has scored a great triumph.

Mr. BLANTON. I do not get any of them to do it.

Mr. VAILE. Very well; you are going to get one right now.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAILE. No; I am going to answer this question in my own way. The question has been put here half a dozen times. In the first place, I want to say it is not a fair question. If the gentleman should say to the membership of the House, "Would any one of you want your son to be a hod carrier, and fall to get a response, and then say, 'That proves that the business of a hod carrier is a dishonest business or an indecent business," it would be misleading. The reason, of course, is entirely different. It means that while the business of a hod carrier is a decent and an honorable business, the Members of this House hope that possibly their sons may follow some profession a trifle higher. It is not that that profession is not all right. Under ordinary circumstances I would not want my son to enlist in the Army in time of peace, but it is not because the Army is not a splendid training school. I believe it is. I have been in the Army myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. VAILE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado asks unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I want to submit to the House an observation or two in support of the amendment of the gentleman from Nebraska, and in doing so submit the estimate submitted by the Budget.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado has asked to proceed for five additional minutes.

Mr. WATKINS. Pardon me; I did not understand that.

Mr. VAILE. Now, I have not a son 18 years old. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] will claim that as a great triumph. If he does not find every man in the House here with a son of precisely that age, he immediately thinks he has scored a great triumph.

Mr. BLANTON. No; I did not expect the gentleman to have one.

Mr. VAILE. I have a son who will be 18 in 12 years.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield at this time?

Mr. VAILE. No; I will not yield at this time if the gentleman will excuse me. The gentleman will have plenty of opportunity to answer me later.

Now, I would rather that my son would not be in the Navy or in the Army at 18, but it is not because I do not regard the Army or the Navy as a splendid place. It is because I hope he can do something perhaps a little—well, I will say more lucrative. I do not believe I care to have him be a Member of Congress, because I want him to do something that will enable him to support his family. [Laughter.] If he could be a doctor or a lawyer or even an editor, it might be a little better for him than if he was in the Regular Army.

Mr. BLANTON. If the gentleman will permit, I might suggest being a plasterer, because they are now getting $14 a day for six days and only working five days.

Mr. VAILE. That is an excellent suggestion. I think I will convey that to my boy when he gets that age. Probably plasterers' wages will then be still higher. [Laughter.]

Mr. O'CONNELL of New York. Will the gentleman yield? The gentleman from Texas has a couple of sons. I wonder if he would want to make plasterers of them. [Laughter.]

Mr. VAILE. Now, gentlemen, let me make this additional statement. I was in the Army as a private in time of war, but I never saw action and I never smelled enemy powder. So I suppose that my experience is fairly comparable with that of a man in an Army cantonment in time of peace.

I want to say that while the boys in my organization, my fellow privates and noncommissioned officers, were not saints, they were mighty decent young fellows. I was an officer in time of peace, but under mobilization conditions, on the Mexican border, and the men in my organization I would put up against any group of men of similar numbers and similar general social conditions anywhere in the United States. I have been commander of a post of Spanish-American War veterans, mainly composed of ex-Regulars, and I would put those men, for decency and sobriety and general goodness and merit, up against any group of equal numbers anywhere, and I would not except the church of the gentleman from Minnesota. [Applause.] I have helped those men find employment, and I know that employers are glad to have them, because the Regular Army teaches discipline and fidelity to duty and habits of promptness and accuracy and honor. I must say I thoroughly resent the spirit which seems to be growing in the discussions on this subject that the Army is an army of ruffians or blackguards or drunkards or libertines, and I am reminded of Kipling's—

We ain't no thin red heroes,
And we ain't no blackguards, too;
But single men in barracks,
Most remarkably like you.

Like all of you, gentlemen.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. VAILE. Yes.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Did the gentleman know that the gentleman from Minnesota is now absent?

Mr. VAILE. Well, I have not attacked the gentleman from Minnesota very severely.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Have not attacked him? If you had attacked me in the way you did him, I apprehend our positions would not be the same as they are at this moment. [Laughter.]

Mr. VAILE. The gentleman will have an opportunity to reply.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. You deliberately stated that the gentleman from Minnesota was practically trying to ruin this country of yours and mine.

Mr. VAILE. I stated that the gentleman from Minnesota was trying to cut our Army in half, and I insist that the effect of that would be to ruin this country of yours and mine.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Ah, but that is not the way you put it in reference to the matter. He is not here now and he is a mild-mannered man, and so am I.

Mr. VAILE. And so am I.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. But before we go any further it does seem to me that while you are resenting the action with reference to men who are decrying the Army—I do not know who they are, I have not heard anybody here decrying the Army—I have heard a lot of my militaristic mad friends defending the Army from some fancied insults, and yet I have never heard the insults on the floor.

Mr. VAILE. I did not yield for a speech. If the gentleman had kept his ears open he would have heard it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Colorado has expired.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out something. [Applause.]

Mr. VAILE. Make it the Army. That will be in accordance with the gentleman's position.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman and gentleman, I am forced to make a comparison between the mild-mannered brother from Minnesota who is not here to defend himself and the gentleman from Colorado.

I go at it with a good deal of trembling, and yet I apprehend if the gentleman from Minnesota was here this afternoon he would look over his record in a legislative way and then examine closely the legislative record of the brother who has denounced him, and he might say this: "My brother, I think there may be a striking difference between you and me in our legislative ideals, but after all," in the language of Jim Gibbons, the horse trader, he would say, "if there is a difference between us it is about the same." [Laughter.] And then he would say, "As I see the difference, I am the advocate of a reduction of the standing Army of my country, whereas the only reduction I have ever known the gentleman from Colorado to advocate was a reduction in the population generally." [Laughter.]

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that there is an amendment pending and a pro forma amendment to that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. All debate is exhausted. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn and the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the amendment of the gentleman from Nebraska.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment of Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska: Page 70, line 22, after the word "training," strike out the figures "$1,638,600" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "$1,537,956."

Mr. HILL of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I entirely agree with the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD], and it is a further move in the right direction. That amendment is intended to obtain a closer approximation of the training in the coming fiscal year for the 15-day period of a part of the 63,000 out of the 80,000 reserve officers attached to the technical unit. I only offer a substitute because I think we have a greater chance of having it adopted, since it is based on the War Department's estimate. The substitute I offer is based on the figures of the War Department in their original request for 14,151 officers to be trained during the coming summer instead of 12,615 officers as planned by the present bill. I am for training 21,000, but I wish to call attention to the fact that this cut from 14,000 to 12,000 was not made by the Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee. It was made by the Budget. I would be glad to yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I do not want to ask a question, but I will make a statement. I am entirely satisfied with the figures presented by the gentleman from Maryland. I simply introduced my amendment as an expression of my sentiment. If I can get it started upward, even for only a dollar, toward the training of these officers, I shall have accomplished something in the line of my principle which calls for the training of officers, where we have such a large standing army. If I had the privilege I would accept the amendment of the gentleman from Maryland.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can withdraw his amendment by unanimous consent.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL of Maryland. I would like to see 21,000 officers trained, and, as I said before, I think it is necessary. I hope you will adopt the increase called for by the proposed amendment. Now, Mr. Chairman, I offer my amendment.

The Clerk again reported the amendment.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, in support of the amendment I want to submit this observation to the committee. I believe that it was during the World War wherein it was disclosed that 26 per cent of the young men of this country were defective physically and unfit for military service. That was largely due to lack of physical development. It seems to me that one of the best investments the Government can make is to train young men of this country physically so that they can make better citizens, and consequently, if war comes, better soldiers. The War Department asked for $3,632,777.87 more than the committee has recommended. Not only that, but the appropriation bill for the fiscal year of 1924 carried $16,224,267.87 more than this one. It seems to me, therefore, in view of the results that we have had from the Reserve Officers' Training Corps throughout the United States, that we can certainly insert here and now the sum that the War Department has recommended by adopting the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL]. I hope the committee will adopt the amendment.

Mr. CONNERY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATKINS. Yes.

Mr. CONNERY. Does the gentleman think that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD] was the better one if we could get it through?

Mr. WATKINS. I heartily approve of the Howard amendment, but I thought that the committee would vote it down for there are no estimates to support it; on the contrary, there are figures to support the amendment of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL]. I believe that the records of the late war furnish figures warranting the amendment of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. HOWARD] and I would prefer that; but as a practical man, when I can not get what I want, I take the next best thing.

Mr. CONNERY. I wish to state to the gentleman that I am heartily in favor of the amendment of the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Chairman, I fear that the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WATKINS] in making the statement that this bill carries $16,000,000 less than the current year, sought to convey the idea that there was $16,000,000 less in it for military purposes.

Mr. WATKINS. No; I quoted the figures here—$3,632,000. I think that is true, is it not?

Mr. ANTHONY. It is not true.

Mr. WATKINS. Is it not less than the War Department asked for?

Mr. ANTHONY. While the bill carried $16,000,000 less in the total, it carries over $3,000,000 more for military purposes, and practically all of the training items in which the gentleman is interested have been very largely increased over the amounts carried for the current year.

Mr. WATKINS. On page 19 of the report, last column, it states that the Budget recommended $3,000,000 more, as I read it, than the committee has given. That is, there is a minus sign in front of the $3,000,000. I think that this bill carries $3,000,000 less than the Budget asked for. I may be wrong in my diagnosis of the figures, but that is the way I interpret them.

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman was discussing the figure for the current year.

Mr. WATKINS. Yes.

Mr. ANTHONY. But the situation is as I tell him, that for purely military purposes this bill carries $3,000,000 more for the next fiscal year than was carried for the current year.

Mr. WATKINS. How much more or less does this bill carry for the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and that work than last year?

Mr. ANTHONY. It carries a little over $1,000,000 more.

Mr. WATKINS. And how much more or less does it carry than the War Department wanted?

Mr. ANTHONY. Only $50,000 less than the Budget estimate, which is the figure that the War Department wants. The gentleman must know that in making up appropriations there are all kinds of estimates that are originally made in reference to the appropriations. A committee of the General Staff may make up one estimate.

The officer in charge of the division will make up another. They are all boiled down before they finally come to the Bureau of the Budget, and it can safely be said that the figure which comes to the committee from the Bureau of the Budget represents the amount which is asked for by the War Department, because the Budget itself, which makes up these estimates, is composed entirely of military officers.

Mr. WATKINS. I understood that the War Department asked for $1,837,000 for this work?

Mr. ANTHONY. That was their original figure; yes.

Mr. WATKINS. So that that would be nearly $200,000 more instead of $50,000. I understood the gentleman to say $50,000 less?

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman is discussing one of the preliminary estimates of the War Department. Of course it is impossible to satisfy all of the interests that are concerned in appropriations of this kind. The Reserve Officers' Association, which made probably the first recommendation to the War Department, wanted $6,000,000 for this purpose. The War Department itself defended the appropriations before the committee that are asked for by the Budget, and which we have given, except one which was shaved $50,000.

Mr. WATKINS. Does not the gentleman think that it would be a good investment from the standpoint of citizenship and future soldiers for us to increase this sum?

Mr. ANTHONY. I feel sure that the gentleman wants the money that is appropriated for the training of these reserve officers profitably expended.

Mr. WATKINS. I do.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think there is a limit to which we can go in the number of reserve officers that we can profitably train. We could order up the full number if Congress saw fit to appropriate the money, but all that we could do with them would be to crowd them into camps and give them a series of lectures by Regular Army officers. It would be impossible to handle them in a way in which the training would do them any good, in my opinion. I think that we ought to approach this matter gradually. We are increasing the appropriation 100 per cent each year, and I think we ought to approach it gradually so that the training which we give these men may be efficient. If Congress overdoes it by appropriating too much money, it would simply mean that the Army would not be able to digest the men that we would have on hand.

Mr. WATKINS. The gentleman would say, then, that the War Department was wrong in asking for more than the committee has given?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Kansas be extended for one minute.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANTHONY. I would not say that the War Department was wrong, but, as I explained before, all of the original estimates that concern every item in this bill vary from the estimate that finally comes to us from the Budget.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Does the gentleman's experience not convince him that these bureau chiefs have learned to ask of the committee much more than they really need on most all occasions?

Mr. ANTHONY. I think always that the bureau chief asks originally for more than he hopes to get.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Alabama. What was the reason that actuated the committee in cutting down the Budget estimate $50,000?

Mr. ANTHONY. That was the estimate for divisional and regimental headquarters. For the current year that expenditure was limited to $60,000. This year it is limited to $100,000, so that the bill carries an increase of $40,000, practically 80 per cent of the appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has again expired.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the subcommittee I am very much in favor of the proposition to increase the appropriation for this purpose. [Applause.] I think that appropriations ought always to be sufficient to effectuate the purpose for which the appropriations are made. Making an appropriation that would simply give these reserve officers training 15 days in five years is so insufficient that it seems to me we had better save our money and not make any appropriation at all.

Mr. BOYCE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HARRISON. I will.

Mr. BOYCE. Will the gentleman please inform the members of the committee how we are to meet the overwhelming nation-wide demand for economy and go on continuing the appropriations beyond the Budget?

Mr. HARRISON. I would cut out appropriations for a great many of these overhead expenses.

Mr. WATKINS. If the gentleman will permit, if the gentleman from Delaware was here the other day he had a chance to have us do that by cutting out these exorbitant, outrageous prices paid to auctioneers—

Mr. BOYCE. I voted to assist in that.

Mr. WATKINS. In some instances it is penny wise and pound foolish.

Mr. ANTHONY. These fees do not come out of the Army appropriation, they do not figure in this appropriation at all.

Mr. HARRISON. As the gentleman from Delaware has said, we are all desirous of economy, but how is it economy to make an appropriation that does not accomplish the object of the appropriation. If the object is worthy, the appropriation should be adequate; if not, none should be made.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Would the gentleman contend it was economy if the Army officers tell us that they are not in a position to expend this money to aid in the training of officers?

Mr. HARRISON. I do not see why the officers can not aid in such training. The amendment is what the War Department asked.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. They told the gentleman why; the hearings will tell the gentleman why.

Mr. HARRISON. I think officers of the Army can always find excuse for not doing what they do not want to do? [Applause.] Just one more word and I will close. It does seem to me that if we are going to economize on this proposition we ought to strike out the appropriation altogether, because I do not believe an appropriation to train men for 15 days in five years amounts to anything. It is keeping the word of promise to the ear but breaking it to the hope. If we are going to do something along this training business we ought to appropriate enough money to see that it amounts to something.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I will.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman explain the $150,000 item to which the gentleman from Nebraska called attention?

Mr. HARRISON. The gentleman means the remount station. I can simply say the remount station has been of the greatest benefit in the Army appropriation bill for the last 20 years.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I am in favor of having an Army as efficient as it is possible to have it. I am also in favor of decent economy in Government expenditures. We are charged with a great responsibility here. Everybody is overloaded with taxes. Everybody all over the United States is demanding greater economy and a reduction of taxes, and yet everybody is demanding increased appropriations at the same time. Now you can not do all these things everybody wants. You can not please them, but what we ought to do is to see that no money is squandered. We have $100,000 in this item. It was $60,000 for the current year. Nobody has complained it was not adequate. Nobody can claim that $100,000 is not enough. Now why should we increase that to $200,000 or any other sum. I hope the House will help the committee do what obviously ought to be done, to give a decent appropriation commensurate with the finances of the country. That is what we are trying to do; we are not trying to skimp where expenditure is needed. We are not trying to expend where expenditure is unnecessary. If there is any place in the category of expenditures where we can afford to economize this is the item and we ought to economize on this item.

Mr. JEFFERS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. I will.

Mr. JEFFERS. The gentleman mentioned the fact that last year for this purpose we had $60,000.

Mr. MADDEN. This year.

Mr. JEFFERS. This year, and the bill provides for $100,000, and we are trying to increase it to $200,000.

Mr. MADDEN. That is what I understand.

Mr. JEFFERS. I believe the gentleman is talking about another item. We are not yet on that proposition.

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman, I think, is referring to the item of divisional and regimental headquarters, which I discussed with him.

Mr. MADDEN. This other item ought not to be increased. All the money that ought to be expended for the training of reserve officers is in the bill. I hope, whatever amendment may be pending, it will not prevail. [Laughter and applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Hill].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. DICKINSON of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded by the gentleman from Iowa.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 31, noes 37.

Mr. JEFFERS. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. Tellers are demanded. Those who favor the taking of this vote by tellers will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Only 18 gentlemen have arisen—not a sufficient number. Tellers are denied.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Howard].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Howard of Nebraska: Page 70, line 23, after the word "law," strike out the figures "$400,866" and insert, in lieu thereof, the following: "$300,466."

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, the substitute of the gentleman from Maryland to that amendment of mine was lost, was it not?

The CHAIRMAN. It was.

Mr. HOWARD of Nebraska. I do not want to embarrass the committee. I withdraw all these amendments. I have put the principle before the House, and it has been rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

NATIONAL BOARD FOR PROMOTION OF RIFLE PRACTICE.

QUARTERMASTER SUPPLIES AND SERVICES FOR RIFLE RANGES FOR CIVILIAN INSTRUCTIONS.

To establish and maintain indoor and outdoor rifle ranges for the use of all able-bodied males capable of bearing arms, under reasonable regulations to be prescribed by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice and approved by the Secretary of War; for the employment of labor in connection with the establishment of outdoor and indoor rifle ranges, including labor in operating targets; for the employment of instructors; for clerical services; for badges and other insignia; for the transportation of employees, instructors, and civilians to engage in practice; for the purchase of materials, supplies, and services; and for expenses incidental to instruction of citizens of the United States in marksmanship and their participation in national and international matches, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War and to remain available until expended, $89,900: Provided, That out of this appropriation there may be expended not to exceed $80,000 for the payment of transportation, for supplying meals, or furnishing commutation of subsistence of civilian rifle teams authorized by the Secretary of War to participate in the national matches.

